The. xxvi. Chapter.

The porters of the temple are ordeined eu-ery in in to the gate whiche he shuld kepe.

The dypylson of the porters amonge the Lozbitres: Meselemiah the sonne of Koreb of the chyldre of Asaph.

And the sonnes of Meselemiah were these: zachariah the eldeste, Adyell the seconde, zabadiab the thyrde, Farhanell the fourth, Elam the fyft, Johanan the syxte, Elionai the. vii. And Obed Edom hadde sonnes, Semetah the eldeste, Josabab the seconde, Noah the thirde, Sacar the fourth, Zachariael the fyft, Amrell the syxte, Asachah the seventh and Bolathai the eyght, for God had blessed hym.

And unto Semetah his sonne, were son-nes bozne that ruled in the house of the father, for they were men of myghte. The sonnes of Semetah, Orhni, Rappach, Obed and Elzabad, and his brethren menne of actpuyte, Elphu and Samachyab. All D these were of the chyldren of Obed Edom, which with the brethren and their chyldren, actiue men, and of strengthe to doo serupce, were the seze and two of Obed Edom. And Meselemiah had sonnes and brethren, and actpue men, eyghrene. And Josab of the chyldren of Merari hadde sonnes, Semet the chyefe, yet he was not the eldest but his father made him the chiefe. Helkiah the secod, Tabetah the thirde, and zachariah the fourth: so that all his son-nes and brethren of Josab were thyrrene.

Unto these was deuoyd the offyce of the porterhypp, as unto heades ouer the me-that wayted with the brethren, and mi-nistred in the house of the Lorde. And they cast lottes, the small as well as the great in the householdes of the fathers, to geto garr. And the Kasselotte fell to Seleme-tah. And for zacharyab his sonne a wyse counselloure they caste lottes, and his lotte came oute towarde the North. And Obed Edoms lotte fell to the South. And to his sonnes fel the counsel houses. And to Suphun and Josab fell the West with the gate Salecheth, wher the way goth vp Asuphim. Some read the house of ward the one way byng fast by the other.

In the East kepte syxe Leuytes: in the North, foure a dape, and in the South foure a dape, and in euery counsell house two, and in the traiche houses on the bygh waye Westwarde, foure: two in a house. These are the deuispons of the porters amonge the sonnes of Korah, and the sonnes of Merari. And of the Leuytes Ahyah had the ouersyghte of the treasure of the house of God, and of the treasure of the offered thynges. Some read in Parbat.

As concernyng the sonnes of Laadan which were Bersonites: Laadan hadde an ciente father. Laadan the Bersonite had Hebely. The sonnes of Hebely: zethan and Joell his brother, whiche were ouer the treasures of the house of the lorde. Among the Amramites, Izabarietes, Hebryonites, and Ozielites, was Subuell the sonne of Berse, the sonne of Ayses, a ruler ouer the treasure. And of his brethren the sonnes of Eliezer, was Lababyah, whose sonne was Asalah, and his sonne was Joiam, and his sonne zechari, and his sonne was Selomith, whiche Selomith and his brethren were ouer all the treasure of the dedicate giffes, which Dauid the kynge and the aunciente beades of the Capytaynes ouer thousandes and hundredes, and the capytaynes of the hooste had dedycaed of the spyle wonne in battayle, to mayntayne the house of the Lorde: and ouer all that Samuell the Seer and Saul the sonne of Kys, and Abner the sonne of Net, and Joab, the sonne of Zeruiah had dedycaed. All that was de-dicatid, was vnder the hand of Selomith, and of his brethren.

Of the Izabarietes, Conanah and his sonnes were in busineses, withoute for-made officers and iudges ouer Israell.
And of the Hebryonites, Basabyah and his brethren men of actiuite a thousande and seven hundred were officers in Israell on thys syde Jordan westwarde, in all affayres of the Lorde and serupce of the kynge. And Hebdiab was the chyefe amonge the kynredes and fathers of the together the chamberlaines, warpours, and all valiant menne vnto Iherusalem. And king Dauid stode vpon his sete and saide.

Hear me my brethren and my people, I had in myne herte to buylde an house of rest for the arcke of the couenaunte of the Lord, and a *forestool for our God, and had made redre to buylde. But God sayde to me. thou shalt not buylde an house for my name, because thou art a man of war and hast shed bloude. Wherefore the Lord God of Israel chose me of all the house of my father, to be kynge ouer Israel for euer, for he chose Iuda to be a captayne: and in the house of Iuda, the house of my father, and of the sonnes of my father he had a last to me, to make me kynge ouer all Israel. And of al my sonnes (for the Lord hath gyuen me many sonnes) he hath chosen Salomon my sonne to sit in the seate of the kyngdome of the Lord ouer Israel. And he saide vnto me: Salomon thy sonne shall buylde my house and my courtes. * for I haue chosen hym to be my sonne, and I will be his father, and will stablysh his raygne for euer, if he will harden hym selfe to do my commaundements, and my laws as it goeth this daye. And now I saye vnto you befoze all Israel the congregacion of the Lord, and in the audyence of our God: kepe, and seke for all the commaundementes of the Lord your God, that ye maye enioy a good lande, and enioy your chyldren after you for euer. And thou Salomon my sonne knowe God thy father, and serue hym with a pure herte and luste of soule. * for the Lord seareth all hertes, and vnderstandeth all the ymagynacions of thoughtes. If thou shalt seke hym, he will be founde of the: But if thou forsake hym, he will caste the off for euer. Take hede now, for the Lord hath chosen the to buylde an house of thy sanctuarie. Be stronge and do it.

And Dauid gaue Salomon his sonne the paterne of the porche and of the houses that belonged thereto, and of the noye houses, upper chambers, inner parlours and of the house of the mercy seate: and the example of that was in his mind, boid in the courtes of the house of the Lord, and of the treasure houses roundabout, for the treasures of the house of God, and for the treasure of the dedicate gyftes, and of the companies of the priests and Leuites that waityed by course, and of al workmanship & vessels that should serue for the house of the Lord. And appoynted hym what wayghte of golde should serue for thynges of golde that shoulde ouer al vessels, for what seuer use it serued: And what wayghte of syluer should suffice for all maner vessels of syluer, for what soeuer purpose they serued. And the wayghte of the golden candelstykkes, and of their lampes of golde, the wayghte for euerie candelsticke, and for their lampes. And for the candelstykkes of syluer by wayghte, both for the candelstykke, and also for her lampes, accordyng to the offyce of euerie candelstykke. And the wayghte of gold for the tables of shewbrynde table by table: and lykewyse syluer for the tables of syluer, & for the shewbrynde basens, and drynkynge pottes of pure golde. And for cuppes of gold by wayghte, cup by cuppe. And for cuppes of syluer by wayghte, cup by cuppe. And for the altar of incense of tyled golde by wayghte. And the sympletyude of the seate of the Cherubes that stretched out their wynges and covered the arcke of the couenaunte of the Lord (sayth he) was gyuen me by waytynge of the hande of the Lord, which made me vnderstand al the workmanship of the paterne.

And Dauid sayd to Salomon his sonne: harden thy selfe and be stronge, and do it, feare not, nor lette thine herte be discouraged. For the Lord God my God is with the, and shall not leaue the nor forsake the, vntyll thou haue spyryshed al the worke that muste serue for the house of the Lord. Beholde, the priests and Leuites deuyded in companies, to do all maner seruyce that pertaineth to the house of God, and beside that, thou shalt with the for al maner of workmanship, all that are wyllynge and wise for any maner of seruyce. And the Lordes, and all the people are at thy commaundement in al thynges.

The xxx. Chapter.

The offerenges of Dauid and of the princes for the buydynge of the temple. Dauid dyeth, and Salomon his sonne raygneth in his steade.

And Dauid the kynge sayde vnto all the congregacion: God hath specced ally chosen Salomon my sonne, which is yet yong and tender, and the worke is greate, for the house is not for man, but for the Lord God. Wherefore I haue prepared with al my myghte for the house of God: golde for thynges of golde, and syluer for thynges of syluer, & bras for thynges of bras, yd for thynges of yd, & wood for thynges of wood: and dynt stones, & set stones and of other geie stones, and al maner precious stones, & of marble great abundaunce. And the people reioysed that they were so wyllynge, for wyth a pure herte they were wyllynge vnto the Lorde. And thereto Dauid the kynge reioysed wyth great gladdenesse. And Dauid blessed the Lorde before all the congregacyon and sayed: Blessed arte thou Lorde God of Israell oure father, for euer, and euer. Thyne (O Lorde) is greatenesse, power glorie, victorie, and prayse: for all that is in heauen and erth is thine, and thine is the kyngdome (O Lorde) and thou arte lyft by an heade aboue all. Thyne is the honoure come of the, and thou reignest ouer al, and in thine hande is power and strength, and in thine hande it is to make great and to geue strength vnto al. And now oure God, we thanke the, and prayse thy gloriouse name. For what can I say what is my people that we shoulde obtayne strength to be so willing? But al is of the, and of that we receiued of thine hande we haue giuen the. For we be but straungers before the, & tenants, as were all oure fathers. Our dayes on the earth is but a shadowe, and there is none abyding, O Lorde oure God all thys heape that wee haue prepared to buyde thee an house for thy hoyle name, cometh of thine hande, and is all thine.

I wrote my God, that thou proudest the herre and haste pleasure, in playnnesse. And in playnnesse of myne herte I haue wyspungelpe giuen all thys. And now I se thy people whych be here in gladdenesse to offer wyspungelpe to the, O Lorde God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israell oure fathers, keepe thys for euer in the ymagynacion of the thoughtes of the herte of thy people, and prepare theyr hertes vnto the.

And giue vnto Salomon my sonne, a pure herte to kepe thy commandementes, thy testymones and thine ordynaunces, and to do al, & to bld þ house which I entreded.

And Dauid sayde to all the congregacyon: blesse the Lorde oure God. And all the congregacyon blessed the Lorde God of their fathers, and stowped and botwed them selues vnto the Lorde and to the king. And they offered offerings vnto the Lorde. And on the morowe after the sayde daye, they offered in burnt offerings vnto the Lorde, a thousand oxen, a thousande rammes, and a thousande lambes wyth their drynke offerings. And they Acwe plente.

And they offered thowowoute all Israell, and dyde eate and drynke before the Lorde the same daye wyth greate gladdenesse. And they made Salomon the sonne of Dauid kyng the seconde tyme, & annointed hym vnto the Lorde, to be ruler, and Zadocke to be the priest. And so Salomon sat on the seat of the Lorde, and was kinge for Dauid his father, and prospered, and al Israell obeyed hym. And al the Lordes and men of power and al the sonnes of kynge Dauid submitted them selues vnder kynge Salomon. And the Lorde magnified kynge Salomon on hygh in the syghte of al Israell, and gaue hym so gloriouse a kyngdome as none of all that were kinges before in Israell, had. Now Dauid the sonne of I say was kyng ouer al Israell. And the space he reigned ouer Israell was fourty yere: seven yere in Hebion and .xxviii. yere in Ierusalem. And he dyed in a good age: olde, & ripe, and gloriouse: And Salomon his sonne reigned in his steade. Our dayes on the earth is but a shadowe, and there is none abyding, O Lorde oure God all thys heape that wee haue prepared to buyde thee an house for thy hoyle name, cometh of thine hande, and is all thine.

I wrote my God, that thou proudest the herre and haste pleasure, in playnnesse. And in playnnesse of myne herte I haue wyspungelpe giuen all thys. And now I se thy people whych be here in gladdenesse to offer wyspungelpe to the, O Lorde God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israell oure fathers, keepe thys for euer in the ymagynacion of the thoughtes of the herte of thy people, and prepare theyr hertes vnto the.

And giue vnto Salomon my sonne, a pure herte to kepe thy commandementes, thy testymones and thine ordynaunces, and to do al, & to bld þ house which I entreded.

And Dauid sayde to all the congregacyon: blesse the Lorde oure God. And all the congregacyon blessed the Lorde God of their fathers, and stowped and botwed them selues vnto the Lorde and to the king. And they offered offerings vnto the Lorde. And on the morowe after the sayde daye, they offered in burnt offerings vnto the Lorde, a thousand oxen, a thousande rammes, and a thousande lambes wyth their drynke offerings. And they Acwe plente.

And they offered thowowoute all Israell, and dyde eate and drynke before the Lorde the same daye wyth greate gladdenesse. And they made Salomon the sonne of Dauid kyng

the seconde tyme, & annointed hym vnto the Lorde, to be ruler, and Zadocke to be the priest. And so Salomon sat on the seat of the Lorde, and was kinge for Dauid his father, and prospered, and al Israell obeyed hym. And al the Lordes and men of power and al the sonnes of kynge Dauid submitted them selues vnder kynge Salom. And the Lorde magnified kynge Salomon on hygh in the syghte of al Israell, and gaue hym so gloriouse a kyngdome as none of all that were kinges before in Israell, had. Now Dauid the sonne of I say was kyng ouer al Israell. And the space he reigned ouer Israell was fourty yere: seven yere in Hebion and .xxviii. yere in Ierusalem. And he dyed in a good age: olde, & ripe, and gloriouse: And Salomon his sonne reigned in his steade. The actes of Dauid the king both first and last, are wyrtten in the booke of Samuell the sear, and in the booke of Nathan the prophete, and in the booke of Gad the sear of vpspons, wyth all his kyngdome and power, and tymes that wente ouer hym, and ouer all the kyngdomes of the earth.

cion wyth him wente to the bilsulter of Gabaon: for there was the tabernacle of the witness of God, whych Moyse the seruaunte of the Lorde made in the imp- denesse. But the Arcke of God had Da-uid brought fro Karish Iacym, into the place he had prepared for it. Where he had pitched a tente for it, euen at Ierusalem. Moreouer the brasen aulter that Bezeliel the sonne of Uri, the sonne of Hur had made, was at Gabaon also before the tabernacle of the Lorde. And Salomon and the congregacion wente to bpserte it.

And

And Salomon offered there before the Lord by the brazen altar that was by the ta-bernacl of witness a thousand burnt sacrifices. And the same night God appeared unto Salomon, and said to him: aske what thou wilt I geue thee. And Solomon sayed unto God: thou hast deued greete mercy vnto Dauid my father, and hast made me kynge in thy place: and now Lord God let thy promise vnto Dauid my father be true. For thou hast made me kynge ouer a people lyke the dust of the earth in multitude. Wherefore geue me wysdome and knowledge how to beaue my selfe to this people: for who is able to iudge this people that is so greete?

Then God sayed to Salomon, because thou haddest this in thine harte, and dyd-dest not aske treasure and riches, honoure and the lyues of thine enemies, neyther perlonge lyfe: but hast asked wysdome and knowledge, to iudge my people, ouer whiche I haue made thee kynge, wysdome and knowledge shall be geuen thee, and I will geue thee treasure, riches, and glorie also, that amonge the kynnes vnto the order of the, none was or shal be like thee. And so Salomon came from the brazen altar that was at Gabaon to Ierusalem from the ta-bernacl of witness, and tarried at Jerusalem. And Salomon gathered charrettes and horsemen so that he had a thousande and foure hundred charrettes, and twelue thousande horsemen, whiche he b. r. m. d. in the charrete cyrces, and aboute the kinge at Ierusalem. And the kynge made silver and golde at Ierusalem as plenteous as stones, and Cedar trees as plentye as the myllettrees that growe in the valyes. And the horsen whiche Salomon had, were broughte hym out of Egypt to Ireua. The kynges marchauntes let them oure of Ireua at a pyece. Ther came and broughte oure of Egypte a charret for fye hundred sycles, and an horse for an hundered and fyfye. And so broughte they to all the kynges of the Hetites and to the kynges of Syria thowse the handes of p. said marchauntes.

The ii. Chapter.

Salomon sendeth to Hiram the kynge of Tyre for woode and workemen.

And Salomon determined to buyde an house for the name of the Lord, and an house for his kyngdome: and tolde out thre skore and ten thousand men to beate burdens, and fourescore thousand to be in the mountayne, and thre thousand and fyre hundred to ouerse them.

And Salomon sente to Hiram kynge of Tyre, sayinge: As thou dydeste deale with Dauid my father, and dydeste sende hym Cedar woode, to buyde hym an house to dwell in, euen so deale with me now, that I may buyde an house for the name of the lord my God, to consecrate it to hym to burne swete odours and to set there brate before om perpetually, and for burn. saye fyre morning and euenyng, and on the Sa-beth dayes, & the fynd daye of euerie newe mone, & in the solempne feastes of the Lord out God, so to contynue euer in Israel.

And the house which I buyde is greete, for greete is our God aboute all G. d. d. s.
So that who can be able to buyde hym an house, when that heauen, neyther heauen aboue all heauens is able to receyue hym, what am I then that I should buyde hym an house? naye, but to burne sacrifice before hym: sende me now therefore a con-nyng man to worke in golde, silver, & iasse Ycon, & scarlet, & remesin, and Jacynth coloure, and that can sail to graue, to be in the the countyme men that are with me in Ius-da and Ierusalem, which Dauid my father dyd prepare. And sende me also Cedar trees, fyre trees and some trees oute of Libanon. For I more well thy seruantes can skyll to deu timber in Libanon. And loo, my men shal be with thee, that they may prepare me timber ynough. For the house which I buyde is greete and wonderfull.
And beholde, I sent for thy seruantes the cutters and hewers of timber twentye thousand quarters of wheate, and ten thousand quarters of barley, and thre thousand barles of wyne, and twentye thousande barthes of oyle.

And Hiram kynge of Tyre answered in replye and sente to Salomon: because the Lord loueth his people, he hath made the kynge ouer them. And Hiram sayde moreouer: blessed be the Lord God of Israel, wherewith hath made both heauen and earth, that he hath gyuen Dauid the kynge a wise sonne that hath dyfetyen and vnsderstandyng, to buyde an house for the Lord, and an orber for his kyngdome. And now I haue sent a wise man and a man of vnderstandyng called Hiram Abi, and is the sonne of a woman of the daughters of Dan (born be it hys father was a Tyrian) and he can skyll to worke in golde, silver, brase, yron, stone, timber, scarlet, Jacynth, bisse, and remesin: and graue al maner of graynges, and to fynde all maner sorte worke that shal be set before hym. And thy cunnyng men, and wyse men cunnyng men of my Lord Dauid thy father. And now I shal beate, barley, oyle, and wyne whiche my Lord hath sayde, let hym sende hys ser-uantes. And wee will cutte woode oure of Libanon, as muche as thou shalt nede, and will bringe it to the in shippes, by sea to porre Tybe: and thence thou mayest eare them to Ierusalem. And Salomon numbered all the straungers that were in the lande of Israel, after the tyme hys father Dauid had numbred them. And they were founde an hundred, and .lii. thousand, and fyre hundred. And he sette .lxx.
thousand of them to beate burthens, & .lxx. thousand to be in the mountayne, and

The.iii. Chapter.

The temple of the Lord & the porche are builded with other thynges thereto belonging.

Then Salomon began to build the house of the Lord at Jerusalem in mount Moriah, which was shewed David his father w^{ch} he prepared a place in the threshing floure of Ornan the Jebusite. And he began to build the second day of the seconde moneth, the fourth yere of his reygne. And this is the foundacyon of Salomon, in buildinge the house of God. The length was .lx. cubites after the olde cubite, and the bredth .xx. And the porch at the ende was as large as the house bredth, twenty cubites: and the height was an hundred and twenty cubites. And he overlaid it on the ynnere syde with pure golde. And the great house he filled with fyre ree, and overlaid it thorow with good golde, and graued thereto palmeteres, and cherynes, solynges in wth synckes. And he paved the house with precious marble good lye. And it was gold of Shinarum. And he overlaid the house, both beames, postes, walles, and doores with golde, and graued Cherubes upon the walles.

And he made the house most holpe, and whose length was twenty cubites lyke to the bredth of the house, and the bredth therof was also twenty cubites. And he overlaid it with the best golde, that came to the sum of fyve hundred talents, he made also wailes of golde, & the waight of euery waile of gold w^{er}ed fyf tyres. And he overlaid the upper chambers with golde.

Exo. xxv. 5. And he made in the house mooste holpe Cherubbes of ymage worke, and gilded them with golde. And the wynges of the Cherubes w^{er} twenty cubites long. The one wyng was fyve cubites longe and touched the wall of the house, and the other wyng was lyke wyse fyve cubites, and touched the wyng of the other Cherub. And the one wyng of the other Cherub was fyve cubites, and touched the wall of the house, and the other wyng was fyve cubites also, and reached to the wyng of the other Cherub. So that the wynges of the lord Cherubs taught twenty cubits. And they stode on their fete and looked inwards.

D And he made a forchanging of facinct colour, of scarlet, cremosin and byss: and caused Cherubs to be brodered thereon. And he made before the house two pylles of .xxxv. cubites long. And the head that was above on the top of one of them was .v. cubites. And he made suche chaines as was in the queere, and put them on the heades of the pylles, and made an hundred pomegranates, and put them on the chaines. And he reared up the pylles before the temple: one on the ryghte hande, and an other on the lefte, and called the ryght, Jachyn, and the lefte, Boaz.

The.iii. Chapter.

The altar of brasse, the sea, the vessels to wash, with the candelstiches. &c.

And he made an altar of brasse .xx. cubites longe and .xx. cubites brode and ten cubites hyghe. And he caste a brasse sea of .x. cubites from brim to brim, and rounde in compasse, and fyve cubites hyghe: and a lyne of thirtie cubites myght haue compassed it roundabout. And the likenes of oren byd compass it roundabout vnder it: that is to wete, two rowes of oren cast, which when it was cast, byd compassed that sea which was ten cubites wide round about. And it stode upon .xii. oren, of which the thre looked North, the West, the South, and the East, and the sea upon the above on hyghe, and the brider partes of them inward. And the thickest of it was an handbread, and the brim lyke the brim of a cup, with floures of lylies. And it receyued and held thre thousand barbes.

And he made ten lauets: and put fyue on the ryghte hande and fyue on the lefte, to washe with. And in them they thrust the fleshe of the burnt offeringes. But the sea was for the pyestes, too washe in. And he made tenne candelstiches of golde, in theyr facons, and put them in the temple: fyue on the ryghte hande, and fyue on the lefte. And he made also tenne tables, and put them in the temple, fyue on the ryghte syde and fyue on the lefte. And he made an hundred basins of golde. And he made the courts of the pyestes, and the greete court and doores do it: & overlaid the doores of them, with brasse. And he sette the sea in the rightside of the Easte end toward the South. And Btram made postes, shouelles and basses. And Btram finished the worke he made for king Salomon vnto the temple of God: The two pylles with their scalpys of the two hebes that were on the tops of the pylles, and the two wretches to couer the two scalpys of the heades that were on the toppes of the pylles: and four hundred pomegranettes for the two wretches, two rowes of pomegranettes for euery wretch, to couer two scalpys of the heades that were on the pylles. And he made bottomes, and lauets upon the bottomes: and the sea with the lye oren vnder it. And therre pots, shouels, fleshyokes and al these vessels byd Btram aby make for kynge Salomon, for the house of the Lord, of bright brasse. In the playne of Iordan byd the kynge cast them, in the threke carth, between Socoth and Zeredatha. And he made of al these vessels so myghty greete abundance, that the waight of brasse could not be reakened. And Salomon made all the vessels that pertayned to the house of God: the golden altar and the tables with the shewbread upon them, the candelstiches with their lampes to burne after the maner before the quire, & that of pure gold, and the floures, and the lampes, and the snuffers were golde, and that perfecte gold: & the dressing kniues, basens, spones and censours of pure golde. And the pinner doores of the place most holy, and the doores of the temple were gold. And thus was all the worke that Salomō made for þ house of the Lord finished. And when the worke that Salomon made in the house of the Lord was finished, the Salomon brought in the giftes dedicate by Dauid his father, the splier and the gold, & al the Jewels, and put them among the treasure of the house of God.

The xvj. Chapter.

After the Noychou is and the Arke were put in the temple, the gloire of the Lords shyned the temple.

Al Den Salomon gathered the elders of Israel together and al the heades of the tribes and auncient Lords among the chyldren of Israel, vnto Jerusalem: to bringe the arke of the couenaunte of the Lord forth of the cite of Dauid whiche is Zion. And al the mē of Israel resorted vnto the king in the feast of the vii. moneth. And when al the elders of Israel were come, the Leuites toke vp the Arke, and the priestes and the Leuites broughte awaye the Arke and the tabernacle of witnesse, and all the holpe vessels that were in the tabernacle. And kynge Salomon and al the congregation of Israel that were assembled vnto hym before the Arke, offered sheepe and oxen, so manie that they could not be told or numbred for multitude. And the priestes broughte the arke of the appointmente of the Lord vnto hys place in the quere of the temple and place most holy: even vnder the wyngs of the Cherubes, that the Cherubs stretched out thei wynges ouer the place of the Arke, and couered the Arke, and her floues aboue on hygh. And the floues of the Arke were so long, that they were sent a lytle before the quere, but not farre wthout. And ther it remayneth vnto this dape. Moreover there was nothinge in the Arke save the two tables, whiche Moyses put therein in Horeb, whiche the Lord had wyrtten to the chyldrene of Israel, after thei cominge forth from Egypt. And when the priestes were come oute of the holpe place (for al the priestes that were found there, sanctified them selves and did not as yet at any tyme wayte by course.) But the Leuites euerie one of them that were vnder Asaph, Beman and Juthun, and amonge thei chyldren and brethren were a rapped in bylle, and sange wthymbales, psalteries and harpes, standynge faste frome the altar, and wth them an hundred and xx. puerles, blowynge trompettes. And the trompet blowers and the syngers so agreed, that it seemed but one voyce in praysong & thanking the Lord. And as the voyce of the trompettes,ymbales & instrumēt of melody arose, & as they praised the Lord that he was good, and that hys mercy lasteth euer, the house of the Lord was fylled wth a clowde, so that the priestes coulde not endure to minister by reason of the clowde. For the gloire of the Lord had fylled the house of God.

The vii. Chapter.

The words of Salomon to the people, and the prayer he made to God.

Then Salomon sayde: The Lord hath spoken, that he wyl dwel in darkenes. And I haue buylt an habitation for þ and a place to dwel in for euer. And þ kinge turned hys face and blessed the holpe congregation of Israel, and al the congregation of Israel stode. And he sayde: blessed be the Lord God of Israel, winche spake wth hys mouth to my father Dauid, and hath fulfilled it wth hys hands, for god saide: sythen the tyme I brought my people oute of the lande of Egypt, I chose no cytye amonge all the trybes of Israel to buyld an house in, that my name myghte be there, neyther chose I anye man to be a ruler ouer my people Israel. But nowe I haue chosen Jerusalem to haue my name there, and haue chosen Dauid too be ouer my people Israel.

* And it was in the hearte of Dauid my father to buyld an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel: But the lord said to Dauid my father: for as much as it was in thyne hearte, to buyld an house for my name, thou dydest wel that thou haddest it in thyne herte. Not wthstandynge thou shalt not buyld the house, but thy sonne whiche shall issue out of thy loynes; he shall buyld an house for my name. And the Lord hath made good hys sayinge that he hath spoken. For I arose in the rowm of Dauid my father, and sat on the seate of Israel, as the Lord promysed, and haue buylt an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel. And therein I haue put the arke, wher in the couenaunte of the Lord made with the chyldren of Israel, is. And he slept forth before the altar of the Lord in the presence of al the congregation of Israel, and stretched out hys hands, for Salomon had made a brasen pulpit of .v. Cubites longe. & cubytes broade, and thre of heighth, and had set it in the middes of the great court: vpon that he slepte and kneeled downe vpon his knees before al the congregacion of Israel, and stretched out hys handes to heauen, and sayde: Lord God of Israel there is no God lyke the ether in heauen or in earth. whiche kepeth couenaunte and the west mercy vnto thy seruaunts, that walk before the, wth al thei herts. Which hast kept wth Dauid my father that thou promysedst hym: thou saidst it wth thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it wth thyne hande, as it is so to this dape.

Nowe Lord God of Israel kepe wth thy seruaunte Dauid my father, that thou promptedest hym, saying: * thou shalt not be withoute one or other in my sight that shall sit vpon the seate of Israel, vpon this condoption yet, if thy children wil take hede to thy wapes to walke in my law, as thou hast walked before me. Now Lorde God of Israel let thy saying be true, which thou saydest vnto thy seruaunte Dauid. Howbeit in verpe dede, can God dwel with man on earth? Beholde, nether heauen or heauen aboue al heauens is able to contene the howe shulde the house then whiche I haue bulte for the do it? But returne to the prayer of thy seruaunte and to his supplication (O Lord my God) to herken vnto the voice and prayer whiche thy seruaunte maketh before the. That thine eyes be open ouer thys house daye and nyghte, and ouer the place of whiche thou hast sayde, that thou wouldest putte thy name there: to hearken vnto the prayer, which thy seruaunte prayeth at thys place: herken therfore vnto the prayers of thy seruaunte and of thy people Israel, whiche they praye in thys place.

But heare thou it oute of thy dwellinge place, heauen, and when thou hearest it be mercifull. * If a man spurne agaynst his neighbour, and an adiuration be layde to his charge, to adure hym wthal, and the adiuration come before thine altier in this house: then hear thou from heuen, & worke and iudge thy seruants, that thou reward the euil, and bunge his way vpon his head and iustify the rightouse, and geue hym according to his rightwisnesse.

If a people if thy people Israel be put too the worse before theyr ennemys, because they haue sinned agaynst the: Yet if they returne and confesse thy name and make intercession, and praye before the in thys house: then heare thou from heauen, and bee mercifull vnto the synne of thy peple Israel, and brynge them agayne vnto the lande whiche thou gauest to them and to theyr fathers.

If heauen be shut vp, that there be no cayne, because they haue sinned agaynst the, yet if they praye at thys place and con-fesse thy name, and turne from theyr synnes at thy scourginge: then heare thou from heauen and be mercifull vnto the synne of thy seruantes and of thy people Israel, that thou shew them a good way to walk in, and sende cayne vpon thy lande whiche thou hast geuen vnto thy people for an inheritance.

If there chaunce deathe in the lande, pestilence, droughte, or mildewe, grasshoppers, or caterpillers, or that theyr ennemys bessege them in the ctyes of theyr owne lande, or what soeuer plage or sykenes it be. Then all the supplicatons, and prayers that shalbe made of all men amonge all thy people Israel, whiche shall knowe eu-ery man his owne sore and his owne grief, and shal stretch out their handes toward the house: thou shalt heare from heauen thy dwelling place, and shalt be mercifull, and geue euery man according vnto al his way, even as thou shalt knowe euery mans hert (for thou only knowest the heartes of the chyliden of Adam) that they maie feare the and walcke in thy wapes as longe as they lyue vpon the earth, whiche thou gauest to our fathers.

Moreover a straunger whiche is not of thy people Israel, if he come from a far lande for thy greates sake, and thy myghte lande and stretched oute arme, and to come and praye at thys house: thou shalt heare hym from heauen thy dwelling place, & shalt do according to all that the strainger calleth to the for: that al the na-tyons of the earth maie knowe thy name and feare the, as dothe thy people Israel:
and that it maie bee knowne that thys house whiche I haue bulte is called after thy name.

When thy people shall go oute to warre agaynst theyr ennemys the wape that thou shalt send them: If they praye to the, the way toward this cite which thou hast chosen, and house whiche I haue bulte for thy name: then heare from heauen, their supplication and prayer, and helpe them in theyr righte. If they shal sune agaynst the (as there is no man but that he shal sune) and thou be angrie with them and deliuer them to their ennemys, and they lead them away captive vnto a land far or neare, yet if their hertes come to them agayne in the lande, where they be in captiuitie, and turne and praye vnto the in the land where they be in captiuitie, saying: we haue sinned and haue done euill and wickedly, and turne again to the wthall theyr hertes, and all theyr soules, in the land of theyr captiuitie, wher they be kepte in bondage, and so praye toward the: then heare thou from heauen, & sende them to theyr fathers, and ctye whiche thou hast chosen, and to thys house whiche I haue bulte for thy name: then heare fro heauen thy dwellinge place, their supplication and prayers, and iudge theyr cause, and be mercifull vnto thy people, though they haue sinned agaynst the. So now my God let thine eyes be open and thine eares attent vnto the prayers made in this place.
And now therfore arise Lorde God in thy resting place, both thou, and the arkce of thy strength, and let thy priests put on victorie, & thy saintes reioyse in goodnes. And Lorde God turne not awai thy face of thine anointed. But remembre the mercies promised to Dauid thy seruaunte.

The vii. Chapter.

The fyre consumed the Sacryfice. The Lorde appeareth to Salomon the second into the house of the Lord, because the gloof the Lord vpon the house. and stouped wthep faces to the earth vpon the pauemente, and bowed them selues, and confessed vnto the Lord, that he was good, and that his mercie lasted euer.

And the kinge and all the people offered offerings before the Lord. So that king Salomon offered xii. thousande oren, and an hundred and twentye thousande shepe.
And so the kinge and all the people hallowed the house of God. And the priestes war-ted on their offices. and the Levites with instrumentes of musike of the Lord whiche kinge Dauid made to confesse vnto the Lord that his mercie lasteth euer, when Dauid gaue prayse thowhe their handes. And the priestes blew trumpettes fast by them: and all Israel stode. Moreover Salomon hallowed the middle of the court that was before the Lord: for there he offered burnte-offerings and the fatte of the peace offerynges, because the brasen altar whiche Salomon hadde made, was not able to receyue the burnte offerynges and the meat-offerings, and the fat.

And Salomon kepte a feast the same season of seven dayes, and all Israel wth hym, an exceedyng greate congregation, euen from Demath vnto the euier of Egypt.
And the eighte day they made a gathering.
For they kepte the halowynge of the auter. vii. dayes, and the feast. vii. dayes. And the xxi. daye of the .v. moneth he lette the people departe into thei tentes, glad and merie in herte for the goodnesse that the Lord hadde shewed too Dauid, to Salomon, and to Israel his people. * And so

Salomon finished the house of the Lord: and the kynges house, and all that came in his heart, to make in the house of the Lord and in his own house & that prosperously.

And the Lord appeared to Salomon by nyghte and sayde to hym, I haue heard thy petition and haue chosen this place for my selfe, to be an house of sacrifice.
Moreover if I shut vp heauen that ther be no raigne, or if I commaunde the grasshoppers to deuoure the lande, or if I sende pestilence amonge my people, yet if my people that are named after my name, shall humble them selues and make intercession and seke my presence, and turne from their wicked wayes, then will I heare from heauen, and be merciful to thei synnes, and will heale thei lande. Furthermore myne eyes shall be open and myne eares attente vnto the prayers made in this place. And synallye, I haue chosen and sanctified this house that my name bee there foreuer: and myne eyes and myne harte shall be there perpetualle.

And if thou walte walcke before me as Dauid thy father walked, to do accordyng to all that I commaunded, and shalt kepe myne ordinaunces and my lawes: then wil I stablish the seate of thy kingdome, ac-cordyng to the couenaunte I made wth Dauid thy father, sayinge: * Thou shalt haue euer one of other that shall rule in Israel. But if thou turn away and forsake mine ordynances and my commandementes whiche I haue set before you, and shalt go and serue other goddes, and bowe your sel-ues to them: then will I plucke them by the rotes out of my lande whiche I haue geuen them, and I will caste this house whiche I haue sanctified for my name out of my sight, and will make a prouerbe and a tale of it amonge all Natyons.

And this house that is so hygh, shall bee a wonder to all that passeth thereby, that they shall saye: Why hath the Lord dealt on this fashion wth this land, and wth this this house? And it shall be answered them: because they forsoke the Lord God of thei fathers, whiche broughte them out of the land of Egypt, and claued to other goddes, and bowed to them, and serued them, euen therefore brought he on them all this euill.

The viii. Chapter.

The cities that Salomon builded after the house of God, was synghed.

After twentye yeres when Salomon had builde the house of the Lord and his owne house: he builde the cities that Biram gaue him and put certayne of the chyldren of Israel in them. And Salomon wente to Demath, Tobah, and Arengched it. And he builde Thabmoz in the wyl-dernesse and all the flore cities whiche he builded in Demath and he built Bethhoron the upper, and Bethhoron the nether, and made them stronge cities with wals, gates and barres. And Baalah and all the flore cities that Salomon had, and all the charette cities, and the cities of horsmen, & all that Salomon had luste to bulde in Ierusalem and Libanon, and thowout all the lande of his dominion.

And all the people that were left of the Bethites, Amozites, Sheresites, Heuites and Jebusites, which wer not of the chyldren of Israel: euen the chyldrene of them whiche were left after them in the lande and were not consumed of the chyldren of Israel, byd Salomon make tributaries vnto this daye. But of the chyldrene of Israel did Salomon make no bondmenne in his woorkes: but they were men of warre and rulers and greate Lordes wth hym, and capytaynes ouer his charets, and horsmen: And kyng Salomons officers that ouer saw and ruled the people, wer two hundred and fiftye.

And Salomon brought the daughter of Pharao out of Egypt into the house that he had made for her. For he sayde: my wyfe shall not dwel in the house of Dauid kyng of Israel, for it is holy, because the arcke of the Lord came into it.

And from thence forth Salomon offered burnt offerings vnto the Lord on the altar of the Lord, which he had built before the portche to offer day by day, according to the commaundement of Moses, and in the Sabbathes and newe moones, and the tyme solempne feastes of the pere, the feaste of sweate breade, the feaste of wekes, and the feaste of boothes.

And Salomon assigned the priestes euerie man to his office, as Dauid his father had ordered them, and the Leuites vnto their office, for to prayse and mynstrel before the priestes day by day, and the porters by course at euery gate. For so had Dauid the man of God commaunded. And the commaundement of the king vnto the priestes and the Leuites concerning whatsoever cause it was, and concerning the treasures, was not disobeyed.

And al the worke of Salomon wente well forward euen from the daye that the foundation of the house of the Lord was layde, till he had finished it, that the house of the Lord was perfecte. And then went kynge Salomon to Zion Sabar, and too cloth and to the seas syde in the lande of Edom. And Diram sent hym by the hande of his seruauntes, shippes and seruauntes that coulde skill of the sea. Whiche wente wpth the seruauntes of Salomon to Ophir and broughte thence foure hundred and fyftie talentes of golde, and brought it to kynge Salomon.

The.ii. Chapter.

The communication of Salomon with the queene of Saba, and the giftes that shee gaue the other. The death of Salomon: after whome succeedeth Roboam.

And the queene of Saba hearde of the fame of Salomon and came to proue hym with riddels at Ierusalem wpth a bette greate companie, and wpth Camelles that bare swete odoures, and plenty of golde and precious stone. And when she was come to Salomon, she communed with him of al that was in her herte. And Salomon copled her all her questyons, that there was nothyng he had frome Salomon, whiche he tolde her not.

And when the queene of Saba had seene the wysdome of Salomon and the house that he had buyt, and the meate of hys table and the settinge of hys seruauntes, and the standinge of hys wapters, and their apparell, and hys buttellars wpth their apparell, and hys parloure, oute of which he went into the house of the Lord, she was so astonied that there was no more herte in her.

And then she sayde to the king: the saying whiche I heard in mine owne lande, of thyne actes and of thy wysdome, is true. But I beleued not the wordes of them, vntill I came and mine eyes hadde seene it. And lo, the one halfe of thy wysdome was not tolde me: thou exceedest the fame that I hearde, happye are thy men, and happye are these thy seruauntes whiche stande before the alwaie and heare thy wysdome. Blessed be thy Lord thy God which had lust to thee, to make the king on his seate, vnto the Lord thy God. Because thy God loued Israel, to make them continue euer, therefore made he the kynge ouer them too doo righte and equitie.

And he gaue the kinge an hundred and xx. talentes of golde, and of swete odoures exceedinge greate aboundaunce with precious stones, that there was no such swete odoures as the queene of Saba gaue kynge Salomon.

And moreover the seruauntes of Diram and the seruauntes of Salomon whiche broughte golde from Ophir, broughte also some woode and precious stones. And the kinge made of the Algume woode steeares in the house of the Lord, and in the kyngees palace, and harpes and psalteries for singes. And there was no such woode sene before in the lande of Iuda. And kynge Salomon gaue to the queene of Saba al her desyre that she asked aboue that she broughte vnto the kynge. And so she turned and went away to her owne land wpth her seruauntes.

The summe of golde that came to Salomon yere by yere, was fyre hundred. lxxvi. talentes of golde, besides that whiche chapmen and marchauntes broughte and all the kyngees of Arabia, and Dukes of countreies broughte goulde and syluer to Salomon.

And kynge Salomon made two hundred buckelars of golde. vi. hundred speles of beaten goulde to a buckelar: and three hundred sheldes of beaten goulde, three hundred speles of goulde to a shelde, and he putte them in the house of the foreste of Libanon.

And the kynge made a greate seate of yuoipe, and overlappede it with pure golde. And ther was fyre steppes to the seate with a fote stole of golde fastned to the seate: and pomels on ech side of the sitting place, and lions standinge by the pomelles. And xii. lions stode on the one side and on the other vpon fyre steppes, that there were no such in anye kynge dome.

And all the drynke vessels of kynge Salomon wer golde, and all the vessels of the house of the foreste of Libanon, were pure gold, and as for siluer, it was counted nothyng worthe in the dayes of Salomon. For the kyngees shippes wente to Tharsis with the seruauntes of Diram euerie thre yeres once. And the shippes of Tharsis brought gold, siluer, the tethe of elephantes apes and peacockes.

And kynge Salomon passed al the kyngees of the earthe in riches and wysdome. And all the kyngees of the earthe soughte the presence of Salomon, to hear the wise dome that God had put in hys herte. And they

they brought euery man his present in vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment, harness, sweete odours, horses and mules. pere by pere.

And Salomon had four thousand mailers of horses, and charrettes for them and six thousand horsemen. And he bestowed them in the charret cities, & wpyth the kynge at Iherusalem. And he raygned ouer all the kynges from Euphrates, vnto the lande of the Philistines, and so to the borders of Egypt. * And the king made siluer in Iherusalem as plenteous as stones, and Cedar trees as plenteous as the Myrtre trees that growe in the valeys. And Salomon had horses broughte him oute of Egypt, and oute of all landes.

* The reste of the actes of kynge Salomon both first and last, are wyrtten in the booke of Nathan the prophete, and in the prophesie of Abiah the Silonite, and in the visions of Iadi the seat of visions against Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat. And when Salomon had raygned in Iherusalem vpon all Israel. xl. yeres, he layde hym too rest with his fathers, and was buried in the cite of Dauid his father, and Roboam hys sonne raygned in hys stede.

The. r. Chapter.

The folynesse of Roboam, and the deuision of his realme.

iii. Reg. xii. a

And Roboam went to Sichem: for to Sichem were all Israel come to make hym kynge. And when Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat beinge in Egypte hearde it (for he was fled for feare of Salomon the kynge) he retourned oute of Egypte. And they sente and called hym. And so Jeroboam and all Israel came and communed wpyth Roboam and sayde. Thy father made vs a greuous yoke: but remitte thou somewhat of the greuous seruyce of thy father, and of his heuie yoke that he put vpon vs, and we wyl serue the. And he sayde too them: come agayne after thre daies to me. And the people departed.

And kynge Roboam counselled wpyth the elders that stode before Salomon hys father whyle he lyued, and sayde: What counsell geue ye me, to aunswere this people agayne? And they tolde hym sayinge. If thou shalt bee kynde too thys people and please them, and shalt speake lounge wordes to them, they wil be thy seruaunts for euer. But he left the counsel whych the elders gaue him, and toke counsell wpyth the yonge menne that were noursed vp wpyth hym, and hadde stonde in his presence, and sayde to them: What aduise geue ye, that I may answer this people whych haue communed with me, sayinge: Abate somewhat of the yoke whych thy father did put vpon vs.

And the yonge men that were noursed vp wpyth hym, talked wpyth hym, sayinge, thus answer the people that spake to the, sayinge. Thy father made oure yoke heauy: But make thou oure yoke somewhat lyghter. Thus wise aunswere them. My lytle finger shalbe heauyer then my fathers yokes. * For where my father putte a heauy yoke vpon you, I wyl put more thereto, and where my father chastised you with whippes, I wyl chastise you with Scorpions. Howe when Jeroboam and all Israel were come the thyrde day, as the kynge had sayinge: come agayne to me the thyrde day, the kynge aunswere the yonge menne: for kynge Roboam lefte the counsell of the aged menne, and aunswere them after the aduise of the yonge menne, sayinge: if my father haue made your yoke greuous, I wyl adde thereto, and where my father chastised you with whippes, I wyl chastise you with Scorpions.

And so the kynge harkened not vnto the people, for the turning away was of God; that the Lord myghte make good hys sayinge whiche he spake by the hande of Ahiah the Silonite, to Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat. And when all Israel sawe that the kynge would not heare them, the people aunswere the kynge sayinge: what parte haue we with Dauid, or inheritance with the sonne of Israhel: let euery manne of Israel go to hys tente. And now Dauid se to thynne owne house.

And thereupon all Israel gatte them to the tentes, so that Roboam raygned ouer none of the children of Israel then dwelte in the cyties of Iuda. Then kynge Roboam sente too the yonge manne Hadram that was ouer the trebute, and the children of Israel stoned hym wpyth stones that he dyed. But kynge Roboam made speede & gate hym vp to his charrette to fle to Iherusalem. And so Israel departed from the house of Dauid vnto this daye.

The. ii. Chapter.

Roboam is forbidden to fight against Jeroboam. He hath. xviij. wyues and. lii. scole concubines: and by them viij. and twenye sonnes, and. lii. scole daughters.

And when Roboam was come to Iherusalem, he gathered of the house of David Beniamin to the number of nine scole. Chosen men of war to fight wpyth Israel, for to bringe the kyngdome agayne to Roboam. But the worde of the Lord came to Semeriah the man of God, sayinge: speake to Roboam the sonne of Salomon king of Iuda, and to all Israel that are in Iuda, and to Beniamin, and saye: thus sayeth the Lord. Be not, nor fyghte wpyth your brethren, but retorne euery man to hys house, for this thyng is done of me. And they obeyed the wordes of the Lord, and returned frs goyng against Jeroboam.

And Roboam dwelt in Iherusalem, and buylt strong cities in Iuda: as Bethsiehem, Etam, and Thekua, Bethsur, Socho, and Odollam: Beth. Marelah and ziph: Aduraim, Lachis and Ascalon: zarah, Aialon and Gebion, whych were the stronge cities of Iuda and Beniamin. And when he hadde reparepayred suche stronge cityes, he put capti-tapnes in them, and store of vytayle, and of opie, and of wine. And he ordeined in al cities shieldes and speres, and made them excedinge stronge. And so Iuda and Ben Ia-min were vnder him.

And the puestes and the Leuites that were in all Israel resorted to hym oute of all thep coastes In so muche that the Le-uites left their suburbs and possessiouns and came to Iuda and Ierusalem: for Jeroboam and his sonnes had caste them out from ministringe vnto the Lorde. * And he ordeined hym puestes of hillaulters, bothe to speide deuples, and also too the calues whiche he had made. And after them there came of all the trybes of Israel (suche as they heres moued them to seke the Lord God of Israel) to Ierusalem to offer vnto the Lord God of their fathers, and so they strengthened the kingdome of Iuda, & made Iroboam the sonne of Salomon myghty in peterlog: for ni. yeres then walked in the way of Dauid and Salomon.

And Iroboam toke hym Maahalah the doughter of Jeremoth the sonne of Dauid to wife. And Abihail the doughter of Eliab the sonne of Ithai, which bare him children: Ieus, Samariah & zahan. And after her, he toke Maacah the doughter of Abisai, whiche bare him Abiah, Ethai, & za and Salumi. But Iroboam loued Maacah the doughter of Abisai more al his other wiues and concubines: for he toke xvi. to his wives, and iii. score concubines, and begat thre score doughters, and epght and twen-tye sonnes. And Iroboam made Abiah the sonne of Maacah the chiefe ruler amonge his brettren, for to make hym kyng. And he played a wyse parte, and scattered of al hys children thowhe oute al the countres of Iuda and Ben Iamin in euery stronge cite. And he gaue them aboundaunce of vytayle, and asked manye wyues.

The xii. Chapter.

Sesac kynge of Egypte robbeth the temple of the Lord. Iroboam dyeth, and Abia his sonne succedeth hym.

And when Iroboam hadde stablished the kyngedome and made it stronge, he forsoke the law of the Lorde, and all Israel wth hym:
* Wherefore the fyfte yere of kyng Iro-boam, Sesac the kyng of Egypte came vp agaynst Ierusalem (because they hadde trespassed agaynst the Lorde) with twelue hundred charetties, and thre score thousand horsemen. And the people were without nu-ber that came with him forth of Egypte:
wth them of Libia, and the * Succites, and the blackemores. And they toke the strong ctytes that were in Iuda, and came to Ierusalem.

Then came Semeiah the prophete too Iroboam, and to the Lordes of Iuda that wer gathered to Ierusalem for feare of Se-sac and sayed to them: thus sayth the lord:

Ye haue left me, and therefore will I leaue you also in the handes of Sesac. Where-vpon the Lordes of Israel and the kyng humbled them selues, and sayde: the Lord is ryghteous. And when the Lorde sawe that they submitted them selues, the word of the Lorde came too Semeiah, sayinge:
they meke them selues, and therefore I wyl not destroye them. But I wyl deliuer them somwhat, and my wyathe shall not fall vpon Ierusalem. Neuerthelesse they shall be hys seruauntes, to knowe what difference is betwene my serupce and the serupce of the kyngdomes of other landes. So Sesac kyng of Egypte came to Ierusalem, and toke awaye the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the kings house and whate he toke all. And he toke also the shieldes of gold which Salomon made.
In stede of which king Iroboam made shilds of brasse, and puttethem in the keepnge of the capptaynes of hys garde, whiche way-ted in the gate of the kynges house. And as ofte as the kyng wente too the house of the Lorde, the garde wente and sette thym, and broughte thym agayne vnto the garde chamber. And so because he humbled hym selfe, the wyathe of the Lorde turned from hym, and destroyed not al together. And moreouer there were manye good pet in Iuda.

So kyng Iroboam wared myghty in Ierusalem and rapned. And Iroboam was one & xl. yeres olde when he was made king, & he reigned xvi. yeres in Ierusalem, the cite which the Lord had chosen oute of al the trybes of Israel, to put his name ther.
His mothers name was Maamah, an Am-monite. * And he did euill, for he prepared not his hert to seke the Lorde.

The actes of Iroboam fyrst and last, are writen in the sayinges of Semeiah the prophete, and of Adu the seat of byspous so muche as they recorde hys genealogye and the perpetuall warre that was be-twene Iroboam and Ieroboam durynge their lyfe. And Iroboam layde him to slepe wth hys fathers, and was buried in the cete of Dauid, and Abia hys sonne rap-ned in hys stede.

And so the chyldren of Israell were broughte vnder at that tyme, and the chyldren of Iuda preyayled, because they leaned vnto the Lord God of their fathers. And Abia solowed a free Ieroboam, and tooke certayne cyties from hym: Bechelle wth towne belogging thereto, and Ephraim wth her towne. And Ieroboam recovered not strenght again in þe daies of Abia. At last the Lord plagued hym that he dyed.

The. xiii. Chapter.

And Asa did that was good & righte in the eyes of the Lord bys Bed, and toke away the altars of strangers, and the hyll altars, and brake the Images, and cut downe the groves, and commanded Juda to seke the Lord God of their fathers, and to be accordynge to the lawe and commaundemente. And he put a way out of al the cityes of Juda, the hillalters, and the idoles: for the kingdome was quiet before hym. And he bulit stronge cities in Juda, because the land was in rest, and he had no warre in those yeres. For the Lord hadde geuen hym rest.

And therfore he said to Iuda: let vs buyd these cities, and compasse them with walles and towres, gates and bars, whyle we haue the land quiet. For we haue sought the lord our god: because we haue sought him, he hath geuen vs rest on euery side.
And so they buyd and prospered. And Asa had an army that bare shield and speare, out

And they smote al the cyres round about Berat. For the feare of the Lorde came vpon them, and they robbed all the cyres, for ther was exceedynge muche to be rob-

Sacrificeth to the Lorde. He depyrueth his mother of her domayon.

And the spirit of God came on Azaria the sonne of Obed. And he wente oute agaynst Asa, and sayde to hym: heare me Asa and al Iuda, and Beniamin. The Lorde is with you whyle ye be with hym, and if ye shal forsake hym, he wyll forsake you.

There wyll come many dayes in Israel, in whiche there shall be no true God, nor priest that teacheth, nor anye lawe. And in theyr tribulacion they shall turne vnto the Lorde God of Israel, and shall forsake hym, and hee shall be founde of them. And in those dayes there shall be no peace to this that goo oute and in. But greates vexacion on euery syde vpon the inhabytantes of all landes. For one nation shall destroye another, and one crite an other: for God wyll bere them with ail aduersyte. But plucke you vp your hertes, and let not your handes sapyte, for your workes shall be rewarded. When Asa heard these words and the prophesie of Azaria the sonne of Obed the prophete, he roke courage and put awaye the abhominacions oute of all the land of Iuda and Beniamin, and oute of the cities which he had in mounte Ephraim, and reued the altar of the Lorde, that was before the porche of the Lorde. And he gathered all Iuda and Beniamin and the strangers with them oute of Egipt, Ammon, and Simeon. For ther fell manie to hym oute of Israel, when they sawe that God was with hym. And they assembled at Ierusalem the thyrde moneth of the thirteene yere of the reigne of Asa. And they offered vnto the Lorde the same tyme of the spoyle whiche they had broughte, seven hundred oxen, and seven thousande shepe. Then they made a couenaunt to seke the Lorde God of their fathers, with all their hertes, and all their soules: so that all that sought not the Lord God of Israel, shoulde dye for it, whether he were small or greates, man or woman.

And they aswore vnto the Lorde with a loude voyce and shawtyng, and with trumpettes and hornes. And all Iuda reioysed in the oth, for they had sworn with all their hertes, and soughte him with ail their lust, and he was founde of them. And the Lorde gaue them rest roundabout. Furthermore kynge Asa put Azariah his mother oute of an heretie, because she hadde made an ydol in a groue: and brake downe her ydol and stampit it and burnt it by the brooke Cedron. But they put not the hyllalters oute of Israel: neuertheless the herte of Asa was pure all his lyfe. And he broughte in to the house of God the dedicate gyfts whiche he and his father had dedicate, in gold, syluer, and other iewels. And there was no more warre vnto the ende and thyrtye yere of the reigne of Asa.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Asa for feare of Baasa kynge of Israel, maketh a couenaunt with Benhadad kynge of Siria.

In the. xxxvi. yere of the reigne of Asa came Baasa kynge of Israel agaynst Iuda, and buylte Ramah, to the entente he woulde let none that pertayned to Asa kynge of Iuda haue passage in and oute. Whereupon Asa let syluer and golde forth of the treasures of the house of the Lorde, and of the kynges house, and sent it to Benhadad kynge of Siria, that dwelte at Damascus, and sayed. Ther is a leage betwene thee, and me, and so was betwene my father and thynne, wherfore I haue sente the syluer and golde, that thou goo and breake thynne appoyntement with Baasa kynge of Israel, that he maye departe from me. And Benhadad graunted vnto kynge Asa, and sent the captaynes of his army agaynst the cities of Israel. And they beate Aron, Dan, Abelmaim, and all the store cities of Naphtali. But when Baasa heard this, he lette buyldynge of Ramah and lette his worke cease. And then Asa the kynge toke all Iuda, and caried awaye the stones and tymber of Ramah, wherewith Baasa was a buyldynge: and he buylte therewith Baal and Mazphah.

At that same tyme Hanani, the seer, came to Asa kynge of Iuda, and sayde to him: because thou trustest in the kynge of Siria, and trustest not in the Lorde thy God, therefore is the hooste of the kynge of Siria, escaped oute of thynne hande. Were not the blacke gores and they of Libya a greates hooste, with exceeding manie charrettes and horsemen? And yet because thou trustest in the Lorde, he deliuered them into thine handes. For the eyes of the Lorde be hold al the earthe, to strengthe the hertes of them that are hole with hym. Here in thou haste done falsly, and therfore from henceforth thou shalt haue war. Whereupon Asa was wroth with the seer, and put hym in prison, for he was displeased with hym because of that. Gores once Asa oppressed certayne of the people the same season.

The debthes of Asa bothe stiffe and laste are written in the booke of the kynges of Iuda and Israel. And the. xxxix. yere of his reigne, Asa fell sycke of his feete, and that his disease increased. And besyde this in his spokenesse he asked no counsell of the Lorde, but of phisycons. And at the last Asa fell in slepe with his fathers, and dyed whiche he had reigned one and forty yere. And they buried him in his owne sepulchre whiche he had made in the cite of Dauid, and layde him in the bed whiche he had filled with sweete odours of dyuers kyndes, made by the craft of the potecaryes. And they buryed hym greates cost about buyldynge of hym.

seth the feare of the Lorde to be renewed among the people.

And Josaphat his son reigned in his stede, & became mightier then Israel. And he put souldiours in all the cityes of Juda, and set rulers both in the lande of Juda, and also in the cityes of Ephraim, which Asa his father had wonne. But the Lord was with Josaphat, because he walked in the olde wayes of his father David, and sought not Baais: But sought the Lorde God of his fathers, and walked in hys commandementes, and not after the doynges of Israel. Therefore the Lord stablished the kyngdome in hys hande, and al Juda brought hym presentes, that he became excedyngely rich & gloriouse. And his herte was coragious in the wayes of the Lord, and he put downe yet mo of the vilanities and groues oute of Juda.

In the thyrtye yere of hys reigne he sent of his Lordes, Benhai, Abdiab, Zachariah, Nathanael, and Asaph to teach in the cityes of Juda: and with them Semelab, Nathanab, Zabadiab, Asaheil, Semiramoth, Jonathan, Adoniah, Tobiah, and Tobodoniah, Leupres, and with them Elisama and Joram prestes. And they taught in Juda, and had the booke of the lawe with them, and wente about the cote eute all the cityes of Juda & taught the people. And the feare of the Lorde fell upon all the kingdomes of the landes that were round about Juda, that they durste not warre with Josaphat. And the Philistynes broughte Josaphat gftes and tribute syluer. And thereto the Arabians brought him of shepe, seven thousande and seven hundred Rammes, and seven thousande, and seven hundred he goates. And so Josaphat prospered and grew up on hyghe. And he builde in Juda castelles, and forte cityes, and had greace substaunce in the cityes of Juda, and spygeryng men, and men of myght in Jerusalem.

And this is the order in the houses of these fathers of the captaynes ouer thousandes in Juda: Ednab the captayne, and with hym of spygeryng men, three hundred thousand. And next to hym Jobernan a captayne, and with him two hundred and four score thousand. And by hys syde Amazias the sonne of Jechi, with hym vnto the Lord, and with him two hundred thousand myghty men. And of the chyldren of Ben Ramen, Elpadas was a man of myght, and had with hym armed with bowes and shylde two hundred thousand. And by hys syde Josabab, with whom were an hundred and four score thousande furnished for war. These waited on the kyng, besydes those which the kyng had put in stronge cityes throughout all Juda.

The.xviii.chapter.

After Achab had asked counsell of the four hundred prophets, he putteth Asaheas in prayer. He dyeth with the thote of an arrow.

And Josaphat became very riche and glorious, and loved ayaunce with Achab. And after certayne yeres, he wente downe to Achab to Samaria. And Achab shewe thepe & oren pleceously for hym, and for the people that came with hym, and intreated hym to go up vnto Ramoth in Galaad. And Achab kyng of Israel sayd to Josaphat kyng of Juda: wilt thou go with me to Ramoth in Galaad? And he answered hym: I will be as thou, and my people shal be as thyne, and mee will bee with the in the warres. And so Josaphat sayd vnto the kyng of Israel: aske I pray the, the woide of the Lorde. And the kyng of Israel gathered together of the pryphers, four hundred men, and sayed vnto them: Shall we goo to Ramoth in Galaad to spygery, or shall I cease? And they sayed, goo: the Lord shal deliuer it into the kynges hande. And Josaphat sayed: Is there yet here neuer a pryphet more of the Lord that wec myght aske of hym? And the kyng of Israel sayde to Josaphat: there is yet one, to aske the Lorde by hym: But I hate hym, for he neuer propheseth me good, but alwaye euill, one Asaheas the sonne of Iemla. And Josaphat sayed: let not the kyng saye so. Then the kyng of Israel called one of his chaberslaines, & said: fetch hither quickly Asaheas the sonne of Iemla. And the kyng of Israel, and Josaphat kyng of Juda, sate cyther of them on hys seate on theyr apparelle, in a charynge house besyde the gate of Samaria, and all the pryphers prophesyinge besyde them. And one Sederchias the sonne of Chanana, made hym hoines of syon, and sayde, thus sayeth the Lorde: with these thou shalt punish Siria, vntill thou hast broughte them to nought. And all the pryphers prophesied euery so, sayinge: go up to Ramoth in Galaad and prosper, for the Lorde shal deliuer it into the hande of the kyng. And the messenger that went to call Asaheas, spake to hym, sayinge: behold the woibes of the pryphers are pleasaunte to the kyng with one assente, let thy woibes I praye the, be lyke one of theys, and speke that which is pleasaunt. And Asaheas sayde: as trulye as the Lord liueth, euery what my God sayth, that I will speake. And when he was come to the kyng, the kyng sayed to hym: Asaheas, shall we go to Ramoth in Galaad to fight or shall I be in rest? And he answered: * go ye and prosper, for the Lord shal deliuer it into your handes. But the kyng sayed to hym: how often times shal I adiure thee thou say nothyng but truthe to me in the name of the Lorde.

Then he sayed: I see all Israel scattered in the mountaynes, as shepe that haue no shepheard. And the Lorde sayed: these haue kyng, as ye no master, let them retorne euerye man to his house in peace. Then sayde the kyng of Israell to Josaphat: byd I not tell the that he woulde not prophesye good unto me, but euill? And he answered, therefore heare ye the woorde of the Lorde. I sawe the Lorde sittyng vpon his seate, and all the compaigne of heauen standynge on his ryght hande and on his lefte. And the Lorde sayde: who shall deceyue Achab kynge of Israell, that he may go and bee ouerthrowen at Ramoth in Galaad? And whyle one sayde thus, and an other that, there came out a spirite and stode before the Lorde, and sayd: I will byscaue hym. And the Lorde sayde vnto hym, how? And he sayde: I will go oute, and will be a spynge spirite in the mouth of all the prophetes. And the Lorde sayde, thou shalt deceyue hym, and shalt preuaile, goo out and do enen so. And now beholde the Lorde hath put a spynge spirite in all the mouthes of these thy prophetes, and yet the Lorde hath spoken euill agaynst the. And Sedechias the sonne of Canana went and smote Gycheas vpon the cheke and sayd: by what waye wente the spirite of the Lorde frome me, to speake in the? And Gycheas sayde: Thou shalt see the daye when thou shalt runne from chamber to chamber for to hyde thy selfe. Then sayd the kynge of Israell: take ye Gycheas and deliuer hym to Amou the gouernoure of the cite, and to Joas the kinges sonne, and saye, thus sayeth the kynge: put this felowe in prysyn, and fede hym with bread of sorowe, and water of trouble, til I come agayne in peace. And Gycheas sayde: if thou come agayne in peace, then hath not the Lorde spoken in me. And Gycheas saied moreover: harken ye people euery one of you. And so the kynge of Israell and Josaphat the kynge of Iuda went vnto Ramoth in Galaad. Then sayd the kynge of Israell to Josaphat: I will change my clothes and gette me to battaile, but se thou haue thynne owne apparell vpon the. And the kynge of Israell chaunged hym selfe, and they wente to battaile. But the kinge of Siria commaunded the capteynes of his charrettes, sayinge: se ye fyghte not agaynst the smalle or greate saue agaynst the kynge of Israell onely.

And when the capteynes of the charrets sawe Josaphat, they had thoughte he had ben the bynge of Israell, and therefore compassed hym, to fyghte. But Josaphat cryed oute, and the Lorde holpe hym, and God turned them awaye from hym. For when the capteynes of the charrettes perceyued that it was not the kynge of Israell, they turned back again fro hym. And a certain man drewe his bow at auenture, and smote the kinge of Israell betwene the ioyntes of his habergeyne. And he sayde to the charret man, touche thynne hande, and carpe me oute of the hoolle, for I am hurte. And the battaile was sore that daye. Howebeit the kynge of Israell continued standing in his charrette agaynst the Syrians vntill enen. And aboute the sunne goynge downe, he dyed.

The. xii. Chapter.

After Josaphat was rebuked by the prophet Jehu, he called agayne the people to the honouringe of the Lorde God.

The. xii. Chapter.

After Josaphat was rebuked by the prophet Jehu, he called agayne the people to the honouringe of the Lorde God.

Then Josaphat kynge of Iuda, returned to his house safe and sound to Jerusalem. And Jehu the sonne of Hanani the seer, went out agaynst hym, and sayd to kynge Josaphat: oughtest thou to helpe the wicked, and to loue the that hate the Lorde? For thys cause is the wrath of the Lorde vpon the. Acuerthelesse ther are good thynges founde in the, in that thou hast put awaie the consecrate groves out of the lande, and hast prepared thine herte to seeke God. And as Josaphat dwelte at Jerusalem, he wente agayne amonge the people from Bersabe to mounte Ephraim, and broughte theym agayne vnto the Lorde God of theyr fathers. And he sette iudges in the land, thorowout all the citie circles of Iuda, citie by citie, and saied to the iudges: take heed what ye do, for ye be not iudges in the law of man, but of God, whiche is with you in the wordes of the lawe. Wherefore let the feare of the Lorde be with you, & take heed and do it. For there is no vntygheuousnesse in the Lorde our God. *nor regardynge of personnes, nor takynge of rewarde. Moreover in Jerusalem did Josaphat appoynte certayne of the Leuites of the priestes, and of the auncient heades of Israell, ouer the customes of the Lorde, and causes of isyle.

Whiche done, they returned to Jerusalem. And he charged them, sayinge: doo euery so in the feare of the Lorde, with trouth & pure herte. And what so euer come to you of your brethren that dwel in their citie, betwene bloude and bloude, lawe, commaundement ordynaunces and custumes: see ye warne theym that they trespase not agaynst the Lorde, leaste wrath come vpon you, and on your brethren. Thus doo, and ye shall not offende. And se here Amariah the pryest, whiche is heade ouer you in all matters of the Lorde, and zababab, the sonne of Ismael, a ruler in the house of Iuda, be iouers al causes concernynge the kynge, with officers of the Leuites before you. Take courage to you, and go vpon it, and the Lorde shall be with the good.

The. xii. Chapter.

The meruelous victorie that the Lorde gaue Josaphat kynge of Iuda agaynst the Moabites, and the children of Ammon and them of Siria.

After this came the children of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and with the company of the Ammonites agaynst Josaphat to battaile. And ther came the tolde Josaphat, sayinge: ther cometh a great multitude agaynst the from the other side of the sea out of Siria. And se, they be in Basalon Thamar, which is Engadi. Then

Then Josaphat feared, and sette hym selfe to seeke the Lorde, and proclaymed fastinge thowhe out al Juda. And Juda gathered them selues togyther to aske counsel of the Lorde. Furthermoze there came oute of all the ctytes of Juda to seeke the Lorde. And Josaphat stode in the assyble of Juda and Jerusalem in the house of the Lorde before the newe courtte, and sayde: Lorde God of oure fathers, arte not thou God of heauen, and caryngest not thou ouer all the kyngdomes of þe woldes? And in thyne hande is power and myght, so that no man can stande before the: Arte not thou our God, which bydeste caste oute thynne faulces of this lande before thy people Israel, and ganest it to the seede of Abraham thy frende for ever? And they dwelte there in, and haue built for the a temple therein vnto thy name, and said: when euill cometh vpon vs, as the swerde of iudgement pesylence, or hunger: then if we stande before thy house, and before the (for thy name is in this house) and thou shalt heare, and helpe. And now beholde, the chyldren of Ammon, and Moab, and mount Seir, by whych thou woldest not let Israel passe what tyme thei came forth of Egypt: but they departed fro the, & destroyed them not. And now make how they reward vs, they come to caste vs out of thy possessiō whych thou hast geuen vs. O our God, wylte thou not iudge the? for we haue not so great puissance that we can make respytence agaynst thy greate compaigne that cometh agaynst vs, neyther wot we what to do, but oure eyes bee vnto the. And as all Juda stode before the Lorde wth their ponglynges, their wyues and their chyldren: the spirite of the Lorde came vpon Abaziel the sonne of zacharias, the sonne of Banai, the sonne of Jephel, the sonne of Gathbanab, & Leuite of the sonnes of Asaph, euen as he was in the myddes of the compaigne. And he sayde: hearken all Juda, and the inhabytours of Jerusalem, and also kynge Josaphat. Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto you, be not afearde of saynt hacted by cause of thy greate multitude: for the warre is not poutes but Gods. And to morowe ye shal goo downe to them: se, they come vp at ryz, & ye shal mete them in the toppe of the byooke of the wilderness of Ieruell. For it shall not be you that shall fyghte in bys quarell but stande forth ouly, and behold the helpe of the Lord which is wth you: feare not, nor let your hertes faile, O ye of Juda and of Jerusalem. To morowe marche forthward, to them: for the Lord is wth you.

And Josaphat bowed hym selfe wth his face to the ctyr, and al Juda and the enhabitours of Jerusalem fel before the lorde and worshipped hym. And the Leuites and the chyldren of the Cabathites and of the Corathites stode vp to prayse the Lord God of Israel wth a loud voyce on bygbe.

And so they arose early in the mornynge and gat them oute vnto the wilderness of Ieruel. And when they went oute, Josaphat stode and sayde: heare me Juda, and ye inhabytours of Jerusalem. Beleeue in the Lorde your God, and so shall ye continue, and beleue bys prophetes, and so shal ye prosper. And he gaue the people counsell, and sette the syngers of the Lorde, and them that praysed in holly apparell, to goo oute before the armye and to saye: prayse the Lorde, for bys myghte lasteth alwey. And what tyme they began to land and prayse, then the Lorde set thei enemyes vpon thei own selues, as many as were come to fight agaynst Juda, euen the chyldren of Ammon and Moab and mount Seir, for þe chyldren of Ammon and Moab arose agaynst the inhabytours of mount Seir, to destroy them vnto the, & to wipe thei away. And whē they had made an end of the inhabytours of Seir, then they holp to destroye thei.

And when Juda came to Mazybath in the wilderness, they looked to the multitude. And behold, they were dead cackles fallen to the earth, and none escaped. And Josaphat and his people wente to strepp & spoile the dead, and found among thei aboundance of goods and caryments and of pleasaunte Jewelles, and caught from them moze then they coude carye away: so that they were thre dayes in gatheringe of the spoyle, it was so muche. And the fourth day they assembled in the valley of blessing, for there they blessed the Lorde. And therefore they called the name of the sayde place, the valley of blessing vnto this day. And so al the men of Juda and Jerusalem returned, and Josaphat among thei chiftest of them; for to go agayne to Jerusalem wth gladnes, for the Lorde had made them to reioyce of thei enemyes. And they came to Jerusalem wth psalteries & harpes and trompettes euen vnto the house of the Lorde, and the feare of God fell in the kyngdomes of all landes when they hadde hearde that the Lorde foughte agaynst the enemyes of Israel. And so the reigne of Josaphat was in tranquillite: for his God had geuen him rest on every syde. So Josaphat raygned vpon Juda, and was. xxxv. yere olde when he began to raygne and raygned. xxxv. yere in Jerusalem, & bys mothers name was Iuba the doughter of Shibi. And he walked in the waye of Asa his father, & bowed not therē but did that was pleasā in the sighte of the lord. Howebeit they put not downe thei dilactes, neyther did the people yet prepare thei hertes vnto the god of thei fathers. The rest of the acts of Josaphat first & last are wyrtē in the wykes of Jehu the sone of Hanani, whiche noted thei in the booke of the kynges of Israel.

After this Josaphat kynge of Juda forned hym selfe wth Achazab kynge of Israel, whych was a wycked doer. And he coupled hym selfe wth hym to make

Ochoziah raygneth in the tyme of Joiam, Jehu kyng of Israel kill- th Ochoziah. & theliah putterh to death al the kynges by-noge only Joas escapeh.

And p inhabitants of Jerusalem made A-Ochoziah his yongest sonne kyng (ill. re. viii. c.) in bys dede. For men of warre that came wth the Arabians in the hoste, had Rayne all bys eldret sonnes. And so Ochozi-ah the sonne of Joiam kyng of Juda was made kyng. Two and foure yere olde was he when he began to raygne, and raygned one yere in Jerusalem. Bys mothers name was Athaliah the daughter of Aime.
And he walked also in the wayes of the house of Achab, for bys mother was bys counseloure for to do euil. Wherefore he did that displeased the Lord, lyke to the house of Achab, for they were bys counsellours after the death of thys father, to his destruction, and he also walked after their counsel. And Joiam sonne of Achab kyng of Israel went to fight wth Hazael kyng of Syria at Ramoth in Galaad, and they of Ramoth wounded hym. Wherefore he returned to be healed in Jezreel of the woundes whiche were geuen hym at Ra-

of Juda, and the sonnes of the brethren of Ochoziah, that waped on Ochoziah, & he slew them. And he soughte Ochoziah, and they caughte hym where he was hid in Samaria, and broughte hym to Jehu. And when they hadde slayne hym, they buried hym, because sayd they he was the sonne of Josaphat whiche soughte the Lord with al his hert. And ther was none of the house of Ochoziah that could obtene to be king.

D For Athaliah the mother of Ochoziah when she sawe her sonne was deade, arose and slew al the seed of the kingdom of the house of Juda. But Josabeth the daughter of the kynge, toke Joas the sonne of Ochoziah and ayle him from among the kynges sonnes that were slayne, and put hym and his nurse in a sleppynge chamber. And so Josabeth the daughter of kynge Joiam and wife of Joiada the priesse, because she was the spise of Ochoziah, bydde hym fro Athaliah, & she slewe hym not. And he was with them hid in the house of God vi. yere. And Athaliah raigned over the lande.

The xlii. Chapter.

D Joas the sonne of Ochoziah is made king, Athaliah is put to deathe.

A In the seventh yere Joiada toke heaite, and made a bonde wpth the captaynes of hundreds, Azariah the sonne of Jerobah, Ismaell the sonne of Johanan, Azariah the sonne of Obed, Maasiah the sonne of Adai, and Elisaphat the sonne of Jechu. And they wente aboute in Juda and gathered & Levites oute of all the cyties of Juda and the auntyente heades of Israel, and came to Jerusalem. And all the congregacion made a bonde wpth the kynge in the house of God. And Joiada saide to them, Behold the kynges sonne must raigne over the children of David, as the Lord hath sayde. The hye is it therefore that ye shall doo. The thirde part of pou prieses and Levites whiche come in the Sabothe daye shall kepe & dores, and an other thirde parte shall be in the kings house, & an other thirde parte shall be in the gate of the foundation, & all the people shall be in the court of the house of the Lord, save the prieses and the Levites that minister. They shall go in, for they are holy, & al the people shall kepe & watch of the Lord. And the Levites shall copas the king rounde aboute, euery man his weapon in his hand, & what soeuer other man come in to the house of the Lord, he shall dye for it, & ther shall be with the king, as he cometh in, and as he goeth oute.

And the Levites and all Juda dydin all thynges as Joiada the priesse commaunded, and toke euery man his men, both they that came in and them that wente oute the Sabothe day: for Joiada the priesse dyd lette none of the companies departe. And Joiada the priesse deliuered to the captaynes of hundreds, speares and sheldes, and bucklers that pertayned to kynge David, and were in the house of God. And he set all the people and euery man his weapon in his hande, from the righte corner of the house, to the lefte corner of the house, alonge by the aulter, and rounde aboute the kynge. And they broughte oute the kynges sonne, and putte on hym the crowne and the scepter, and made hym kynge. And Joiada, and his sonnes annointed hym and saide: God saue the kynge.

That is the law of god.

When Athaliah heard the nopsse of the people runnyng and prayyng the kynge, she wente among the people into the house of the Lord. And when she saw the kynge, stand at his pyllet in the enterpyng, and the Lordes and trompettes aboute the kynge and all the people of the lande reioysyng and blowyng wpth trompettes, and the singers with instruments of musick teaching to praise. She rent her clothes and cried for treason. And Joiada the priesse wente out with & captaynes of hundreds that were appointed to gouerne the host, and sayd to them, haue her oute wthout the arap, and whosoever foloweth her, let hym be slayne wpth the swearde. For the priesse sayde: Let her not in the house of the Lord. And they laid hands on her, and when she was come out to the enterpyng of the horsgate in the kings house, they slew her ther. And Joiada made a bonde betwene hym & al the people, and the king, to be the Lordes people.

And all the people went to the house of Baal and destroyed it, and brake the alters and images, and slew Mathan the priesse of Baal afore the aulter. And Joiada put the offices of the house of the Lord in the handes of the prieses, the Levites, whiche David had deuoted in companies for the house of the Lord, to offer burnt offeringes vnto the Lord, as it is written in the lawe of Moses, wpth reioysyng and songyng, as it was ordeined by David. And he set porters to the gates of the house of the Lord, that no vnclene person in anye poynte shulde enter in.

And he toke the captaynes of hundreds, and the nobles & the gouerners of the people and al the folke of the land and brought the kynge downe oute of the house of the Lord, and they went thorow the hygh gate in the kings house, and set the kynge vpon the seate of the kingdome. And all the people of the lande reioysed, and the cytie was in tranquility, but they slewe Athaliah wpth the swearde.

The xlii. Chapter.

Joas burneth the life of Joiada beyeth the law, but after his death he regardeth it not. He killeth Zacharias & his prophete. Joas is killed of his own seruantes, after whos raggeth Amazias.

I Joas was vii. yere olde when he began to rapgne, & rapgned xl. yeres in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Zebiah of Beersabe. And Joas dyd & pleased the Lord al the daies of Joiada the priesse. And Joiada had vii. daughters, & he begat sons & daughters.

Joas.

It chaunced after that, that Joas was minded to mende the house of the Lorde. Whereupon he gathered together the pnestes and the Levites, and sayde to them. * go out thorow the cities of Juda, and gather of al Israel spluer, to strengthe the house of your God, pere by pere, and se ye had the thing howbeit the Levites were slacke.

Then the kynge called Joiada that was the chiefeest, and sayd to him: Why request thou not of the Levites to bring in out of Juda and Jerusalem, the summe appointed by Moses the servant of the Lord: and by the congregacion of Israel for the tabernacle of witness? for weked Athaliah and her chyldren had broken the house of God, and had bestowed all the dedicate giftes of the house of the Lord about Baals.

Wherefore at the kynges commaundement they made a cofer, and sett it at the gate of the house of the Lorde, and made proclamation thorow Juda and Jerusalem to bring in to the Lorde the * taracion of Moses the servant of God, whiche he set upon Israel in the wilderness. And the Lordes, and all the people reioysed, & brought in and caste into the cofer, vntill it was full. And when the tyme came that the chest shuld be brought in by the handes of the Levites at the appointment of the king, when they saw that there was much mony: then came the kynes scribe, and one appointed by the chiefe pnest, poured out that was in the cofer, and take it and carped it to his place again, and thus they did day by day, and gathered muche money.

And the kynge and Joiada gave it too workemen that wrought upon the house of the Lord, and hired masons and carpenters to repaire the house of the Lorde, and artificers in yron and bras, to repaire the Lordes house. And the workmen wrought and the worke prospered thorow their handes: and they made the house of God as it ought to be, and strengthened it. And when they had synned it, they brought the rest of the money to the kinge and Joiada, and there with made vessels for the house of the Lord: that is to say vessels to minister withal, and to serue for burntofferings as labels and vessels of golde & silver. And they offered burntofferings in the house of the Lord continually at the daies of Joiada. And Joiada waxed olde and full of yeres, and dyed. An hundred and thirtie yere old was he, when he died. And they buried him in the cite of David amonge the kinges, because he had done good in Israel, and on God, and on his house. After the death of Joiada came the Lordes of Juda and made obeysaunce to the kynge. And then he harke ned unto them. And so they left the house of the Lord God of their fathers, and served groues Images. And then came there wrath upon Juda and Jerusalem for thes their trespase. Notwithstandynge God sent prophets to them, to bringe the ym-gayne unto the Lord. And then testified vnto the. But they wold not heare.

And the spyte of God came vpon zachariah the sonne of Joiada the pnest, and he slepte vpon aboute the people, and sayde to them. Thus saythe God: whye breake ye the commaundementes of the Lorde, ye shall therefore not prosper: but as ye haue forsaken hym, so shal he forsake you. * When upon they conspired against hym, and stoned hym with stones, at commaundement of the kynge, even in the court of the house of the Lorde. And Joas the kynge remembred not the kyndenes whiche Joiada his father had done to him, but slew his sonne. And when he dyed, he sayd: the Lord se and requyre a rekenynge.

And when the yere was oute, the hoste of the Syrians came against him: and they came to Juda and Jerusalem, and destroyed al the Lordes of the people, and sent al the spoile of them vnto the king to Damascus. And though the army of Syria came with a smal company of men, yet the Lord deliuered a very great hoste into their handes, because they had forsaken the Lord God of their fathers, and therto they served Joas accordinge to his desertes.

And as soone as they were departed from him, though they left him in greates displeases, yet his owne seruantes conspired against hym for the bloude of the chyldren of Joiada the pnest, and slew hym on his bed. And when he was deade, hym they buried in the cite of David, but not in the sepulchres of the kynes.

And these are they that conspired against hym, zabab the sonne of Samaah an Ammonite. And Josabab the sonne of Simrih a Moabite, and his sonnes. And the summe of the rage that came to him, and the foundation of the house of God, are wyrtten in the booke of kinges. And Amazias his sonne reigned in his stede.

The. xv. Chapter.

Amazias ouercometh the Edomites. And Joas king of Israel ouercometh and kil- leth Amazias.

Amazias was yere and twenty yere olde when he began to reigne, & reigned yere and twenty yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Joiadan of Jerusalem. And he did that pleased the Lord, but not with the hole hearte. And as soone as he was settled in the kingdom, he slew them that kyled the kynge his father. But he slew not their chyldren, accordinge to that is wyrtten in the lawe in the booke of Moses, to whome the Lorde commaunded, sayinge: * the fathers shall not dye for the chyldrens causes, nor the chyldre for the fathers, but euery man shal die for his own syn. And Amazias assembled Juda together and made captaynes ouer thousandes, and ouer hundredes in the houses of their fathers thorowoute al Juda and Beniamin. And he numbred them. xx. yere and above bone, and founde them thre hundred thousande ponge lustye men, able to go to battyle, and that coude handle speare and shilde. And he hired therto an hundred thousande fightinge men out of Israell, for an hundreded talentes of syluer.

But there came a manne of God to hym and sayde: Kynge let not the armpe of Israel go with the, for the Lorde is not wpth Israell; neyther wpth anye of the house of Ephraim. Or els if thou nedes wylte, then go and do it, and makethy selfe stronge to battyle: and thou shalt se, that God shall make the falle before thyne ennemys.

For God hath the power to helpe or to caste downe. And Amazias sayde agayne to the manne of God what shall we doo then for the hundred talentes, whiche I haue geuen to the hoste of Israell? And the man of God sayde: the Lorde is able to geue the much more then that.

Then Amazias severed the armpe that was come to him oute of Ephraim, to goo home agayne. Wherefore they were exceadyng wrothe wpth Juda, and retourned home in greute anger.

And Amazias tooke hearte, and carped oute his hooste, and wente too Sa' daie.

Where he slew of the chydrene of Seir ten thousande. And other ten thousand of the childe of Juda he toke alive, and carried them to the top of a rocke, and cast them downe from the top of the rocke, that they all to burst: but the men of the armpe whiche Amazias had turned backe and would not let go with his people to battyle, ran vpon the ctytes of Juda from Samaria vnto Bethhoron, and slew .iii. thousand of them, and wan much spole. And it chaun-ced, after that Amazias was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, and had brou-ghte the goddesses of the chydren of Seir, he set them vp to be his gods, and bowed hym selfe before them, and burned incense vnto them. Wherefore the Lorde was wroth with Amazias, And sente to hym a prophet, and sayde to hym: whype seekst thou the goddesses of the people, whiche were not able to deli-uer theyrowne people oute of thyne han-des? And as the prophete spake to hym, he sayd to the prophet: haue menne made the of the kings counsel: cease, lest thou be beaten. And the prophet ceased and sayd: I am sure that God hath take counsel to destroy the, because thou haste done this, & obeyest not my counsell. Then Amazias kynge of Juda tooke aduise, & sent to Joas the son of Joachaz the sonne of Jehu kynge of Israel, and sayde: come and let vs se epyther other. And Joas kynge of Israell, sente a-gayne to Amazias kynge of Juda, saying: a thysell in Libanon sent to a Cedar tree of Libanon, sayinge: * geue thy daughter to my sonne too wyfe. But there came the wyld beasts of Libanon, and trode downe the thysell. Thou thinkest: loo, I haue beaten the Edomites, therfore thine heart arpyseth to gloryfye thy selfe. Howe abyde at home: what nedeth the to prouoke to e-uyl, that thou perishe and Juda wpth the?

But Amazias rested not: for it came of God, euen to deliuer them into the handes of theyr ennemys, and that because they hadde soughte the goddesses of the Edomites. And Joas kynge of Israell came vp: and they sawe epyther other, bothe he and A-mazias kynge of Juda at Bethsames in Juda. And Juda was put to the worse before Israell, and fled euery man to hys tent. And Joas kynge of Israell toke Amazias kynge of Juda the sonne of Joas, the sonne of Ohoziah at Bethsames, and broughte hym to Jerusalem, and tare the wal of Jerusalem from the gate of Ephraim, vnto the corner gate, foure hundred cubytes longe. And he toke all the golde and syluer, and all the iewelles that were founde in the house of God wpth Obed Edom, and the treasure of the kynge's house, and hostages and retourned to Samaria.

And Amazias he sonne of Joas kynge of Juda lyued after the deathe of Joas son of Joachaz kynge of Israell, fiftene yeres.
The reste of the actes of Amazias first and laste, are wyrtten in the booke of kynge's of Juda & Israell. And after the time that Amazias dyd turn away from the lord, they cōspired treason against him in Jerusalem: & he fled to Lachis, whither they sent after him, and slew him ther, and broughte hym by with horses, and buryed hym with his fathers in the cite of Juda.

The xvi. Chapter.

which is written with the lepre. And Joas thay raigene in his towne.

Then all the people of Juda tooke Oziah whiche was .xvi. yere oulde, and made him king in the towne of his father Amazias. And he buylte clothe & brou-ghte it agayne to Juda, after the king was layde to rest with his fathers. Sixtene yere old was Oziah when he begā to raigē, and he raygned two and fiftie yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Jecaliah of Jerusalem. And he dyd that pleased the Lorde in all popntes, as did his father Ama-zias. And he soughte God whyle zachary-ah the teacher to se God, liued: and as long as he soughte the Lorde, God made hym prosper. And he wente to battyle against the Philistines, and brake downe the wals of Beth, and the wals of Jabneh, and the walles of Asdod, and buylte ctytes aboute Asdod, and among the Philistines. And god holpe hym agaynst the Philistines, and a-gaynst the Arabiens that dwelte in Surbaall, and agaynst the Moabites. And the Ammonites gaue tribute to Oziah, and his name spred abroade euen to Egypte: for he played the man, and exceded. Moreover Oziah buylte towres in Jerusalem ouer the corner gate, and ouer the balpe gate, and ouer other corners, and made them stronge.

And he buylte towres in the wildernes, and dygged many wels. For he had much catel both in the valey, & also in the plain, and plowmen & vineyarders in the mountains and in Charnell, for he loued husbandrye.

And Oziah hadde an hoste of fyghtynge men that wente oute to war in the acmpe, men were tolde and numbred by Jereiel the scrabe, and Maasiah an Officer, vnder the hande of Samanah one of the kynges lordes. And the hole numbre of the aunciente heades of the men of myghte, were. ii. thou sande and sire hundred, and vnder the handes of them was the armie of the host. iii. C. and. vii. C. and. v. C. that made warre with myghte and strengthe, to helpe the kyng a gaigne hys ennemys. And Oziah prouided them thorowoute all the hoste, shildes, spere, helinets, haberginnes, bowes: and spunges for stones. And he made engynes in Jerusalem by the crafte of artificers, to be on the towres and corners, too shote arrows & greute stones wpth. And his name spred farre abroad, for he was wonderfyll holpe, vntyll he was become myghty.

And in his greatenesse his herte aroose, that he was married, and transgressed agaynst the Lorde his God. For he wente into the temple of the Lorde to burne incense vpon the auter of incense. But Azarias the priest wente in after hym wpth foure score priestes of the Lorde that were bold men. And they stepte to Oziah the kyng, and saide to him: it pertayneth not to Oziah to burne incense vnto the lord, but to the priestes the children of Aar in that are consecrate for to burne incense. Come out of the sanctuary, for thou haste trespassed, and it shalbe no worshippe to the before the Lorde God.

iii. re. xv. a. And Oziah was wroth and had incense in his hande to offer, and in his indignatyon agaynst the priestes, & the lepre sprang in hys forehead, before the priestes in the house of the Lorde, euen besyde the incense auter. And Azarias the chyefe priest wpth al the other priestes looked vpon hym: and beholde, he was a lepre in hys forehead: and they draue hym thence. And therto he was fayne to go oute, because the Lorde hadde plagued hym. And Oziah the kyng continued a lepre vnto the dape of hys deathe, and dwelte in an house at spertye: howebeit he was cast out of the house of the lord. And Joatham hys sonne hadde the gouernaunce of the kyngs house and iudged the people of the lande.

The reste of the actes of Oziah bothe friste and laste, dyd Iasas the prophete the sonne of Amos wyte. And when Oziah was layd to rest with his fathers, they buried him with his fathers in the sepulchre of the burpall of the kynges. For they sayde: he is a leper. And Joatham hys sonne reigned in hys steade.

The. xxvi. Chapter.

Joatham reigned and ouer-commeth the Ammonites. Achaz his sonne reigned after hym.

The. xxvi. Chapter.

Joatham was. v. and. xx. yere olde when he began to reigne, and reigned sixtene yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Ierushah the daughter of Zadoc. And he dyd that pleased the Lorde in al pointes as did his father Oziah, saue that he came not to the temple of the Lorde, and that the people dyd yet corrupte them selues. He buylt the hre gate of the temple of the Lorde, and on the walle Ophell he buylt muche. Agreuer he buylt cities in the mountains of Iuda, and in the woode country he buylt castels and towres.

And he foughte wpth the kyng of the chyldren of Ammon, and preuailed agaynst them. And the chyldre of Ammon gaue hym the same yere an hundred talentes of silver, and tennethousandquarters of whete and as much barley. So muche also did the chyldren of Ammon geue him the. ii. yere, & the. iii. to. And Joatham became myghty, because he directed his way before the Lorde his God. The rest of the actes of Joatham and al his wars, and his waies are wyrtten in the booke of the kyngs of Israel and Iuda. He was. v. and. xx. yere olde, when he began to reigne, and reigned. xvi. yere in Jerusalem. And when Joatham was layd to rest with his fathers, they buried him in the cypse of Dauid: and Achaz hys sonne reigned in hys steade.

The. xxvii. Chapter.

Achaz was. xx. yere olde when he began to reigne, and reigned. xvi. yere in Jerusalem. And he did not that pleased the Lorde, as dyd hys father Dauid, but walked in the waies of the kynges of Israel, and made thereto Baals of metal. And he offered incense in the balre of the chyldren of Benion, and burnt his chyldren in fre after the abominatyon of the nacion, whiche the Lorde threw out before the chyldren of Israel. And he offered burnt incense in his alters, and on mountaynes, and vnder euery grene tree.

Wherefore the Lorde hys God delpyered hym into the hande of the kyng of the Syrians, whiche beate hym, and carped awaye a greute multitude of hys, captiue in to Damascen. And further, he was delpyered into the hande of the kyng of Israel, whiche slewe of hys a myghty slaughter. For Ishaiah the sonne of Ameliah slewe in Iuda an hundred and twenty thousand in one dape, and all fyghtynge menne: and that because they had forsaken the Lorde God of their fathers. And Zechu a myghty man in mount Ephraim slewe Maasiah the kynges sonne, and Asicam the Lorde steward of houshoulde, and Eleanah that was nexte too the kyng. And the chyldren of Israel took the pylsoners of the. xii. thren two hundred thousand, wyues, sons & daughters, and thereto caried away much spoyle of them, and brought it to Samaria.

Obed.

But there was a prophete of the Lordes named Obed, whiche went out to the hoſte that came to Samaria, and ſayde to them: lo, becauſe the Lord God of your fathers was wroth wth Juda, he deliuered them into your handes. And ye haue ſlapne them wth crueltie that reacheth vp to heauen. And now ye purpoſe to kepe vnder ſchyl- dren of Juda, and Jeruſalem, and to make them bondemen, and bondewomen. What other thyng do ye (ye vnhappye then of- fende the Lord your God: But now heare me, and deliuer the priſoners agayne, whiche ye haue taken of your brethren, for the greate wraſhe of the Lord is vpon you.

And certayne of the heades of the chyl- drene of Eplhaim: as Azarias the ſonne of Iohanan, Barachiah the ſonne of Geſe- meloth, Iehzekiah the ſonne of Selum, and Amaſa the ſonne of Adalai ſtoode vp a- gainſt them that came from war, and ſaide vnto the pe ſhal not brynge in the captiues hither. For wher we haue offended the lord alre- dy, we intend to ad more to our ſpynes and treſpace. For our treſpace is great al- ready, and there is ſcarce wraſhe vpon Iſra- el. Wherupon the men of arms left the cap- tiues and the ſpoule befoze the Lordes and at the congregation.

And there aroſe certayne appointed ther- to by name, and tooke the priſoners, and clothed al that wer naked among them, of the ſpoule, and arayed them and ſhoed the, and gaue them to eate and to drinke, and annointed them, and caried al that were fe- ble of them vpon aſſes, and broughte them to Jericho the ctyte of Iſraelme trees faſte by theſe brethren: and then retourned to Samaria agayne.

And at that ſame tyme kynge Achaz ſent vnto the kinges of Aſſur to haue help. And the Edomites came yet agayne and ſlew of Juda and carped away ſome captiues. And the Philistines inuaded the cities in ſ- lowe countie, and the ſouthe of Juda.

And toke Bethſames, Aialon, Gaderoth, and Socoh, wth the townes belongynge thereto, and Elmina with the townes of ſ- ſame. And Simſo with her townes, and dwelt therein. For the Lord broughte Juda low, becauſe of Achaz kynge of Juda, whiche made Juda naked and traſgreſſed againſt the Lord: And Tiglath Philneſer kynge of Aſſur came vpon hym, and beſeged him but preuayled not agaynſt hym. For Achaz toke awaye oute of the houſe of the Lord, and oute of the kyngeſ houſe and out of ſ- Lordes houſes, and gaue vnto the kynge of Aſſur, though he holpe him not. And ther- to in the verie tyme of hys tribulation drey- nede Achaz treſpace yet more agaynſt the Lord. For he offered vnto the goddes of them of Damasco whych bette hym and ſayde: becauſe the Goddes of the Sirciens helpe the, therefore wil I offer to them, that they maye helpe me alſo. But they wer hys deſtruction, and the deſtruction of al Iſrael.

And Achaz gathered together the veſ- ſels of the houſe of God and brake them, and ſhut vp the doores of the houſe of the Lord, and made him aulters in all corners of Je- ruſalem. And in al the cities of Juda, ctyte by ctyte he made hyl aulters to burne in- cenſe vnto other goddes, and angered the Lord God of hys fathers. The reſte of hys Actes, and al hys wayes bothe ſpyll and laſſe are wyrtten in the booke of Iſynges of Juda and Iſrael. And when Achaz was layd to reſte wth hys fathers, they buryed him in the ctyte of Jeruſalem: but brought him not vnto the ſepulchres of the kinges of Juda. And Ezechias his ſonne reigned in hys ſtede.

The xxix. Chapter

Ezechias reſtoureth vnto the temple of the Lord, al the things that had not bene regar- ded of his predeceſſours

Ezechias began to reigne when he was xxiij yere old, and reigned xxix yere in Jeruſalem. And his mothers name was Abia the daughter of zachary. And he dyd that was ryght in the ſyght of the lord in all pointes, as dyd Dauid his father. He opened the doores of the houſe of the Lord in the ſpyll yere, and ſpyll moneth of hys reigne, and repaired them. And he broughte in the prieſtes and the Leuites, gathered them together into the caſt ſtete: and ſayde vnto them.

Heare me ye Leuites: purghe your ſel- ues, and halowe the houſe of the Lord god of your fathers, and brynge oute the filthi- neſſe oute of the holpe place. For oure fa- thers haue treſpaced and done wychedeſſe in the eyes of the Lord our God: and haue forſaken hym, and touned awaye theſe faces from the habitation of the Lord, and touned to theſe backs. And beſide that they haue ſhutte vpp the doores of the porche and quenched the lampes, and haue neyther burned incenſe, nor offered burnt offerings in the holpe place vnto the God of Iſrael.

Wherefoze the wraſhe of the Lord fell on Juda and Jeruſalem, and he ſcattered them and made them ſo thynne that menne hiſſe at it, euen as you ſee wth your eyes. For ſo, oure fathers wer ouerthrowen wth the ſwarde, and oure ſonnes, oure dought- ers and oure wiues were carped awaye pri- ſoners for the ſame. Nowe haue I in my herte to ſerke a couenant wth the Lord God of Iſrael, that his wraſhe maye ceaſe: Nowe therfoze my ſonnes be not negly- gente, for the Lord hath choſen you too ſtand befoze him, and to muſter and burne offerings to hym.

Then the Leuites aroſe: Mahath the ſonne of Amaſa, and Joel the ſonne of A- ſanah bringe of the children of the La- thites: and the ſonnes of Merari, Iſai the ſonne of Abdi, and Aſariah the ſonne of Ba- laluel: and of the Gersonites, Joah the ſon of Summa, and Eden the ſonne of Joah: and

Of the sonnes of Shaphan. Shum and Zebadiah and of the sonnes of Asaph, Zachariah, Mathaniah and of the sonnes of Benai, Jehiel and Semei: and of the sonnes of Jeduthun. Semaiah and Oziel. And they gathered the brethren and purged themselves, and then went at commaundement of the kyng by the worde of the Lorde for to cleanse the house of the Lorde. And the priestes wente into the house of the Lorde, to cleanse it, and broughte oute all the vnellesse, they founde in the temple of the Lorde, and in the court of the house of the Lorde. And the Leuites toke it, and caried it oute into the broke Cedron. They began the firste daye of the firste moneth to purghe, and came the eighth daye to the porch of the Lorde, so that they hadde purged the house of the Lorde in eighte daies, and the thirte daye of the firste moneth they made an ende.

And then they wente in to Ezechias the kyng and sayd: we have cleansed al the house of the Lorde, and the altare of burnt offerings, with al his vessels and the shew breade table wth all his apparel: and ther to all the vessels whiche the kyng Achaz had cast asyde when he ragued and transgressed, them we have repayred and sanctified: and se, they are before the altare of the Lorde. And Ezechias the kyng rose earlie and gathered the Lordes of the ctye and went vp to the house of the Lorde. And there were broughte, by open bu. rammes, seven lambs, and seven kyddes to be a sinne offeringe for the kyngdome, for the sanctuary and for Juda. And he commaunded the priestes the sonnes of Aaron to offer them on the altar of the Lorde. And they slew the open: and the priestes receyued the bloude, and sprinkled it on the altare: and they slewe the rammes and sprinkled the bloud upon the altare: and slewe the lambs and sprinkled the bloude upon the altare. And then they broughte forth the kyddes of the sin offerings before the kyng and the congregation, whiche put thei handes upon them. And the priestes slewe them, and offered the bloude of them upon the altare, to make satisfactiō for al Israel: for the kyng sayde: that the burnt offeringe and the sin offeringe shulde serue for al Israel. And then set the Leuites in the house of the lord with Symbales, psalteries, and harpes accordinge to the commaundement of David and of Gad the kynges sear of visions, and of Nathan the prophete. For so was the commaundement of the Lorde thow the hande of his prophetes. And so the Leuites stode with the instrumentes of David and the priestes wth trompettes. And Ezechias commaunded to offer the burnt offeringe upon the altare. And when the burnt offeringe began, the songe of the Lorde began, and the trompettes wth the instrumentes of David kyng of Israel. And al the congregatiō bowed themselves and

And when they had made an ende of the burnt offeringe, the kyng and al that were wth hym kneeled downe, and bowed themselves, and gaue prayse and thanks. And Ezechias the kyng, and the Lordes bade the Leuites too prayse the Lorde wth the words of David and of Asaph the sear of visions. And the Leuites praised that they reioysed againe, and the other clouted and bowed themselves.

And Ezechias answered and sayde: now that ye haue filled your handes to the lord, go to and bring in the sacrifices, and thank offerings into the house of the Lorde. And the congregacion broughte in the sacrifices and thank offerings, and all that were wth hym broughte burnt offerings. And the numbere of the burnt offerings whiche the congregacion broughte in, was seuentie Oxen, and an hundred rammes, and two hundred lambs: and all burnt offerings too the Lorde. And besyde that they dedicated syxe hundred Oxen, and thre thousande sheepe.

But the priestes were to fewe: and were not able to slepe all the burnt offerings. Wherefore the people beethen the Leuites holde them till the worke was ended, and vntill the priestes were sanctified. For the Leuites were purer hearted to sanctifye them selues then the priestes. And ther to the burnt offerings were many, with the fatte of the peace offerings, and the drink offerings that belonged to the burnt offerings. And so the seruce pertaining to the house of the Lorde went forward. And Ezechias reioysed, and al the people that God had made the folke so ready, for the thing was sodenlye done.

The xxx. Chapter.

Ezechias reuiveth the feast of pascoer.

And Ezechias sent to all Israel and Juda: and thereto wrote letters to Ephraim and Manasse that they should come to the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, to offer pascoer vnto the Lord God of Israel. And the kyng held a counsel wth his Lordes and al the congregacion at Jerusalem to kepe the feast of pascoer in the ii. month. For they could not kepe it at the firste month, for they were not priestes enough sanctified, neither was the people gathered together to Jerusalem. And the thing pleased the kyng and al the congregacion. And they decreed it shuld be proclaimed thow out all Israel from Bersabe to Dan, that they shuld come and holde the feast of pascoer vnto the Lord God of Israel at Jerusalem: for they had not often done it, as it is written how they shoulde.

And the messengers wente wth letters of the hand of the kyng and of his Lordes thow oute all Israel and Juda, at the commaundecommaundement of the king, which sayd: children of Israel, tourne againe vnto the Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and so wil he turne to the remnaunte of you that are escaped oute of the handes of the kynge of Assur.

And be ye not lyke your fathers & your brethren which trespassed against the Lord of your fathers, which therefore gaue them vp that they are wasted as ye se. Wherefore be not spfnecked lyke vnto your fathers, but yeld your selues vnto the Lord, & come to his holy place which he hath sanctified for euer, and serue the lord your God, that his wrath maye turne from you.

For if ye tourne vnto the Lord your brethren and your chyldren shall fynde compassion in the presence of them that houlde them captiue, that they may come agayne vnto this lande: for the lord your God is full of mercy and compassion, & wil not turn his face from you, if ye turne againe to him.

And the postes went from cyty to cyty thorowout the land of Ephraim and Manasses and euen vnto Zabulon.

But they laughed them to scorne, and mocked them. Nevertheless yet dyuers of Asser, Galanasses and of Zabulon meekened them selues and came to Jerusalem. And thereto the hand of God was in Juda to make them of one accord to do the commaundement of the kynge and the captaynes, whiche was accordynge to the word of the Lord. And so they assembled to Jerusalem muche people and a myghty great congregacion, to holde the feast of sweete breade in the second moneth.

And they arose and put awaye the altars that were in Jerusalem. And all incense they dyd awaye and caste them in to the brooke Cedron. And they slewe passouer, the fourtene day of the second moneth. And the priestes and Leuites sanctified the selues for shame, and brought in the burnt-offerynges into the house of the Lord. And they stode in theyr standyng after their maner accordynge to the lawe of Moyses the man of God. And the priestes sprynckled the bloude receauynge it of the handes of the Leuites. And because there were many in the congregacion that were not sanctified: therefore dyd the Leuites slewe passouer for all that were not cleane to sanctifye them to the Lord.

There was yette muche people oute of Ephraim, Manasses, Issachar and Zabulon that were not cleane, and therefore dyd eate passeouer other wyse then wytyngge specifeth. But Ezechias prayed for them and sayde: the good Lord be mercifull to all that sette their hearies to seke the God that is the Lord God of their fathers, though they do it not accordynge to the cleanness of the holpe place.

And the Lord heard Ezechias, and healed the people. And so the chyldren of Israel that were found at Jerusalem helde the feast of sweete breade seuen daies with great gladnes, & the Leuites & the priestes praised the Lord day by day with lowd instruments.

And Ezechias spake verreye vnto the Leuites that had good vnderstandynge of the Lord. And they did eate the feast, seuen dayes long, and offered peace-offerynges and thanked the Lord God of their fathers. And the hole assemble toke counsell to kepe seuen dayes moore: and they helde those seuen dayes with gladnesse. For Ezechias kynge of Juda gaue for beuere-offerynges to the congregacion a thousand oxen, and seuen thousand shepe. And the Lords gaue to the congregacion for beuere-offerynges a thousand oxen, and ten thousand shepe. And the priestes sanctified them selues, that they were pnowe.

And al the congregacion of Juda with the priestes and Leuites, and all the congregacion that came oute of Israel and the strangers, both that came oute of the lande of Israel, and that dwelte in Juda, reioysed: and there was greete ioye in Jerusalem. For from the tyme of Salomon the sonne of Dauid king of Israel it hapened not so in Jerusalem. And the priestes and the Leuites arose & blessed the people, & their voise was heard & their prayer went vp vnto his holy dwelling place heuen.

The xxxi. Chapter.

After Ezechias had called agayne the people vnto the way of the Lord, he ordeined the priestes, vnto whom he commaunded to gyue tythes.

And when they had synished al thys, al Israel that were found in the cityes of Juda wente oute, and brake the ymagines and cut down the groues, and al to broke the highalters and the other altars thorowte out Juda, and Beniamin, Ephraim & Manasses, tyll they had made an ende of them. And afterward al the chyldren of Israel returned euery man to his possession in theyr owne cyties. And Ezechias set the priestes & the Leuites in their order to waite by course, euerye man accordynge to his offyce, whether priest or Leuite: for the burnt-offerynges and peace-offerynges, and to minister, and to thanke and to pray in the gates of the lodge of the Lord. And the kynge gaue a porcion of his substance for burnt-offerynges at morninge and euen, and for burnt-offerynges on Saboth daies, & new mones, and other solemne feastes, accordynge as it is wytyren in the lawe of the Lord. And he hadde the people that dwelte in Jerusalem to gyue the part of the priestes & Leuites that they myghte be maintayned in the lawe of the Lord. And as soone as the worde came abroad, the chyldren of Israel brought abundaunce of fresshe frutes, of come, wyne, oyle, & beere, & of all maner of frutes of the fildes: and the frutes of all maner of thynges brought they in plenteously. And the chyldren of Israel and Juda that dwelte

II. Chronicles.

In the cities of Juda, they also broughte in the tythes of oren and shepe, and tythes of dedicat thyngs which were dedicate to the Lord their God, and put them on heapes. In the third moneth they began to lay the heapes and synghed them the seventh.

And when Ezechias and the lords came and saw the heapes, they blessed the Lord & his people Israel, and Ezechias questioned wth the priestes and the Levites concerning the heaps. And Azarias the chiefe priest of the house of Sador answered hym and sayd: sythen they began to bring the beue offerings into the house of the Lord, we haue eaten and had ynough, & yet left abundance, for the Lord hath blessed his people and therof is this heape left. And Ezechias badde dreffe by the store houses aboute the house of the Lord. And so they dyd, and caried in the beue offerings and tythes and the dedycate gyftes, euen of sydeltye.

Quert whiche Chonanyah the Leuite had the rule, wth Semel his brother next to hym. And Jehiel, Azariah, Abath, Asael, Herimoth, Josabad, Eliel, Jesmachyah, Abath and Banayah, were overseers ordeyned by Chonanyah and Semel his brother, at the appoyntment of Ezechias the kynge, and Azarias the ruler of the house of God. And Chozai the son of Jena the Leuite porter at the East dore had þ ouer syght of þ frewploughynges of God, to gyue beue offerings vnto the Lord, and was ouer thyngs most holy. And vnto hym were Eden, Ganiampn, Fesus, Semeiah, Amariah and Sechanyah in the cyties of the priestes of the sydeltye, to gyue to the brethren their porcyons, as well to the smal as to the greate.

And to the males also that were reckned from thre yere and aboue amonge all that went into the house of the Lord day by day to do seruite and walke by course.

And to the priestes that were reckned in the householdes of their fathers from thre yere and aboue, to wayte when they courses came. And to them that were reckened thorow oute all their babes, wyues, sonnes and daughters thorow oute all the congregation. For to the fidelity of them dyd men commyt their sanctyfyed gyftes. And therto among the chyldren of Aaron the priestes were men named by name in the fyeldes of the suburbs of all the cyties, cytye by cytye, for to gyue porcyons to all the males of the priestes and to all that were reckned among the Leuites.

And on this maner dyd Ezechias thorow out al Juda, and did that was good, right and reuth, before the Lord his God. And in all the workes that he began in the seruice of the house of God, to seke his god after the law and commandement, he dyd wth al his hart, and prospered.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Sennacherib, which quide haue belleged

The xxxii. Chapter.

Jerusalem is strephen of the Angel & zechias as dieth, after whom succeedeth Manasse

After these dedes & truth Sennacherib kynge of Assur came & catted into Iuda, & pitched against þ strong cities, iii. re. viii. c. & thought to draw the to hym. But whē Ezechias saw þ Sennacherib was come, and that he purposed to fyght agaynst Jerusalem: he toke counsel wth his captyaynes and men of myght, to stop the water of the fountaynes that were wthout the cytye: and they were contente to helpe hym. And so there gathered muche people togyther, and stoppe al the welles and the broke that ran thorow the middes of the lande, entendinge that the kynge of Assur should not fynd much water, when they came. And he went to Iustelye and built vp the wal wher it was broke, and made towres aboute by: ou, and yet an other wal wthout, and repayed also the cytye of Dauid, & made manie battes and pylles.

And he set Capteaynes of war ouer the people and gathered them togyther into the large Acere of the gate of the cite, and spake gentyle to them, sayinge. Blucke vp your heeres and be strong: be not asfayde or in any wyse discouraged for drede of the kynge of Assur, and of the greare multitude that is wth hym: for ther is one greater iii. re. vi. c. wth vs then wth hym. Wth hym is an arme of flesh: but wth vs is the Lord our God for to helpe vs, and to fyghte our battles. And the people were wel couraged with the wordes of Ezechias kynge of Iuda.

After that Sennacherib kynge of Assur sente of his seruauntes to Jerusalem (he him selfe lyinge before Lachys and al his kyngdome wth him) vnto Ezechias kynge of Iuda & vnto al Iuda that were at Jerusalem, sayinge. Thus sayeth Sennacherib kynge of Assur: wherin do ye truste, O ye þ iii. re. vi. c. belleged in Jerusalem? Ezechias deceyeth you to deluyet you to deat, bougre, and thur, sayinge: the Lord our God shal ryd vs out of the hand of the kynge of Assur. Is it not that Ezechias þ put down his hyl aultars and his other aultars, and commaunded Iuda and Jerusalem, sayinge: before one aulter ye shall bow your selues, and vpon that offer also?

Mozeouer haue ye not herd what I and my fathers haue done vnto the people of all landes: were the Gods of the people of other landes hable to saue they landes oute of my bonde? whiche of all the Goddes of those nacjons that my fathers destroyed was it, that could deluyet his people out of myne hand, that your God shuld be hable to deluyet you out of myne hand? Wherefore now let not Ezechias deceyue D you ether perswade you on this sacjon, nor yet beleue hym. For as no God amonge so many nacjons and kyngdomes, was hable to rydde his people oute of myne hande and the handes of my fathers: euen so muche lesse shal your God kepe you out out of myne hande. And yet more byd his seruantes speake agaynste the Lorde god and agaynste his seruante Ezechias. But the more he wrote a letter to rayle on the Lorde God of Israell, and spake therein sayinge: as the Goddes of the nacjons of other landes haue not deliuered their people out of myne hande, no more shall the God of Ezechias deliuer his people out of myne hande. And they cried with a lowde voyce in the Jewes speech vnto the people of Ierusalem, that were on the walles, to feare them and to dismaie them, that they might haue taken the city. And they spake agaynste the god of Ierusalem, as agaynste the gods of the nacjons of the earth, which are the workes of the handes of men.

But Ezechias the kynge and the prophete Ilay sonne of Amoz prayed concerning that thyng, and cryed vp to heauen. And the Lorde sent an aungel and destroyed al the men of war, and the Lorde's Captaynes of the host of the kynge of Assur, that he turned his face with shame towarde his owne lande. And when he was come into the house of his God, he was there ouerthrowen with the swerde euen by the that issued oute of his bowels. And so the Lorde saued Ezechias and the inhabytors of Ierusalem oute of the handes of Sennacherib kynge of Assur and of all other and mayntained them on al sides.

In so much that many brought presentes vnto the Lorde to Ierusalem and precious gyftes to Ezechias kynge of Iuda: so that he was magnified in the sight of al nacjons from thence forth. * In those daies Ezechias was sycke vnto the deathe and besought the Lorde: wherby answered hym & shewed him a wonderfull myracle.

But Ezechias did not accordyng to cursethe shewed hym, for his bett atole: & therfore came there wrath vpon hym and vpon Iuda and Ierusalem. For withstanding Ezechias reuened him selfe for the arisynge of his bette bothe he and the inhabytors of Ierusalem. Wherefore the wrath of the Lorde fell not vpon them in the daies of Ezechias.

And Ezechias had exceeding much riches and honoure. And he gathered him treasures of syluer, golde, precious stones, spyes, shildes, and all maner pleasaunte iewels: and made store houses for the fruites of coine, wyne and oyle, and stables for all maner bestes, and folkes for sheepe. And made hym townes, because he had carell of shepe and oyle great abondance. For God had giuen him substance exceeding much. And the sayde Ezechias stopped the upper watersprynge of Syhon, and brought them downe to the Westsyde of the citty of Dauid. And Ezechias prospered in al his workes. But when the Ambassadors of the Lorde of Babilon were sent to him, to enquire of the wonder that chaunced in the lande, God lette hym to tempte hym, that al that was in his bette myghte be knowne.

The rest of the deedes of Ezechias and his goodnes are written in the vision of Iay the prophete, the sonne of Amoz, in the booke of the kynge of Iuda and Israell. And then Ezechias laid him to rest with his fathers, and they buried him in the best sepulchre of the sones of Dauid: and Iuda and the inhabitantes of Ierusalem, did him worshippe at his deathe. And Manasses his sonne reigned in his stede.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Manasses is taken prisoner, and after he groweth the Idoles. He dieth. After him succeedeth Amos. Amos was kylled of his owne people: Josiah his sonne reigneth for him.

Manasses was. xxi. yere old when he was made kynge, and reigned. lv. yere in Ierusalem. And he did wyckedlye in the sight of the Lorde, spake vnto the abomynacions of the Idols whiche the Lorde cast out before the chyldren of Israell. For he wente and buylte agayne the altaers whiche Ezechias his father had broken downe.

And he reed vpon altaers vnto Baales, and made groues, and bowed hym selfe vnto all the host of heauen, and serued them. And he buylte altaers in the house of the Lorde: of whiche the Lorde had sayd: "in Ierusalem shall my name be for euer. And he made altaers vnto all the host of heauen in the two courtes of the house of the Lorde. And he burnt his chyldren in fyre in the valley of the sonnes of Hennon.

And he obserued dismal dayes, and occupped with chaste and sorow, and mayntayned workes with spyes and sears of fortunes: and wroughte muche cupill in the sight of the Lorde, to anger hym with.

And he put the kerued Image of an Idole whiche he had made, in the house of god. Of which house God saied to Dauid & to Salomons his sonne, in this house here in Ierusalem which I haue chosen out of all the trybes, "I will put my name for euer: and no more byng the seat of Israell: for the land wherby I haue ordeyned for you fathers. In case they shal be diligent to do all I haue commaunded by Moyses in all the law, ordinances and maners. But Manasses made Iuda the inhabytors of Ierusalem to erre, and to do worse then the heathen wherby the Lorde destroyed before the chyldren of Israell. And when the Lorde spake to Manasses and to his people, they attended not to hym.

Wherefore the Lorde brought vpon the Captaynes of the host of the king of Assur, which toke Manasses in an hold and bound him with chaynes, and caried him to Babilon. And when he was in tribulacion he besought the Lorde his God and humbled him selfe exceedingly before the God of his fathers, & made intercession to hym: and he was entreated of him & heard his prayer, and brought him agayne to Ierusalem into his kingdome. Then Manasses knewe howe that the Lorde was the verye God.

After

After that, he buylte a wal wythout the cytye of Dauid on the westsyde of Sydon in the brake, and so forth y to the gate & round about Ophel and broughte it up of a verie great beygh, and put Captaines of war in al the stronge cities of Iuda. And toke strange gods and the ydol out of the house of God, and all the alters that he hadde buylte in the mounte of the house of God and in Ierusalem, and caste theym oute of the cyty. And he made an altar to y Lord & sacrificed ther on peaceofferynges & thank-offerynges, & charged Iuda to serue y Lord God of Israell. Neuer thelesse the people dyd offer still in the ydylters, howe be it but to the Lorde their God onelye.

D The rest of the actes of Manasse & his prayer vnto his God, and the wordes of the seers of visyons that spake to him in y name of the Lord God of Israell, are written among the deedes of the kinges of Israell.

And his prayer, and howe that he was herd, and al his synne and trespace, & the places where he made ydylters and set by groues & kerued Images before he was mekened, are wyrtten amonge the deedes of the seare of byspone. And when Manasse was layde to rest wyth his fathers, they buryed him in his owne house, and Amon his sonne raygned in his towne. Amon was. xxi. yeares old, when he began to raygne, & raygned two yeare in Ierusalem. And he did y displeased y Lord like vnto Manasse his father, for Amon sacrificed to al the kerued Images whiche Manasse his father made, and serued the, and mekened not hym self before the Lord, as Manasse his father had mekened hym selfe: But Amon trespassed greatlye. Wherefore his owne seruauntes conspyred agaynst hym, and slew hym in his owne house.

And the people of the land slew all that had conspyred agaynst king Amon. And they to the people of the land made Josias his sonne kyng in his towne.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

J Josias destroyeth the ydols and restoreth the temple in whiche is founde the booke of the lawe. He sendeth to Holbah the p'phet for counsell.

Josias.

ii. c. xxi. a.

J Josias was made king when he was. viii. yeare olde, and he raygned in Ierusalem xxx. yeares. And he dyd that pleased the Lorde and walked in the wayes of Dauid his father, bowing nerther to the ryght hande nor to the left. In so muche that the eyght yere of his raygne, when he was yet a lad, he beganne to seke after the God of Dauid his father. And in the. xii. yeare he beganne to purge Iuda and Ierusalem of ydylters, groues, kerued Images, and Images of metall: so that they brake downe the alters of Baals, even in his presence, and the ydylles that were vpon them, he caused to be destroyed. And y groues kerued Images, & Images of metall he brake & made dust of theym, and strowed it vpon the graues of them that had offered to them. And he burnt the bones of the ydylles vpon the alters, and clenched Iuda and Ierusalem. And euē so did he in the cyties of Manasse, Ephraim, Simeon, and of Reubai. And in y wilbernes of them rounde aboute he plucked & sondre the altars and the groues, and dyd beat the stamp the to poulder & beat downe the ydylles thorowout all the land of Israell: and then returned to Ierusalem. B

In the. xvi. yeare of his raygne when he had purged the lande and the temple, he sent Saphan the sonne of Azalia, & Asahab the gouernour of the cytye, and Joab the sonne of Joachaz the recorder, to repayre the house of the Lorde his God. And when they came to Helkiah the high priest, men deliuered theym the money that was brought into the house of God, whiche the Leuites that kept the entrees had gathered of the handes of Manasse and Ephraim, and of all that yet remayned in Israell and of all Iuda, and Beniamin and of the enbaptyers of Ierusalem. And they put it in the handes of the workemenne that had the ouersyght of the house of the Lorde, whiche gaue it to the labourers that wroughte on the house of the Lorde, to repayre and mend it, and to masonnes and carpenters to be hewed stone and tymber, for to make couples and beames for the houses whiche the kinges of Iuda had destroyed: And the meune wroughte in the woorkes saythefullye.

And the ouerscers of theym to courage them were Jahath and Abadiah Leuites of the children of Merari: and Secharia and Aschulam of the children of the Caba-tytes, & as manye other of the Leuites as could skil of instrumentes of musyke. And out the beateres of burdens & out al that wroughte, in wharso euer workemanshipp it were, were ther scribes, officers and porters of the Leuites.

And as they broughte oute the moneye that was broughte into the house, Helkiah the p'pste founde the booke of the lawe of the Lorde, geuen by Moyses. And Elkyah answered and sayed to Saphan the scribe: I haue found the booke of the lawe in the house of the Lorde, & gaue the booke to Saphan. And Saphan caried the booke to the kyng, and broughte the kyng word agayne sayinge: all that was committed to thy seruauntes, that do they. And they haue paynted oute the moneye that was found in the house of the Lorde, & haue deliuered it into the handes of the ouerscers of the workemen. And then Saphan the scribe shewed the kyng, sayinge: Helkiah the p'pste hath geuen me a booke, and he reade it before the kyng.

And when the kyng hadde hearde the wordes of the lawe, he tare his clothes and commaunded Helkiah and Abikam the sonne of Saphan, and Abadon the sonne of Micah, & the sayed Saphan the scribe, and

and Azaria a seruaunte of the kynges, sayinge: goo and enquire of the Lorde for me, and for them that are left in Israel and Iuda, concernyng the wordes of the booke that is folow. For great is the wrath of the Lorde that is fallen vpon vs, because our fathers hepe not the worde of the Lorde, so do after al that is wrytten in this booke.
 And Heikias with them that pertained to the kyng wente to Holdai a prophete the wife of Sechim the sonne of Abekohab the sonne of Basarab keper of the ward: oppe (whiche prophete dwelte in Ierusalem in the .ii. ward) and they comuned so with her. And she sayde vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel, helpe the man that sente you to me: such thus sayeth the Lorde: lo, I will bringe euill vpon this place, and vpon the inhabitants therof, euen al the curses that are wrytten in the booke whiche they haue reade before the kyng of Iuda, because they haue forsaken me, and haue offered vnto other Gods to angre me wth all maner works of their han-des, therefore is my wrath sette on fire a-

And as for the kyng of Iuda whiche sente you to enquire of the Lorde, so shall ye sape vnto hym: thus sayth the Lord God of Israel, concernyng the wordes whiche thou hast heard. Because thyn heert dyd meke and thou dydeste meke thy selfe before God, when thou heardest his wordes atants thereof: and humbledst thy selfe before me, & rarest thy clothes and wepest before me, that I heard also say the Lorde. Beholde I will take the to thy fathers, & thou shalt be put in thy graue in peace, and thyn eyes shall not see all the myschance that I will bringe vpon this place and vpon the inha-biters of the same. * And they brought the kyng worde agayne. Then the kyng sente and gathered together all the elders of Juda and Ierusalem. And the kyng went vp into the house of the Lorde, and all the men of Iuda, and the inhabitants of Ierusalem, & the priestes, and Leuites, and all the people grete and smalle, & read al the wordes of the booke of the couenant that was found in the house of the Lorde. And the kyng stode at his standinge and made a couenaunt before the Lorde, to folowe the Lorde and to kepe his commaundementes, his witness-ses and his statutes wth all his heret, and wth all his soule, and to fulfille the wordes of the appoyntemente wrytten in the sayde booke.

And he made to come forth al that were founde in Ierusalem and Beniamyn, and the inhabitants of Ierusalem promysed to kepe the couenaunte of God whiche was the God of their fathers.
 And Josias put away all maner abhominations out of all lands that pertained to the children of Israel, & brought al that were founde in Israel to serue the Lord they

God, & they turned not a side from the Lord God of their fathers as longe as he lyued.

The xxxv. Chapter.

Josias holdeth passeouer. He synneth against the kyng of Egypt and dyeth. The people bewepeth hym.

And Josias held the feaste of passeo-uer vnto the Lorde in Ierusalem, & they came passeouer in the .xiii. day of the .i. moneth. And he set the priestes in their offyses, and ayded them in the seruice of the house of the Lorde. And he sayde to the Leuites that taught throughout all Israel, and were sanctified vnto the Lord:
 put the holy arke in the house whiche Salom the sonne of Dauid kinge of Israel dyd buyde, yenebe not to beare it vpon your shoulders. Wherfor now we serue the Lord our God and vs people Israel. And prepare you selues by your auncient households and compaynes, accordyng to the wryttinge of Dauid kyng of Israel, and the wryttinge of Salomon his sonne. And stand in þe holy place accordyng to þe beusions of the auncient households of your brethren the children of the people, & alter the deuision of the auncient households of the Leuites, & kil passeouer, sanctify & prepare your brethren: & they maye do accordyng to þe word of the Lord by the hand of Moyses.

And Josias gaue to the common people in lambes and kids, for passeouer offerynges onely, vnto all that were presente about thousand by tale, and thre thousand oxen, euen of the kynges substance. And his Lordes gaue willinglye boord vnto the people, & vnto the priestes, and vnto the Le-uites. Azaria, zacharias, and Jehiel eu-lers of the house of God, gaue vnto the priestes for passeouer offerynges, ii. thousand &
 vi. hundred lambes and kids, and .iii. hundred oxen. And Conaniah Semia, and Sathanaiah his brethren, & Basabiah and Ja-sel, and Josabab Lords of the leuites, gaue vnto the Leuites fyue thousande passeouer offerynges, and fyue hundred oxen.

And so the seruice wente forward: & the priestes stode in their places, and the Le-uites in their compaynes at the kynges commaundment. And they offered passeouer: and the priestes synnckled the bloude, receauynge it of the Leuites, and the Leuites strepte the beastes. And they set away the burnt offerynges, to geue them vnto the commune people as they were drydded by aunciente houses, for to offer vnto the Lorde, as is wrytten in the booke of the Moyses. And so dyd they wth the oxen to.
 And they dressed the passeouer with fyre, as the maner was. But the other halowed be-dicare beastes they sod in pots, cauldernes & pannes, & dealed them quickly among all the comun people. And afterwarde, they made readre for them selues and for the priestes, and for the children of Aton; whiche were busied in offeryng burnt offerynges and the fat, vntill nyght. And therefore the Leuites prepared for them selues, and for the priestes the sonnes of Aaron. And the singers the children of Asaph stode in their standyng accordyng to the commaundemente of Dauid and Asaph Beman and Jeduthun the kynges sear of visions: and the porters wayted at euery gate, and myghte not departe from their seruyce: But they brechen the Leuites prepared for them. And so al the seruyce of the Lord went forthward the sabbid day, in offeryng passouer of burnte offerynges vpon the aultare of the Lord, accordyng to the commaundemente of kyng Joasas. And so the children of Israel that met found, offered passouer the same tyme and kept the feast of sweete bread. vii. daies. And ther was no passouer like to that kept in Israel from the tyme of Samuel the prophet: neyther did any of the kynges of Israel holde such a passouer leaste as dyd Joasas, and the priestes and Leuites and all Juda, and as muche of Israel as coulde be had, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And this passouer was holden in the egyptene yeare of the raygne of Joasas.

II. Chronicles:

After all this, when Joasas had synned the temple, Jeho kyng of Egypt, came vnto synne agaynst Saccanus vpon Euphrates, and Joasas went out agaynst hym. And the other sent messengers to hym, saying: what haue I to do wyth the þ kyng of Juda? I came not agaynst the nowe at this tyme, but agaynst an house wyth inhome I haue war, and God had me hater. Leane therefore and meddle not wyth God which is with me, lest he destroye the. And when Jeho turned not his face from hym, but made hym ready to synne wyth hym, and hekened not vnto the wordes of Jeho out of the mouth of god. And when he was come to synne in the vale of Maggedo, the shooters shotte agaynst the kyng Joasas. And the kyng sayd to his seruauntes: carpe me awaye, for I am sore hurt. And his seruauntes had hym oute of that charer and put him in another, and brought him to Jerusalem wher he died, and was buried in the sepulchre of his fathers. And Jeremey lamented Joasas, and al singyng me a singyng womē spake of Joasas to this day, and made it an ordinance in Israel: and they be wyrtten in lamentacions. The rest of the actes of Joasas and his goodnes in folowynge the wyrtting of the law and his dedes first and last, are wyrtten in the booke of the kynges of Israel and Juda.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

After Joasas raygned Joachaz, Joachin, Joasyn, Sedekias, in whose time al the people were carped awaye to Babylon and were broughte agayne the. lxx. yeare after by kyng Cyrus.

salem. And Joachaz was. xlii. yeare olde when he beganne to raygne, and raygned thre monethes in Jerusalem. For the kyng of Egypt put hym downe at Jerusalem, and ransomed the land in an hundred talents of silver and a talent of gold. And the kyng of Egypt made Eliakym his brother kyng vpon Juda and Jerusalem, and turned his name vnto Joakym, but Jeho toke Joachaz his brother, and caried him to Egypt. Joakym was. xxi. yeare olde when he began to raygne, and raygned xi. yeare in Jerusalem. And he dyd that displeased the Lord his God. Against him came Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon and bound him in fetters to carie hym to Babylon. And ouer the kyng Nabuchodonosor carped of the vessels of the house of the Lord to Babylon, and put the in his temple at Babylon. The rest of the actes of Joakym and his abominacions, and that was laid to his charge, are wyrtten in the booke of the kynges of Israel: and Joachin his sonne raygned in his steade. Joachin was. viii. yeare olde when he beganne to raygne, and he raygned thre monethes and ten dayes in Jerusalem, and dyd that displeased the Lord. And when the yeare was oute, kyng Nabuchodonosor sente, and fet hym to Babylon with the goodly vessels of the house of the Lord, and made Sedekias his brother kyng ouer Juda and Jerusalem. And Sedekias was. xxi. yeare olde when he began to raygne, and raygned xi. yeare in Jerusalem. And he dyd that displeased the Lord his God, and humbled not hym selfe before Jeremey the prophet at the mouth of the Lord. And therfore he rebelled agaynst Nabuchodonosor whiche he had receyued an othe of hym by God, and was synned to hard herted to turne vnto the Lord God of Israel. Furthermore all the rulers of priests to the people trespassed a pace after al maner of abominacions of the þanims and polluted the house of the Lord, which he had halowed in Jerusalem. And the Lord God of their fathers sente to them by his messengers, sendyng them by tymes: for he had compassion on his people and on his dwelling place. But they mocked the messengers of God, and despised theyr wordes, and refused his prophetes, but he the wrath of the Lord so aroose agaynst his people, that it was past remedye. And so he broughte vpon them the kyng of Caldey, and setwe theyr yonge men with the sword in theyr holye temple, and neyther spared yonge man nor mayden, neither old man, neither so much as him, that stouped for age. But gaue all into his hande.

And all the vessels of the house of God both grete and small, and the treasures of the house of God, and the treasures of the kyng and his lordes, he carped to Babylon euerye thing. And they burnt the house of God and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem, and burnt al the palaces therof with fyre, wyth all the goodly stuffe therof, and marred it.

The ende of the .ii. booke of Chronicles of the kynges of Iuda.

The first booke of Esdras the prophet.

The first Chapter.

Esdras sendeth agayne the people that were in captiuitie, and restored them theyr holpe vesselles. And commaunded them to buyde agayne the temple.

In the spirit pere of Cyrus king of persia (that the woorde of the Lorde spoken by the mouthe of Jeremie myghte be fulfilled) the Lorde stirred vpp the spirit of Cyrus king of persia, that he caused it be proclaimed thowewoute all his empyre, yea and by wyting also, sayinge: Thus saythe Cyrus the king of persia: The Lorde God of heauen hath geuen me all the kingedomes in the lande, and hath commaunded me to buyde him an house at Jerusalem in Iuda. Whosoever nowe amonge you is of hys people, the Lorde his God bee with him, and lette him go vp to Jerusalem in Iuda, and build the house of the Lorde God of Irael. He is the God that is at Jerusalem. And whoso euer remaineth yet in any manner of place (where he is a straunger) lette the menne of hys place, helpe hym wth syluer and goulde, wth good and cattell, besyde that whiche they wyllynge offer for the house of God at Jerusalem.

Then gat vp the principall fathers of Iuda and Beniamin, and the prestes and Leuites, and all they whose spryde God hadde rased to go vpp, and to buyde the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. And all they that were aboute them, strenghtened theyr hand with vessels of siluer and gold, wth good and cattell and Jewels, besyde that whiche they gaue of theyr free wyl.

And kyng Cyrus broughte forth the of the vessels of the house of the Lorde, whiche Nabuchodonosor had taken oute of Jerusalem, and put in the house of hys God.
But Cyrus the kyng of persia broughte them forth by Shithdaces the tresurer, and numbred them vnto Sesbazar prince of Iuda. And this is the numbre of them:
xxx. basens of golde, and a thousande ba-sens of syluer, and nyne and twentye kniues, thyrtye cuppes of golde, and of other syluer cuppes. iiii. C. and tenne, and of other vessels a thousande. So that all the vesselles bothe of golde and syluer, were fyue thousande and foure hundred, Sesbazar brought them all vp, wth them that came by oute of the captiuitie of Babylon vnto Jerusalem.

The ii. Chapter.

The number of them that returned from captiuitie.

At the Sathynims and the chyldren of Salomons seruauntes were al together .iii. .c. and nyne and two.

And these wente by also, Thelmeiah, Bethell Barfa, Adon and Emer. But they coude not thewe they fathers house nor theire seede, whether they were of Israell. The chyldren of Dalatah, the chyldren of Tobiah, the chyldren of Accoda, six hundred and two and fyfthe. And of the chyldren of the priestes. The chyldren of Bodaiah, the chyldren of Bako, the chyldren of Berzilai, whiche toke one of the daughters of Barzilai the Galaadite to wife, and was called among the same names: these sought the register of theyr birth, and found none, therfore were they put from the priest hooe. And Bathielatha sayde vnto them, that they shoulde not eate of the most holye, till they rose by a priest wth the Ex. xxviii. c lyghte and perfectnes.

The hole congregacion as one manne, was two and fourthe thousande, three hundred and three score: besyde theyr seruauntes and mapedens, of whome there were seven thousande, three hundred and seven and thyrthe. And they hadde two hundred synginge menne and women, seven hundred and fyve and thyrthe hoyses, two hundred and fyve and fourthe quiles four hundred and fyve and thyrthe Camels, and .vi. thousande, seven hundred and twenty Asses. And certain of the chiefe fathers, when they came to the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, they offered willpyngs vnto the house of God, that it shoulde be sette in his place, and gaue after theyr habpytpe vnto the treasure of the worke, thye score and one thousande drammes, and fyve thousande pound of syluer, and an hundred priestes garmentes. So the priestes and the Leuites, and certayne of the people, and the syngers, and the porters and the Sathynims dwelte in theyr ctytes, and all Israell in theyr ctytes.

The. iii. Chapter.

After the foundation of the temple ones reared, they offer sacrifice vnto the Lorde.

When the seuenthe moneth came, and the chyldren of Israell were now in ii. c. vii. a ii. c. vii. a theyr ctytes, the people clustered together as one man, vnto Jerusalem. And Jesua the sonne of Josedecarose and his brethren the priestes, and sorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and hys brethren, and buylded the altier of the God of Israell, to offer burnt offerpiges thereon, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moyses the man of God, and the altier they dyd sette bypon his foottes, for there was a fearefulnes among them because of the nations and landes. ii. c. vii. a ii. c. vii. a They offered burnt offerpiges thereon vnto the Lorde in the mornynge and at euen. And held the feast of Tabernacles (as it is wrytten) and offered burnt sacrifices dayly in order, accordynge to the custome, day by day. Afterwarde the dayly burnt offerpiges also, and of the new moones, and of all the feast dayes of the Lorde that were halowed, and all manner of frewill offerpiges whiche they dyd of theyr owne moeion vnto the Lorde.

Upon the fyfte daye of the seuenthe moneth, they began to offer burnt sacrifices to the Lorde. But the foundacyon of the temple of the Lorde was not yet layde. Neuer theles they gaue monye vnto the masons and

In the seconde pere of theyr comynge vnto the house of God at Jerusalem and the second moneth, began Jorobabell sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua sonne of Josedec, and the rest of theyr brethren the priestes & Leuites, and all that were come oute of captiuitie vnto Jerusalem, and apointed 12 Leuites from twentye pere olde and aboue to ouersee the workes of the house of the Lorde. And Jesua stode wth his sonnes & brethren, and Cadmiel wth his sonnes & the children of Juda, to forther the worke of the house of God, namely the childre of Beuadad, with their children and theyr brethren the Leuites.

And when the buylders layde the foundation of the temple of the Lorde, the priestes stode in theyr arraye, wth trompettes. And the Leuits the children of Asaph with Cymbals, to prayse the Lord after the maner of Dauid king of Israel. And they sang together, geuynge praises and thanks vnto the Lorde, that he is gracious, & his mercye endureth for euer vpon Israel.

And all the people shouted loude in prayse vnto the Lord, because the foundation of the house of the Lorde was layde. And also of the olde priestes and Leuites and aunciente fathers, whiche hadde sene the firste house: when the foundation of this house was layde before theyr eyes, wepte wth a loude voyce. And manye shouted wth ioy, so that the noise gaue a greatesound, in so much that the people coulde not perceiue 12 ioyfull sounde for the noise of the weping amonge the people, for the people shouted wth a loude crye so that the noise was heard, farre of.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The buyldinge of the temple is hindered.

Explaine enes
mye.

At when the aduersaries of Juda and Beniamin heard that the children of captiuitie builded the temple vnto the Lorde God of Israel, they came to Jorobabell and to the principall fathers, and sayde to them: We wyl buylde wth you: for we seke the Lorde your God as ye do. And we haue done sacrifice vnto him, sayng that Asor Hadd king of Assur brought vs vnto here. But Jorobabell and Jesua and the other aunciente fathers of Israel answered them. It belongeth not too you but to vs to buylde the house vnto our God: for we our selues wyl buylde alone vnto the Lorde our God of Israel as Cyrus kynge of Persia hath commaunded vs.

L. Ed. i. a

When the folke of the lande hindered the people of Juda, and made them afraid to buylde, and hyed counsellours agaynst them and hindered theyr deuyce as long as Cyrus kynge of Persia lyued till the raigne of Darius kynge of Persia.

And when Asuerus was made kinge in the begynnyng of his raigne, they wrot vnto him a complaynte agaynst them of Juda and Jerusalem.

Also in the tyme of Artaxarces wrote Belsam, Bithnates, Tabeel, and the other of theyr conspyracie vnto Artaxarces king of Persia. But 12 scripture of the letter was wyrtten in the Sirians speache, and was red in the language of the Sirians. Rehum the chanceler, and Samfai the scribe wrot also an epistle from Jerusalem, to Artaxarces the kynge, of this tenoure.

We Rehum the chancelour, and Samfai the scribe, and other of the counsell of Dina, of Arphasath, of Tarpatate, of Persia, of Arach, of Babylon, of Susan, of Deba, and of Elam, and other of the people, whome the greates and Noble Asenaphar broughte ouer, and sette it in the ctytes of Samaria, and other on this side the water and in Cenereth. (This is the summe of the letter that they sente vnto kynge Artaxarces) Thy seruantes the men on this syde the water, and in Cenereth to kynge Artaxarces, greting. Be it knowen vnto the king that the Jewes are come by from the bynto vs vnto Jerusalem a cite sedicious and frowarde, and buylde the same, and laye 12 foundation of the walles thereof and repayre them. Know now therfore, O kynge, that if this ctyte be buylde and the wals made vnto agayne, they shall not geue tribute, toll, ne perelpe custome, and so euen vnto the kynges shall this hurte redounde. But now sythe we all are thereby, whiche destroyed that temple, we wol no longer se the kynges by honoure. Therfore we haue sente oute, and caused the kynge to be certifyed therof: that letche maye be made in the Chronicles of thy progenitours, and so shalt thou synde in the same Chronicles, and perceiue that this ctyte is sedicious, and noysome vnto kynges and landes and that they cause others also to rebell of old, and for the same cause was this cite destroyed. Therfore we certifye the king, that if this cite be builded, & the wals thereof made by, thou shalt kepe nothyng on this syde the water by reason of it.

Then sente the kynge an answer vnto Rehum Chanceler, and Samfai the scribe and to the other of their counsel that dwelt in Samaria, and vnto the other beyonde 12 water. Peace and salutatyon. The letters whiche ye haue sente vs, haue bene openly redde before me, and I haue commaunded to make searche: and it is founde, that this ctyte of olde hath made insurrectyon agaynst kynges, and how that sedition & rebellion hath bene comytted therein. Where haue bene myghty kynges also at Jerusalem, whiche haue raigned ouer all that is beyonde the water, and tol, tribute and perelpe custome was geuen them. Doe now after this commaundemente, for by the same men, that the ctyte be not buylde.

The prophetes, Aggeus, and zacharie the son of Addo, prophesied vnto the Jewes that were in Ierusalem, in the name of the God of Israel. Then gat by zoiobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and beganne to bulde the house of God at Ierusalem, and wth them the prophetes of God whiche helped the. At the same time came to them Thathanai the Capitayn on thys syde the water, and Stharbazanai, and theyr felowes, and sayde thus vnto them. Who hath commaunded you to bulde this house, and too make by the walles therof? Then tolde we them the names of the men, that made this building. But by the elders of the Jewes came the eye of their God, so that they could not cause them to cease, til the matter was brought afore Darius, and til they had answered by letters therunto.

This is the copy of the letters that Thathanai Capitain on this syde the water, and Stharbazanai and the adherentes of Ades they sente vnto him were these. Vnto Darius the kynge, all peace. Be it knowne to the kynge, that we came into Jewrye to the house of the greates God whiche is bul-ded wth rough stone, and beames are laid in the walles, and the worke goeth faste forthe, and prospereth in their handes. We asked the elders, and sayde vnto them:

Who hath commaunded you too buylde this house, and to make by the walles ther-of? We asked theyr names also, that we myghte certifye the, and haue wrytten the names of the men that were theyr rulers.

But they answered vs these wordes, and saide: We are the seruants of the God of heaven and earthe, and bulde the house þ was buylded manye yeres ago, whiche a greates kynge of Israel buylded and sette by. And after our fathers had spired the God of heaven vnto wrath, he gaue them ouer into the hande of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon the Calde whiche ouer-threw this house, and carried the people away vnto Babylon. But in the first yere of

The. vi. Chapter.

It commaundemente of Darius, when the temple was buylded and dedicate, the chyldren of Israel kepte the feast of the pas-che as theyr fathers.

Then commaunded kynge Darius, searche to be made in the Librarie of the kinges booke, whiche lay at Ba-bilon. So at Egbathanis in a castel that li-eth in the land of Medes, was found a booke, and in it was a record writte after this maner: in the first yere of kynge Cyrus, commaunded king Cyrus to buylde the house of God at Ierusalem, in the place wher the sacrifice is made, and to lay a foundation of .lx. cu-bites hygh, and thre score cubites brode, and the wals of rough stones, and one wal of timber, and the expenses shuld be geue of þ kinges house. And the gold & siluer vessels of the house of God (whiche Nabuchodonosor toke out of the temple at Ierusalem and brought vnto Babylon) shuld be restored agayne, that they mape be broughte vnto þ temple at Ierusalem to their place, into the house of God.

Nowe therefore thou Thathanai capy-taine beyonde the water, and Stharbazanai, and your felowes which are beyonde the water, get ye awaye from them. Let them work in the house of God that the capitain of the Jewes and theyr elders mape bulde the house of God in his place. I haue commaunded also, what shalbe done to the elders of Juda for the buylding of the house of God, that there shall diligently be taken of the kynges goodes, euen of the re-uenues beyonde the water, and geuen by to the men: and that they be not hindered.
That if they haue nede of calves, lambes, or goates, for burnt offering vnto the god of heaven, wheate, salte, wyne and oyle, after the custome of the priestes at Ierusalem, be it geuen them dayly that no complainte be made herein. And let them offer sweete sauours vnto the God of heaven, & praye for the kings life, and for his chylde. These commaundemente haue I geuen, & what man so euer uttereth these wordes, ther

E Then Thathanai, the Captpayne beponde the water, and Stharbazanai wpth thep felowes (to whome kynge Darius hadde sente) had their deuoure. And the elders of the Jewes builded, and then prospected thowethe prophecye of Aggeus the prophete and zacharie the sonne of Ado: and builded, and set vp the worke, accordyng to the commaundemente of the God of Israel, and after the commaundemente of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerces kynges of Persia. And they were in synng the house vnto the thyrdaye of the moneth Adar, that was in the vi. yere of the raigne of kynge Darius.

U. Pa. vii. b And the chyldren of Israel, the priestes the Leuites, and the other children of captiuitie helde the dedication of the house of God wpthiope, and offered at the dedication of the house of God, an hundred calves two hundred lambes, four hundred goates, and for the sinne offeringe for all Israel twelve he goates, accordyng to the number of the tribes of Israel, and set the priestes in their courses, and the Leuites in their offices to minister vnto God whiche is at Ierusalem, as is wrytten in the booke of Moses.

D And the chyldrene of captiuitie helde passeouer vpon the fourteenth daye, of the fyrst moneth: for the priestes and Leuites had purged them selues, so that they were as cleane as one man, and offered passeouer for all the chyldren of captiuitie, and for their brethren the priestes, and for them selues. And the chyldren of Israel, whiche were returned out of captiuitie, and all such as had seuered them selues from the filthynes of the yannues in the land, to seeke þ Lord God of Israel, eat and held the feast of vnleuened breade seven daies wpthiope: for the Lord had made them glad and turned the hert of the king of Assur vnto them, so that their handes were strengthened in the worke of the house of God, whiche is the God of Israel.

The. vii. Chapter.

E By commaundemente of Artaxerces, Esdras taketh the chyldren of Israel, and returneth to Ierusalem.

E After these thinges in the raigne of Artaxerces kyng of Persia, there wente vp from Babilon, Esdras the sonne of Sarai, the son of Azariah, the sonne of Belkai, the sonne of Selum, the sonne of Sadae, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne of Maraioth, the sonne of Iarai, the sonne of Oni, the sonne of Boki, the sonne of Abisua, the sonne of Ithinees, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the chiefe prieste. This Esdras was a quicke scribe in the lawe of Moses, * whiche the Lord god of Israel did geue. And the king gaue hym all he required, accordyng to the hande of the Lord his God vpon him.

So wente vp certayne of the chyldrene of Israel, and of the priestes, and of the Leuites, of the singiers, of the porters, and of the Methunims vnto Ierusalem, in the seventh yere of kynge Artaxerces. And they came to Ierusalem in the fyrst moneth, that is the seventh yere of the kynge. For vpon the first daye of the first moneth, began he to go vpp from Babilon: and on the first daye of the first moneth came he to Ierusalem accordyng to the good hande of God vpon him. For Esdras prepared his herte to seeke the lawe of the Lord and doo it, and to teache the precepte and iudgement in Israel.

E This is the copie of the letter that king Artaxerces gaue vnto Esdras the prieste, the scribe, whiche was a teacher in the wordes of the Lord, & of his statutes ouer Israel. Vnto Esdras the prieste and scribe in the lawe of God of heauen, peace and greetynge. I haue commaunded that all they of the people of Israel, and of the priestes and Leuites in my realme, whiche are minded to go vpp to Ierusalem, that they goo wpth the, beyng sente of the kinge and of the seven Lordes of the counsell, to byspte Iuda and Ierusalem, accordyng to the lawe of God, whiche is in thy hande and þ thou take with the, siluer and gold, which the kinge and the Lordes of his counsell haue geuen of their good wil vnto the god of Israel (whose habitation is at Ierusalem) and al the siluer and golde thou canst fynde in al the countrey of Babilon: wpth that also that the people and priestes giue of their good will vnto the house of God at Ierusalem. Take thou that same and be diligent wpth it: calves, lambes, goates, and sacryfices, and drynke offeringes to be offered vpon the aulter of the house of your God at Ierusalem. And loo what it spaketh the and thy brethren, to do wpth the reste of the monie, that do after the wil of your God. And the vesselles that are geuen the for the mynistratyon in the house of thy God, those deliuer thou before God at Ierusalem.

And what soeuer thyng mote shall be nedefull for the house of thy God, whiche is necessarye for the to spende, let the same be geuen oute of the kynges Chamber.

¶ Kyng Artaxerces haue decreed and commaunded to all the keepers of oure treasure beponde the water, that looke whatsoeuer Esdras the prieste and scribe in the lawe of the God of heauen requyeth of pou, that ye fulfill the same diligently vntil an hundred talents of siluer, and vntil an. C. quac ters of whete, and till an hundred Bathes of wine, and till an hundred Bathes of oyle and salte withoute measure. Whatsoeuer belongeth to the rites of the God of heauen let the same be done with diligence for the house of the God of heuen, that ther come no wrath thereof, vpon the kyngs realme and hys chyldren.

D And knowen be it vnto you, that ye shal haue no auctorite to requyre taxes and customs and perel prentes vpon anye of the priestes, Leuites, singers, porters, Rethimms, and Ministers in the house of thys God. But thou Elisha (after the wisdom of the God that is in thy hande) sette thou Judges and presydentes to iudge al the people that is beyond Jordan, euen all suche as know the law of thys God, and the that know it not, those see that ye teache. And whosoever wil not diligently fulfil þe lawe of thys God, and the kyngs lawe, shal haue his iudgement for the dede, whether it be vnto death or to be banished, or to be condemned in goodes or to be put in prison.

 Warped be the Lorde God of our fathers, which so hath inspired the kynges herte to garnishe the house of God at Jerusalem, and hath enclyned hys mercye vnto me in the presence of the kyng and hys counsellours, and before all the kynges of the estates. And I was comforted (accordynge to the hande of the Lorde my God ouer me) and so gathered I the headres of Israel together, that they myghte goo wth me.

The viii. Chapter.

The number of them that returned to Jerusalem with Elisha.

These are the headres of the fathers þe were named, which wente wth me from Babylon: what tyme as king Artaxerxes rapgned.

Of the chyldren of phinces, Bersom: of the chyldren of Jethamar: of the chyldren of David, Batus, of the chyldren of Zechariah, of the chyldren of pharos, zachary wth hym were numbred an hundred and fiftie men: of the chyldren of phath. Agab, Eli enai the sonne of zarakiah, and wth hym two hundred men: of the chyldrene of zechamiah the sonne of Jahasiel, and wth hym thre hundred menne: of the chyldren of Adin, Abed, the sonne of Jonathan, and wth hym fiftie men: of the chyldren of Elam & Israh the sonne of Athaliah, & wth hym seuentye men of the chyldren of Saphatia, zabadiah the sonne of Michahel, and wth hym lxxx. men.

B Of the chyldren of Joab Shodiah the sonne of Jehiel and wth hym two hundred and xviij. men: of the chyldren of Selo muth, the sonne of Josaphiah, and wth him an l. and iij. men. Of the chyldren of Behai zachari. & sonne of Behai, & wth him xxviij. men. Of þe chyldre of Agab, Johanan the son of Bakat & wth him an l. & ten men. Of the last chyldren of Adonias, & these were thei names, Elphelet, Jehiel and Samaiah, and wth them lxx. men. Of the chyldre of Begui, Uriah and zabud and wth them seuentye men. And I gathered them together by the water that renneth towarde Ahava, and there abode we iij. dayes. And when I looked amonge the people and the priestes, I founde no Leuites ther. Then sent I Eliezer, Aniel, Semaiah, El Nathan, Jari, El Nathan, Rathan, zachary and Asollam the ruleis, and Joab and El Nathan the teachers and those sent I vnto Edo & chiefest at Casphias, that they shuld fetch vs ministers for the house of our God, and I tolde them what they shuld say vnto Edo, and to his brethren the Rethimms at Casphias.

And (accordynge to the good hande of our God vpon vs) they brought vs a wise man from the chyldren of Agaboli the son of Leui, the sonne of Israel, I meane Sarabia wth hys sonnes and brethren xviij. And Sababia, and wth him Israh of the chyldren of Merari wth his brethren and thei sons. xx. And of the Rethimms, whos David and the princes gaue to mynstre vnto the Leuites. ii. l. and twentye, al named by name.

And euen there at the water beside Ahava caused I a fastinge to be proclapmed, þe we myghte humble oure selues before oure God, to seeke of him a right way for vs, and oure chyldren, and al oure substance.

For I was ashamed too requyre of the kyng, of the pourses and horsemen, and to helpe vs agaynst the enemy in the way. D For we had sayd vnto the kyng: The hand of our God is vpon al them that seeke hym in goodnes, and his violence and wrath vpon al them that forsake him. So we fasted, and sought this at our God, and he heard vs. Then I toke out. xii. of the chiefe priestes, Sarabia, and Sababia, and x. of thei brethren wth them, and weied them there the syluer and golde, and vesselles for the offering vnto the house of our God, whiche the kyng and the Lorde of hys counsel and princes, and al Israel that wer at had had geuen to the offering: and there weied I them vnder thei hand, six hundred and fifty talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessel an hundred talentes, and in gold an hundred talentes, twenty cuppes of gold, & c. diammes, and two cossele ornaments of good brasse, as cleare as gold, and said vnto them: Ye are holpe vnto the Lord, therefore are the vesselles holpe also, and so is the syluer and goulde that is geuen of a good wyll vnto the Lorde God of our fathers: E Watche ye therefore and kepe it, tpe wey it down before the chiefe priestes and Leuites, and auncpente fathers of Israel at Jerusalem in the chiefe aulp of the house of the Lorde. Then toke the priestes and Leuites the weied syluer and golde and vessel, to bringe it to Jerusalem vnto the house of our God. So we marched forward, Warde, from the water of Abana, on the twelfth day of the first moneth, to go vnto Iherusalem: and the hand of our god was vpon vs, and deliuered vs from the hand of the enemy: & lieth in an art by the way. And we came to Iherusalem, and abode there thre daies. But on the fourth day was the silver and gold, and vessel wepen in the house of our God vnder the hand of Azorah the sonne of Uria the Priest, and with him Eleazer the sonne of Ithamar, and with him Josabab the sonne of Ihesua, and Roobia, the sonne of Benoi the Leuites, accordinge to the number and weight of euery one. And the weight was al written at the same time.

And the child:en of the captivity, whiche were come out of pylon offered burnt-offerings vnto the god of Israel, twelve bullockes for al Israel: namely six rams, seuentye and seven lammes, and twelve goates for a spinnel offering, also the burnt-offering of the Lorde. And they deliuered the kynges commynon vnto the kynges officers, and to the captaynes on this side the water. And they sauanced the people, and the house of God.

The ix. Chapter.

Elias complaineth on the people, that had turned themselves from God and entered into the gentiles.

When al thys was performed, the rulers came to me and said: the people of Israel & the priests and Leuites are not leuered from the nacjons in the landes, as touchyng their abominacions namely of the Canaanites, Bethites, Jebusites, Jebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egyptians & Amorites. * For they haue taken theyr daughters, and their sonnes, and haue myxt the holy seede with the nacjons of the landes: and moreover the had of the pynces and rulers hath ben pynepal in thys trespass. * When I herd thys, I tare my clothes and my raymente, and pluckt of the herte of my head & of my beard, and sat mournyng. The reforted vnto me al such as feared the word of the Lord god of Israel, because of the grete transgression. And I sat mournyng til the euening sacrifice. And about the euening sacrifice, I rose vp from my heuines, and rent my clothes and my raymente, and felle vpon my knees, and spred out my handes vnto the Lord my God, and sayd: O Lord God, I am a wamed, and dare not lyft vp mine eyes to the my god: for our wickednesses are growen ouer our head, and oure trespasses are wared grete vnto the heauen: Sithes the tyme of our fathers, haue we bene in grete trespass vnto this day, and because of oure wickednesse haue we and oure kynges bene gauen vp into the hand of the kyngs of the nacjons, into the swerde, into bondage, into spyle, and into confusion of face, as it is come to passe thys day.

But nowe a litle and I shal praye graciously nes is come from the Lord our God, so that some of vs are escaped, that he maye geue vs a nagle in vrs holpe place, that our god maye open our eyes, and geue vs a litle lyf in our bondage, for we are bounde men, and our God hath not forsaken vs in oure bondage, but hath enclined mercy vnto vs in the syght of the kyng of Persia, that he shuld geue vs lyf, & sauance the house of our God, and build vp the desolate places thereof, and to geue vs an hedge in Iuda and Iherusalem. And now o our god, what shal we say after this? for we haue forsaken thy commandementes, which thou haste commanded by thy seruantes the prophets, & sayd: The land vnto which ye go to possesse, is vnclane thorow the fylthynesse of the people of the landes, by their abhominacions wherewith they haue fylled it with vnclannes on euery side. Therefore ye shall not geue your daughters to their sonnes, and their daughters shall ye not take vnto your sonnes, and seeke not their peace & welth for euer, that ye maye be strong & enioy the good in the lande, and that ye & your child:en maye haue the inheritance of it for euermore. And after all thys is come vnto vs because of our euill dedes and grete trespass, that our God hath spared our wickednesses, & hath geuen vs a deliuerance as it is come to passe thys day.

And neuerthelesse we haue turned backe and haue let go our commandementes, to make contracte with the people of these abhominacions. When all this was performed, the rulers came to me and said: the people of Israel & the priests and Leuites are not severed from the nations in the land, as touching their abominations, namely of the Canaanites, Hittites, Jebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egyptians & Amorites. * For they have taken their daughters, and their sonnes, and have mixed the holy seed with the nations of the land: and moreover the heads of the princes and rulers have been principal in this trespass. * When I heard this, I ate my clothes and my raiment, and plucked of the herte of my head & of my beard, and sat mourning. And now O our god, what shall we say after this? for we haue forsaken thy commandmentes, which thou hast commanded by thy seruantes the prophets, & sayd: The land unto which ye go to possesse, is vnclane thorow the filthynesse of the people of the land, by their abominacions wherewith they haue filled it with vnclannes on euery side. Therefore ye shall not geue your daughters to their sonnes, and their daughters shall ye not take unto your sonnes, and seeke not their peace & welth for euer, that ye maye be strong & enjoy the good in the land, and that ye & your children maye haue the inheritance of it for euermore. And after all this is come vnto us because of our euill dedes and great trespass, that our God hath spared our wickednesses, & hath geuen us a deliverance as it is come to passe this day.

And neuertheless we haue turned backe and haue let go our commandmentes, to make contracts with the people of these abominacions. O Lord God of Israel thou art righteous, for we remayne yet escaped, as it is this day. Behold in thy presence are we in our trespass, for because of it there is no standing before thee.

The ii. Chapter.

After Achemo had receyved letters of Artaxerxes, he cometh to Jerusalem, and builded the walles.

In the moneth of Nisan in the xx. yere of kyng Artaxerxes when the wyne stode before him, I toke vp the wyne and gaue it vnto the kyng, and I was beuoye in his presence. Then sayed the kyng vnto me: why lookest thou so sadlye? Thou art not sycke, thy is not wretched cause, but there is somewhat not well in thyne herte. And I was sore afrayd and said vnto the kyng: God saue the kynges lyfe for euer, wuld I not loke sadlye? the carye of my fathers but pall lyeth wast; and the gates therof are consumed with fire. The said the king to me: what is thy request? then made I my prayer to the God of heauen, and sayd vnto the kyng: if it please the kyng, and if thy seruante be fauoured in thy sight: I beseeche the send me into Iudah, vnto the city of my fathers burial, that I may buyld it. And the king said vnto me and also þ quene that sat by him: how longe shal thy iourney continue, and when wilt thou come agayne? And it pleased the kyng to send me, and I set him a tyme, and sayed vnto the king: if it please þ king, let him grue me letters to þ captaines beyond the water, that they may couey me ouer, til I come into Iuda: & letters vnto Asaph keeper of þ kynges wood, þ he may grue me wood for beames to þ gates of þ temple, for þ towres of the house, for the wallis of the citie, and for the house wher I shal enter into.

And the kyng gaue me accordyng to the good hand of God vpon me. And when I came to the capitaynes beyond the trare I deliuered them the kynges letters. And the kyng had sent captaines and horse men with me. But when Sanabalar the Horonite, and Tobiah the seruant of the Ammonites heard this, it greued the soze that ther was come a man which sought the welch of the chyldren of Israel. And when I came to Jerusalem, and had bene there iii. dayes, I gat me vp in the nyght seyd, & a few men with me: for I tolde no manne what God hadde gruen me in mine herte to do at Jerusalem, and ther was not one brast with me, saue þ I rode vpon. And I rode by nyght to the balep gate before the dragon wel, and to the donge gate, and considered the walles of Jerusalem that wer broken downe, and the gates therof consumed with the fyre. And I went ouer vnto the welgate and to the kynges condite and ther was no towne for my beast, that it coude go vnder me. Then went I on in the nyght by the brake side, and considered the wall, and turned backe & came home agayn to þ balep gate. And the rulers knew not wherby I went or what I dyd, for he ther to had I not told the Jewes and the priests, the counsellors and the rulers and the other that laboured in the brooke. And I sayd vnto them: ye se the my lery that we are in: Jerusalem lieth wast, and the gates therof are brent with fire, come let vs build vpon the wals of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproch. And I told the of the good hand of my God, which was vpon me: and the kynges wordes that he had spok vnto me. And they said: then let vs arise & build, & their hands wer strengthed to good. But when Sanabalar the Horonite, and Tobiah the seruant of the Ammonites, and the Arabian heard this, they laughed vs to scoyne, and despised vs, & said: what is this that ye do? wyl ye sal a way agayn to the king? Then answered I the, & sayd: the god of heauen it is þ causeth vs to prosper: and we be his seruantes. Let vs arise & build. As for you, ye haue no porcepon nor syght, nor remembrance in Jerusalem.

The iii. Chapter.

The numbre of them that builded the wallis.

And Eliashib the brygh priest gat hym vp in his bierch the priestes, & buylded the shepegate. They repaired it, & set vp þ dores of it: eul vnto þ tower of Hananeel. Next vnto him buylded þ m of Jerico, and beside him builded Sachur the son of Amri. But the shepegate dyd the chyldre of Asanah buyld, they couered it and set on the doores lockes and barres of it. Next vnto hym buylded Marymoth, the sonne of Uriah, the sonne, Hakoz. Next vnto hym buylded Mosolam the sonne of Barachiah the sonne of Assefaheeli. Next vnto hym buylded zadoe the sonne of Baana. Next vnto hym buylded they of Thekua. But they: greate meene put not their neckes to the seruice of their lord.

B The old gate buylded Notada the sonne of Paseah, and Mosolam the sonne of Besodiah, they couered it, and set on the doores lockes, and barres. Next vnto them buylded Galatiah of Babaon, and Fadon of Azetano, men of Babaon, and of Azapha for the seate of the capteyne on thys syde the water. Next vnto hym buylded Aspell the sonne of Barachiah the goldsmith. Next to him buylded Hananiah the Apotecaries sonne, and they repayred Ierusalem vnto the broade walle. Next vnto hym buylded Rappah the sonne of But the ruler of the halfe quarter of Ierusalem. Next vnto him buylded Bedaiab the sonne of Haremah ouer againe his house. Next vnto hym buylded Hatus the sonne of Basaboniah. But Melchiah the sonne of Barim, and Basab the sonne of Bahath Asgab buylded the other ppeece, & the towre besyde the forname. Next vnto hym buylded Selum the sonne of Salobes the ruler of the halfe quarter of Ierusalem, and his doughbters.

The palei gate buylded Hanun, and the csterins of zanob. They buylded it, and set on the doores, lockes, & barres, and a thousand cubytes on the wal, vnto donge gate. But donge gate buylded Melchiah the sonne of Recuah the ruler of the fourth part of the vyueparades: he buylded it, and sette on the doores, lockes and bars therof. But the wal gate buylded Selum the sonne of Chobasab. the ruler of the fourth part of Masphab. He buylded it, and couered it, and set on the doores, lockes, & barres, & the wall vnto the poole of Siloah by the kynges garden vnto the keys that go downe from the cty of Dauid. After him buylded Nehemias the sonne of Azbok, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Bethzur, vnto the other side ouer against the sepulchres of Dauid, & the poole Alata, and vnto the house of the myghty.

After him buylded the Leuytes, Iachum the sonne of Ban. Next vnto hym buylded Basabiah the ruler of the halfe quarter of Beilab in his quarter. After hym buylded their brethren, Banat the sonne of Hanabad, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Beilab. After hym buylded Ezer the sonne of Josua, the ruler of Masphab, the other ppeece hard ouer against the barnes corner. After him buylded Baruch the sonne of Zabab the other ppeece worshippfully and costly fro the corner vnto the doore of the house of Eliaab the hygh priest. After him buylded Martimah the sonne of Uriah, the sonne of Baros the other ppeece from the doore of the house of Eliaab, euē as longe as the house of Eliaab extended. After him buylded the priestes the men of the country. After him buylded Beniamin & Basab ouer against the house. After them Asariah the sonne of Maasiah, the sonne of Ananiah, next vnto hys house. After him buylded Benut the sonne of Hanabad, the other ppeece fro the house of Asaph, vnto the turnynge, and vnto the corner. After hym buylded Ishael the sonne of Asat ouer against the corner, and the hye towre, which lieth cutt ouer from the kynges house, besyde the court of the pylō. After him Ishabaiab the sonne of Baros (as for the Merbimmes they dwelte in Ophell, vnto the water gate, toward the East wher the towre lieth oute.) After him buylded they of Thekua the other ppeece ouer against the grete towre & lieth outward, & vnto the wal of Ophel. 11. pa. xlii. c

But from hoise gate forth buylded the pylles, euery one ouer against hys house. After them buylded zadocke the sonne of Emer ouer against hys house. After hym buylded Semeiah the sonne of Sechanpasher of East gate. After hym buylded Hananab sonne of Selemiah, and Hanan son of zalaph the spyt, the other ppeece. After hym buylded Mosolam the sonne of Barachiah ouer against hys treasure. After hym buylded Melchiah the goldsmith the sonne, vnto the house of the Merbimmes, & of the merchantes ouer against the countsell gate, and to the parloure in the corner. And betwene the parloure of the corner vnto the wepe gate buylded the goldsmiths and the marchauntes.

The.iii. Chapter.

The building of Ierusalem is hindered and let, but the Jewes build it being redy harneised lest their enemies shuld invade them.

V When Sanabalar heard that we builded the wal, he was wroth, and toke greate indignacion, and mocked the Jewes, and sayde before hys brethren and the hoise of Samaria: what do the meake Jewes? shal they be thus suffred? shal they offer? shal they persourne it in one daye? Shall they make the stones whole agayne that are brought to duste and brente? And Tobas the Ammonite beside hym sayde: let them buyde on, if a fore govp he shall breake downe they: stonpe wall. Heare thou our God how we are despyled, turn they: shame vpon they: owne heade, that thou mayst geue them ouer into despylling in the lande of they: captiuyte. Count not they: wychedarfe, and put not oute they: spune from thy presence: for they haue prouoked the buylders. Yet buylded we the walle, and ioynded it hole together vnto the halfe beggthe. And the people were well mynded to laboure. But when Sanabalar and Tobas, and the Arabians, and Ammonytes, and Aldodytes hearde that the walles of Ierusalem were made vp, and that they had begonne to stoppe by the gappes, they were betwixt word, and conspired all together to come and fight against Jerusalem, and to make an hynderaunce therein. Neuerthelesse we made our prayer vnto oure God, and sette watchmen vpon the walles, day and nyght ouer agaynste them. And Iuda sayde: the strength of the betters is to feble, and ther is to much dust, we are not habile to builde by the wal. And our aduersaries thought: they shal not knowe nei: bet se, tyme come in the myddes amonge them, and sle them a hynder the worke. But when the Jewes that dwelt besyde them that came out of all the places where they dwelt about vs had told vs as good as .x. times, the set I the people after they knykedes with their sweardes, speares, and bowes benethe in the low places behynde the walles, and so had and gat me vp, and said vnto the chiefe me and rulers, and to the other people: be not ye a fraide of the, * I thinke of the great Lord, whiche oughte to be feared, and fight for your brethren, sonnes, daughters, wy ues, and houses. Neuerthelesse when our enemies heard that we had gotten word of it, God brought theyr counsel to nought, and we turned all agayn to the wall every one vnto his labour. And from that tyme forth it came to passe, that the halfe parte of the ponge men dyd the labour, and the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyl des bowes, and breaste plates: and the rulers stode behynde al the house of Iuda, which builde on the walles, and bare bur thens frome those that laded them. With one hand dyd they worke and, with the o ther held they their weapon. And euery one that buylde, hadde his swearde by by his syde, and so buylde they, and the trompetters stode besyde me. And I sayde vnto the pryncypall men and rulers, and to the other people: the worke is great and large, and we are deuised vpon the walles, one farte frō an other. Take in what place nowe ye heare the noyse of the trompette, resorte ye thither vnto vs. Oure God shal fpyghte for vs, and we wil be labouryng in the worke. And the halfe parte of the helde the speares from the morninge syng, till the sers came forth. And at the same tyme sayed I vnto the people: euery one abyde with his seruante at Jerusalem, that in the nyght season, we may geue attendance to the watche, and to labour on the daye tyme. Surely I and my brethren and my seruantes, and the man of the watch behynd me, we put neuer of our clothes, so muche as to walsh oure selues.

The v. Chapter.

The people are pered with hunger. A the mraz forbydoeth vs. We requyre not the supplye of a captayn.

And ther arose a great complainte of the people and of theyr wyues a gaynste theyr brethren the Jewes.

And there were some that sayd: our sonnes and daughters are to manpe, lette vs take coyne for them and eate, that we may spue.
Some sayde: let vs set out landes & vyne yardes and houses to pledge, and take vp coyne in the berth. But some sayd: lette vs boiowe money of the kynges trespure for oure landes and vyneyards. Now are our brethrens bodies as our owne bodies, and their chyldre as our chyldre: els shoulde we subdue our sonnes & daughters to bondage, and some of our daughters are subdued al redy, & no strength is ther in our hands, & o ther men shal haue our landes & vineyards.

But when I hearde theyr complaynte and suche wordes, it dyspleased me sore, & I reuolued so in my mind, that I rebuked the heads and rulers, and said vnto them: Deu rill. e
* wyl ye requyre vsurpe one of another? vsurpe.
And I broughte a great congregacion a gaynste them, and saide vnto them: we (af ter oure baptyse) haue bought oure bre thren the Jewes, whych were solde to Sa nities. And wyl ye sel your brethren, whch we haue bought vnto vs? Then held they theyr peace, and coude fynde nothyng to answer.

And I sayde: It is not good that ye do.
Dughe ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the heathen our enemies? I and my brethren, and my seruantes haue lent them mony and coyne, but as for vsurpe, lette vs leaue it.

Wherfore this day, se ye restore them theyr landes agayne, theyr vyneyards, oile gar dens, and houses, yea, the hundred part of the mony, of the coyne, wyne, and oyle, that ye haue won of them. Then saide they: we wyl restore them agayne, and wyl requyre nothyng of them, and wyl do as thou hast spoken. And I called the prestes, and toke an othe of them, that they shoulde do so.

And I toke my lap and sayde: God shake out every man after the same maner from his house and labour, that may at any tyme not thys word: euen thus be he shaken out and wyde. And al the congregacion sayd, Amen: and praysed the Lord. And the peo ple dyd so. And from the tyme that it was committed vnto me to be a captaine in the lande of Iuda, namelye from the twen tyeth yere vnto the two and thirtieth yere of kyng Artaxerxes (that is thirteue yere)
I & my brethren dyd not eate suche suste nance as was geuen to a captaine. For the old captaynes that were before me, hadde bene chargeable vnto the people, and had taken of them bread and wyne, and four tye pyeles of syluer: yea and theyr seruants hadde oppressed the people. But so dyd not I, and that because of the feare of God.
I laboured also in the woorkes vpon the walles, and bought no lande. And al my ser uantes came thither together vnto the worke. Moreover there were at my table an hundred and fiftie of the Jewes and rulers.

enlers, whych came vnto me from the p^{ar}ntes that are about vs, and was prepared me dayly an oxe, and fyre chosen shepe and bydes, & euer once in ten daies a great quantyty of wyne. Yet requyred not I the lpyng of a captayn, for the bondage was greuous vnto the people, * I thynke vpon me God vnto the best, accordyng to al that I haue done for thys people.

The. vi. Chapter.

The building is yet agayne binyed and lette.

And when Sanabalat, Tobpab, and Beseche Arabian, & the othre of our enemies herd that I had builded the wal, and that ther wer no mo byekers ther in (howebeit at the same tyme I had not haged p^{er} doores vpp^{er} p^{er} gates) Sanabalat and Beseche sent vnto me, sayinge: come & let vs meete togither in the villages vpon the plaine of the citey Dno. Neuerthelesse they thought to do me euill: Nor wyl I stande I sent messengers vnto them sayinge: I haue a great busynes to doo, I can not come downe. The worke should stande stille if I were sick and came downe to you. Howebeit they sent vnto me as good as four tymes after p^{er} same maner. And I gaue the same answer. Then ser Sanabalat his seruaut vnto me the fyfthe tyme, with an opyletter in his had, wherein was twypersu: it was told p^{er} Heathen, & Beseche had sayd it, that p^{er} and the Jewes thynke to rebel: for the whych cause thou buildest the wal, and wilt be theyr kynge in these matters, and haue ordeyned the p^{ro}p^{er}hetes to preache of the at Ierusalem, and to say he is kynge of Iuda. Howe shall thys come to p^{er} kynge eares: come now therfore, & let vs take our colisell togither. Neuerthelesse I sent vnto hym, sayinge: there is no such thing done as thou sayest: thou haste sayned it oute of thine hearte. For they were al mynded to make vs a scape, and thoughte: they shall wythdrawe theyr handes from the worke, that they shal not laboure. Howebeit I strenghten my hand the more. And I came vnto the house of Semerab the sonne of Delarab the sonne of Mehetabel, and he had sette him self wyllyn, & sayd: let vs come togyther into the house of God, euen into the myddes of p^{er} temple, & shut the doores of p^{er} temple: for they wyl come to set the, yea, euen in the nyght wyl they come to put the to deathe. But I sayd: should any such man as I be? Who is that beyng as I am, that wyl go into the temple to saue hym self? I will not go in. For I perceyued that God had not sente hym: Yet spake the p^{ro}p^{er}hetes vpon me, neuertheles Tobpas & Sanabalat had byred hym for money. Therfore toke he the moneye, that through fear I shuld do so, & sin, that they myght haue an euill report of me, to blasfeme me. My God thynke thou vpon Tobias and Sanabalat, accordyng vnto these theyr workes, and of the p^{ro}p^{er}het Roabiah, and of the othre p^{ro}p^{er}hetes, that wold haue put me in feare. And the walle was fynished on the fyue and twenty daie of the moneth Elul, in two and fiftie daies. And when all our enemyes herde thereof, all the Heathen that were about vs, were a scape, and theyr courage fayled the, for they perceyued this their worke came of God. And at the same tyme were ther many of the chyse of Iuda, whose letters wente vnto Tobpas, and from Tobpas vnto them (for ther were many in Iuda that were sworen vnto him: for he was p^{er} sonne in law of Seebanyab, the sonne of Atah, & hys sonne Iohanan hadde the daughter of Mosolam the sonne of Barachab, & they spake good of him before me, and told hym my wordes) and Tobpas sente letters, to put me in feare.

The. vii. Chapter.

After the walle once buylded the watch is appointed. They that returned from the captivity are numbred.

Vhen we had buylded the wal I haged on the doores, and the porters, singers, and Leuites were appoynted. And I commaunded my brot^{er} Ver Hananay, & Hananiab p^{er} ruler of p^{er} palace at Ierusalem (for he was a saythful man, & feared God more then did many othre.) And I sayd vnto them: see not the gates of Ierusalem be opened tyll the sunne be hote. And whyle they are yet standyng in the watche the doores shal be shut & barred. And ther were certayne citizins of Ierusalem appoynted to be watchmen, euerp one in his watche, and about his house. And the citey was large of towne & great, but the people were fewe therein, and the houses were not buylded.

And my God bid put in my herte that I gathered togither the p^{ri}ncypal men, and people to number them, and I founde a registryer of the number of them, whych came by a fore out of the captivity: and soold write therein: * these are p^{er} sonnes of the land p^{er} went by from the captivity of the carryng awaye (whom Nabuchodonosor the King of Babylon hadde broughte awaye) and came agayne to Ierusalem and Iuda, & verpe one vnto hys citey, whych came wyth zoobabell, Iesua, Rehemias, Asarrah, Baamiah, Nabamant, Gardocher, Beelsam, Gespharab, Begual, Radum, and Baanah.

Thys is the nuber of the men of the people of Irael. The chyldren of Iharos wer two thousande, an hundred and two & senty: the chyldren of Saphatpab, three hundred and two and seuenty: the chyldren of Atah, sixe hundred and two and fyfety: the chyldren of Ihabath Moab, among p^{er} chyldren of Iesua, and Joab, two thousande, eyght hundred and eyghtene: the chyldren of Elom, a thousand, two hundred & fourte and fyfety: the chyldren of Iachua, eyght hundred and fyue and fourty, the chyldren of Iachai, seven hundred and thre score: the Moses, which the Lorde commaunded to Israel. And Esdras the preste broughte the lawe before the congregation, both of men and women, and of al that coulde vnderstande it, vpon the firste daye of the seventh moneth, and read therein in þe strete that is before the water gate from þe morning vntill the none daye before menne and women, and such as coulde vnderstand it: and the eares of all the people were enclined vnto the boke of the lawe. And Esdras the Scribe stode vpon an hyghe pulpit of woode, whiche they hadde made for the preachinge, and besyde hym stode Sathiah, Sema, Ananiah, Uthai, Belkiah, and Qaasiah on his righte hande: and on his left hand stode Ithabai, Misael, Melchiah, Basum, Balesabadanah, Zacharye and Bnosolam.

And Esdras opened the boke before all the people, for he stode aboue al the people, And when he opened it, all the people stode vp. And Esdras praysted the Lorde þe grete God. And all the people answered: Amen, Amen, wth thei handes vppre, and bowed them selues, and worshipped the Lorde wth thei faces to the grounde. And Iesua, Bani, Serabiah, Tamin, Acuba, Sebatiah, Bodaiah, Qiasai, Celita, Azariah, Josabab, Hanan, Ithabai, and the Leuites caused the people to geue hede vnto þe law, and the people stode in thei place. And they red in the boke of the lawe of God distinctely and plainely, so that men vnderstode the thing that was red. And Nehemias which is Balthasrah and Esdras the preste and the Scribe, and the Leuites that caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: this daye is holpe vnto the Lorde pour God: þe not ye some therefore, and weepe not, for all the people wepte when they heard the wordes of the lawe.

Therefore sayde he vnto them: god poue wape, and eate the fatte, and dryncke the swete, and sende part vnto them also that haue not prepared them selues, for this daye is holpe vnto oure Lorde, be not poue some therefore: for the wyse of the Lorde is pour strengthe. And the Leuites billed the people, and sayde: houlde pour peace, for the daye is holpe, be not poue selues. And all the people went thei way to eate and dryncke, and sente parte vnto other, and to make grete mythe, because they had vnderstande the wordes that were declared vnto them.

And on the nexte daye assembled the chiefe fathers amonge all the people, and the prestes and Leuits, vnto Esdras the Scribe, that he shoulde teache them the wordes of the lawe.

And they founde wyrtten in the lawe howe the Lorde hadde commaunded by Moses, that the chylidren of Israel shulde dwel in bootes in the feast of the seventh moneth. And so they caused it to be declared and proclaymed, in al thei cyties, and at Jerusalem, saying: go vp vnto þe most, and fetch the Olue braunches, þe olue braunches, þe olue braunches, þe olue braunches, and braunches of thicke trees, to make bootes, as it is wyrtten.

And the people wente vp and sette, and made them bootes, euery one vpon the rofe of his house, and in thei courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God, and in the strete by the water gate, and in þe strete by the gate Ephraim. And all the congregation of thei that were come agayne oute of captiuitie, made bootes, and dwelte therein: For sythen the time of Josua the sonne of Nun vnto this daye, hadde not the chylidren of Israel doone so, and there was verie grete gladnesse. And euery day from the firste daye vnto the laste, redde he in the booke of the lawe of God. And seven dayes helde they the feaste, and on the eighth daye they made a gathering, accordyng to the manner.

The. ix. Chapter.

The people repert and forsake thei straunge wives. Esdras reciteth þe benedictio of God and the synnes of the people.

In the foure and twenty daye of this moneth, came þe chylidren of Israel together wth fastyng and sacke clothes, and earthe vpon them, and separated the seede of Israel from all the straunge chylidren, and stode and knowleged thei synnes, and the wickednesse of thei fathers, and stode vp in thei place, and red in the boke of the lawe of the Lorde thei God, foure tymes on the daye, and they knowleged, and worshipped the Lorde thei God. And the Leuites stode on hyghe, namely Iesua, Bani, Cadmiel, Sabariah, Buni, Serabiah, Bani and Chanani, and cryed loude vnto the Lorde thei God. And the Leuites, Iesua, Cadmiel, Bani, Sabariah, Serabiah, Bodaiah, Sebatiah, Ithabai, said: stand vp, prayse the Lorde pour God for ever: and let thankes be geuen vnto the name of thy glorie, which excelleth al thankesgeuing and praise, Lorde, thou alone haste made heauen, and the heauen of all heuens, wth all thei hoolle, the earth, and all that is therein: the sea, and all that is therein, thou geuest life vnto all, and the host of heauen bowe them selues vnto the.

Thou arte the Lorde God, that haste chosen Abram, and broughtest hym out of Chaldea, and calledst hym Abram, and foundest his hearte faptheful before the, and madest a couenaunte with hym to geue vnto his seede the land of the Canaanites, Bethites, Amouites, Iebusites, Jebusites, and Bergesites, and hast made good thy wordes: for thou art righteous, and haste consydered the myserye of oure fathers in Egypte, and heard thei complaynt by the redde sea, and shewed to hens and wonders vpon pharaon, and on all holde, therefore are we in bondage this day: even in the land that thou gavest us to our fathers too empty the fruites and goodes thereof, behold there are we bond men. And greates is the increase of it unto the dayes, whome thou hast sette over us, because of our synnes, and they have dominion over our bodies and catel, and we are in great trouble. Upon all this therefore we make a sure covenante, and write it, and sette our signes, Leuytes and Priestes seale it.

The.ii. Chapter.

The names of them that sealed the covenante betweene God and the people.

These sealers were: Nehemias (that is Bathursatha) the sonne of Bachi-ah, & zedekiah, Sataiah, Achariah, Jerempe, Phasbur, Amariah, Malchiah, Baccus, Sebaniah, Galluche, Barum, Meremoth, Obadiah, Daniel, Jenthon, Baruch, Josollam, Abpah, Aiamun, Aaasiah, Felgai, and Semeiah: these are priestes. The Leuytes were, Jesua the sonne of Azariah, Benui, amonge the chyldren of Banadab, and Cadmiel. And they brethren, Sechaniah, Bodiah, Celita, Shalaiah, Hanan, Micha, Isahob, Basabiah, Sachur, Serubiah, Sabanah, Bodiah, Bani and Banu. The heades of the people were: Shares, Shath, Moab, Elam, Rathua, Bani, Boni, Algad, Bebai, Adoniah, Begoai, Adin, Ater, Ezechias, Asur, Bodiah, Basum, Bezai, Baruph, Anathoth, Rebai, Agaphas, Josollam, Besir, Mesefabel, Sadoc, Jaddua, Shalathia, Bani, Ananiah, Sosea, Bananiah, Basub, Balohes, Shaleha, Sobek, Akhi, Balebna, Aaasia, Ahiah, Hanan, Anan, Galluch, Barum, and Baanah.

And the other people, the priestes, Leuytes, porters, singers, Aethinims, and all they that had severed them selves from the people in the lands unto the lawe of God, with theyr wiues, sonnes and daughters, as many as could understand it, and theyr Lordes that hadde rule of them receiued it for theyr brethren.

* And they came tof were, and to bynde them selves with an oth to walke in gods lawe, whiche was geuen by Moyses & seruante of God, that they wolde kepe and do accordynge unto all the commaundementes, iudgementes, and statutes of the Lorde our God: and that we wolde not geue our Daughters unto the people in the Lande, neyther take theyr Daughters for our Sonnes. And if the people of the Lande broughte ware on the Sabbath, and all maner of vitails to sel, that we wold not take it of them on the Sabbath and on the holpe dayes. * And that we wolde lette the seu-nth yeare be free concernynge all manner of charge.

And we decreed a statute upon our selues, to geue partly the.iii. parte of a sicke to the ministration in the house of our God, namely to the Hewbreed, to the daily meat offerynge, to the daily burnt offering of the Sabbathes, of the newe mones, and feast dayes, and to the thynges that were sanc-tyfied, and to the Synne offerynge, to recoile Israel withal, and to all the busines in the house of our God.

And we cast the lot amonge the priestes, Leuytes, and the people, for offering of the woode to be brought into the house of our God from pere to pere, after the houses of our fathers, that it myghte be brente at tymes appointed upon the altar of the Lord our God, as it is written in the lawe: and pearly to bynne the syn boine of our land and the syn boine of our fruytes of all trees, peare by peare, unto the house of the Lord: and the syn boine of our sonnes, and of our cattell, as it is written in the lawe: and the syn boine of our Oren and of our Shepe, that we shuld bynne all this to the house of our God, unto the Priestes that mynyster unto the house of our God: and that we shoulde bynne the syn boine of our meates, and of our drynckes, and the fruites of all maner trees, of wyne also and of ople, unto the priestes to the chestes of the house of our God. And the tithes of our lande unto the Leuytes, that the Leuytes myghte have the tithes in all the ctytes of our ministration.

And the pryeste the sonne of Aaron shal with the Leuytes have also of the tithes of the Leuytes, so that the Leuytes shal bynne by the tithes of theyr tithes unto the house of our God, to the chest in the treasure house. For the chyldrene of Israel and the chyldrene of Leui shal bynne by the synne fruites of the corne, wyne and ople unto the chestes. And there shal be the vessels of the Sanctuarie, and the Priestes that mynyster, and the porters and singers, that we forsake not the house of our God.

The.iii. Chapter.

Who dwelled in Jerusalem after it was builded, and with in the cities of Juda.

And the rulers of the people, dwelte at Jerusalem. But the other people caste lottes therfore, so that amonge ten one parte wente to Jerusalem into the holy city to dwel, and nine partes in the ctytes. And the people thanked al the menne that wer willynge to dwel in Jerusalem.

These are the heades of the lande that dwelte in Jerusalem, and in the ctytes of Juda. And euerye one dwelte in hys possession, in theyr cities of Israel, the priestes Leuytes, the Aethinims, and the chyldren of Salomons seruautes. And at Jerusalem dwelt certayne of the chyldren of Juda and of Beniamin.

And Adaiyah the sonne of Jeroham, the sonne of Malaluel, the sonne of Amazi, the sonne of Zacharye, the sonne of Phasbur, the sonne of Meschiah and hys brethren, chyefe among the fathers: of whome there wer two hundred and two and fourty. And Amasai the son of Asaraell, the sonne of Ahafai, the sonne of Mesolamoth, the sonne of Emei, and hys brethren were halpaunte menne, of whome there were an hundred and epyghte and twenty. And thepy ouerscar was Zadoell the sonne of Bagbolim.

¶ Of the Leuites: Semeiah the sonne of Basub, the sonne of Alerikam, the sonne of Basabiah, the sonne of Boni: and Sabathai, and Josabad of the chief of the Leuites, in the outward busines of þ house of God. And Mathaniah the sonne of Micha, the sonne of Zabdi, the sonne of Asaph, whiche was the pryncypall too begynne the thankesgeuynge vnto praper. And Bachbukiah the seconde amonge hys brethren, and Abda the sonne of Samua, the sonne of Balal, the sonne of Jduthun. All the Leuites in the holpe cypre were. ii. C. lxxxviii. And the porters Acub and Galmō, and thepy brethren that kepte the portes, were an hundred seuentye and two. The rest of Israel, the priestes and Leuites, wer in al the cities of Juda, euery one in his inheritaunce. And the Netimms dwelte in Bethphel: and ziha and Baspha belonged vnto the Netimms. The ouerscar of the Leuites at Jerusalem, was Ussi the son of Baam, the son of Basabia, the son of Mathania, the sonne of Micha.

ters concernynge the people and thepy villages, thowwe oute all thepy regions. And the chyldren of Juda that were wythoute the townes of thepy lande, dwelte some at Barath Arbe, and in the villages thereof: and at Dibon, and in the villages thereof: and at Cabzeel, and in the villages thereof, and at Jesua, Molada, Bethphalet, Bazeruall, Bersabe and thepy villages: and at Sikelag, and Moconah, and in their villages: And at Entemon, Sarah, Merimuth zonoah, Dollam and in thepy villages. The. xii. Chapter.

¶ The priestes and Leuites which came with zorobabell to Jerusalem, are numbred and the wallis dedicate.

These are the priestes and Leuites þ went vp with zorobabell the sonne of Salathiel and wyth Jesua: Saraiyah, Jeremi, Edoas, Amariah, Mesuch, Batus Sechaniah, Rehum, Merimoth, Ado, Bethoi, Abiah, Jamin, Maadia, Belga, Semariah, Jaiorib, Jdaia, Salu, Amok, Belkia, and Jdaiah, these were the heades amonge the priestes and thepy brethren in the tyme of Jesua. The Leuites wer these: Jesua, Benui, Cadmiel, Sarabiah, Juba and Machaniah, ouer the Offyce of thankesgeuynge, thepy and thepy brethren: Babukiah and Umi and their brethren, were aboute them in the watches.

Jesua begatte Joakim. Joakim begat Eliasib, Eliasib begatte Joiada. Joiada begat Jonathan. Jonathan begat Jadaua. And in the tyme of Joakym wer these the chief fathers amonge the priestes: vnder Saraiyah, Maariah, vnder Jeremie, Hananiah: vnder Edoas, Mesolom: vnder Amariah, Fanan: vnder Amozah, Joana: vnder Mesico, Jonathan: vnder Sebaniah, Joseph: vnder Barim, Edna: vnder Maarioth, Belcar: vnder Adia, zachan: vnder Bethon, Mesolam: vnder Abia, zechu: vnder Amiamun & Maadia, Belsai: vnder Belga, Samua: vnder Semeiah, Jonathan: vnder Joiarib, Mathanai: vnder Jadaiah, Ussi: vnder Selai, Belai: vnder Amok, Eber: vnder Belkia, Basabiah: vnder Jadaiah, Rathanaeli.

And in the tyme of Eliasib, Joiada, Jonathan and Jadaua, were the chiefe fathers amonge the Leuites, and the priestes witten vnder the raigne of Darius the Persian. The chyldren of Leui the pryncypal fathers were wrytten in the Chronicles, vntyll the tyme of Jonathan the sonne of E-

Elisab. And these were the chief among the Levites, Safabiah, Serubiah and Jesua the sonne of Cadmeil, and they brethren oueragapnst them, to geue prayse & thankes accordinge as Dauid the man of God had ordeined it, one watche ouer agapnst another: Athania, Balbukiah, Obadi-ah, Mosolam, Talmon, and Acub wer porters in the watch at the thresoldes of the gates. These were in the time of Joakym the sonne of Jesua the son of Josedec and in the time of Nehemias the capitaine and of the priest Esdras the scribe.

D And in the dedication of the wal at Jerusalem, were the Leuites soughte out of al they places, that they might be brought to Jerusalem, to kepe the dedycation and gladnesse, wpth thankesgeupng, with spyngge, wpth tymbales psalteries and harpes, And the chyldrene of the syngers gathered them selues together from the plain countrey aboute Jerusalem, and from the byllages of Bethophathi, and from the house of Galgall, and oute of the fieldes of Beba and Asmaueth: for the syngers hadde buylded them byllages aboute Jerusalem. And the pnestes and Leuites purified them selues, and clensted the people, the gates and the wall.

E And I caused the princes of Juda to go vp upon the wall, and appointed two great quiers of thankesgeunge, whiche wente on the right hande of the wall toward the Donge gate, and after hym wente Josiah, and halfe of the princes of Juda, and Asaria, Esdras, Mosolam, Juda, Ben Jamin, Semeiah and Jeremy: and certain of the wyppeltes chyldrene wpth trompettes, namelpe Zacharye the sonne of Jonathan the sonne of Semeiah, the sonne of Athanpah the sonne of Michajah, the sonne of Jecur, the sonne of Asaph, and his brethren Semeiah, Asarael, Melalai, Balalai, Maai, Nathanaell and Juda, and Hanani, w the musycall instrumentes of Dauid, the manne of God.

And Esdras the scribe before the, toward the Welgate, and they wēt vp ouer agapnst them upon the steps of the cpye of Dauid at the going vp of the wall to the house of Dauid, vnto the Watergate eastwarde.

A The other queer of thankes geupnge wente ouer agapnst them, and I after the and the halfe parte of the people upon the walle, towarde Fornacegate bpward, vnto the brode wal, and to the gate of Ephraim, and to oldgate, and to the fishgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, and to the tower of Sheah, vntil shepegate.

And in the pascogate stode they still and so stode the two queres of thankesgeuing of the house of God, and I the half of the rulers with me, & the pnestes, namelpe Eliakim, Maasiah, Miniamin, Michajah, Eleonai, Zachary, Hananiah with trompettes, and Maasiah, Semeiah, Eleasat, Ursi, Johana, Melchiah, Elam and Ser.

And the syngers sang loude, and Jezraia was the ouerfect.

And the same daye were there great sacrifices offered, and they reioised: for God had geuen them greates gladnes, so þ both the wiues and the chyldren wer ioyful, and the mirth of Jerusalem was heard far of. At the same tyme were me appoynted ouer the treasure chestes (wherein wer the offerpnges, spise frutes, and the tythes) that they shoulde gather them out of the felde about the cities, to deal them vnto the pnestes and Leuites, accordinge to the lawe: for Juda was gladde of the pnestes, and Leuites, that they stode and waped vpon the offyce of they God: and the offyce of þ clenstng. And þ syngers and porters stode after the commaundmēt of Dauid and of Salomon his sonne: for in the tyme of Dauid and of Asaph, were the cheife syngers founded, and the songes of praise and thankesgeupnge vnto God. In the time of Zorobabel and Nehemias, did al Israel geue porcions vnto the syngers and porters, euery day his porcion, and they gaue thynges halowed vnto the Leuites, and the Leuites gaue thynges that were sanctified, vnto the chyldren of Aaron.

The.iii. Chapter.

D Deuteronomy is redde, and when they haue hearde it, they seuered frome them all straungers.

A And what time as the boke of Moses was redde in the eares of the people, there was found wnten therein that the Ammonites and Moabites shulde neuer come into the congregation of God because they mette not the chyldren of Israel wpth brende and water, and byred Baalam agapnst them that he shoulde curse them: neuerthelesse oure God tourned the curse into a blessing. Now when they herd the Lawe, they seuered from Israel euery one that had myppte hym selfe therein. And before this had the pnest Elisab depueted the chest of the house of God vnto hys kynsman Tobiah: for he hadde made hym a greates chest and ther had they afore tyme layde the offerpnges, frankinsence, vessell, and the tythes of coine, wyne and oil (according to the commaundement geuen to the Leuits syngers and porters) and the first frutes of the pnestes.

But in all thys was not I at Jerusalem, for in the.ii. and thyrtye yere of Artaxerxes kynge of Babylon came I vnto the kynge and after certayne dayes I got lycence of the king to come to Jerusalem. And I gat knowledge of the euil that Elisab did vnto Tobiah, in that he had made him a chest in the court of the house of God, and it greued me sore, & I cast forth all the vessells of þ house of Tobiah out of the chest, & commaunded them to clense the chest. And they ther broughte I againe the vesselles of the house of God, the sacrifice & the incense.

And I percepued, that the porcions of the the Levites were not given the, for whiche cause the Levites and singers were hid, everypone to his lande for to worke. Then reproved I the rulers, and sayd. Why forsake we the house of God? But I gathered the together, & set them in their place. And brought al Juda the tribes of cozne, wyne and oyle unto the treasure. And we ordeyned to be treasurours ouer the treasure, eue Selemitan the priest, & zadoc the scribe and of the Levites Ishaaiab, and under their hand Hanan the sonne of zacur, the sonne of Machanaiab: for they were counted fayerthfull, and their offyce was to distribute vnto their bretheren. And thus saith my God herin, and thou shalt see my mercy, that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on the officers thereof.

At the same time saw I some treadynge wine presses on the Saboth, and bynging in clusters, and asses laden with wine, grapes, lygs, and bynging all maner of burthens vnto Ierusalem, vpon the Saboth daye. And I rebuked them earnestly the same day that they sold the vntayles. And dwelte men of Tyre also therein, whiche broughte fyre, and al maner of ware, and solde on the Saboth vnto the chyldren of Juda, & Ierusalem. Then reproved I the rulers in Juda, and sayde vnto the: what cupll thyng is this ye doo and breake the Saboth daye? Dyd not our fathers euen thus, and our God brought all this plague vpon vs and vpon this cite? And ye make the wrath more per vpon I scall, in that ye breake the Saboth.

And it fortuned, that when the gates of Ierusalem were touched with the euening shadow on the Saboth, I commaunded to shut the gates, & charged they shulde not be opened tyl after the Saboth: and some of my seruantes set I at the gates, that there shoulde no burthen be brought in on the Saboth day. Then remayned they chapmen and marchauntes ones or twyse ouer night without Ierusalem with al maner of wares. And they reproved I them soze, and sayd vnto them: why tarpe ye all nyght aboute the walle? If ye doo it ones agayne, I wyll laye handes vpon you. From that tyme forth came they no more on the Saboth. And I sayde vnto the Levites whiche were cleane, that they shoulde come and kepe the gates to halow the Saboth day. And thus saith my God, conceyvinge this also, and spare me accordyng to thy greate mercy.

And at the same tyme saw I Jewes, that married wyues of Asdod, Ammon and of Moab, & their chyldren spake halfe in the spech of Asdod, and could not speke in the Jewes language, but by the tounge myght a man perceyue euerye people. And I reproved them, and cursed them, and smote certayne men of them and plyete them vp, and toke on othe of them, by God, ye shall not geue your daughters vnto their sunnes, neyther shall ye take theyr daughters vnto your sonnes, or for your seruants. Dyd not Salomon the kynge of I scall spare them? and yet amonge manye Dauides was there no kynge lyke hym, and he was deare vnto his God, and God made hym kynge ouer al I scall, and yet neuertheless straunge men caused hym to synne? And shall we then obey vnto you to do all this greate euill, to walke before our God, and make straunge wyues?

And one of the chyldren of Molada the sonne of Eliasib the high priest, had made a contract with Sanabalat the Hazonite but I chased him from me. O my god, thinke thou vpon them that desyle the lawe, & the law of the priesthode and of the Levites.

Thus cleansed I them from all suche as were strangers, and appointed the courttes of the priestes and Levites, euerye one to his office, and to offer the wood at tymes appointed, and the sicke frutes. And thus saith my God, for the best.

The .i. Chapter.

Kynge Asuerus, which is called Artaxerxes ma-keth a royal feaste, wherunto the queene Vasthy wyl not come: for whiche cause she is dysposed.

In the tyme of Asuerus A whiche reigned from Iu-da vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seue and tyme as he sat on his seate royal in the castell of Susan in the thirde yere of his reigne, he made a feaste vnto all his prynces and rulers of his countreys, that he myght and the glorious worshyppe of his power manye dayes longe, euen an hundred and

And when these dayes were ended, the king made a feaste vnto al the people that were in the castell of Susan, both vnto grete and smalle, seuen dayes longe in the courtte of the garden by the kynges palace: where ther hangid white, red, and yelow clothes fastened with cordes of linnen & scarlet in

The benches were of golde and syluer,

was exceeding much, according to the great power of the king. And no man was appointed what he should drink: for the king had commanded all the officers of his house, that every one should do as it liked him. And the queen Vashti made a feast also for the women in the palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seventh day when the king was merry of the wine he commanded Hegai, Hartha, Harboda, Bagatha, Abagatha, Zatha, & Carcas the six chamberlains, that did service in the presence of the king Ahasuerus, to fetch the queen Vashti with the crown regale, that he might shew the people & princes her fairness: for she was beautiful. But the queen Vashti would not come at the kings word by his chamberlains. Then was the king very wroth, and his indignation kindled in him, and he spake to the wise men that had understanding in the ordinances of the land: for the kings matters must be handled before all such as have knowledge of the law and judgement: and the next unto him were, Carshena, Settar, Admatha, Tharshis, Shares, Shafana and Shamusan the seven princes of the Persians, and Medes, which saw the kings face, and were wont to speak secretly unto him, what law should be executed upon the queen Vashti, because she did not according to the word of the king by his chamberlains. Then said Shamusan before the king & the princes: the queen Vashti hath not only hurt the king, but also all princes, all the people in all provinces of the king Ahasuerus: for this deed of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall despise their husbands before their eyes, and shall say: the king Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to come before him, but she would not.

And by this example shall all the princes wives of Persia & Media cease at naught the commandment of their husbands when they hear of this deed of the queen, thus shall there arise despectfulness and wrathyness. If it please the king let them go forth a proclamation from him & let it be written according to the law of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) that Vashti come no more before the king Ahasuerus, and let the king give the kingdom unto another that is better than she.

And that this writing of the king whereby she shall be made, be published throughout all his empire whereby is great, that all wives may have their husbands in honour, both great and small. This pleased the king and the princes, and the king did according to the word of Shamusan. Then were letters sent forth into all the kings lands, into every land according to the writing thereof, & to every people after their language, & every man should be the Lord & chiefe in his own house. And this caused he to be divulged among all people.

The.ii. Chapter.

The queen put away, certain goodly young damoyselles are searched out among whom Esther pleased the king. Mordechus disloseth to the king those that would betray him.

These things done, when the displeasure of king Ahasuerus was alayed, he thought upon Vashti, what she had done, & was concluded concerning her. Then said the kings servants: Let there be saye young virgins sought for the king, and let the king appoint officers in all the lands of his empire, that they may bring together all saye young virgins unto the castle of Susan to the womens lodging, under the hand of Hagei the kings chamberlain that keepeth the women, and let him give them their apparel. And loke which damoysel pleased the king, let her be queen in Vashtis stead. This pleased the king & he did so.

In the castle of Susan there was a Jew, whose name was Mordechus, the sonne of Jair the sonne of Shimei, & sonne of Kish, the sonne of Beniamin, whereby he was carryed away to Jerusalem, when Jeconias the king of Juda was led away, whom Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon carryed away, and he nourished Badasab, otherwise called Esther, his uncles daughter: for she had neither father nor mother, and she was a saye and beautiful damoysel. And when her father and mother dyed Mordechus received her, as his own daughter.

Nowe when the kings commandment was published, and according to it many damoyselles were brought together unto the castle of Susan under the hand of Hagei. Esther was taken also unto the kings house under the hand of Hagei, the keeper of the women: and the damoyselle pleased him, and she founde grace in his sight. And he caused her ornaments to be given her, and her gifts, and gave her seven notable gentle women of the kings house, and arrayed both her & her gentle women very richely in the house of the women. But Esther knewed not her people nor her kindred: for Mordechus had charged her, that she should not tell it. And Mordechus watched everie day before the court of the womens building, that he might knowe howe Esther did, & what should become of her. And when the appointed time of every damoysel came that she should come to the king Ahasuerus, after that she had been six moneths in the decking of the women (for their decking must have so much time: namely, six moneths with balme and myrrour, and six moneths with good spices, so were the women bewyshed) then wente there one damoysel unto the king, and what so euer she requested that must be given her to go with her out of the womens building unto the kings palace. And when one came in the evening, the same wente from him on the morowe in in the kynges gate, that had sacke clothe on. And in all landes and places, as far as the kynges worde and commandement extended, there was greute lamentacyon among the Jewes. Many fasted, wepte, mourned, and laye in sacke clothes and in ashes. So Esthers Damofelles, and her chamberlaynes came and tolde it her.

Then was the queene exceedinglye astonysed. And she sent sayment, that Mardocheus shuld put them on, and laye the sackcloth from hym. But Mardocheus woulde not take them. Then called Esther Hathach one of the kynges chamberlaynes (which stode before her) and gaue hym a commandement unto Mardocheus, that he myght knowe what it were, and wherefore he dyd so. So Hathach went forth to Mardocheus unto the streete of the ctyte, wher he was before the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde hym of al þat had happened unto hym, and of the summe of syluer that Haman had promysed to wepe downe in the kynges chamber because of the Jewes for to destroye them: and he gaue hym the coppye of the commandement, that was deuised at Susa to destroye them, that he myghte shew it unto Esther, and to speke to her and charge her that she shuld go into the kynges, & make her prayer & supplication unto him for her people.

And when Hathach came in, & tolde Esther the wordes of Mardocheus, Esther spake unto Hathach, & commanded hym to saye unto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruantes, & the people in the landes of the kyng knowe, þat whoso euer cometh wryth in the courte unto the kyng whether it be man or woman, wherby is not called, the commandement is that the same shal dre immediately, onles the kyng hold oute the golden scepter unto him, in token of clemency þat he may lyeue. As for me, I haue not ben called to come into the kyng now this thyrtye dayes.

And when Mardocheus was certeyned of Esthers wordes, Mardocheus had saye agayne unto Esther: thynke not to saue thine owne life, while thou art in the kynges house, before al Jewes: for if thou boldest the peace at this tyme, then shal the Jewes haue help & deliuerance oute of another place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed, and whoe knoweth whether thou art come to the kyngedome for this tyme sake? Esther had geue Mardocheus this answer: go thow thy waye and gather together all the Jewes that are founde at Susa, and fast ye for me, þat ye faste and drynke not in. iij. dayes neyther day nor nyghte, I and my Damofelles wyl faste wth hym: and so wyl I go into the kyng, contrary to þat commandement: if I perishe, I perishe. So Mardocheus went his waye, and dyd all that Esther had commanded hym.

The .v. Chapter.

The .v. Chapter.

Esther entred in to the kynges, and biddeth him and Haman to a feast. Haman prepareth a galowse for Mardocheus.

On the thyrtye daye put Esther on her royal apparel, and stode in the courte of the kynges palace wryth in, ouer against the kynges lodgyng. And the kyng sat vpon his copall seate in his palace ouer against the gate of the house. And when the kyng saw Esther the queene standinge in the courte, she founde grace in his sight. And the kyng helde oute the golden scepter in his hande toward Esther. So Esther stept forth, and touched the top of the scepter. Then saied the kyng vnto her: What wylt thou queene Esther? and what requierest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empyre and it shalbe geuen the. Esther saied: Yf it please the kyng, let the kyng and Haman come this day vnto the banquet, that I haue prepared. The kyng saied: Cause Haman to make haste: that he maye doo as Esther hath sayde.

Now when the kyng and Haman came to the banquet that Esther had prepared, the kyng sayde vnto Esther after he had largeli drunke of the wine: Esther, what is thy petition? and it shalbe geuen the. And what requierest thou? Yf it be eue the halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done.

Then answered Esther & saied: my petition & desire is, if I haue founde grace in þy syghte of the kyng, & if it please þe kyng to geue me my petition, & to fulfill my request, thet let the kyng and Haman come to the banquet that I shall prepare for them, and so wyl I do to morowe as the kyng hath sayde.

Then went Haman for the the same daye forful and met in his mynde. And when he saw Mardocheus in the kynges gate, that he stode not vp and knelled before him he was full of indignacion at Mardocheus. He wroth hymselfe & he refrayned hym selfe: and when he came home he sent, and called for his frendes, and zares his wyfe, and tolde them of the glorie of his ryches, and the multytude of his children all together, how þe kyng had promoted him so greatly, and how that he was taken aboue all the prynces and seruantes of the kyng. Haman saied moreover: Yea, and Esther the queene let no man come wryth the kyng vnto the banquet that she hadde prepared, excepte me, and to morowe am I bydden vnto her also wryth the kyng. But in all this I am not satisfied as longe as I se Mardocheus the Jewe sittinge at the kynges gate. The said zares his wyfe & al his frendes vnto hym: Let them make a galowse of fift cubytes high, and to morowe speake thou vnto the kyng, that Mardocheus may be hanged thereon, and so thou shalt go meryly with the kyng vnto the banquet. Haman was wel contente herewryth, and caused a galowse to be made readye.

The

to the seconde house of women, vnder the hande of Sargas the kynges chamberlaine, whiche kepte the concubynes. And she must come vnto the kyng no more, vntill it pleased the kyng, and that he caused her to be called by name.

Now when the time came of Ester the daughter of Abihail Gardocheus uncle (whom he had receiued as his own daughter) that she shoulde come to the kyng, she despyred nothing but what Baget the kynges chamberlaine the keeper of the women said. And Ester found fauoure in the sight of al that looked vpon her. So Ester was taken into king Asuerus into the house to all, in the tenth moneth which is called Tebeth in the vii. yere of his reigne.

And the kyng loued Ester aboue all women, and she founde grace and mercye in his sight, before al the virgins: and he sette the queens crowne vpon her head, & made her queene in the place of Bashti. And the kyng made a great feast vnto al his princes and seruauntes (whiche feast was because of Ester:) and he gaue rest to al the landes, and gaue to all gyfts accordinge to a kynges magnificence.

And when the virgins were gathered together the seconde tyme, Gardocheus sat in the kynges gate. And as yet had not Ester shewed her kindred and her people accordinge as Gardocheus had bydden her: for Ester did after the word of Agardocheus, like as when he was her tutor. At the same tyme whyle Gardocheus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kynges chamberlaines Bagaban and Thares whiche kepte the doore were woth, & sought to lay handes on the kyng Asuerus: wherof Gardocheus gat knowledge, and tolde it vnto queene Ester, & Ester certified the kyng therof in Gardocheus name. And whē in quyre was made, it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tree: and it was writte in the Chronicles, before the kinge.

The.iii.chapter.

Haman obtained of the kyng that all Jewes shoulde be put to death because Gardocheus had not given hym worship, as othe had.

After this the kyng promoted Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, and set hym hygh, & set his seate aboue all the princes that were with hym. And al the kings seruauntes that were in the gate bowed their knees, and did reverence vnto Haman, for the kyng had so commaunded. But Gardocheus bowed not the knee, & worshipped hym not. Then the kings seruauntes which were in the kynges gate, sayde vnto Gardocheus: why disobeyest thou the kynges commaundement?

And when they spake thus dayly vnto hym, and he obeyed them not, they tolde Haman, that they might see whether Gardocheus matters would endure. for he had tolde them that he was a Jew. And when Haman sawe that Gardocheus bowed not the knee vnto him, nor worshipped him, he was full of indignacyon, and thoughte it to lytel to lay handes onelye on Agardocheus: for they hadde shewed vpon the narpon of Agardocheus, but he soughte to destroye all the Jewes, the nation of Agardocheus, that were in the hole empyre of Asuerus. In the fyfte moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the xii. yere of kyng Asuerus, they cast Pur (which is a lot) before Haman, on what daye and what moneth this shoulde be done: and ther came out the xii. moneth that is the moneth Adar. And Haman sayde vnto king Asuerus: There is a people scattered abrode & dysperched from themselves amonge all people in the landes of thyne empyre, and they have lawes contrarye vnto all people, and they do not after the kynges lawes, neyther is it the kings profit to suffer the after this maner. If it please the kyng, let hym enact, & they be destroyed, and so wyl I weye downe ten thousand talents of siluer, vnder the handes of the workemen, to be brought in to the kynges chamber. Then toke the kyng his ringe from his hand, and gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, the Jewes ennemye. And the kyng sayd vnto Haman: Let the siluer be geuen thee, and that people also, to doo with all what pleasest thee.

Then were the kynges scribes called on the xiii. daye of the fyfte moneth, and there was wyrtten (accordinge as Haman commaunded) vnto the kynges princes, & to the captayns euery where in the landes, and to the rulers of euery people in the countreys on euery side, accordinge to the wyrtynge of euery nacion, and after theyr language in the name of kyng Asuerus, and sealed with the kynges ring. And the wyrtynge was sent by pursuauntes into al the kynges landes, to rote out, to kyl and to destroye al Jewes, both young and olde, chylde, & women in one daye, that is to saye vpon the thirtenth daye of the twelfth moneth, whiche is the moneth Adar, and to spoyle theyr goodes.

This was the sum of the letters, that ther shoulde be a commaundement geuen in al landes, to be published vnto all people, that they shoulde be ready agaynst the same daye. And the pursuauntes went in al the landes accordinge to the kynges commaundement. And in the castell of Susan was the commaundement deuyled. And the kyng and Haman sate and dranke. But the carye of Susan was dysperched.

The.iii.chapter.

Gardocheus geueth the queene knowledge of the cruel decree of the kyng agaynst the Jewes.

When Gardocheus perceyued all that was done, he rente his clothes, and put on sacke cloth & ashes, & went out into the middes of the cite, and cryed loud & lamentably, & came before the kyngs gate: for there myghte no man entere with

The king turneth over the Chronicles & syneth the synepse of Harbocheus: and the is the confusyon of Haman, he commaundeth Harbocheus to be had in honour.

The same nyghte could not the kynge slepe, and he commaunded to bynge the Chronicles and bystoyres, wherby when they were read before the kynge, they happened on the place where it was wyrtten how Harbocheus had tolde that the kynge's two chamberlaynes (whiche kept the threholdes) sought to lay hands on kinge Asuerus. And the king said: what worshippe and good haue we done to Harbocheus therfore? Then sayde the kynge's seruantes that ministered vnto hym: There is nothyng done for hym. And the kinge sayde: Who is in the court? (for Haman was gone into the court without before the kynge's house that he myghte speake vnto the kinge to hange Harbocheus on the tree, that he had prepared for hym.) And the kinge's seruantes said to him: behold, Haman standeth in the court. The kinge said let hym come in. And when Haman came in, the kynge sayde vnto hym: what shalte thou do vnto the man, whom the kinge wold fayne bynge vnto worshippe? But Haman thought in his herte: Whom shoulde the kynge els be glad to bynge vnto worshippe, but me? And Haman sayde vnto the kynge: Let the man vnto whom the kinge wolde be glad to do worshippe, be broughte hither, that he may be staied with the col all garmentes whiche the kynge useth to weare: and the horse that the kynge rydeth vpon, and that the crowne royal may be set vpon his heade. And let this raiment and horse be deliuered vnder the hande of one of the kynge's prynces, that he may carrye the man wythall (whome the kynge wolde fayne honoure) and carrye hym vnto the horse thorow the streete of the cytie, and cause it to be proclaymed before hym: thus shall it be done to euery man, whom the kynge wold fayne honoure.

The kynge sayde: make hast, and take as thou hast sayde the raiment and the horse, and do even so wyth Harbocheus & Iew that sitteth before the kynge's gate, and let nothyng fayle of al that I haue spoken. Then toke Haman the raiment & the horse and arayed him, and broughte hym on horse backe, thorow the streete of the cytie, and proclaymed before him: Even thus shall it be done to euery man, whom the kinge is dysposed to honoure. And Harbocheus came agayne to the kynge's gate. But Haman gatte hym dome in at the, half mou-

Dynge with bare head, and tolde there his wyse and all his frendes, euery thyng that had happened hym. Then sayde his wyse men of his counsaile, and zares his wyse vnto hym: If it be Harbocheus of the sede of the Jewes, before whom thou haste begon to falle, thou canst do nothing vnto hym, but shalte falle before hym.

Whyle they were yet talkyng with hym, came the kynge's chamberlaynes, and caused Haman to make hast to come vnto the banquet that Esther had prepared.

The.vii. Chapter.

The queene byddeth the kinge and Haman agayne, and prayeth for her selfe and her people. He accuseth Haman: and he is hanged on the house, whiche he had prepared for Harbocheus.

And whette the kinge and Haman came to the banquet that queene Esther had prepared, the kinge said vnto Esther on the second day at the banquet of wyne: what is thy petition queene Esther, that it may be geue thee? and what request thou? Yea aske such halfe of the empyre, as it shal be done. Esther the queene answered & sayde: If I haue founde grace in thy syghte (O king) and it please the the king, thet thou art me my life at my desyre, and my people for my peticions sake: for we are solde both I & my people to be destroyed, to be slayne and to perishe. And woulde God we were solde to be bondmen and bondwomen, then wold I hold my tong, & so shoulde not the enemye be so bygh to the kynge's batme. The kinge Asuerus spake, and said vnto queene Esther: Who is this? Or wher is he that dare presume in his mynde to do such a thing alect & maner? Esther sayde: the enemye & aduersarye is this wicked Haman. Which thyng when Haman herde he was exceedingly afraied before the kynge and the queene. And the kynge arose from the banquet and from the wyne in his dyspleasure, and wente into the palace garden. And Haman fode vp, and besought the queene Esther for his lyfe: for he saw ther was a mychtye prepared for hym of the kynge allready.

And when the kynge came agayne oute of the palace garden into the parlar wher they had eaten, Haman had layd hym vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon. Then said the kinge: wylt thou force the queene also? he sate me in the house? As soon as the word went out of the kynge's mouth, they covered Haman's face. And Harbonah one of the chamberlaynes that stode before the kinge sayde: Beholde, there standeth a galowes in Haman's house tyftye cubites hye which he had made for Harbocheus that spake good for the king. The kinge sayde: bring him theron. So they hanged Haman on the galowes that he had made for Harbocheus. So was the kynge's wrath apayed.

The.viii. Chapter.

After the death of Haman, Harbocheus is promoted the are comfortable letters sent vnto the Jewes.

The same daye king Asuerus gaue the house of Haman the Jewes chemye, vnto queene Esther. And Harbocheus came before the kinge: for Esther told how he belonged vnto her. And the kinge toke the kynge of his synger, whiche he hadde taken from Haman, and gaue it Mardocheus. Mordecai Ester set Mardocheus ouer the house of Haman. And she spake per more befoze the kynge, and fell downe at his fete, and besought him, that he wold put awaye the malice of Haman the Agagite, and bys moode vngreatpouse deuyfes that he hadde ymagyned against the Jewes. And the kynge helde out the golden scepter vnto Ester. Then rose Ester, and stode before the kynge, and sayd: if it please the kynge, and if I haue found grace in thy syght, and if it be convenient for the kynge, and if it be accepted in thy syght, then let it be wyrtten, that the letters of the beuytye of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha the Agagite, may be called agayne: whiche letters he wrote, to destroye the Jewes in all the kynges landes.

For howe can I se the euyl that shall happen vnto my people? howe can I loke vp on the destruction of my kyn?

Then said the king Asuertus vnto quene Ester, and to Mardocheus the Jew: Beholde I haue gyfted Ester the house of Haman, & hym haue they hanged vpon a tree, because he layd hande vpon the Jewes. Wryte ye now therefore for the Jewes, as it lybeth you in the kynges name, and sele it with the kynges ring for the wyrttyngs that were wrytten in the kynges name, and sealed with the kynges ring, durst no man disanulle. Then were the kynges scribes called at the same tyme in the xiiij. moneth, that is the month Suan, on the xij. and xxiij. daye.

And it was wyrtten accordyng as Mardocheus commaunded, vnto the Jewes and to the prynces, to the deputies and appoyntes in the landes, from Jnd vntyll Ethiopia, namely an hundred and seuen and twenty landes, vnto euery one accordyng to the wyrttyng therof, vnto euery people as to the wyrttyng therof, and to the Jewes accordyng to the wyrttyng and language. And it was wyrtten in the kynges Asuertus name, and sealed with the kynges ring. And by the messengers, sent be the wyrttynges, wher in the kyng graunted the Jewes (in what cities so euer they were) to gather them selues together, and to stande for their lyfe, and for to roote out, to slay, and to destroye all the power of the people and lande that woulde trouble them, with chyldren and womanne, and to spoyle theyr good vpon one day in all the landes of kyng Asuertus, namely vpon the thirtieth day of the twelfth moneth, which is the moneth Adar.

The summe of the wyrttyng was, howe that was a commaundement geuen in all landes to be publyshed vnto all the people that the Jewes shoulde be receyued agayne that daye to auenge them selues on theyr enemies. And the messengers that bare the wyrttynges wente forth with al speede accordyng to the kynges worde: and the commaundement was deuised in the case tell of Susan.

And Mardocheus wente oute from the king in roiall apparell of yclowe & white and with a greate crowne of golde, arrayed with a garment of lynne & purple: & the citty of Susan reioysed & was glad: but vnto the Jewes there was come light and gladdnes and joy and worship. And in all landes and ctyes, into what places soeuer the kynges word and commaundement reached, ther was joy and much prosperitee & good dayes among the Jewes: in so muche that many of the people in the lande became of the Jewes beleif, for the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

The ix. Chapter.

At commaundement of the kynge, the Jewes put theyr foes to deathe. The sonnes of Haman were hanged. The Jewes kept a feastyf daye in remembrance of theyr deliuerie.

In the twelfth moneth (that is the moneth Adar) the thirtieth day, whiche the kynges word and commaundement had appoynted, that the enemies shoulde haue destroyed the Jewes, it turned contrarye wise, that the Jewes shoulde subdue their enemies. The assembled the Jewes to gyther in theyr cities wher al the lordes of king Asuertus, so lathad on such as woulde haue done them euill. and no man could withstand them: for the feare of them was come ouer al people. And al the rulers in the landes, & prynces and deputies, and officers of the kyng promoted the Jewes: for the feare of Mardocheus was come vpon them. For Mardocheus was grete in the kynges house, and the report of hym was bruted in all landes how he encreased and grew.

Thus the Jewes smote all theyr enemies with a soote slaughter, and slew, and destroyed, and dyd after theyr wyll vnto such as were theyr aduersaries. And at the castell Susan the Jewes slew and destroyed true hundred men, and slew Sathasbatha, Delphon, Ali batha, Shoratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Sharmasbatha, Arisot, Aribai, Matzatha, the tenne sonnes of Haman, the sonne of Amadatha the enemye of the Jewes: but on bys gooddes they woulde take no botyes. At the same tyme was the kynges certyfyed of the number of those that were slayne at the castelle Susan. And the kyng sayed vnto quene Ester: The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed true hundred men at the castelle of Susan, and the tenne sonnes of Haman: What shall they do in the other landes of the kyng? What is thy request, that it maye be gyuen thee? and what requyeste thou more to be done? Ester sayde: Yf it please the kyng, lette hym suffer the Jewes to morowe also to do accordyng vnto theys dayes commaundement, that they hange Hamans ten sonnes vpon the tree. And the kyng charged to doo so, and the commaundement was deuised at Susan, and and Damans ten sonnes were hanged. And the Jewes gathered them selues together at Susan, vpon the fourtene daie of the moneth Adar, and slew the hundred men at Susan, but they goodes they would not spole.

Moreover the other Jewes in the kynges landes, stood for their lyues, and gat resce from their ennemys: and slew of their ennemys. lxxv. Howbeit they laid no handes on their goodes. This was done on the .xiii. daie of the moneth Adar, and on the .xiiii. daie of the same moneth rested they, whiche daie they ordeined to a daie of feasting and gladnesse. But the Jewes at Susan wer come together both on the .xiii. daie and on the .xiiii. and on the xv. daie they rested, and the same day ordeined they to be a daie of feasting & gladnes. Therefore the Jewes that dwelt in the villages and unwalled townes ordeined the .xiii. daie of the moneth Adar, to be a daie of feasting and gladnesse, and one sente gyftes vnto an other.

And Garchochus wrot al these actes, and sente the wrytynge vnto al the Jewes that were in all the landes of kyng Asuerus, bothe nyphe and farre, that they shoulde perylpe receiue and holde the .xiii. and .xv. daie of the moneth Adar, as daies wherein the Jewes came to rest from their enemies, as a moneth wherein their payn was touned to ioye, and they forowe in to prosperitie: that they shuld obserue the same as daies of wealth and gladnes, and one to send gyftes vnto an other, and to distribute vnto the poore.

And the Jewes receiued al that they had begon to do, and that Garchochus hadde wrytten vnto them: howe that Haman the sonne of Hamadatha ennemye to all the Jewes, hadde deuised too destroye all the Jewes & caused to cast shur (that is a Lot) for to put them in feare, and to bring them too naughte: and howe Dester wente and spake to the kyng, that thowme letters his wycked deuise, whiche he pmagined & gapnde the Jewes, myghte be touned vpon his owne heade, and howe he and his sonnes were hanged on the tree. For whiche cause they called this daie shur. After the name of shur, accordyng to al wordes of this wrytynge: and what they the selues had seene, and what had happened to them. And the Jewes set it vp, and toke it vpon them and their seide, and vpon all such as ioined them selves vnto them, that they would not myse to keepe these two daies yeaerlye, accordyng as they wer wryten and appointed, how these daies ar not to be forgotten, but to be kept of childrens chyldren amonge all kyngedoms in all landes and cyties. These ar the daies of shur, that is to saye of lottes, wherby ar not ouersypte amonge the Jewes, and the remembrance of them ought not to perishe from their seide. And quene Dester the daughter of Abihail and Garchochus the Jewe, wrot wth all authoryte, to con firme this seconde wrytynge of shur, and sent the letters vnto all the Jewes in the hundred and .xxv. lands of the empyre of Asuerus, wth frendly and faithfull words, to con firme these daies of shur, in that time appointed, accordyng as Garchochus the Jewe, and Ester the quene had ordeined in that behalfe: lyke as they vpon their soule and vpon their seide had confirmed the actes of the fastinges and of her complainte. And Ester commaunded too stablish these actes of this shur, & to wryte them in a booke.

Baye. Howe vpon a tyme when the (a) ſeruauntes of God (b) came and ſtoode befoze the Lorde, Satan came alſo among them.
And the Lorde ſaide vnto Satan: whence comeſt thou? Sathan answered the Lorde and ſayde: I haue compaſſed the land and walked thorow it. Then ſayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: haſt thou not conſidered my ſeruaunte Job, howe that he is a perfecte and bpryghte manne: ſuche one as feareth God, and eſchueth euyl, and that there is none lyke hym in the lande? Satan anſwe-red, and ſayde vnto the Lorde: Doeſt thou feare God for naughte? haſte thou not preſerued hym, his houſe and al his ſubſtance on euerie ſpde, haſte thou not bleſſed the workes of hys handes? Is not his poſſeſſion encreaſed in the lande. But lay thyne hande vppon hym a lytle, and touche once all that he hath, and yf he curſe the not too vnto Sathan, loo all that he hath, bee in thy power: onlpe vppon hym ſelfe ſe thou ſape not thyne hande. Then wente Satan forthe from the Lorde.

So vppon a certayne daye when hys ſonnes and daughters were eatynge, and drynkyng wyne in the eldeſte brothers houſe, there came a meſſenger vnto Job, and ſayde: While the oxen were plowynge and the aſſes goynge in the paſture beſyde them, the Sabees came in with force, and toke them all awaye: pea they haue ſlaue thy ſeruauntes wth the ſwerde, and Jonlype haue eſcaped, to tell the.

And while he was yet ſpeakynge, there came an other, and ſayde: The fyr of God is fallen from heauen, it hath consumed and brente vp al thy hepe and ſeruauntes, and thou ſeruaunte ſware, too bynne the tydynge. In the meane ſeaſon while he was yet ſpeakynge, there came an other, and ſayde: The Caldees made riottes, and ruſhed vpon thy Camels, whiche they haue carped awaye, pea and ſlaue thy ſeruauntes wth the ſwerde: and thou ſeruaunt gotten awaye, to bynne tydynge. While he was ſpeakynge, there came yet a fourth and ſayd: Thy ſonnes and daughters wer eatynge and drynkyng wyne in the el-deſte brothers houſe, and ſodenly ther came a myghty greate wynde out of the South, and ſmote the.iii. corners of the houſe, whiche fell vpon thy childrene, ſo that they are deade: and thou art gotten awaye alone too bynne tydynge.

Then Job ſtoode vppon, and rente hys clothes and ſhaued hys heade, fell downe vppon the ground, worſhipped, and ſayde: Naked came I oute of my mothers womb and naked ſhall I returne thither againe.
The Lorde gaue, and the Lorde hath taken awaye: nowe bleſſed be the name of the Lorde. In all theſe thynges, dnd Job not offende, ne murmured ſolpſelye agaynſt God.

The Notes.

(a) By the ſeruauntes of God, here vnderſtande, not onely angels, by whom he ordreth þe courſe and workes of the world: but alſo the godly and choſen, whom he continually careth and proubeth for. Job. ii. a.

(b) Came and ſtoode befoze the lord. Thinke not that God ſometime appeareth to the angels, and ſometime not, for the good angels do alwayes ſe the face of God. Neither cometh God either wth the angels or wth the Deuyl wth body-ly ſpeache, but the holy goſt in the ſcriptures ſpeaketh many thynges vnto vs accordynge to our feeling, and bleth a maner of ſpeakynge familiar to vs, attributing ſpeakynge, ſpeakynge, enquiryng, anſwerynge, to God, and to angels, wth which thyng man only vſeth, to the intent that we therby may the eaſier perceiue his meaning.
The comynge of the angels is no nother thyng, then to geue accomptes of the office ſoyned the:
in which they geue, knowynge that God ſeeth wth what truſt they byd it: and to geue thanks and waite for their reward. They came (ſayth Oly-gen) honoryng, magnifyng, prayſynge, geuyng thanks. Of what alſo he wyrteth thus. He came nyether wth goynge to, or comynge in, but he came in thought, counſel, and moſt wicked de-ſyre to accuſe the rpyghteouſe befoze God. Hys thought and deſyre, are taken as a comynge.
The Deuyl then is counted to haue come in to the ſight of God, not that the moſt wicked came in beede in the ſight of the good God, but becauſe hys cruel and moſt wicked thoughts came in to the ſight of God. And thus euen nowe a dayes alſo cometh the Deuyl wth them in to the ſight of God, in þe daily accuſeth, ſinderth ſaut, de. eth, perſeuiceth, & troubleth the godly.

The.ii. Chapter.

Job is plagued wth ſore byles, and afterviſite hym, and haue compaſſion on hym.

It happened alſo vpon a tyme, that whē the ſeruauntes of God came and ſtoode the, and ſtoode befoze hym. (a) And the lorde ſayde vnto Satan: whence comeſt thou?

Satan answered and ſayd: I haue circui-

Then ſayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: haſte thou not conſidered my ſeruaunt Job, how that he is an innocent and vertuous man ſuche one as feareth God, and eſchueth e-uyl, and that there is none lyke him in the wyl geue for his life. But lay thyne hande vppon him, touch hym ones vpon the bone and fleſhe, and then thou ſhalt ſe he ſhall curſe the to thy face. Then ſayde the Lorde vnto Satan: lo, he is in thy power, but ſpare hys lyfe. So wente Satan forth from the Lorde, and ſmote Job wth maruelous ſore byles, from the ſole of the foote vnto the crowne: ſo that he ſate vpon the groun woman. Sepnge we haue receyued prospectyfe at the hande of God, wherfore shuld we not be content with aduersitie also?

In al these thynges dyd not Job syn wth hys lpps. Now when Jobs frendes heard of al the trouble, that happened vnto him, there came. iii. of them, euerye one from his own place: Eliphaz the Themanite: Bal-dad the Suhite, & zophar the Naamathite.

For they were agreed together to come to shewe thei compassioun vpon hym, and to comforte hym. So when they lyfte vpe

Then they cryed, and wepte: then euerye one of them rente his clothes, and spunk-led duste vpon thei heades in the ayre.
They sat them down by him also vpon the grounde seuen dayes, and seuen nightes.
Neither was ther anye of them that spake one worde vnto him, for they saw that his

(a) and cursed hys dape, and sayde: losse be that dape, wherein I was borne, and the nyghte in which it was said there is a man elyde conceyued. The same dape be touned to darckenes, and not regarded of God above, neither be shined vpon wth lpyghte, but be couered with darkenes, and the shadowe of deathe. Lette the dymme cloude fall vpon it, and lette it be mapped in sorow. Lette the darck stourme ouercome that night, let it not be reckened amonge the dayes of the yere, ne counted in the monethes. Despyed be that night, and discommended: (b) let them that curse that day, those I saye that be readye too rapse vpe & leuiathan. gyue it also thei curse. Lette the starres be dymme thei darckenesse of it. Lette it looke for lighte, but se none, neyther the rsonge vyce of the mornynge, because it shutte not vpon the wombe that bare me, ne hys these sorowes from myne epen.

Alas, wher dyed I not in the matrice? whye did not I perpe. as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe? Why set they me vpon thei knees. Whye gaue they me sucke vpon thei breasts? For now I shuld haue lien still. I shoulde haue slepte, & ben at rest: lyke as the knynges and Lordes of the earth, whiche buyde them selues solitarie places: or the Princes that haue create substance of golde and theyr houses full of syluer. O that I utterlye had a no beyng, or were as a thyng borne oute of tyme (that is put a syde) yether as yong chyliden, whiche neuer sawe the lpyghte.

Where the wycked do cease from thei ty-rannye, there suche as are ouer labourd be at rest: there are those let oute fre, whiche haue bene in ppyson, so that they heare no more the voyce of the oppressoure. Ther are small and greate: the bondman is free from hys master.

Wherfore is the lpyghte geuen hym that is in wretchednes? and life them that haue heupe hertes? Whyche longe for deathe, if it come not: and search for it more then for treasure, and woulde be exceedynge glad,
and reioyce if they founde thei graue?

That shoulde be ioye to the manne whose wape is bydde, which God kepeth backe to deathe, so frone hym. For my syghes come before I, that he can eate, and my rotynges fall oute lyke flow- not obteine ynge water. For the thyng I feared is to dye, whiche come vpon me: and the thyng that I was ch thyng he afraid of, is happened vnto me. Was I so greatelye not happye? Had I not quietnes? Was I thirker not in reaste? And nowe cometh indigna for.
cyon vpon me.

The Notes.

(a) Cursed his day. Like as a man hauing an im-postume (sayth Epistosome) if he be cut of & surgion, hauing nothyng wherewith he maye resist, during the tyme of his cutting, holdeth fast the thynges that be npe hym, and is redy to byte them that stand by hym, & yet can do nothyng vnto them: euen so Job cursing the greuousnesse of blaspheming and cursing, bothe wynges to vniuersal thynges, and speakynge after the manner of the common people whiche impute thei miserie to the influence of the starres, and to the daye of thei birth, curseth hys dape: that is, testifieth wth cursing, howe bytter a lyfe he lyueth, and vnto how great miserye he was borne (as we comenly saye, in an vnhappy house, euen as though nowe adapes a man & repynge hys synnes, shulde saye: Wo is me wiche I in an vn-happy house was I borne, which by my dedes haue benyed my maker, wo woerth it. &c.)

(b) They that curse the dape, are those that are werye of thei lyfe, insonuche that they fall in dede to cursynge.

The.iii. Chapter.

Job is by Eliphaz reprimed of impatience and iniustice, & of the presumption of hys owne rightynesse.

Then answered Eliphaz the Themanite and sayd vnto hym. If we begin too comen vth the, peraduenture thou wylte be discontente. but who canne withhold hym selfe from speakynge? Be-holde thou haste bene a teacher of many, & hast comforted the werye handes.

Thy wordes haue sette vp those that were fallen, thou hast refrested the weake knees. But now that the plage is come vpon the, thou shynkest awaye: now that it hath touched thy selfe, thou arte fainte harted. Where is thy awe thy stedfastnes, thy patience, and the perfectnesse of thy wapes? Consydre I pray the, who euer perished beinge an innocent? Or when were the Godly destroyed? As I haue sene them that

that plowe wyckednes, and sowe malice, reape the same. Wp the blast of Gods did they perishe, and wpth the breathe of hys anger consumed they awape. The (a) roaringe of the Lyon, the voyce of the Lyons nesse, and the teeth of the Lyons whelpes are broken. The Lyon perissheth, for lacke of praye, and the Lyons whelpes are scattered abroad.

And vnto me was the worde hidde, and myne eare hath receyued a litle therof. In the phantasies and thoughtes of the visions of the nyghte, when sleepe cometh vppon men, feare came vpon me and dried, and made my bones to shake. And whil the wind passed by before my presence, it made the heares of my fleshe stande vp. He stood there, and I knewe not hys face, an image there was before me, and there was silens so that I hearde thys voyce (b). Shal man be more iust then God? Or shal manne be purer then hys maker? (c) Beholde ther is no trust to hys seruantes, and in hys angels hath he found crokednes. How much more in them that dwell in houses of claye, whose foundacion is but earth: whiche shall be consumed by the mothe. They shall be smitten from the morninge vnto the eueninge: they shall perishe euerylastingly, and no man thynke thereon. As not they (d) dignitie taken away wpth them: they shall dye and that ere they be wate.

The Notes.

(a) By the roaringe, the voyce, and the teeth, are vnderstand the blasphemies and backbitynages that are vsed agaynst the innocents, as it is said Psal. xxi. b. By the similitude of the Lyon, he meaneth that the wycked shall perishe, howe great or myghty so euer they be.

(b) What man be more iust, &c. Of this principle wyl Elphas reason thus agaynst Job. If god wolde destroy an innocent, it wold folowe that man were more righteous and pure then God, but this is impossible, for the contrary is shewed vnto me by reuelacion.

(c) Behold there is no trust, &c. He laboureth in confirmyng that whiche he had before propounded. The summe of the reason is. Angels are not purer then God, ergo not men.

(d) Dignitie signifyeth here what soeuer they haue wherein they excele other, whether it be riches or honour, power or conning, &c. For none of these shall redeme them from death.

The.ii. Chapter.

The ende of a foole. The righteousness of God. The Lord chasteneth hys, and deliuereth them agayne.

Call me one els, if thou canst finde any preiour aboute the, vpon any of the hoip men. As for the folye man, displeasure kylleth him, and anger dappeth the ignoraunte. I haue sene my self, when the folye was deperoted, that hys betwye was sodenly destroyed, that hys chyldren were wpthoute prosperitie or healt: that they were hapne in the doore, and no man to deliuer them: that hys hart was eaten wyth the hunger, that the weapened manne had spoiled it, and that the thirde had dronke vp hys riches. It is not the earth that bringeth forth trauaple, nether cometh sorowe oute of the grounde: but it is man, that is borne vnto myserte, like as the byrd to flyghte.

But nowe wyl I speake of the Lorde, and talke of God: whiche dothe thynges that are vnsearchable, and maruelous withoute numbre: whiche geueth raygne vpon the earth, and powreth water vppon all thynges: whiche setteth vp them of lowe degre, and sendeth prosperite, to those that are in heynesse. Whiche destroyeth the thoughtes of the wycked, so that they are not able too performe the thynges that they take in hande: whiche compasseth the wyse in theyr owne craftines, & ouerthroweth the counsel of the wycked. In so muche that they run into darknes by fayle daye, and grope about them at the noone daye, lyke as in the nyghte.

And so he deliuereth the poore from the swearde, from the mouthe, and from the hand of the cruel, that the poore may haue hope, and that the mouthe of the oppresoure maye be stopped.

Beholde, happy is the man whom God punissheth: therefore despyse not thou the chastenynge of the almighty. For though he make a wounde he geueth a medicine agayne: though he be synne, hys hande maketh hole agayne.

(a) He deliuereth the out of fyre troubles, so that in the end there can no harme touch the. In the myddest of hunger he saueh the from death: and when it is war, from the power of the swearde.

He shall kepe þ from the scourge of the tongue, so that when trouble cometh, thou shalt not neede to feare. In haueock & verth thou shalt be merce, and shalt not be afraid of the beastes of the pearthe: But the stones in the lande shall be confederate wth the, and the beastes of the field shall geue the peace.

Yea thou shalt know that thy dwelling place shall be in peace: thou shalt beholde thy substance, and be no more punished for sinne. Thou shalt see also, that thy seed shall increase, and that thy progenye shall be as the grasse vpon the earth. Thou shalt come too thy graue in a fayre age, lyke as come sheues are broughte into the barn in due season: Loo, this is the thyng that we oure selues haue proued by experience. Therefore nowe that thou hearest it, take better hede to thy selfe.

The Notes.

(a) He deliuereth the, &c. This sentence propounded after the maner of a Prophecy, signifieth al one wyth that of Paule i Cor. x. c. God is faithful whiche shall not suffer you to be tempted aboue your strengthe, but wyl in the myddest of temptation make a waye to escape oute. Elphas meaneth, he hath vnderstande the in many mysertes, but when the strength cometh, and when it shall seeme to hym that the offence is sufficiently punished, and that thou hast lesse thyne impacience (for that lareth he to Job, though vniustly) then wyl he prosper the wth

The. v. Chapter.

Job answered, that his payne is moze greuous then his faute, yet not wythstandynge he belitteth therein.

Job answered, and sayd: O that my my-serie were weped, and my punishment layde in the balaunces: for then shulde it be heuier then the sande of the sea. This is the cause that my words are so sorowful

(a) For the arrowes of the almyghty are in me, whose indignation hath droncke vp my spyrte, and the terrible feares of God frighte agaynst me. Dothe the wynde alle coate when he hath the grasse. Or crieth the ore, when he hath the fodder prough? That whych is vsfauere, shall it be eaten with oute salte, or is there any taste in the white of an egge? The thynges that some time I might not away with, are now my meate for very sorowe. O I might haue my de-spyre: O I might haue my desire: O I might haue my thing that I long for, that he wold begyn & smite me, that he wold let his hand go and hewe me downe. Then shulde I haue some comfort for I wolde despise him in my pain, that he shulde not spare, for I wil not be agaynst the wordes of the holpe one.

What power haue I to endure. Or what is my ende, that my soule myghte be parepente? Is my strengthe the strengthe of stones? Or is my fleshe made of brasse? Is it not so that there is in me no helpe: and that (b) my substaunce is taken from me?
That is in tribulation oughte to be comforted of his neyghboure: but (c) the feare of the Lorde is cleane awaye: myne owne brythren passe ouer by me as I water broke that hathelp runneth thowowe the valeys But thei that feare the Lorde, the snow shall fall vpon them.

When they tyme cometh, they shall be destroyed and perishe: and when they be set on fyre, they shall be remoued out of their place, for the pathes that they go in, are cro-ked: they haue after vayne thynges, & shall perishe. Considre the pathes of a heman, and the wayes of Saba, wherein they haue put theyr trust. Confounded are they that put any confidence in them. For whi? they came to obtayne the thynges they looked for: they were broughte to confusyon.

Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but nowe that ye se my myserie, ye are afrayed did I despise you too come hyther? Or, too geue me anye of your substaunce? To deli-uer me from the enemyes hande, or to saue me from the power of the myghty? Teache me and I will hold my tongue: and if I do erre, shewe me wherein.

Wherefore blame ye then the wordes, that are well and truly spoken? whych of you can reprove them? Saunge on ye that ye are so til to checke mennes sayings and canne speake manye wordes in the wynde. Ye fall vpon the fetherles, and goo aboute to ouerthrowe your owne frende.

Wherefore loke not onely vpon me, but vpon your selues: whether I lye or no. Turne into your owne selues (I praye you) be indifferente iudges, and consydre myne vngyleynesse: whether there be anye vnryghteousnesse in my tongue, or vayne wordes in my mouth.

The Notes.

(a) The arrowes of the almyghty after some mens opinion, are the sorowes of his iudgement, and his wrath: after some other, they are the trouble whych the law moueth in the hertes of men, whyle they ther by are stiered to hate them selues, and so are healthfullye hyllid, as it is sayd. Psal. cxxviii. Some agayne expounde them to be the crose of misery and wretchednes wherein God had now wrapped hym. For the sarpentes (say they) receyue theyr crose of the hand of God. The same wyl, that this sentence be an increasing and amplifying of that, whych his aduersarie had fiercely layd agaynst hym. El-phas in the begynnyng of the fourth chapter had sayd that the plage was come vpon hym, and had touchid hym, with this (say they) message he now. Beholde, it not onely toucheth me, but wounderth me with arrowes, and those de-uomed with venome, happily with the gail of Dragons, with which touching, both my blood wareth woode, and all my spirite is supped vp.
Moreover, God hath not onely throwen these dartes vpon me, but also his deadly feares, that is, what sorow he hath that is terrible, lay-eth he on me.

(b) That my substaunce is taken from me. The Chalde interprete. hath: My substaunce is departed from me. And that after Job wholow the wife dome of dysoluyng iudgements & tryng of thynges. As though he shuld say, so sore is my greife syth my helpe is taken from me, that I am not permitted to breath so longe, tyll I maye call to remembraunce what is most acceptable to god.
Some reade: Is not all the strengthe of myne in foycement gone from me?

(c) But the feare of the Lorde. &c. As though he sayd: but alas now adayes, there is no feare of the Lorde left: & therfore it is no mirrall if charitie also whych is loyded to the feare of God, be not in vs.

The. vii. Chapter.

Job sheweth that this lyfe is but a battell or warfare.

A Warfare is the life of manne vpon earth, and his daies are like I daies of an hyred seruaunte. For like as a bonde seruaunte despyeth the shadow, and as an hyrlyng wolde sayne haue an ende of his worke: euen so haue I laboured hole monethes longe, (but in vayne) and many a carefull nyghte haue I tolde. When I layde me downe to slepe, I sayde: When shall I aryse? Agayne, I longed sore for the nyghte. Thus am I replete with sorowes, tyll it be darcke. My fleshe is clothed with wounnes, fylthynes and dust: my skynne is wathered and crompted together, my daies passe ouer more hastely, then a weauer can weave oute his web: and are gone or I am ware. Remembet, that my life is but a wind and that mine eye shall no more se the pleasures thereof, and that none other mans eye

eye shall see me any more. For if thou fasten thine eyes upon me, I come to nought, like as a cloude is consumed and vanishes away: even so he that goeth downe to hell, cometh no more up, ne turneth agayne into his house, ne yett shall his place know hym any more.

Therefore I will not spare my mouth, but will speake in the trouble of my spirit in the bitterness of my minde. I will talke: Am I a sea or a Whale sphe, that thou kepest me so in prison? When I saie: my bed shall comforte me, I shall haue some rest: I will talke by my selfe upon my couch, then troublest thou me with dreames, and makest me so afraid thow visions, that my life wisheth rather to be strangled, and my bones be deade.

I can see no remedy. I shall lye no more. Spare me then for my dayes are but vaine. What is manne, that thou haste hym in such regarde, and settest so much by hym. Thou takest diligent care for hym, and so deniest doest thou tye hym.

Why goest thou not from me, ne letttest me alone, so longe tyme I swallowe downe my spittle? I haue offended, what shall I do vnto the, o thou preseruer of men. Why haste thou made me to stande in thy waye, and am so heauy a burthen vnto my selfe. Why doest thou not forgieue me my sinne? Wherfore takest thou not awaye my wickednes? Behold, nowe must I sleepe in the dust: and if thou seekest me to morow in the morninge, I shall be gone.

The. xii. Chapter.

Job is reprehended and noted to haue deserved his payne. A description of his poyson.

Then answered Baldad the Shuite, and sayde: Howe longe wylt thou talke of such thynges? howe longe shall thy mouth speake so proud wordes? Doth God peruert þ thing that is lawful? Or doth he the almyghty destroy the thing that is right? When thy sonnes spinned agaynst hym, did not he punyssh them for wickednes? If thou woldest now resort vnto God by tynes and make thine humble prayer to the almyghty: if thou wouldest lye a pure and a godly lye: shulde he not wake up vnto the forthewyth, and giue the the brufte of righteousness agayne? In so muche, that wherein soeuer thou hadst a litle afore, thou shuldest now haue a great aboundance. Enquire of the that haue ben before the, searche diligently amonge thy forefathers. (For we are but of yester day, and we knowe not that oure dayes vpon earth are but a verie shadowe.) They shall shewe the, they shall tell the, yea they shall gladly confesse the same.

Shalpe a rushe be grene withoute moisture? shalpe the grasse growe without water? No, but if or euer it be shot forth, and or euer it be gathered, it withereth, before any other herbe. Even so goeth hit with all them that forget God, and euen thus also shall the hypocrites hope come to nought. ^{hypocrites.} His confidence shall be destroyed, for he trusteth in a Spiders webbe. He leaneth hym vpon his house, but he shall not stande: he holdeth hym selfe fast by it, yett shall he not endure. Ofte tyme a thyng dothe flourish, and men thinke that it maye abide the sun shining: it sheweth forth braunches in his garden, it take th many rootes, in so much that it is like an house of stones.

But if it be taken out of his place, every manne denieth it, saying: I knowe the not. Lo, thus is it with hym that trusteth in his owne deuynges: and agayne other growe out of the earth.

Behoulde, God wyl not caste awaye an vpryghte manne, ne yett he helpe the vngodly. Thy mouth shall be fille with laughing, and thy lippes with gladnesse. They that hate the, shall be confounded, and the dwellinges of the vngodly shall come to nought.

The. ix. Chapter.

Job declareth the benefites of God, & howe mannes eyghenousnes is no thyng.

Job answered and sayd: Certes I knowe it is so of a truthe, that a man compared vnto God, canne not be iustified: If he wyl argu with hym, he shall not be able to aunswere hym one among a thousand. He is wyle of hearte, and myghty in strength. Who euer prospered, þ toke parte agaynst hym? (a) He tranlateth the mountaynes, or euer they be aware, and ouerthroweth them in his wyath. He remoueth the earth out of her place, and her pylers, he al to shaketh. He commaundeth the sunne, and it resteth not: he closeth by the sterres, as it were vnder a signet. He hym selfe alone spiedeth out the heauens, and goeth vpon the waves of þ sea. He maketh the waines of heauen, the Quons the seven sters, and the secrete places of the south: He doth great thynges such as are vnsearchable, yea and wonders withoute number.

If he came by me, I myghte not looke vpon hym: if he wente his way, I shuld not perceyue it. If he be hasty too take any thyng away, who shall make him restore it agayne? Who shall saie vnto hym: what doest thou? He is God, whose wyath no man can withstand: but the proudest of all must stoupe vnder hym. Howe shulde I then answer him, or what words shuld I finde out agaynst hym? Yea, though he be righteous yett wil I not geue hym one word agayne, but mekely submit my selfe to my iudge. Albeit that I call vpon him, and he heare me, yett am I not sure that he hath heerd my voice: he shall trouble me so with the tempest, and wound me out of measure without cause. He shall not let my spirit be in rest, but shall lye with bitterness.

If men wyl speake of strengthe, he is the strongeste of all: if men wyl speake of righteousnesse, who dare be my recorde?

(b) If

(b) If I will suffice myself, mine own mouth shall condemn me: If I will put forth myself for a perfect man, he shall prove me a wicked doer: For that I should be an innocent, my conscience knoweth it not: yea I myself am woe of my life.

This one thing will I say: He despiseth both the righteous and ungodly. And though he sleep suddenly in the scourge, yet laugheth he at the punishment of the iniquitous. As for the world, he giveth it over to the power of the wicked, such as the rulers be, wherof all lands are full. Is it not so? What is there any but he is such one?

My days have been more swift than a pursuivant: they are gone suddenly, and have seen no good thing. They are passed away, as the thistles that are good under the sun, and as the eagle that hasteth to her prey. When I am purposed to forget my complainings, to change my countenance, and to comfort myself: then am I afraid of all my works. I know thou fauourest not an evil doer. If I be then a wicked one, why have I laboured in vain? Though I washed myself with snow water, and made my hands never so cleane, yet shouldst thou dreyne me in the mire, and mine owne clothes should defile me. For he that I must give answer to, & with whom I go to law, is not a man as I am. Neither is there any dayes men to reprove both the parties, or to laye his hand between vs. Let him take his rod away from me, & let him make me more afraid of him: & then shall I answer him without feare. For as long as I am in such fearefulness, I can, make no answer. And why? it grieveth my soule to lye.

The Notes.

(a) God tranſlateth the mountaynes: not onely these of the earth, but also the arrogant & proud tyrants, and the great realmes of the world which by a borrowed speache are often times in the scripture signified by mountaynes & hilles. So translated he Pharaos Egypt, & the king of Babel, & the king of Assyria.

(b) Here is it good to see that Job presumeth not of his owne righteousness: nor magnifyeth him selfe of his owne good works, though they were many, as it appeareth in the chapter. Both before and after, but playnly confesseth him selfe vnrightheous and a sinner before God, although before the world he had lived blamelesse. God looketh on the heart though men looke but onely on the outward apperance. His aduersaries thought that he should neuer have had suche a crosse layde on him, unless then he had outwardly and openly lived in wickednesse. So that answereth Job in diuers places, that he therein was not culpable, and therefore accuseth as it were after the manner of me, the iudgement of God, concerninge such as are outwardly righteous, and studiously to lye verthuouly: namelye suche as lye without blame amonge men, and that bothe entende, and do wel to all men, and yet are wrapped in many miseries and wickednes, often tyme over cruel. And herein lieth, the chiefe of the controuersie.

spe betwixt Job and his aduersaries, that Job defendeth him selfe not to haue deserved his punishment by his outward sinning: where as his aduersaries argued only with him inwardly and secretly with, thought God to be vnrightheous if he would so greatly punish him: but that had not bene an outward sinner against him. Job his conscience beareth by a witness had lived innocently and straightly, and hurt no manne, had alwayes feared God and worshipped him onely, his children also had he nourished to the feare of God, and hadde harboured the strangers, and bene lyberall to the needy, and coulde of no man be accused of wickednes. Yet when Job himselfe saith: as if the godly do that he was not utterly without sinne, for otherwise had he bene a liar. John 1. If we saye, we haue no synne, we deceiue our selues, and truche is not in vs. Wherefore in the places where he sayeth that he hath not deserved his punishment, and that should come to him, he knoweth that he is cleane of his outward manner of living, not of the inward thoughtes and desires of the heart, whereto he was undoubtedly an offender.

The .x. Chapter.

Job is weary of his lyfe, and setteth out of his fragyltye before God. He despyeth tyme to repent. A description of death.

NEVERTHELESSE, no more will I put forth my wordes: I will speake out of the berpe beautyfull of my soule, and will say vnto God. And doo not condemne me, but shewe me the cause why thou indigeste me on this manner? Why keepest thou it well done to oppresse me, to cast me off (beinge a worke of thy handes) and to magnifye the counsell of the ungodly? Hast thou shewen open, or doste thou loke as a man looking? Are thy peres as mannes peres, that thou makest suche iniquity for my wickednes, and searchest out my sinne: wher as thou knowest I am no wicked person, and that there is no man habile to rescue me out of thyne hand. Thyne handes haue made me, and fashioned me altogether round aboute, & thou then doste hope me suddenly? Remember (I beseech thee) that thou madest me of the molde of earthe, and shalt bringe me to earth again. Hast thou not milked me like milke, and pressed me lyke cheese? Thou hast covered me with thy skinne and flesh, and topned me together with bones and sinewes. Thou hast graunted me lyfe, and done me good: and thou diligentest heede that thou takest vp on me, hast preserved my spirite.

Though thou hydest these thynges in thyne heart: yet am I sure that thou rememberest them all. Wherefore dyddest thou kepe me, when I sinned, and haste not cleansed me from myne offence? If I do wickedlye, woe is me therefore: If I be righteous, yet doste thou not lyste vp my head: so full am I of confusion, and seming omne misery.

Thou huntest me oute, & oppressed with heynesse, as it were a Lion, and troublest me beyonde all measure: Thou bringest the frewe witnesse against me, thy witnesse

increased thou upon me: full many are the plages that I am in. Wherefore haste thou brought me out of my mothers wombe?
Or that I had perished, and that no eye had seen me. Yf they had carped me to my grave, as soon as I was borne, they should I be nowe as though I had never bene.

Shall not my worst lyfe come soon to an ende? Or holde the from me, let me alone that I may ease my selfe a lytle afore I go thither, whence I shal not returne. Namelye to that land of darknes & shadow of death: yea into the darke cloudy lande and deadly shadow, where as is no order, but terrible feare continuallye abydeth.

The. xi. Chapter.

Job is vniustly reprobued of Sophar. For is not reprovable. He is merciful to & repeat

The answered Sophar & Amathite and saide: Should not he that maketh many wordes be answered? Should he that babbleth muche be commended? He in? Should we geue eare vnto & only? Thou wylt laugh other men to scorne, & shal no body mocke the agayne? Wylt thou say vnto God: the thyng that I take in hande is perfecte, and I am cleane in thy syghte?
Or that God woulde speake, and open his lips against & that he myght shew the out of his secret wysdome how many folde his law is, then shouldest thou know that god had forgotten the bycause of thy synnes.

Wylt thou finde out God with thy se-kynge? Wylt thou attayne to the perfecte nesse of the almyghty? He is hygher then heauen, what wylt thou doo? Deper then the helle, howe wylt thou then knowe him? His length exceedeth the length of the earth, and his bredth the bredth of & seas.
Though he turne althyngs vp set downe, close them in, or thrust them together, who dare checke him therfore?

For it is he that knoweth & vanity of me, beseech their wickednes also, shuld he not then consider it? A bayne bodye vaunteth him selfe, and the sonne of man is like a wylde asses foale. Yf thou haddest nowe a tyght beet, and lyfdest vp thyne handes towards hym: if thou wouldest put awaye the wickednes whych thou hast in hande, so that no vngodlynes dwelte in thy house then myghtest thou lyfe vp thy face without shame, then shouldest thou be sure, and have no neede to feare.

When shouldest thou forget thy mysery, and thinke no more of it then of the waters that runne by. When shouldest thou lyfe be as cleare as the noone daye, and spryng forth as the morning. When mightest thou haue comforte in the hope that thou hast:
and sleepe quyetlye when thou art layed in. When shouldest thou take thy rest, & no man to make the afeared, yea manye one should sette muche by the. But the eyes of the vngodlye shal be consumed and not escape: they hope shall be mysery and sotowre of mynde.

The. xii. Chapter.

Job in shewing his patience declareth & might and power of god.

So Job answered & said: Now bindoustedly I se ye are only men, and shal tell dome nye myth you? But I haue vnderstandyng as wel as ye, and am no lesse thyng. Yea who knoweth not those thyngs Thus he & calleth vpon God, & whos God heareth. is mocked of his neyghboure: the godly and gyrlles man: so laughed to scorne Godlines is the lampe despyed in the ver-res of the cyche, and is set for them to stom-ble vpon. The houses of robbers are in wealthe and prosperyty, and they that ma-liciouslye meddle agaynst God dwell without feare: yea God gyueth al thyngs richly wryth his hande. For aske the cattelle, & they shal enseme the: the foules of & ayre, and they shal tel the: Speake to the earth, and it shal shew the: Or to the fishes of the sea, and they shal receyue the.

Who is he that knoweth not that the hand of the Lord made all these? In whose hande is the soule of euery lyuynge thyng and the breathe of all men? Haue not the eares pleasure in hearyng, and the mouth in tastynge the thyng that it eateth? & monge olde personnes there is wysdome, amonge the aged is vnderstandyng. Yea with God is wysdome, and strenght, it is he that bathe counsell and foreknowledge Yf he breake downe a thyng, who es set it vp agayne? If he shutte a thyng, who wyl open it? If he wyth hold the waters they dry vp: If he let them go, they desroy the earth. Wyth him is strenght and wise-dome: he knoweth both the desceiuer and him that is dysceyued. He carryeth awaye the wyse men, as it were a spoyle, & byn-geth the iudges out of their wys: He looseth the handes of kyniges, & gyrdeth their loynes wryth a bande.

He leadech awaye & pyrestes into capty-uety, & turneth the myghty vp set downe He taketh & teareth out of the mouth, & dis-pointeth the aged of their wysdome. He poureth out confusion vpon princes, & comforteth the that haue be oppressed. Like what lyeth hid in darknes, he declareth it open ly: and the very shadow of death byngeth he to lycht. He both increaseth the people, and destroyeth the. He maketh the to multiple, & dyuerteth the w awaye.

He changerh the best of the prynces and kyniges of the earthe, and dysappointeth them: so that they go wanderyng out of the way, & grope in the darcke without lighte raggering to and fro like dyken men.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Job reprobueh his frendes with theyr owne sayings, and condemneth hypocrytes.

Let al this haue I sene wth mine eie^s hearde wth mine eare, and vnderstande it. I looke what ye knowe, that I knowe also, neither am I inferior vnto you. Neuertheles I am purposed to talke wth the almighty, and my desyre is to comen wth God. As for you, ye are workemasters of lyes, and unprofitable physicians altogether. Would God ye kept your tongue, that ye myghte be taken for wthse me. Therefore heare my wordes, and ponder the sentence of my lyyes: Wyl ye make answer for God wth lyes, and mapnetapne hym wth dysceytes? Wyl ye accept the person of God, and intreate for hym? Shall that heaue you, when he calleth you to accomptes? Thyncke ye to be gyle hym, as a manne is begyled? He shall puny the you, and reprove you, if ye doo se-cretely accepte anye person. Shall he not make you a scapde, when he sheweth hym selfe? Shall not his terribyle feare fall vpon you? your remembraunce shal be lyke duste, and pyrde shal be touned to claye. Holde your tonges now, and let me speake, for there is somethynge come into my mynde.
 (a) Wherefore do I beate my fleshe in my trett, and my soule in mine hands? Is ther to neither comfort or hope for me, if he wil dep me. But if I bitter & reprove mine own wapes in his syghte, he is euen the same that maketh me hole: and why? I bet maye no dyssembler come before hym. Beate my wordes, and ponder my sayings wth your eares. (b) Beholde nowe haue I prepared my iudgemente and knowe that I shall be founde ryghtous. What is he that wyl go so lame wth me? For if I holde my tong, I shall dye. Neuerthelesse grante me two thynges, and then wyl I not hyde my selfe from the.

Wth this answer shal I haue from me, & let not the feryful bread of the, make me afeard And then sende for me to the same, that I may answer for my self, or els let me speake and geue thou the answer.

How great are my mysdoedes and synnes? Let me knowe my transgressions and offences. Wherefore hydest thou thy face, and holdest me for thine enemy? Wilt thou be so cruel and extreme vnto a dyng leafe, and folow vpon dyr fuble, that thou lapest so sharply to my charge, and wilt vetely vndome for the synnes of my youth?
 Thou hast put my fete in the stocks: thou lokest narrowly vnto al my pates, & mar-kest the steppes of my fete: wbet I must e some lyke a foule carpon, and as cloth that is mothe eaten.

The Notes.

(a) Wherefore, &c. These bothe are prouerbs ly spoken, of th^e that after they lyeues to T^empar dy, and spare not them selues. For he spareth not hym selfe that feareth his fete in his trett, & agayne he that bereth his soule in his hand, carieth it as a thing redy to be sold, and as though he wold streyghte haue it, and cast it of.

(b) Behold, &c. this is his meynynge. The sum of my contention was this, thus dyd I order & defend my cause agaynst your reasons, that my hope is to be iustified. I med wth this feyth, I come wthout feare vnto iudgement. He wyl not pronounce him vneighteous & so vntained ly ho^u trusted to his mercy. Hypocrites, the rice they are to iudgement, the more they fear: I & nuer am to deaty the more strong is my hope.
 (c) Wherefore he dyd & thy face. What & hidding of his face meaneth, looke Deut. xxxi. 6.

The.xiii.chapter.

God describeth the life of man, and prophessyeth of the resurrection hope susteyneth the Goddeipe, tyll they haue that they looke for.

Man that is borne of a woman, hath but a short tyme to lyue, and is full of dyuers miseries. He cometh be-up, and faileth away lyke a floure. Hee de-eth as it were a shadowe, and neuer countenaerth in one state. Thynke thou it now wel done, to open thine eyes vpon such one and to bypne me before the iudgement?
 Who can make that cleane, that cometh of vnclene seede? Nobody. The days of ma-are short, the number of his monethes are knowe onely vnto the. Thou hast appointed hym his boundes, he cannot go beyond them. Good from hym, that he may rest a litle, vntill his daye come which he loketh for, lyke as an byrlinge doth.

Yf a tree be cut do wne, ther is some hope yet that it wil sprout & shal forth the vna-ches agayne. For though a rote be waken olde and dead in the ground, yet when the focke getteth the sent of water, it wyl bud and bypne furthe boughes, lyke as when it was fyrst planted. But man when he is dead, perished and consumed away, what becommeth of hym? The foudes whet they be dyed vpon, and the cyters when they be emptye, are filled agayne: howe the flow-ynge waters of the sea: but when man sle-peth, he is flet vnto agayne: vntill the heauen receyue, he shall not vponerise oute of his slepe. O that thou wouldest kepe me, & hyde me in the hel, vntill thy a^rch were filled: and to appoynt me a tyme, when in thou myghtest recomfort me. As a deade man lyue agayne? All the dayes of thys my pylgrymage, am I loking whet my chaunginge shal come. Yf thou wouldest but cal me, I should obey the: onely despise not & worke of thine owne handes.

For thou hast numbred al my goluges, yet be not thou extreme vpon my synnes.
 Thou hast sealed vpon myne offences, as it were in a bagge: but be mercifull vnto my wyckednesse. The mountaynes fallie a waye at the laste, the rockes are moued out of theyr place, the waters pearse through the very stones by litle and litle, the foudes washe awaye the grauell and earth: Euen so destroyest thou the hope of man. Thou preuayleste agaynst hym, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungest his state, and putted him to orde. Whether his children come to worshipping or no, he can not tell: And if they be men of lowe degree, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyueth, hys flesh must haue trauaile: and while the soule is in hym, he must be in sorow.

The. xv. Chapter.

Eliphaz reproveth Job because he ascribeth wth some a id purties to hym selfe. He desireth both the curse that falleth on the wicked, teaching Job to be one of the number.

Then a s^rered Eliphaz the Temanite, and sayd: (a) Shuld a wise mā answer as the sentence of the wynd, and sylpys help wth the topud of the East? Then reproveth wth wordes that are no thynge worth: and speaketh thynge whiche can do no good. As for shame thou hast set asyde, els wouldest thou not make so many wordes before God: but thy wickednes teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen the a crafty tounge. Thyne owne mouth condemneth the, and not I: yea thyne owne lippes shapeth the an answer, Art thou the sprit mā that euer was boier? Or wast thou made before the hills? Hast thou hearde the secreete counselle of God, that all wysdome is to lytle for the? What knowest thou that we knowe not? What vnderstandest thou, but we canne the same? Wth vs are olde and aged men yea suche as haue lyued longer then thy fore fathers.

I thinkst thou it a smal thynge of p^r conso- lations of God: and art thou wth the a (b) springe worde? whyp both thyne herte make the so proude? Whyp standest thou so greatly in thine owne conceyte? Where vnto looke thine eyes, that thy mynde is so puffed vp agaynst God, and lettest suche wordes go oute of thy mouth? What is man, that he shoulde be cleane? what hath he (whych is borne of a woman) wherby he might be knowne to be rightuous? Behold there is no truste to his sayntes: yea the verpe (c) heauens are not cleane in hys sight. How muche more then an abhominable & vyle man, whych (d) dypneth wickednes lyke inaree? I wil tel the, heare me: I wil shew the a thynge that I knowe, whych the wyse men haue tolde, and hath not bene hydde from the: fathers, vnto whom oulpe the lande was gauen, that no strainger shoulde come amouge them.

The vngodlye disparreth all the dares of his life, and the number of a tyrantes peres are vnkowne. A fearefull sound is euer in hys eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction: He beleueth neuer to be deliuered out of darknes, the sword is alwaye before his eyes. When he goeth forth to get hys lpyng, he thynketh plainly that the dape of darknes is at hande. Sorow and carefullnes make hym afraid and contrait by a roundabout, lyke as it were a konge wth hys booke readpe to the battayle. For he hath stretched out hys hande agaynst God, and armed hym selfe agaynst the almyghyte. He runneth proude upon hym, and wth a styffe necke sygheth he agaynst hym: where as he couereth his face wth farnes, and maketh hys bodye well lpyng. Therefore shal hys dwellinge be in desolat cyties, and in houses which no man inhabytereth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shal not be ryche, neyther shal hys substance contynue, nor encrease upon earth. He shal neuer come out of darknes, the flame shal drye vp hys branches: wth the blast of the mouth of God shal he be taken awaye. He wyl neyther applpe hym selfe to sapthynes ne truthe, so sore is he despayred wth vanyte.

He shal perishe afore hys tyme be wyne oute, and hys hande shal not be grene. He shal be plucked of as an vnrypelye grape from the vyne, and shal lette hys floure fall as the olyue dotte. For the congregacyon of hypocrytes is vnsentfull, and the fyre shal consume the houses of such as are gedy to receyue graces. He conceyeth trauaile, he beareth myschyse, and hys bodye dypneth for the discepte.

The Notes

(a) That is, should a wise man speake vayne wordes, and should he hym selfe be vayne and vult by wth vnprofitable and crysclyng doctrine? He call wynd d^reth by al thinges, & thre fore by a hely filled with it, & signified by a bowed s^r, each, a stamcke or hert, out of whiche proceedeth suche false doctrine as d^reth by the mortnes of the soule in trilling out p^r truth.

(b) Some read, secreete. The whole sentence doeth v^o. Moyses thus cry vnde. God can p^r comfort the agayne in thy lyfe, & g^ridest thou so lyttell by a comforte, and t^rick's thim for a lyer? Other thus: Heare the comfortes of men of grauity Eldad and Sophar v^o wth for the, and seme thy to the lyer.

(c) Under the name of the heauens, vnderstandeth he the angelles.

(d) To dypne wickednes lyke water, is, to be filled wth wickednes: it is a manner of speking of p^r deu. uer. so to dypne shynfulnes signifieth to be fylled ther wth, as after in the. xix. a.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Job repenting his misery, saith that he suffereth more the hys wickednes hath deserued.

Job answered and said: I haue oft tymes hearde such thinges, miserable genets of comfort are ye al the sort of you. Shal not thy vayne wordes come yet to an end? Or hast thou anye more to saye? I coulde speake as ye do also, But woulde God that your soule were in my soules steade: then shoulde I heape vp wordes agaynst you, and shake my heade at you. I shoulde comfort you wth my mouth, and t^rease your payne wth the talking of my lips. But what shal I do? For al my wordes, my sorowe wil not cease: and though I bold my t^rge yet wil it not depart frome. And now that I am full of paine, and al p^r I haue destroyed (whereof my wyndles beare wthnesse) there standeth by a dyssembler to make me answereth with lies to my face. He is angry at me, he hateth me, and qualifieth upon me with his teeth. As the enemy scoulerh upon me with his eyes.

E They haue (a) opened theyr mouthes wyde vpon me, and smitten me vpon the cheeke belpytely: they haue eased theyr feluts thow to mine aduersity. God hath giuen me ouer to the vngodly, and deliuered me into the handes of the wycked. I was sometime in wealth, but sodaynely he hath brought me to nought. He hath takē me by the necke, he hath rent me, and set me as it were a marche for him to note at: he hath compassed me round about with his darts, he hath wounded my loynes, and not spared. As bothels hath he poured vpon the ground. He hath giuen me one wounde vpon an other, and is fallen vpon me lyke a gaunte. I haue sowed a sacke cloth vpon my skynne, and I lyke vpon my strength in the duste.

D My face is swollen with weppynge, and myne eyes are waxed brinne. Howe be it that is no wyckednesse in my handes, and my prayer is cleane. (b) O earth couer not my bloude, and let my crying synne no coume. For loo, my wyrtnesse is in heauen, and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the veryd. My frends laugh me to scorn, but mine eye pouerth out teares vnto god. Though a dooer myghte please with God as one man doeth with another, yet the number of my yeares are come, and I muste goo the waye, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

The Notes.

(a) To open theyr mouthes, spaketh to thys ten wyth most extreme and cruel punishment, and to repress wyth thankfull and spytell wordes, as in the 134. psalme.

(b) O earth couer not my bloude, that is, as Abraham expoundeth it: byde not my bloude but that it be auenged, let not the auengement therof be unknowne, but open vnto all mennes eyes, as was the auengment of Dathan & Abiram, whom the earth swallowed. Psal. xvi. c. Ye may also expound it thus: byde not my bloude, but let it testify and witness mine innocency, as did the bloude of Abel, of whom we reade that his bloude cryed from the earth. Gen. in the. iiii. b.

The xviii. Chapter.

Job sayth that he consumeth away, and yet doth patiently abyde it.

My breath sapleth, my daies are thowred. I am harde at dearies doze, I haue deceyued no manne, yet muste mine eye continue in ventres. O deliuer me, & set me by: who shall the be able to thrust my handes together? Thou hast myrthbroken theyr herres frome vnderstandynge. therefore shall they not be set vp on hye. He promyseth his frendes parte of his good, but his owne children spende it. He hath made me as it were a byword of the comune people. I am his gebynge stocke amonge them. My countenance is beaue for very anger, and the members of my body are become lyke a hyadme. Wertuous me therefore shall wel consider thys, & the innocent shall take part against the hypocrite.

The righteous wyll kepe his waye, and be that hath cleane handes, wyll sette stronger and stronger. As for you, touch you and get you hence, for I can not se one wyse man among you. My daies are past, my thoughtes are vanyshed as an, whych haue vered mine hert, changynge the night into daye, and the spgyre into darkness. Though I say neuer so much, yet I graue is my house, and I muste make my bedde in the darke. I call corruption my father, and the wormes call I my mother and my syster. What helpeth then my longe tarynge? Or who wyll fulfyll the thinge that I loke for? All that I haue shall go downe into the pit, & I lyke with me in the duste.

The xviii. Chapter.

Baldad rehereth the paines of the vnfaithfull and wycked.

The answered Baldad the Subit, and sayd: when wyll ye make an ende of your wordes? Marke well and consider, we wyll speake also. Wherefore are wee counted as beasts, and reputed so vile in your sygyre? Why destroyeste thou thy selfe with anger? Shall the earth be forsaken, or the stones remoued out of theyr place because of the? Shall not the lyghte of the vngodlye be put out? yea the flame of his fyre shall not burne. The lyght shall be darke in his dwellinge, and his candle shall be put out in him. His presumptuous goynge shall be kept in, and his owne counsel shall caste him downe. For his sece shall be taken in the net, and he shall walke in the snare. His forte shall be vobd in the trap, and the byrty shall catch him. The snare is layed for hym in the grounde, and a pit falleth in the waye.

Fearefulness shall make hym a strayd on euerye side, that he shall not knowe where to get oute. Longer shall be his substance, and misfortune shall hange vpon hym. He shall eate the strength of his skynne (a) the fyre borne of deathe shall eate his members. All his comforte and hope shall be red out of his dwellinge, very fearefulness shall drynge him to the kenge.

(b) Other men shall dwel in his house (whiche now is none of his) and byrnestone shall be scattered vpon his habitation. His rores shall be dryed vpon bench, and aboue shall his haue be curre downe. His remembrance shall perishe from the earth, & his name shall not be prayled in the streets: he shall be hyuen from the lyght into the darkness, and be cast elene out of the worlde, he shall neyther haue children nor kynfolke among his people, no, ne anye posterity in his country: younge and olde shall be astonished at his deathe. Such are now the dwellings of the wycked, & this is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

The Notes.

(a) That is, on horrible and sodayne deathe. E. iii. Some

Some reade the pynce of death.

(b) That he shal dwell: that is to saye to hys wife withoute hym.

The. xix. Chapter.

Job receyvethe his myseryes, & greuous paynes
He prophesyeth of the generall resurrection.

Job answered and sayde: how long wyl ye bere my mynde, and trouble me wth wordes? Too ten tymes haue ye repro-ued me: are ye not ashamed to laughe me to scorn? if I go wronge, I go wronge to my selfe. But if ye enhaunce your selues a-gainste me, and accuse me to be a wycked person because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe thys then, that it is God whiche hath handled me so violently, and hath compassed me aboute wth his scout ges. Behold, though I crye, yett my voice is done vnto me, I can not be heard: Though I complayne, ther is none to geue sentence vnto me. He hath hedged vp my parde, I can not gett away, he hath sett darknes in my gate. He hath spoyled me of mine honour & taken (a) the crowne away from my heade.
He hath destroyed me on euerye syde, & I am vndon: My hope hath he taken awaye from me, as it were a tree plucked by the roote.
His wrath is kyndled agaynste me, he taketh me as though I were his enemye.

His men of war came together, whiche made theyr way ouer me, and besieged my dwelling: they ronne aboute. He hath put my brethren far away from me, and such as were of myne acquaintance, are become strangers vnto me. Myne owne kinsfolke haue forsaken me, and my frendes haue put me out of remembrance. The seruantes and maidens of mine own house, take me for a stranger, and I am become as an aleunt in their syghte.

When I call vpon my seruante, he geueth me no answer: no though he praye hym wth my mouth. Myne owne wyfe mape not abyde my breath, I am fayne to speake: say vnto the chyldren of mine own body. Yea the verrey foolles despyse me, and when I am gone from them, they speake euill vpon me. All such as were my most familiars abhorre me: and they whom I loued best, are turned agaynst me. My bone banger to my kyn, and my flesh is away, onlye ther is left me the skynne about my teeth. Haue ppyte vpon me, haue ppyte vpon me (O ye my frendes) for the bande of the fowle hath touchd me. Why do ye persecute me (b) as God and (c) are not satisfied of my flesh?

That my wordes were wyrtten, & that they were put in a booke: woulde God they were grauen wth an yron penne in leed or in stone. For I am sure that my resurrection is. And that I shal ryse oute of the earth in the later daye: that I shal be clothed agayne wth this skin, and se god in my flesh. Yea I my selfe shal beholde him not wth other, but wth these same eyes.
My preyne is consumed within me, when ye say: Why do not we persecute hym? we haue founde an occasion agaynst him. But beware of the sweerde, for the sweerde wyl be auenged of wyckednesse, and be sure that there is a iudgement.

The Notes.

(a) Rabbi Abraham vnderstandeth by the crowne the dignitie that cometh to the ryche by the menes of theyr ryches: for a man hath the ryche in honour: although he come vnderstande thereby his chyldren, as in the p^{ro}uerbe. The crown of oultre men are theyr chyldrens chyldren. Other come vnderstande the bypocryte that came vnto hym of hys wysdome and cunninge. So Jobs meanynge is, that of a worshipful & ryche man, he is become poore & despyled.

(b) The heabynes reade as they doo, meanynge the cruell whiche are not satisfyed wth hys fleshe: suche woulde he not that hys frendes shoulde counterfette.

(c) Are not satisfyed of my flesh. To rate and be satisfyed of a mans flesh, is a bowed spech taken both in the good and euill parte. In the good parte it signifieth to loue, to iudge frendly, and then at length to fall to prayse. In the euill parte, it is cruelly & beastly to mislay, (as it were) to scare wth spytful & harmoules wordes.

The. xx. Chapter.

Sophar sayeth, that the vnfaithfull, the couetouse and the wicked, shal haue a worst end.

Then answered Sophar the Naamathyte, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes compelle me to an-swere. And why? my mynde is tossed here & ther. I haue sufficiently herd thy checking and reprove, therefore am I purposed to make answer after myne vnderstandynge.
Knowest thou not this, namely that from the beginning (euer sithens the creatyng of man vpon earth) the praisse of the vngodlye hath bene worst, and that the top of bypo-crites continued but the twinklinge of an eye? Though he be magnified vnto he-uen, so that his head reacheth vnto the cloudes, yett he perissheth at the last lyke dong:
in so much that they which haue sene him, say: Where is he? He vanissheth as a dreame so that he is no more to be sene, & passeth away as a vision in the nyghte. So that the eye whiche sawe hym before, getteth now no syght of him, & hys place knoweth hym no more. Hys chyldren goo a begginge, their hands bring them to sorow and heauynesse.

From hys youth hys bones are full of vice, which shal lie downe wth him in the earth. When wyckednesse is sweete in hys mouth, he hideth it vnder his tounge. That he saoureth that wyl be not forsake, but keepeth it close in hys throte.

The meate that he eateth shal be turned to the poyson of serpentes within hys body. The ryches that he deuoureth, shal be peryshe agayne, for God shal drawe them out of hys bellye. (a) He shal sucke the serpentes head, and the adders tounge shal kysse him: so that he shal no more se the riuers and brookes of honpe and butter: But laboure shal be, and yett haue nothyng to eat. Create transyle shal he make for himselfe, but he shal not enioye them.

And

And whipe? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoiled, and not builded them. His helpe could neuer be spyled, therefore shall he perpe in his couetyse. He deuoured so greedelye that he lefte nothyng behynde, therefore his goodes shall not prospeare. Though he hadde forson of euery thyng, yet was he poore, and therfore he was but a wretch on euery spde.

For though he the wycked haue neuer so muche to spyl his bellie. yet God shall sende his wra the vpon hym, and cause his battayle to ragge ouer hym: so that if he flye the piron weapones, he shall be shotte wryth the Steele bowe. The arrowe shall be taken forth, and go oute at his backe, and a glysteringe swearde thorowe the gall of hym, feare shall come vpon hym. There shall no darcknesse be hable to hyde hym. And vnkynndled fyre shall consume hym, & loke what remaineth in his house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wickednesse, and the earthe shall take parte agaynst hym. The substance that he hath in his house, shall be taken awaye and perpe, in the dape of the Lordes wra the. This is the porcion that the wycked shall haue of God, and the heritage that he mai loke for of the Lorde.

The Notes.

(a) He shall sucke the serpent's brade, that is, he shall be subiect to al cursednes, and suffer al manner sorowes. It is such a manner of speech as is befoze in the Ekeles (b) of drinking wilkennes. (b) That is, he cannot hyde hym from perpyles.

The xxi. Chapter.

Job recytleth the prosperytie of the wycked and after describeth theyr sodayne euyl and destruction.

Job answered and sayd: O heare my wordes and amende your selues. Suffer me a litle, that I may speake also, and then laugh me wordes to scoone if ye wil. Is it with a man that I make this disputacion? Whiche if it were so, shoulde not my spirit be then in sore trouble? Marke me wel, be abashed, and laye your hande vpon your mouth. For when I ponde and conspder this, I am afrayd and my fleche is smitten with feare. Wherefore do wycked men lyue in healt he and prosperytie come to theyr old age, and encrease in riches? Their childrens children lue in their sight, and their generation befoze theyr eyes. Their houses are safe from al feare, for the rod of God doth not smite them. Their bullocke gendrieth, & that not oute of tyme: their cowe calueth, and is not vnfruteful.

They sende forth theyr children by flockes, and their sonnes leade the daunce. They beate wryth the tabrettes and harps and haue instrumentes of musike at theyr pleasure. They spend theyr daies in welth but sodenlye they go downe to hell. They saye vnto God: go from vs, we despie not the knowledge of thy wayes. What manner felowe is the almyghty, that we shuld erue hym? What profite shoulde we haue to submit oure selues vnto hym? Lo, there is utterlye no goodnesse in them, therefore will not I haue to do with the counsell of the vngodly. Howe ofte shall the candle of the wicked be put oute? howe ofte cometh their destruction vpon them? What socowe shall God geue them for theyr parte in his wra the? Yea they shall be as chaffe befoze the wynde, and as dulle that the soyme carpe the awaye.

And though he God saue theyr children from suche sorowe, yet will he so rewarde them selues that they shall knowe it. Their owne destruction and myserye shall they se wryth theyr eyes, and drynke of the fearful wra the of the almyghty. For what careth he what becommeth of his household after his death, whose moneths passe away swifter then an arrowe. In as muche then as God hath the hysse power of all, who can teache hym anye knowledge? One dyeth nowe when he is myghty, and at his best, rych, and in prosperiti: euen when his bowelles are at the fullest, * and his bones full of marpe. An other dyeth in sorow and heynnes, and neuer hadde good dayes. How slepe they bothe alke in the earth and the wormes couer them. But I know what ye thynke, pea and what ye ymagin agaynst me vngodly. For ye saye: where is the Synces palace? Where is the dwelling of the vngodly? Like anye manne that goeth by the waye, and (if he will not regard theyr tokens and dedes) he shall tell you, that the wicked is kepte vnto the dape of destruction, and that the vngodlye shall be broughte forth in the dape of wra the. Who dare reprove hym for his waies to his face, who rewarde the hym for the vngodlynes that he dothe? Yet shall he be broughte too his graue, and wathe amonge the heape of the deade. Then shall he be sayne too be buried among the stones by the broke side. All menne muste folowe him, and there are innumerable gone befoze hym. Howe bayne is the comforte that ye geue me? Are not your answers clene contrary to ryghte and truthe.

The xxi. Chapter.

Eliphaz reprehendeth Job of vnnecessarye fulnesse.

So Eliphaz the Temanite gaue answer and sayde: May a man be compared vnto God in wysdom, though he seme to hym selfe for to be lyke hym? What pleasure hath God in that thou art righteous? Or what dothe it profite hym, that thy wayes are perfect? Is he afrayd to reprove the, and to stepp forth with the into iudgement? Commeth not this for thy greete wickednes, and for thine vngodly dedes whiche are innumerable? Thou hast taken the pledge from thy brethren for noughte, and robbed the naked of theyr clothyng. So suche as were weatye, haste thou geue no water to drynke: thou hast withdrawn bread from the hungry: Shoulde such one then as useth violence, wronge & oppression (doing all thing of parcialitie, & having respect of persons) dwell in the land? Thou hast sent widowes away emptye, and oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

B Therefore arte thou compassed aboute wth snares on euery side, and thou shalt be feared wth feare. Shouldest thou then see no darkenesse? Shuld not the water floud runne ouer thee? Nowe because that God is higher then the heauens, and because thou seest that the sterres are so hye, wryte thou therefore saye: Tushe howe shoulde God knowe? Dothe hys dominion teache beyond the cloudes? Tushe the cloudes couer hym that he may not see, for he dwelleth in heauen. Well thou wryte kepe the old way that all wicked men haue gone, bothe olde and yonge, whose foundation is a running water, whiche saye vnto God: go from vs. E and after this manner: Tushe, what wyl the almyghty do vnto vs? Where as he (not withstandinge) pilleth theyr houses wth all good. Whiche meanynge of the vngodly be far frome. For wth hope shall the godlye, and wth gladnesse shall the innocent see, that theyr encrease shall be hewen downe, and theyr posterite consumed wth spye.

Therefore reconcile the vnto God, and be contente, so shall all thynges prosper with the righte well. Receiue the lawe at hys mouth, and lay by hys wordes in thyn herte. For if thou wylt turne to the almyghty, thou shalt stande faste, and all vnrigh-
D tuousnesse shall be farre from thy dwelling: He shall geue thee as harvest which in plentie and aboundaunce shall exceede the dust of the earth, and the golde of Ophir lyke riuert stones. Yea the almyghty hys owne selfe shall be thine harvest, and the heape of thy monye. When shalt thou haue thy desypte in the almyghty, and lyfte vpper thy face vnto God. When shalt thou make thy prayer vnto him, and he shall heare thee, and thou shalt keepe thy promises. Then loke what thou takest in hande, he shall make it to prosper with thee, and the spghte shall shine in thy wayes. For who so humbleth hym selfe, hym shall he sette vpper: and who so looketh mekelpe, shall be healed. If thou be innocent, he shall saue thee, and thou shalt not be ashamed of thine hands, shalt thou be deliuered.

The. xlii. Chapter.

E Job answered and sayde: I saye that he knoweth and seeth the power and sentence of the iudge and that he hath walked in his rightuousnes.

A Job answered and sayde: I saye that he knoweth and seeth the power and sentence of the iudge and that he hath walked in his rightuousnes. I saye that he knoweth and seeth the power and sentence of the iudge and that he hath walked in his rightuousnes. I saye that he knoweth and seeth the power and sentence of the iudge and that he hath walked in his rightuousnes.

what answere he wolde geue me: and that I myghte vnderstande what he would say vnto me. Will he pleade againste me wth hys greate power and strengthe, or wyl he leane hym selfe vnto me? Oh no, let hym not do so wth me. But lette hym geue me lyke power to go to the law, then am I sure to win my matter. For though he go before, I finde hym not: If I come he finde I can gette no knowledge of hym. If I goo on the lefte syde too ponder hys wordes, I can not attaine vnto them. A gapne if I goo on the righte side, he hideth hym selfe that I cannot see hym: but as for my waye he knoweth it, and trieth me as golde in the fyre.

Nevertheless my fete keene hys pathe, hys hygh strete haue I holden, and not gone oute of it: I haue not forsaken the commaundement of his lippes, but loke what he charged me wth hys mouth, that haue I shut in my herte. It is he hym selfe alone, who shall turne hym backe: He doth as hym listeth, and bringeth to passe what he wil. He rewardeth me into my bosome, and mane other thynges mo dothe he, as he may by hys power. This is the cause that I shrinke at hys presence, so that when I consider hym, I am astrapde of hym. For in so much as he is God, he maketh my hert softe: and seinge that he is almyghty, he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I gette oute of darkenesse: the cloude hath couered my face.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Job describeth the wickednesse of men, and sheweth what curse belongeth to the wicked.

C Onspiring then there is no time hid from the almyghty, howe happeneth it that they whiche knowe hym wyl not regard his dayes? For some there be that remoue other mennes lande marches: that robbe them of theyr cattel, and kepe þ same for theyr owne: that dispyce awaye the asse of the fatherlesse, that take the widows ore for a pledge: that thrust the pore out of the waye, and oppresse the simple of the wolde together.

Beholde, the wilde asses in the desert go by tymes, as theyr manner is, to spyle. Yea the herde wyldernes monstreteth fode for the chylidren. They reape the corne felde that is not theyr own: and gather the grapes oute of hys vineyard, whome they haue oppressed by violence. They are the cause that so manie menne are naked and barte, hauinge no clothes too couer theym and kepe them from coude. So that when the showers in the mountaynes haue rayned vpon them, and they be all wet, they haue none other succour, but to kepe them amonge the rockes.

They spyle the suckynge fatherlesse chylidren, and putte the poore in prison: in so much that they let them go naked with oute clothynge, and let the hungry beate the the sheues. The poore are faine to labour in the pte temples, pea and too treade in the wine ptes, and yet to suffer thirst. The hole cte cte pte vnto the Lorde with fnghtnge, the soules of the flayne make the complaynt: But God destroyeth the not for al this, wher as the (not withstanding) rebellious and disobedient enemies, which seke not his light & waye, ne turne again into his path. Tyme in þ morning do they arise to murder the simple & poore, & in þ night they go a deapnge,

The eye of the vngodlye is lyke the aduouterer, that wapeth for the darkenesse and sayeth thus in hym selfe: I wishe, there shal no man se me, and so he disguyseth his face. In the nyghte season they seatch the houses, and hyde them selues in the daye tyme, but wyl not knowe the lyghte. For as soone as the day breaketh, the shadowe of death cometh vpon them, and they go in horrible darkenesse. The vngodlye is vte soure, & that his porcion also vpon earthe were swifter then the running water, which suffereth not the shyppe manne to beholde the faye and pleasaunte byndes. That they (for the wyckednesse whiche they haue doone) were drawn to the hell sooner then snowe melteth at the heate & that all compassion vpon them were forgotten, that they dainties were wynes, that they were cleane put out of mynde and better be hewen downe like a bynt full tree: For they maye tame the baren and make them that they canne not beate any more wether they do no good. They plue & drawe the myght wylth their power and when they them selues are gotten vpp they are as a withered tree, as longe is they lyue. And though they might be safe, yet they wil not reuerent, for they cles loke vpon their owne wayes. They are exalted for a litle: but shortlye are they gon broughte to extreme pouertie and take out of the waye - pea and better be vnto of, as the eares of come. Is it not so? Who wyl then reprove me as a liar, and say that my wordes are nothinge worth?

The xx. Chapter.

Isaiah proneth that no man is cleane, and wythoute synne before God.

Then answered Baldah the Euite, and sayd: Power & fear is with hym a boue, that maketh peace, sitting in his highnes, whose mynde of war are innumerable: and whose light ariseth over all. But howe may a man compared vnto god be iustified. O howe cleare he be cleare, that is borne of a woman? Shoulde, the vngodlye synneth nothinge in comparyson to hym, and the flaynes are vncleane in his syghte. Howe muche more then manne that is but corrupcion: and the sonne of manne, whiche is but a worme?

The xxi. Chapter.

Job sheweth that man is not helpe God, and proueth it by his miracle.

Job answered and saide: O howe helpest thou the weake? what comfote geueste thou vnto hym that hath no strengthe, where is the counsell that thou shouldest geue him whiche hath no wisdome? Wylt thou that I shewethyne excellente cyghtuousnes? before whome hast thou spoken those wordes, who made the breathe to come out of the mouthe? The giauntes and worthy that are flayne, and Ipe vnder the world wylth the companions, pea and all they whiche dwel beneth in the hell are not byd from hym, and the verpe destruction selfe can not be kepte oute of his sight. He stretcheth oute the South over the empty, and hangeth the earthe vpon nothinge. He byndeth the water in his cloude, & they fal not downe together. He holdeth backe his floole, that can not be seene, and spredeth his cloude before it.

The wonders of god

He hath compassed the waters wylth certayn boundes, vntill the day and night come to an end. The vey pillars of heauen (a) tremble and quake at his reprofe. He filleth the sea with his power, and thow his wisdome hath he set forth the worlde. With his spinte hath he garnished the heauen, and wylth his hand hath he wounded the rebellious Serpente. Whys now a short tyme of his doynge? But who is his sufficient, pe to rehyse his workes? Who can perceiue and vnderstand the myght of his power.

The Notes.

(a) Drawen and earthe haue properpe no pillars nor any thynge to leane on that shoulde sustayn and bear them vp, as it appereth of the earthe about in this c. apert: But Job taketh his synnys of our earthe by synnys, he saith his heares shoulde so the soner vnderstande hym.

The xxii. Chapter.

The constancy and perfectnes of Job, and the parte of the vnfaythful with God.

And Job wente forth in his communication, saying: as trulpe as God liueth (whiche hath taken awaye my power from me) and the almyghtye, that hath bered my minde: my lippes shal talke of no vanpise, and my tonge shal speake no discepte, whyle my breath is in me, and as longe as the wynde (that God hath geuen me) is in my nostrils.

God forbyd I shoulde graunt pour cause to be cyghte. As for me, vntill myne ende come, wyl I neuer go from myne innocen cyte. My cyghteous deapnge kepe I faste, wherby I wyl not forsake: my herte shal not reprove me of my (a) dayes. Therefore myne enemye shal be founde as the vngodlye, and he that taketh parte agaynst me, as the vngodlye. What hope hath the hypocrite, though he haue great good and though God gaue hym cyches after his hertes desyre? Dothe God heare hym the soner, when he cryeth vnto hym in his neede? Hath he such pleasure and delpte in the almyghtye, that he dare alwaye call vpon upon God? I will teache you in the name of God, and the thinge that I haue of the almightie will I not kepe from you. Be: holde ye stande in your owne conceyte as though ye knewe all thynges: Wherefore then do ye goe about wth such vaine wordes? sayinge: This is the portion that the wicked shall haue of God, and heritage that traitours shall receiue of the almightie. If he get manie children they shall perishe wth the sword, and his posteritie shall haue scarcenesse of breade. Like whiche he leaueth behind him, they shall die and be buried, and no man shall haue pitie of his widowes. Though he haue as muche monie as the dust of the earth, and capmente as readye as the clape, he may wel prepare it: but the godlye shall put it vpon hym, and the innocent shall deale oute the monie.

His house shall endure as a mothe, and as a booth that a watchman maketh. When the tyche man dyeth, he carpeth nothyng wth hym: he is gone wth a twinklinge of an eye. Destruction taketh hold vpon him as a water floude, and the tempest stealeth hym awaye in the nyghte season. A vehement wynde carrieth him hence and departeth: a storme plucketh him out of his place. It rusheth in vpon hym and spareth hym not, he may not escape fro the power thereof. Then clappe menne their handes at hym, yea and ieste of hym when they looke vpon his place.

The Notes.

(a) Understande my selfe. He meaneth that he will not suffer that his conscience be faultie and that he will not haue an euill conscience for my selfe pendinge of his lyfe tyme, for whiche he had liued most innocentlie.

The xxviii. Chapter.

Job sheweth that the wysdome of God is vnsarcheable.

These are places where siluer is molten and where golde is tryed: where piron is dygged out of the ground, & stones refolued to metall. The darkenesse shall come to an ende, he can seeke oute the grounde of all thynges: the stones, & darke and the horrible shadowe. Wth the puer of water parteth he a sunder the straunge people, that knoweth no good neyghbour: heade: suche as are rude, brutish, and boystous. He byngeth foode oute of the earth, and that which is vnder consumption he wthspire. There is founde a place whose stones are cleane saphyres, and wher the clottes of the earth are golde. There is a waye also that the bydes knowe not, that no vulture eie hath seene: wherin the proude and hye mynded walcke not, and wher no Lyon cometh. There putteth he his hande vpon the stonye rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaynes. Rivers flowe oute of the rockes, and loke what is pleasaunte, his eie seeth it. Oute of dyces byngeth he greate floudes together, and the thyng that is hid, byngeth he to light. Howe cometh a man then by wysdome?

Where is the place that manne shal vnderstande? Merelye no manne can tell howe worthe a thyng he is, neyther is he founde in the land of the living. The depe sayth: there is not in me. The sea sayth: there is not wth me. She can not be gotten for the moste fyne golde, neither may the price of her be boughte wth anye monie. No wedges of golde of Ophir, no precious stones, no Saphyres, may be compared vnto her. No neyther golde, ne chystal, neither swete odoures, ne golden plate. There is nothyng so worthe, or so excellent, as is once to be named vnto her: for perfecte wysdome goeth far beyonde them all. The Topas that cometh oute of Inde, maye in no wyse be likened vnto her, yea no manner apparel, howe pleasaunte and fayne so euer it be. Whence then cometh wysdome? and where is the place of vnderstanding? She is hid from the eien of al men, yea and from the foules of the ayre. Destruction & death saye, we haue hearde tell of her with oure eares. But God seeth her wape, and knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the ends of the world: and loketh vpon al that is vnder heauen. When he weped the windes, and measured the waters: when he set the rayne in order, and gaue the myghtye floudes a lawe, then dyd he see her, then declared he her, prepared her, and knew her. And vnto man he sayd: Behold to feare the Lorde is wysdome: and to forsake euill, is vnderstanding.

Job complayneth of the prosperitee of the time past, subtilly reprooung his frendes of iniury, because they said that Job suffered as charynge to his delerunge.

Job proceeded and went forth in his communication, saying: That I was as I was in the monethes past, and in the dayes when God preserued me, when his light shined vpon my heade, when I wente after the lam: light, and shining, euen thorowe the darkenesse. As it stode wth me, when I was welthe and hadde ynough: when God prospered my house: when my wayes ranne ouer wth butter, and when the stonye rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I wente thorowe the cite vnto the gate, and when they sette me a chaire in the strete: when the younge men (as soone as they sawe me) hidde them selues, and when the aged arose, and stode by vnto me: when the yunges leet of their talkyng, and layde their hande to their mouth: when the myghtye kepte still their voice, and when theyr tounge cleaued to the rofe of theyr mouthes. When all they that heard me, called me happye: and when all they that sawe me, wished me good. For I deliuered the poore when he cryed, and I fatherles that wanted help. He that wold haue bene loste, gaue me a good word, and the widowes herre praysed me. And why? I put vpon me (a) righteousnesse, whiche couered me as a garment, and equitie was my crowne: I was an eye vnto the blynde, and a fote to the lame: I was a father vnto the poore, & when I knew not theyr causes, I sought it out diligently. I brake the crafes of the vnrightheous, and pluckt & spoile oute of theyr teethe. Therefore I thought vnto my selfe, that I shoulde haue dyed in my nest, and that my daies shoulde haue bene as mannye as the sandes of the sea. For my roote was sprede out by the watersyde, and the dewe laye vppon my corne. Myne honoure encreased more and more, and my bow was euer the stronger in my hand. Vnto me me gaue care, me they regarded, and wpth silence they tarped for my counsel. If I had spokē, they wold haue it none other waies: my woordes were so well taken amonges them. They wayted for me as the earth doeth for the raine: and gaped for me as the ground doth to receiue the (b) later shewe. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest: and thys testimonie of my couenaunce fell not to the earth. When I agreed vnto theyr waye, I was the cheefe, and sate as a kynge amonge hys seruauntes: Or as one that comforteth suche as be in heaupnesse.

The Notes.

(a) Thys eyghteousnes is no other thyng, then to lyue iustlye amonge men: hurtynge no man, and geuyng vnto euerye manne that whiche he longeth vnto hym. Gene. xxx. e. and Psal. xv. a.
(b) By the latter shewe is vnderstand whollome doctrine, which causeth iustice and iudgemente to sprynge.

The. xxx. Chapter.

The grente despaynge of men and wylle of God that Job suffereth.

But nowe they that are myne inferyours & ponger then I, haue me in derision: yea euen they, whose fathers I wolde haue thoughte scorned: haue sette wpth the dogges of my cattell. The power and strengthe of theyr handes myghte do me no good, and as for their age, it is spent and passe awaye wpthoute anye profyte. For verpe myserpe and hunger, they went aboute in the wilderness like wretches and beggers, pluckynge by herbes among the bushes and the Junipers roote was theyr meate. And when they were dysuens for the men cryed after them as it had bene after a thiefe. Theyr dwellynge was beside foul brokes, yea in the caues and denues of the earth. Vpon the dyke heth wente they aboute cryng, and in the brome hilles they gathered them together. They wer the childe of fooles and bylappes, whiche are deade, awaye from the worlde. Now am I theyr songe, and am become their iestynge stocke: they abhorre me, they spe far from me, and stapne my face wpth spettle. For the Lorde hath opened hys quiver, he hath hit me, & put my buble in my mouth. Vpon my ryghte hand they rose together against me, they haue hurte my feete, made a way to destroy me, and my path haue they clene marred. It was so easpe for them too doo me harme that they neded no man to helpe them. They fell vppon me, as it hadde bene the breakynge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearefulnes is turned agaynst me.

Myne honoure banissheth awaye more swiflye then wynde, and my prosperyte departeth hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therefore is my mynde poured full of heuines, and the daies of my trouble haue taken hould vpon me. My bones are pearced thorowe in the nyghte season, and my synowes take noo reaste. Wpth all the power haue they chaunged my garmente and gyded me therewyth as it were with a cote. I am euen as it were clawe, and am become lyke aches and duste. When I cry vnto the, thou doest not heare me: and though I stande before the, yet thou regardelle me not. Thou arte become myne enemye, and with thy vpolente hande, thou takest parte agaynst me. In tymes past thou diddest sette me vppe on hye, as it wer aboute the wynde, but nowe hast thou geuen me a verpe sore fall. Sure I am that I wylt deliuer me vnto death: where as a lodging is prepared for all thyngge luyngge. Now vse not men to do violence vnto them that are destroyed already: but wher hurt is done, ther vse they to helpe. Dyd not I wepe in the tyme of trouble? Had not my soul compassed vpon the poore? Yet neuertheles, wher as I looked for good, euill happened vnto me: & wher as I wanted for lychte, there came darckenes. My bowelles seth wpthin me, and take no ceste, for the dapes of my trouble are come vpon me. Mykelpe and lowly came I in, yea and withoute anye displeasure: I stode by in the congregation and cōmuned wpth them. But nowe, I am a companion of Dragons, and a felowe of Scorpions. My skynne vppon me is touned to blacke, and my bones are brent with heat, my harpe is touned to sorow, and my pipe to weppynge.

Job receyeth the innocency of his lyving, and numbre of his vertues.

I made a (a) couenaunte with mine eyes, that I wold not loke vpon a Damocell. For howe greate a porcion shall I haue, of God from aboue? & what inheritaunce from the almyghty on hye? As for the vngodlye, and he that ioineth hym selfe to the company of wicked doers, shall not destruction and myserpe come vppon hym? Doth not he se my wayes, and tel all my goings? If I haue cleued vnto vanite, or if my sete haue runne to disceyue: let me be weped in an euen balaunce, that God maye se myne innocency. If so be that I haue wpthdrawen my roote oute of the righte way: if mine herte hath folowed mine eye sighte, if I haue stained or defiled my handes: & then is it reason that I sowe, and an other reape, yea that my generatione and of spring be cleane roled oute. If myne herte hathe lusted after my neighboures wife, or if I haue sarde warre at his dore. Then lette 13 my wife be an other mannes harlotte, and let other lye wth her. For this is a wicked nesse and synne that is worthe to be punished. yea a fyre that utter lye shoulde consume me, and rote oute al my substance.

Dyd I euer thynke scoone to do righte by to my seruantes and maidens when they had anye matter agaynst me? But serue that God wil not sit in iudgment, what shal I doe? And for as muche as he wol nedes visit me, what answer shal I geue hym? He that falsponed me in my mothers wombe, made he not hym also? were we not borthe shapen a kinne our mothers bodies? Whethe the poore despyred anyethyng at me, haue I denied it them? Haue I caused the widowe to stande wthynge for me in bayne?
Haue I sene anye man perper the thow na-ned misse and waite of clothynge. Or anye poore manne for lacke of rayment, whose spes thanked me not because he was warmed wth the wolle of my shepe.

14 Dyd I euer lye by my hande to hurte the fatherlesse? yea in the gate where I sawe my self to be in authorite: then lette myne arme fall from my shoulde, & myne arme holes be broken from the ioyntes.
For I haue euer feared the vengauce and punishment of God, and knew very wel that I was not hable to beare his burthen.
Haue I put my trust in golde? Or haue I sayde to the fyneste golde of all: thou arte my confydence? Haue I reioysed because my substance was grete, and because my hande gat so muche? Dyd I euer greatlye regarde the (b) rylsinge of the sonne? or had I the gopnge downe of the Moone in grete reputation? Hathe my herte medled pryncely wth anye disceyte? Or did I euer kysse myne owne hande? that were a wickednesse worthe too be punished, for then shoulde I haue denyed the God that is aboue. Haue I euer reioysed at the hurt of myne ennemye? Or was I euer gladde that anye harme hapned vnto hym? Oh no I neuer suffered my mouth to do such a synne as to wyspe hym euill. Yet they of 15 myne o vne houshold saye, who shal lette vs to haue oure bellie full of hyes flewe? I haue not suffered a straunger too lye wth oute, but opened my doores vnto him. Haue I euer done anye wycked dede, where thorow I shamed my selfe before menne, or anye abhominacion, that I was sayne to hide it? For if I hadde feared anye great multitude of people: if I had ben despyed of the simple: then shoulde I haue bene a scapde. Thus haue I quietly spent my life and not gon out at the dore. That I had one wyche would heare me. Loo, this is my cause: Lette the almyghty geue me an-swere: and lette hym that is my contraye partye, sue me wth a spbell. Then shall I take it bypon my shoulde, and as a garlad about my head. I haue told the number of my gounges, and deliuered t. cm. vnto him as to a pynce. But if case be p (c) my land 16 crye agaynst me, or that the sorowes there of make anye complaynte: If I haue eaten the frutes thereof vnryed for yea if I haue greued any of the plowmen: then let thistles growe in stede of my wheate, and thornes for my hylpe.

Here ende the wordes of Job.

The Notes.

(a) To make a couenaunte wth hye eyes, is to marry for the concupiscence of the hart that comm. 14 by the means of the eis: w. ch. is to pluck out the eis as is sayde. 19. 11. b. 2.

(b) Forwarde the rylsinge of the sunne and the gopnge downe of the moone is, to be glorious in prosperite, and too use the thynges of thys world: to pleasure. Jerem. xlv. 3. For on them that be in prosperite is the sunne counted too shyne, and the Moone to goo downe p. p. p. p. p. lye and pleasure, and on the contrarye part, to them that be in tribulation, are bothe the sunne and the Moone counted cloude, and darknesse.

(c). The lande cryeth agaynst hym, when the hart in the minde is defaured of thys wages receve therefore agaynst hym: so that the hye of the workemanne cryeth Job. v. 8. And the sorowes make lamentation, when they that plow the ground and make the sorowes, are depreued of thys duepe.

The. xxii. Chapter.

17 Eliu after the other hadde synned theye communication, rejoyceth them of folynes. Age maketh not a manne wyle, but the spyrite of God.

18 These iii. men woulde stue no more wth Job, because he helde him selfe a righteous man. But Eliu the sonne of Barachel the Bussite of the kinredde of Ram, was verie soore displeased at Job, that he called hym selfe iust before God.
And with Jobs. iii. frendes he was angry also, because they had founde no reasonable answer to ouercome him. Now taried Eliu til they had ended theye communication wth Job, for why they wer elder the
he. So when Eliu the son of Barachel the Bussite saw that these. iii. men were not able to make Job answer: he was miscōfēt, so that he gaue answer himself, and sayd:

19 Consyderynge that I am yonge, and ye be men of age, I was afrayde, and durste not shewe forth my mynde. for I thought thus wth my selfe: It becommeth olde men to speake, and the aged to teache wis-dome: Euerp man (no doubt) hath a mynde but it is the inspiration of the almyghty that geueth vnderstandynge. All men are not wyle, neythet doth euerp aged manne vnderstande the thyng that is lawefull.
Therefore wll I speake also in so farre as I maye bee hearde, and wll shewe you myne opinion. For when I hadde waityd 20 tylpe made an ende of your talkinge, and hearde your wisdom, what argumentes ye made in your communication: yea when I had diligently poudyed what ye sayde:

I founde not one of you that made any good argumente agaynst Job, or that correctly could make answer vnto his wordes: lest ye shoulde prayse yowre selues to haue founde oure wyldome: because it is god that hath cast him out, and no manne. Neuerthelesse seeing he hath not spokē vnto me, therefore wil not I answer hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coulde not make answer, nor speake one word) but syde ye wyll not speake, standynge still lyke dumme men, and makynge no answer: I haue a good hope for my part to haue hym an answer and to shew hym my meanynge. For I am full of wordes, and the spirite that is with in me, compelleth me.

Behold, I am as the newe wyne, which hath no veyl, and bursteth the newe vessels in sunder. Therefore wyll I speake that I maye haue a vent: I will open my lips and make answer. I wyll regard no manner of person, no man wyll I spare. For if I woulde go aboute to please men, I knowe not howe sone my maker woulde take me awaye.

The Notes.

(a). D. Hyperbole in hys treatise of the treacheries of the hebrewes vpon Gilead. Sayeth, that chys Eliu was that Belshazzar, of whome is spoken. Numeri. xxi.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Eliu sheweth wherin Job offendeth. Wyth God may we not stryue, nor curiously serche out hys workes.

Vtherfore heare my wordes (O Job) and hearken vnto me all that I wyll say: Behold, I wyll open my mouth, and my tong shall speke out of my chawes. My heere shall order my wordes a righte, and my lippes shall talke of pure wisdom. The spirite of God hath made me, and the breath of the almyghty hath gauen me my life. If thou canst then geue me answer: prepare thy selfe to stande before me face to face. Beholde before God am I euen as thou, for I am fashioned and made euen of the same mould. Therefore thou needest not be afrayed of me, neither needst thou to feare, for my authoritie shal be to beaue for thee: now hast thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herde the voyce of thy wordes: I am cleane without any faute. I am innocent, and there is no wyckednes in me. But so, he hath pyked a quarrelle agaynst me, and taketh me for hys enemye: he hath put my fote in the stocks, and looketh narrowly vnto all my partes. Beholde, vnto these vnreasonable wordes of thyne wyll I make answer.

Should God be reproveth of man? Why dost thou then stryue agaynst him because he giueth the no accomptes of all hys doynge? For when God doth once commaund a thynge, there shoulde no man be curious, to serche whether it be righte. In dreames and visions of the nyght season (where coming cometh vnto men that they sal aspe in their beddes) he cometh them in dreames, he instructeth them, and sheweth the playnely that it is he which will deliuer man from euyl, deliuereth him from pryde, keepeth hys soule from destruction, and his lyfe from the wearde. He chaunceth him wyth synkenesse, and byngeth hym to hys bedde: he layeth soore punishment vpon hys bones, so that hys lyfe maye awaye wyth no breade, and hys soule abhorreth to eat anye dainty meate: in so muche that hys bodye is cleane consumed awaye, and hys bones appeare no more. Hys soule draweth on to destruction, and hys lyfe to death.

Now if ther be a messenger (one among a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shew him the right waye: the the Lord is mercifull vnto hym, and sayeth: He shal be deliuered, that he sal not bowe to destruction, for I am sufficientely re- conpled. Then hys fleshe (whiche hath bene in myscrye and trouble) shal be as it was in hys yowthe. For if he yelde hym selfe vnto God, he is gracious, and sheweth hym hys countenance loyfull, and rewardeth man for hys rightynesse: Suche a respecte hath he vnto men. Therefore let a man confesse (and saye) I offend, but he hath not chaunced and reformed me: I byd vnghtynesse, neuertheles he hath not reformed me thereafter. Yes he hath deliuered my soule from destruction, and my lyfe that is scryed the lyghte. So thus worketh God alwaie with man, that he keepeth hys soule from perishinge and letteth hym to see the lyghte of the lyuinge. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the stille, vntill I haue spoken. But if thou hast anye thyng to saye, then answer me. If thou hast nothyng, then heare, and holde thy tonge, so shall I teache the wisdom.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Eliu prayeth the iustice of God whiche iudgeth the worlde, & gouerneth all.

Eliu proceedynge forth in hys commynycation, sayeth: heare my wordes (O ye wyse men) hearken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge. For lyke as the mouth tasteth the meates, so the eare reproveth & discerneth the wordes. As for the iudgement, let vs seeke it oute amonge oure selues, for we may know what is righte. And wher Job hath sayd: I am righteous but God doth me wronge. I must needs be a lyer, though my cause be right, and biosensly I am plagued where as I made no faute: where is ther such one as Job that byngeth by scornfulnes lyke water, which goeth in the company of wycked doers, and maketh with vngodly men? For he saith: Though a man be good, yet is he nought before God. Therefore hearken vnto me ye that haue vnderstandynge.

Make ye it from God, that he shoulde

That is, an instructiue with the word of God.

medle wth wickednes: and sa^{rre} be it t^h the almyghty, that he should medle wth vntyg^{ht}ous dealing: but he rewardeth the wo^rkes of man, and causeth eue^r manne to synde accordyng to hys waies. For sure it is that God condemneth no man wrongfully, and the iudgemente of the almyghty is not vntyg^{ht}ous.

Wherfore the earth in hys seide? Or wh^{er} hath he set to gouern^e the whole world? To whome hath he g^uen hys vertue, for to b^e h^{is} sp^{ir}ite, and b^e h^{is} vnto h^{is} m^{an}? Al the^r shall come together to naught, and al m^{an} shall turne again vnto earth. If thou now haue vnderstandyng, heare what I say, and heark^e to the voyce of my wo^rdes.

May he be made whole, that loueth no tyghte? If thou were a verie innocent man shouldst thou then be punished? For he is euen the same, that knoweth the rebellious kyngs, and sayeth to princes: Vngodly men are ye. He hath no respect vnto the personnes of the Lo^rdelye, and regardeth not the tyche more then the poze. For they be al the wo^rke of his handes. In the twinkling of an eye shall they be slaine: and at midnyght, when the people and the ty^rantes rage, then shall they perishe and be taken away without d^ods. And wh^{er}? hys eyes loke vpon the waies of m^{an}, and he seeth al his goynges. There is no darckenes nor thicke shadow that can hyde the wycked doers fro^m him. For no man shall be sufficed to go into iudgement wth God.

Many one, yea innumerable doth be punished, and setteth other in their steads, for he knoweth they^r cupl and darke wo^rkes therfore that they be destrayed. They that were in the seide of heats, dwelte lyke vngodly men. Therfore turned they backe traiterously and vnslay^{ab}lly fro^m him, and woulde not receyue his waies. In so much that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto h^{is} m^{an}, and now he heareth the complainte of suche as are in necessyte.

If he deliuer and graunte pardon, who wil iudge or condemne? But if he hyde away hys countenance, who wyl turne it about agayne, whether it be to the people or to anye man? For the wickednes and synne of the people he maketh an hypocrite to caigne ouer them. For so much as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wil not hynder the. If I haue gone amysse, enfourme me: If I haue done wronge, I wyl leue of. Wille thou not g^ue a reasonable answer? Art thou a scayed of any thyng, seynge thou beganest first to speake, and not I? For els the men of vnderstandyng and wysdome, that haue berbe me, myghte saie: What causest thou speake? As for Job he hath euer spoken to the purpose: nor wyl I. O father, let Job be wel tyed because he hath turned h^{is} m^{an} selfe to the wycked: yea aboue hys synnes he hath blasphemed, wherby offence be hath done euen before v^o, in that he stryuet^h agaynst

God wth hys wo^rdes.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

¶ I haue spoken mozeouer, and saide: Thinkest thou it tyghte that thou sayest? I am tyghtous before God: seynge thou sayest so, how dost thou knowe it? What thyng haue thou moze excellent then I, that am a sinner? Therfore wyl I g^ue an swer vnto the and thy frendes: looke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: cōsyder the cloudes, howe they are hygher then thou. If thou synnest, what dost thou vnto h^{is} m^{an}? If thine offences be many, how gettest thou hys fauoure? If thou be tyghtuous: what g^uest thou h^{is} m^{an}? Or what receiveth he of thy handes? Of such an vngodly personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is tyghtous as thou pretendest to be? There is a greete crye and complayne made by them that are oppressed with violence, receyue man complayneth vpon the cruell arme of tyrauntes. For such one neuer saith: Wher is God that made me, and wher shyneth vpon vs, that we might praise him in the nyght? Wherby g^uest v^o moze vnderstandyng then he doeth the dea^res of the earth, and reacheth v^o moze then the soules of heauen.

If any such complayne, no man g^uesth answere, and that because of the wyckednesse of proude tyrauntes. But if a man cal vpon God, doth not he hear him? Doth not the almyghty accept hys crye. When thou speakest then shouldest not be pardoned? If thou open thy selfe before h^{is} m^{an}, and put thy truste in h^{is} m^{an}. Then shaldest thou see no violence in hys wy^rth, neither shalt thou see anye in curious and depe questyons.

Therfore hath Job opened his mouth but in vayne, and solylyp hath he made so many wo^rdes.

The. xxxvi. Chapter.

¶ I haue proceeded forth in hys talking and said: Holde the styll a litle, and I shall shewe the what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe, I wyl open vnto the yet moze of myne vnderstandyng, and proue my maker tyghtuous. True are my wo^rdes, and no ly^e, and the knowldege, wherwth I argue agaynst the, is perfect. Beholde, God casteth not away the myghty, for he h^{is} m^{an} selfe is myghty in powet and wysdome.

As for the vngodly, he preserveth them not, but healepeth the poore to the tyghte. He turneth not hys eyes away from the tyghtuous, he setteth vp kynges in theystone, and setteth them, so that they alway sp^{ir}ite therein. But if they be laped in p^{ri}son and cheynes, or bounde wth the bondes of pouertye, then sheweth he the myghte they workes and deedes, and the synners wherewith they haue vsed cruel violence.

(a) He wylth punysshinge and nuryngge of them consider the in the cares, warneth them to leaue of from their wickednesse: and to amende. Yf they nowe wyl take hede and be obedient, they shal weate out theyr dayes in prosperytie, and their yeres in pleasure and ioye. But if they wyl not obey, they shal go thorow þe swerde, and peryshe, or they be ware. As for suche as be sayned dissemblers, and hypocrites, they heape vp wrath for them selues: for they cal not vpon hym, though they be his prisoners. Thus theyr soules peryshe in foly and theyr life wylth the condemned. The poore deliuereth he out of his straitnes and comforteth such as be in necessity and trouble. Euen so shal he kepe the (if thou wylt be content) frō the bottoomelesse pye þe is beneth: and if thou wylt holde the quiet, he shal fyll thy table wylth plenty.

Neuerthelesse thou hast condemned the iudgement of the vngodly, yea euen suche a iudgemente and sentence shalte thou suffer. For then shal not thy cause be applied wylth crueltye, nor pacified wylth manye gyftes. Hath God ordeyned that the glorious lyfe of the, and al suche myghtye men, shoulde not be put downe? Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyll they come a nyght for the, to set other people in the steede. But be ware that thou turne not aspyde to wyckednesse and synne, whiche byther to thou hast chosen more then mekenesse. Behold God is of a myghtye bygh power: Where is such a guyde and law giuer as he? Who shall reprove hym of his waye? Who wyl saye vnto hym: thou hast donne wronge.

Consider howe great and excellent hys workes be, whome all men loue and prays: yea and wonder at hym, and yet they se him but as far of. Beholde, so great is God, that he passeth our knowledge, neither are we able to come to the experience of his peates. He turneth the water to smalle droppes, he dryueth his cloudes together for to rayne, so that they poure downe a drop vpon me. He can syed out the cloudes (a couerynge of his tabernacle) and cause his light to shine vpon them, and to couer the bottom of the sea. By these thin-ges gouerneth he his people, & gyuerth the abundance of meate. In the turnynge of an hande he bydeth the light, and at his comaundemente it cometh againe. The rysyng by therof sheweth he to his fren-des, and to the cattell.

The Notes.

(a) Wylth punysshinge and nuryngge to roue them in the cares, is to byng them to the knowledge of theyr synnes, and to cause them to be perswaded in them selues that they be punyshed for them.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

It is proueth that the wysedome of God is vnsarcheable.

At this, my heart is adioined, and moued out of mys place. Heare then the solid of his voyce, and the noise that goeth oute of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thyng vnder the heauen, and his light reacheth vnto the ende of the world.
A roynge voyce foloweth hym: for his glorious maiesty gyuerth suche a thounder clappe, that (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceyue it after ward. It gyuerth an horrible sounde, when God sendeth oute his voyce: greates thynges doeth he, whiche we canne not compyse.
When he commaundeth the snowe it falleth vpon the earth.

As sone as he gyuerth þe rayne a charge,
for wylth the flowers haue theyr strength, and falle downe. He sendeth leate vpon e-uery man, that they myghte knowe theyr owne workes. The beastes creepe into theyr dens, and take their rest. Out of the South, cometh the tempeste, and colde out of the North.

At the bycath of God, the froste commeth, and the waters are chedd abrode.
The cloudes doo theyr labour in guyng mornynge, the cloudes poure downe their rayne. He descrebuteth also on euery syde, accommode as it pleaseth him to deale out his workes, that they maye do what so e-uer he commaundeth them thorow the hole worlde, whether it be to punyshe anye lande, or to doo good vnto them, that seeke hym.

Werken vnto this (O Job) stande still,
and consider the wonders workes of God.
Arte thou of counseile wylth God, when he doth these thynges? When he causeth the lyght to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his counsel whiche he spredeth oute þe cloudes? Hast thou þe perfect knowelodge of his wondrous? and howe thy clothes are warme, when the land is fylled wylth the south wind? Hast thou helped hym to spredde out the heauen, whiche is to loke vpon, as it were cast of cleare metal? Tych vs what we shal saye vnto hym, for we are vnmere because of darknes.

Shall it be told hym what I say? Shuld a man speake, or shoulde he kepe it backe?
For euery man seeth not the lyght that he kepeeth cleere in the cloudes, whiche he clenseth whiche he maketh þe wind to blow. Gold is brought out of the North, but the praise and honoure of Goddes feare cometh from God hym selfe.

It is not we that can fynde oute the al-myghtye: for in power, equitye, and ryghte-teousnesse, he is higher then can be expresed. Seynge then that euery body feareth hym, why shuld not al wysemen also stand in feare of hym?

The xxxvii. Chapter.

The wonders that the Loyde hath done from the begynnyng.

W. H. Then

The breath of god, here signifieth a strong wind as is the north wind

Then spake the Lorde vnto Job oute of the storme, and sayde: what is he that hydech bys minde wth folyshe woordes? Wyde vp thy lopnes lyke a man: for I wyl question wth the, se thou gyue me a dyrect answer: Wber wast thou (a) when I layed the foundacyons of the earth. Tel planelye if thou hast vnderstandynge? Who hath measured it, knoweste thou? Or who hath spread the lyne vpon it? Or who layde the corner stone? Wber wast thou when the moynnge stars prayfed me together, and all the chyldren of god reioyced triumphantly? Who shut the sea wth doores, when it brake forth as a chyld out of his mothers wombe? Wher I made the cloudes to bee a coneyng for it, and swaddled it wth the darcke? When I gaue it my commandment, makynge doores and barres for it, sayinge: Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further, and here shalt thou lape downe thy proude and hygh waues. Haste thou gyuen the moynnge his charge, (as sone as thou wast borne) and shewed the daye sprynge bys place, that it myghte take hold of the corners of the earth, and that the vngodly myght be shaken oute? They tokens and weapons, haste thou turned lyke claye, and set them by agayne as the changynge of a garment? Yea haste thou spoyled the vngodly of theyr lyghte, and broken the arme of the proude? Camest thou cutt into the grob of the sea? Or hast thou walked in the lowe corners of the deepe? Haue the gates of beate beue opened vnto the? Or hast thou sene the doore of euerlastynge treasure? Haste thou also percepued howe broade the earthe is? Knowest thou hast knowledge of all, then shewe me where lyght dwelleth, and where darcknesse is: that thou mayeste bynge vs vnto theyr quarters, if thou canste telle the waye to theyr houses.

Knowest thou (when thou wast borne) how olde thou shouldest be? Wenest thou euer into the treasures of the snowe? Or hast thou sene the secreate places of the hayle, whych I haue prepared agaynst the tyme of trouble, agaynst the tyme of battayle and warre? By what waye is the lyghte parted, and the beate deale oute vpon the earthe? Whoe deuydeth the aboundaunce of waters into ryuers, or who maketh a waye for the storme weather, that it wattech and moystureth þ dry and baren ground: to make the grasse grow in places where no bodye dwelleth, and in the wyldernes where no man remaineth? Whoe is the father of rayne? Or whoe hath begotten the droppes of dewe? Oute of whose wombe came the yse? Whoe hath gendered the coldnesse of the ayre? that the waters are as harde as stones, and be congeled aboue the deepe.

Haste thou brought the snowe starrs together? Or art thou able to breake the circle of heauen? Canst thou bynge forth the moynnge starre, or the eueninge starre at conuenient tyme, and couepte them home agayne? Knoweste thou the course of heauen, that thou mayeste sette vp the ordynauce therof vpon the earth? Moreover, canst thou lyft vp thy voice to þ cloudes, that they may pome downe a greate capne vpon the? Canste thou thoudre also that they may go theyr waye, and be obedyente vnto the, sayinge: Lo here are wee. Who genereth sure wysdome or stedfast vnderstandynge? Whoe numbyeth the cloudes in wysdome? Whoe stylerh the beherment waters of the heauen? Whoe turneth the clothes to duste, and then to be clothes agayne? Huntteste thou the praye from the Lyon? Or seabeste thou bys whelpes lying in theyr denes, and luykynge in theyr couches? Whoe putterh meate for the rauens when bys younge crye vnto God, a sicker aboute for wante of meate.

The Notes.

(a) He saith not that heauen was made before the earth, but when bys godlye wysdome made them, he saith he had a dwelling place, & that he needed no earthly mansyon: for then was he prayd of the angels, whych here are called the chyldren of god. He meaneth also that there was no man by, or helped him, wher he made þ stars & created the intellectuall and spiryтуall natures.

The xxxix. Chapter.

God speaketh vnto Job, shewynge hym by the example of his works, that bys ryghte oute is vnsurcheable.

Knoweste thou the tyme when þ wilde gores bunge forth the younge among the stony rockes? Or laist thou waite wher the bindes vse to layne? recknest thou the monethes after they engedre, that thou knowest the tyme of theyr bearyng or wher they lie downe, wher they cast theyr younge, and wher they are deliuered of theyr trauell and paine? How their younge grow vp, and howe great they grow good fedynge. Whoe leeteth þ wilde ass goe free? Or who leeteth the bodes of the mule? Vnto wher I haue geuen þ wyldernes to be theyr house, and the vntolled lande to be theyr dwelling place. That they maye geue no force for the multitude of people in þ cities, neyther regard the cryng of the byuer: but seke theyr pasture aboute the mountaynes, and folowe the grene grasse.

Wyl the wyrcowne be so tame as to do þ seruice, or to abyde ayl by the reb? Canst thou bind the yocke aboute hym in thy sorowes, to make hym plow after the in the baleies? Maist thou trust him, bycause he is strong, or commit thy laboure vnto him? Maist thou beleue him, þ he wil bring home the corn: or to cast any thing vnto þ barn?

grounde, he briedeth them in the duste, and forgetteth them: so that they might be troden wth feete, or broken wth some wilde beaste. So harde is he vnto hys pouge, as though they were not hys, and labourerly in vayne without feare. And that because God hath taken wisdom from hym, and hath not geuen him vnderstanding. When his time is, he mounteth vpon high, and catcheth nether for horse ne man.

C Hast thou geuen the horse his strength, or learned hym too bowe downe his necke wth feate, that he letteth hym selfe beauen for the spke a grasshopper, where as the brute neynges that he maketh, is fearful? He breaketh the grounde wth the hooves of his feete chearefullye in hys strengthe, and runneth to mete the harnesssed menne. He layeth asyde all feare, his stomacke is not abated, ne pther starteth he abacke for any swearde. Though the quipers rattle vpon hym, though the speare and wild gylt: yet russeth he in fearcelpe, and beareth vpon the ground. He feareth not the noise of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, tusheth (sayeth he) for he smelleth the battaile a far off, the noise, the captaynes and the shouting.

The Col. Doeth he knowe thy wisdom, that the Boshaue stirreth toward the South? Doth he sale mount vp, and make his nest on hye, if it be comendement? He abideth in the stonier rocks, and vpryde the highe toppes of harde mountaynes wher no man can come. From thence in the he behoulde hys praye, and loke farre aboute wth hys eyes. Hys pouge are fedde wth bloude, and where any beade bodpe lyeth, there is he for the wth.

Moreover, God spake vnto Job & sayd: Can he that strueth with the almighty, be at rest? Shoulde not he winche disputeth with God, geue him an answer? Job answered the Lorde, sayinge: Beholde, I am to vile a personne, to answer the: therefore will I (a) laye my hande vpon my mouth. Once or twyse haue I spoken, but I will saye no more.

The Notes.

(a) To put his hand vpon his mouth, is to hold hys peace, and to be still & reasoned at the sodaine anger of God. Mich. vi. 1.

The .xl. Chapter.

I Job humbled hym selfe vnto God, the description of an Elephant, Leuiathan.

Job. cxviii. Then spake the Lorde vnto Job out of the storme, and sayde: Spide vppethy lopnes like a man, and tel me the thinges that I wyl aske the. Wilt thou defete my iudgement? Or wylt thou condemne me, that thou thy selfe mayst be made righteouse? Is thyne arme then lyke the arme of God? Maketh thy voyce such a sounde as hys dothe? When arme thy selfe wth thyne owne power, as ife, decke the in thy ropelpe arape, powre oute the indignacion of thy wrath: see that thou caste downe all the prowde, looke thou makeste all suche as be stubbourn, to obey: & treade all the vngodly vnder thy feete, caste them downe into the myre, and couer theyre faces wth darcknesse: When wyl I confesse also, that thyne owne righte hande hath saued the.

Beholde, *Behemoth (whome I made wth the) whiche eateth haye as an Ox: brues on low, howe stronge hee is in hys lopnes, and what power he hath is the strength of hys bodpe. He spreadeth oute hys stable spke as Cedre tree, all hys baynes are styfe. Hys synnes are lyke pyres of brasse, hys rigges bones are lyke staves of piron. Fittlye when God made him, he ordained the wyldernes for hym, that the mountaynes shoulde geue hym grasse, where all the beastes of the feld take theyr pastyme. He lyeth amonge the reedes in the marshes, the fennes hidde hym wth theyr shadowe, and the wyllowes of the brooke couer hym rounde aboute. Lo, wthoute any labour maye he dryncke oute of the hole floude, and suppe of Jordan wthoute any trauaile. Whoe darre laye hande vpon hym openly, and vnder take to catche hym? Or, who darre putte a hooke throughe hys nose, and laye a snare for hym.

Darrest thou drawe oute *Leuiathan wth an angle, or binde his tongue wth a snare? Canst thou putte a ryng in the nose of hym? or boore hys chaftes throughe wth a naule? Wyl he make manpe sayle wyndes wth the, thinkest thou? Or stateth the? Wyl he make a couenaunte with the? Or arte thou hable to compell hym to doo vnto the continuall scrupce? Wylt thou take thy pastyme wth hym as wth a byde? Or geue hym vnto thy maydens, that thy companions maye hew hym in peeces, to be parted amonge the Archchaunte menne? Canst thou spill the net wth hys skyn, or the fishe pannet wth hys heade? Darrest thou laye hande vpon hym? It is better for the to confidie what harm might happen the there thowme, and not touche hym. For when thou thinkest to haue hold vpon hym, he shall beguilde the: Euerpe manne also that seeth hym, shall go backe. And wyse: there darre none be so bolde, as to raple him vpp.

The .xli. Chapter.

I Of the same Leuiathan, wherof is mencioned in the chapter afoze.

V Who is able to stande before me? Or who hath geuen me any thing afore hand, that I am bounde too rewarde hym agayne? All thinges vnder heauen are myne: I feare hym not, whether he threath or speake saye. Who lyfteth him vp, and stryppeth him oute of hys clothes? Or whoo taketh hym by the bit of hys bydle? Whoo openeth the doore of hys face: for he hath horrible feth rounde aboute. Hys bodpe is couered with scales, as it were wth shildes lockte in, kepte, and well compacte together.

ther. One is so ioynded to an other, that no aye canne come in: Yea one hangeth so pon an other, and spreketh so together, that they can not be fundered. Hys nesing is lyke a glysternge fyre, and his eyes like the moynynge shyne. Oute of hys mouthe goo torches and fyre brandes, oute of hys nostrilles there goeth a smoke, lyke as out of an hotte sethyng potte. Hys brythma-keth the coles burne, the flamme goeth oute of hys mouthe. In hys necke remap-neth strengthe, and before hys face sorowe is tourned too gladnesse. The members of his body are ioynded so strait one to another, cleue so faste toogether, that he canne not be moued.

Hys hearte is as harde as a stone, and as faste as the steype that the hammer masmytheth vppon. When he goeth, the myghtyest of all are afraid: and the waues heui.
 If he drawe oute the swearde, there maye neyther speare, ne breste plate, abyde hym.
 He setteth as much by a strawe as by piron and as muche by a rotten stocke as by metal. He starteth not away fro him that bendeth the bowe: and as for flying stones, he careth as much for stubble as for thorn. He counteth the hammer no better then a straw, he laugheth him to scoone that shaketh the speare. He treasureth gold in the myre like the sharpe potsherd. He maketh the depe to seth and boyle lyke a pot, and stereth sea together lyke as oynment. The way is lyght after hym, the depe is his walking place. Vpon earth he is there no power lyke vnto hys, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man wyl conspire al hygh thin-ged, this same is a kynge ouer all the chy-dren of pryde.

The.xlii. Chapter.

The repentance of Job. He prayeth for hys frendes, and hys goodes are restored double vnto hym.

I When Job answered the Lorde, he said:
 I know that thou hast power ouer al things, and that there is no thought hid vnto the. For who can keepe his owne counsel so secret, but it shal be knowen. I her-fore haue spoken so vnwysely, seynge these things are so hye, and passe myne vnderstandynge. O hearken thou vnto me also, and lette me speake: aunswere vnto the thyng that I wyl aske the. I haue geuen diligent eare vnto the, and nowe I se the with mine eyes. Wherefore I geue mine own self the blame, and take repentance in the dust and ashes.

Now when the Lorde had spoken these woordes vnto Job, he sayde vnto Eliphas the Themanite: I am displeased wth the and thy twoo frendes, for ye haue not spoken the thyng that is ryght before me, lyke as my seruaunte Job hath doone.
 Wherefore take .vii. oxen. and .vii. rammes, and go to my seruaunte Job: offer vp also for your selues a burnt offering: and let my seruaunte Job praye for you. Hym wyl I accept, and not deale wth you after your folyshnesse: in that ye haue not spoken the thyng which is right, like as my seruaunt Job hath done.

So Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad the Suhpte, and Sophar the Naamathite wente theyr waye, and dyd accordynge as the Lorde commaunded them. The Lorde also accepted the personne of Job, and the Lorde turned hym vnto Job, when he prayed for hys frendes. Yea the Lorde gaue Job twise as muche as he hadde afore.

And then came there vnto hym all hys brythren, all hys systers, with all them that had bene of hys acquaintance afore, and eate breade wth hym in his house, wonderynge at hym, and comfortynge hym ouer all the trouble that the Lorde hadde brought vpon hym. Euerie man gaue hym a shepe, and a Jewell of golde.

And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was before: for he had fourtene thousande sheepe, syre thousande Camelles, a thousande poke of Oxen, and a thousande asses. He had chyldren also, seuen sonnes, and thre daughters. The fyrrst called Daphe: the seconde, Nouette: the thyrde, All plenteousnesse. In all the lande were none founde so sapie, as the daughters of Job, and theyr father gaue them enheritaunce amonge theyr brythren. After this luyed Job
 fourtye yea-
 res, so that he sawe hys chyldrene, and hys chyldrenes chyldren to the fourth generation. And so he dyed, beinge olde and of a perfect

 age.

ARISE FOR

IT IS DAY.

The firste Psalm.

These that forsake the counsailes and traditions of the wycked, and wholy geue them selues to know the lawe of God, and to shew it in their lyuynge, both this psalme pronounceth blessed, both here and in þe world to come: and the contrary parte in both þe worldes, miserable and wycked.

Blessed is the mā, that goeth not in the counsaill of the vngodly: that abideth not in (a) the way of sinners, (b) and sitteth not in þe seat of þe scornefull.

But, deliuereth in the lawe of the Lorde, and exerceyth hym selfe in hys law, both daye and nyght.

Suche a man is lyke a tree planted by the watersyde, that bryngeth forth the hys fruite in due season.

Hys leaues shall not fall of, and loke whatsoeuer he doth, it shall prosper.

As for the vngodly, it is not so with the: but they are lyke the duste, whiche the wynde scattereth away from the ground.

Therefore the vngodly shall not be able (c) to stand in the iudgement, neither the sinners in the congregacion of the righteous.

For the Lorde sloweth the way of the ryghteous, but the waye of the vngodly shall perishe.

The Notes.

(a) The maners and ordynaunces of synners whereon they walche as it were in a waye, are called the waye of sinners. And in the scriptures, it is commūn to take this way for what soeuer we do or go aboute, be it good or euill. As in the last verse of this psalme.

(b) He sitteth in the seat of the scornefull, that conspyrith with them, and becommeth fellowe of theiꝝ inuoluntarie, as in the psalme. xlv. b.

(c) He standeth in iudgement, that wynteth the processe, and hath sentence pronounced on hys syde, as he that letteth the processe and hath sentence pronounced agaynst ryght and trueth, robbers iudgement. As in Ecl. x. a. So then this sett meaneth no more here, but that the wycked haue so terrible a sentence geuen vpon them, that they shall not be able to abide when the Lorde shall come to the generall iudgement. It meaneth not that the wycked shall not appeare in iudgement.

The.ii. psalme.

They þe know not God are moued agaynst the kyngdome of Christ with wonderful intentes, but in vaine: yett eneneth their rage sheweth the whole world. The only way to health is to commit thy selfe to Christ.

*Why do the heathen grudge, why do the people ymagyne vayne thynges?

Lorde and agaynst hys anoynted.

*Let vs breake theyꝝ bondes asunder and caste away theyꝝ yoke from vs.

*Reuerence be þe dwelleth in heauen, shall laughe them to scorn: yea euen the Lorde hym selfe shall haue them in derisyon.

Then shall he (a) speake vnto them in hys wrath, and bere them in hys sore displeasure.

I yet haue I sette my kynge vpon my hyll of Syon.

As for me, I wyl preache the law, to them of the Lorde hath sayd vnto me: Thou art my sonne, this day haue I begotten the.

Desire of me, & I shall geue the heathen for thyne inheritance: yea the uttermost partes of the world for thy possession.

Thou shalt rule them with a (b) rodde of yron, and breake them in peeces lyke an earthen vessel.

I be wise now therefore, O ye kynges, be warned, ye that are iudges of þe earth.

Serue the Lorde with feare, and reioyse before hym with reuerence.

(c) Kysse the son, lest the Lorde be angry, and so ye perishe from the ryght way.

For his wrath shall be kindled shortly: blessed are al they þe put their trust in him.

The Notes.

(a) God speaketh to men in his wrath, when he ordaineth and determineth to destroye them, as Jerem. xlviii. a.

(b) This Iron rodde is a sure and vndowable dominion, as it is said. Psal. lxxviii. c. xlii. b.

(c) This is after the hebrewe, and it is a figurative speech, in which by the figure is vnderstand that which is signified thereby. For by the kissing of the kynges hand euen nowe a dayes in many regions, the subiectes testify that they wyl be in the faith and power of the kyng.

He calleth hym sonne, because he before brought in the father, sayinge, Thou art my sonne. The heere redeth, receiue instruction or be learned, manynge thereby, that they should submit the selues vnto the kyng Christ, and receiue hys instruction and chastenynge.

The.iii. psalme.

Dauid speakynge vnto the Lorde, wondereth both at the number and confidence of hys enemyes, whiche came agaynst hym, and comforteth hym selfe with greates sayte vnto hys helpe, although hys enemyes were at hand ready to strike hym, both because no man els can save him, and because none can be partakers of health or saluacion but they that beleeue in him, and truste to him.

A (a) psalme of Dauid when he fled from the face of Absalom.

The story of this diste is in the seconde of the kynges from the. xv. Chapter vnto the. x.

Why are they so many, O Lorde that trouble me: a great multitude are they þe rise agaynst me.

Yea many one ther be that saye of my soule: there is no helpe for hym in God (b) Selah.

for thou smitest all myne enemyes upon the cheke bones, and (c) breakest the teeth of the vngodly.

Helpe belongeth vnto the Lord, therefore let thy blessing be vpon thy people.

The Notes.

(a) In he Hebrew tong a psalm is called Shir
com, that is a song, or as some wyl, the sound of an harpe.

(b) This word after Shir which was a signe or token of lyfing by the voice, and also a motion and aduertisement to enforce the thought and mynde earnestly to geue heed to the mea-nyng of the verse, wherunto it is added.

Some wyl that it signifye perpetuallie or verelye.

David prayeth the reuerence and helpe by helpe of God towards him in the conspiracy of Absalon. He reproveth the madnes of the brades and rulers of Israel that conspired against hym, and calleth them agayne to amendment: and after gloryeth of the aboun-dance of goods, peace, and safetye rejoyced agayne vnto hym by the benefyte of the Lord.

Thou reioicest myne hart, though these ter: is in Hebrew Lamnah. Whiche word after Era and David (expolitours in Hebrew) signifyeth, to the cheefe of the syn-gers. Whom we commonly call in englysh, the father of the quyre or chaunter. This interpretacion also, do boeth the most number & the best lerned of the latynistes, best allow and therefore I haue folowed the same the whole psal-ter thowse, explyngge it by this word chaunter. For withstandinge diuers authours do diuerslye interpret it. Some say that it sy-gnifieth, to the victoure ouercomer, so he to the victorye, whiche maye thus agree together, if thou take a psalm to be a songe up and ex-hortacion to put our trust in God, beinge sure to obtayne the vic. oye. And where some interprie vnto the ende, vnderstande euen the same.

For therefore does wee put our trust in god, that we may come to the ende of the victorye.

Some translate the title thus. A vehement and often made exhortacion in instruments of mu-like, a psalm to David, that is as they them sel-ues expound it: A psalm reuelate vnto David.
For David is in Hebrew the dative case & not the gentile.

(b) This word signifyeth the tune or note of the instrumentes: After the psalmes, before whiche it is prefixed, were songe. For the psalmes were sing at certen instrumentis, but so that the sweete tune and instrumente, prepared the mind more perfectly to receiue the word of the holy scripture.

The Notes.

(a) As some wyl; thys worde signyfeth an exercise that is a paynful and heauy tentatō of Dauid. Other interpret it an ignoraunce, because he knewe not the fauor that was la. d. vnto him. Some saye that it was one of the in-strumēttes wherof al the psalmes were songe, before whiche it was set. Some thynke that it is a certen kinde of melodye. Wherouer that that Almuth synonyfeth: of the death, whiche some vnderstande by laben Goliath, or some o-

An often made, and vehemente exhortation of a secrete and folpse sonne. They vnderstande sake, because hee is continuallie in death and sorrowes, for his lyfe is byd in Chyste till the thynges be shewed agayne in the iudgement of God. Then shall they perceyue that the deathe of this world is glorie. felix reader the title thus: vnto the victoure ouercome of the death of a foole. Whiche you maye well vnderstande of the death of folpse Antichrist, and of the fall of his kyngdome. Howe be it this title. Mouth after the hebrues, is a dystinct psalme from this, where as the Latynistes make this & the next boeth one.

The complaint of the poore.

(b) The complaint of the poore, is the seruente despise and burning affection, wherewith they crye vnto the Lorde, and be heard. By the poore is vnder-stand in the scripture the afflicted, who feele theyr neede and tentation, and do sorow and lament & the truth is ouer trode, putting no trust in any thyng that is in this world. I say these be they that be despised & forsaken of the world, and cleave vnto the yunge God onely, assured that at his hande they shall fynde helpe, though the world be neuer so extreme against them. As in the next psalme.

The gates of death.

(c) The gates of death, are the iudgements to death, the counsellies of the wycked, the congregations of Satan, the doctrines of falsenes, and whatsoeuer leadech to death.

Voices of the good and faythfull, where in are recited &

The .xii. and .xiii. Psalme.

The Lord seeth both the righteous and ungodly, but who so believeth in wickednes, by his soule abhorreth.

Upon the ungodly he shall cast snares, fyre, bymstone, storme, and tempest: thys reward shall they haue to dyneke.

For the Lord is righteous, and he loueth righteousness: his countenance beholderth the thyng that is iust.

The Notes.

(a) Thys is a borrowed speche, by whiche is signified that the wicked enemies of Dauid were most prest and ready to destroye hym. For thys psalme, as some suppose, was made when he fled from Dauid, and had hymselfe in dyuers and sundry places, as ye made i. Regum from the .xxi. chapter, to the .xxv. wher his persecucion was so greuous, that at the length he was fayne to fflye out of the coast of Iherusalem into the Philistines. After lyke maner doo oure Dauides persecute the churche. Psalme .xxv. b.

The .xii. psalme.

The complaynt that righteousness and faith are euery wher decayed, and that wylle and gylefull flatterers rule all, and prayeth the Lord to haue compassiō on the afflicte, which they cruelly bere: and also to helpe them accordinge to his worde, whiche only can not deceyue, and to deliuer hym from the fylthy company of the wicked.

To the chaunter vpon Shemitteth, a psalme of Dauid.

I Elpe Lord, for there is not one sapnt more: very fewe sayntfull are there amonge the chyldren of meune.

Euery man telleth lyes to his neyghbour, they do but flatter with theyr lypys, and bysemble in theyr hearte.

O that the Lord would roote out all bysciteful lypys, and the tounge that speareth proude thynges.

Whiche say: our tounge shoulde preuaile, we are they that oughte to speake, who is Lord ouer vs?

B Note for the recule sake of the oppressed, and because of the complaynte of the poore, I wil vp (saith the Lord) I wil help them, and set them at rest.

The words of the Lord are pure wordes, euē as the siluer, whiche from earth is tried and purged with fyre.

Kepe them therefore O Lord and preserue vs from thys generation for euer. And wher? when vanitie and shelles getteth the ouerhand amonge the chyldren of men, all are full of the ungodly.

The .xiii. psalme.

Dauid beinge in desperados case and in great perill, both earnestlye with ppytialnes besyche Gods helpe, to the intent that his enemies shoulde not reioyce of his death, but that he rather myghte reioyce of his health obayned, and with helpe magnifye and prayse his preseruer God.

sail in my soule: howe long shal I be so vexed in myne heart: howe long shal myne enemye triumphe ouer me?

Consyder, and heare me, O Lord my God: (b) lighte myne eyes, (c) that I slepe not in death.

Least mine enemy say: I haue preuailed agaynst him: for if I be caste downe, they that trouble me wyl reioyse at it.

But my truste is in thy mercye, and my heart is ioyfull in thy sayng health.

I wil synge of the Lord, that dealeth so louyngly with me.

Yea, I wil praise the name of the Lord the most byest.

The Notes.

(a) We are sayd to seeke counsaile in our sorowes: when we take deliberation.

(b) God lighteth our eyes, when he maketh vs to respect and dygent, that we neyther let light to do that which ought to be done, neither folowly attempte that which ought to be shewen, and so come vnto the hands of our enemies, and be oppressed of them. And therefore do some read, hepe me awake, for that whiche is here, light myne eyes.

(c) It is sayd that we sleepe in death, why we dye or be slaine of our enemies, wherfore it followeth that myne enemy say, I haue preuailed, &c.

The .xiii. psalme.

The bewayleth that all places are full of wicked and open synners, and describeth thys most corrupt, spleyn, and vyle condiciō: and further, he prophesyeth vengeance to them, and saluatiō to the innocēt, whom they oppresse and deuoure.

To the chaunter of Dauid.

I He foolish bedies say in their heart: A resusur, ther is no God.

They are corrupt, and become abhominable in theyr doynges, there is not one that doth good.

The Lord looketh downe from heauen vpon the chyldren of me, to se if ther were any that wold vnderstand and seke after God.

But (a) they are all gone out of the waye, they are all together become vniprofitable, ther is none that doth good, no not one.

How can they haue vnderstanding, that worke myschaunce, eatyng by my people, as it were breade, and cal not vpon the Lord.

Therefore shal they be brought in greaue feare, for God standeth by the (b) generacion of the righteous.

(c) As for youe haue made a moke of the counsaile of the poore, because he putteth his trust in the Lord.

O that the sayng health were geuen Iherusalem out of syon.

O that the Lord wold deliuer his people out of captiuitie.

Then shoulde (b) Iacob reioyse, and Iherusalem shoulde be right glad.

A psalme of David.

Whose, who shall dwell in thy tabernacle: who shall reaste upon thy holy hill?

Then he that leadech an vnto corrupte lyfe: that doth the chynge wyche is ryghte, and that * speakech the truthe from his hearte.

He that useth no discreete in his tounge: he that doth no cut to his neighbour, and sloundreth not his neighbours.

He that setteth not by the vngodly, but maketh much of them that feare the Lord: he that sweareth vnto his neighbour, and dysapoynteth hym not.

He that geueth not his money vpon vsurye, and taketh no rewarde agaynst the innocente.

Who so doeth these thynges, shal neuer be remoued.

The .xvi. psalme.

He desireth god to be his defender. He prayeth that he be geuen to the fauour of the sayntes, and that he abhorreth Idolaters. He looketh to haue the perfect and continuall ioye of the sight of God.

(a) Catchem of David.

Herfore did my heart reioyce, & my tōg was glad my flesh also shal rest in hope.

For wher (d) thou shalte not leane my soule in hel, neyther shalte thou suffer thy saynte to be corruption.

Thou hast shewed me the wayes of lyfe: thou shalte make me full of ioye wth thy countenance.

The .xvii. psalme.

At the ryghte hand ther is pleasure and ioye for euermore.

The Petes.

(a) That is nob title of honour of chualty, or an instrument of mytye.

(b) Here and in many other places, the scripture telleth the saythful, sayntes, as psalm. xvi. a, and the psalm in many of his epistles.

(c) God is on the ryghte hand, when he helpech, aideth and succoureth vs, and is praye and reaspe thereto, psalm. cxi. d.

(d) God leueth not our soules in hel, when he suffereth them not to dye, neyther forsaketh vs nor taketh his assent grace fro vs. And that which followeth neyther shal thou suffer thy saynte to be corruption, spon lyth. Thou shalt not suffer my body to be in the graue, and so to corrupt. So doth Peter expound this place of Act. ii. Paul Act. xiii.

The .xvii. psalme.

A vehement and feruent prayer of David, that he myght be deliuered from the persecutions of Saul. He innocently prayeth his own innocency, as he sayd in the vii. psalm. He cryeth for helpe, desireth both the proude condicions and vayne intencions of his persecuters, and confesseth that his helpe cometh in the knowledge of God.

A prayer of David.

Eate the ryghte (O Lord) consyder my complaynt, beken vnto my prayer, that goeth not oute of a sayned mouth.

Let my sentence come forth fro thy presence: & loke vpon the thyng that is equall.

Thou hast proude & visited myne heart in the night season: þu hast tried me in þe fire, & thou hast found no wickednes in me: for I was wholy & truly purposed þe my mouth shuld not offend. Because of the wordes of thy lypes, I haue kepte me from the workes of men, in the way of the murderer.

Obserue thou my goynges in the paces: that my foot stappes ayye not.

For vnto þe I cry, heare me O god: encline thine eares to me: & beken vnto my wordes.

Shew thy maruelous louing kyndnes: thou that sauest the which put their trust in the, from such as respect the ryghte hand.

Kepe me as an apple of an eye, defende me vnder the shadow of thy wynges.

Fro the vngodly þe trouble me, fro mine enemies which copas my soul to be abhor.

Which mapurpne their own wylles: nelle & þe oppresyon, and they moure speakech proude thynges.

They lie waiting in our way on euery side, turning they eyes down to þe ground.

Like as a Lion þe is greedy of his pray, & as it wet a Lions whelp lurking in his denne.

O lord, dyspoynt him, & cast him down: deliuer my soul wth thy sword fro the vngodly.

Fro the me of the vngodly (O lord) fro þe me of þe world, which haue they portoun in this life, whose bellies þe filleth wth thy treasure.

They haue chyldre at their desire, & leaue the rest of their substance for their babes.

But as for me, I wyll beholde thy presence in righteousnes: and when thy glory appereth, I shal be saye: I cryd.

Shadowe
of wynges,

The Notes
(a) Here both the shadow of the wynges flays that protection & vnspeakable goodnes of god, by which only we stand in safe. It is a bozwed speche of the nature of an hen, who nourymeth, feedeth and defendeth her chickens vnder her wynges, yea, fighteth for them, and despyseth her own life to saue them. Thus bozoweth a lyke speche. Math. xxiii. d.

The. xliii. Psalme.

First he describeth the great and feruent confidence whiche he had in God, and then the evils wherewith he was overladen after that the power of God, and good will toward hym. Then the worth of his own diligence, his innocency, and the iudgement of God toward al men. And after these, the great vertye obtained of his most myghty cannye, and that the coastes of his kingdome were meruelously enlarged, and his power confirmed for euer: at the last he endeth the Psalme with prayles, and with a prophecy of Christ.

For the chaunter of Dauid, seruaunt of the Lorde, whiche sayde vnto the Lord the wordes of this songe, on the day in which the Lorde deliuered hym from the bande of all his enemyes, and from the bande of Saul, and sayde.

A I will loue thee (O Lorde) my strength.

The Lorde is my succoure, my refuge, my sauyoute, my God, my helper in whome I trust: my buckler (a) the horne of my helth, and my protection.

I will prayse the Lord, and cal vpon him so that I be safe from myne enemyes.

(b) The sorowes of death compassed me and the brokes of vngodlynes made me astayed.

The paynes of hell came aboute me, the snarres of death toke hold vpon me.

Yet in my trouble I called vpon the Lord, and complained vnto my God.

So he hearde my voyce oute of his holy temple, and my complaint came before him, yea euen into his eares.

Then the earth trembled and quaked, the very foundations of the hyls shoke, and wer remoued, because he was wroth.

Ther went a smoke out of his nostrils;
and a consuming fyre out of his mouth:
so that coales were kindled at it.

He bowed the heauens and came down and it was darke vnder his feete.

He rode vpon the Cherubyns and was caryed: he came flyinge with the wynges of the wynde.

He made darkness his pavilion round about him, with darcke water and thicke cloudes to couer hym.

At the brightenes of his presence the cloudes remoued, with haille stones and coales of fyre.

The Lorde also thundred out of the heauen and the hygh gaue his thundre with haille stones and coales of fyre.

He sent out his arrowes and scattered them, he caste fyre byghtenynge, and destroyed them.

The springs of waters weresene, and the foundacions of the round worldes wer discouered at thy chiding (O Lorde) at thy bla-sphem and byrth of the displeasures.

He sent downe fro the heigh to fetehe me, and toke me out of great waters.

He deliuered me from my strong enemyes, myes, and from my foes whiche were to myghte for me.

They persecute me in the tyme of my trouble, but the Lord was my defence.

He brought me forth also into liberty:
and deliuer me, because he had a fauoure vnto me.

The Lord shall reward me after my righteuous dealing, & according to the cleennes of my bandes shall he recompence me.

For I haue kept the mapes of the Lord: and haue not behaued my selfe wretchedlye agaynst my God.

I haue an eye vnto al his lawes, & cast not out his commaundementes from me.

Uncorrupte will I be before hym, and wyl schewe myne owne wretchednes.

Therfore shall the Lord reward me after my rightuous dealing, and according vnto the clennes of my bandes in his eye syght.

With the holy thou shalt be holpe, and with the innocent thou shalt be innocent.

With the cleane thou shalt be cleane, and with the scharde thou shalt be scharde.

For thou shalt saue the poore oppressed, and byrge downe the hye lokes of the proude.

Thou lyghdest my candell, O Lorde my god: thou makest my darkness to be light.

For in the I can discryt an host of me:
yea in my God I can leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is a perfecte waye:
the wordes of the Lorde are tryed in the fyre: he is a hynde of defence, for al them that trust in hym.

For who is God, but the Lord? Or who hath any strength, but our God?

It is God that girded me with strength,

The Notes.

(a) He calleth God the honye of his health, because by hym he hath subdued his ennemys, and obtained health. It is a borrowed speere of hoysners beards, who with theyr yornes defende them selues and dyue away them that syght agaynst them as Psalm xliii. a

(b) By the sorowes of death, and brokes of this godlynes by which is meant the obstinate multitude of the wicked vngodly the paines of hel, and the snare of death, are signified the terrible and terrible strokes, which by the wickednes of his ennemys happened vnto him, and brought him very often, euen to deathe doore, so that by the iudgement of his flesh, he thought hym selfe utterly cast away.

(c) This is an Hebrew word, and signifieth in English sayest thyng. And by all the sayngs here rehearsed, is described the power, myght, and majesty of almighty God, whiche he declareth in tempests, of which the whole, xix. ps. is treasured, and in Job. xxi. are the things mentioned, to the settinge out of his power. Often times we reade, that God when he would more openly and more expressely declare his power vnto men, causeth thunder, lightning and earth quakes. &c. As in Job. xxi. c. when the law was geuen, and in Exod. xxi. c. when the people defied a kyng, &c. &c. when Christ was on the crosse. &c. &c. when the holy gost came vpon the Apostles. &c. &c. when they prayed. With such lyke wonders doo some suppose that God vnto at one tyme or other shew his benyolence to Dauid, and confirmed his promise with the kyng of the earth, sending thunder, lightning, hail, cloudes, stormes, and other terrible tokens

To the chaunter vpd. (a) Aiter (b) of the dawnyng, a Psalme of Dauid.

My God, my god, why hast thou forsaken me? the words of my complaynte are farre from my healeth.

O my God, I *crepe in the day tyme, but thou *hearest nor: and in the nyght season also I take no rest.

Yet dwellest thou in the Sanctuare, O thou worshyppe of Israel.

Our fathers hoped in thee, they trusted in thee, and thou bydest deliuer them.

They called vpon thee, and were heald: they put theyr trust in thee, and were not confounded.

But as for me, I am a worme and no man: a very scorne of men, and the out cast of the people.

Alther that se me, laughe me to scorne: they shoute oute theyr lippes, and shake theyr beades.

He trusted in God, let him deliuer him: let hym helpe hym, yf he wyl haue hym.

But thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wombe: thou wast my hope tobe I hanged yet vpon my mothers breaues,

I haue bene leste vnto the euer sence I was borne, thou art my God, euen from my mothers wombe.

O go not from me then, for trouble is hard at hand, & here is none to heale me.

*Great bulles are come about me, fat lare & men oren close me in on euery syde.

They *gape vpon me with theyr mowes, as it wer a ramping & roaring Lion.

I am poured oute lyke water, all my bones are oute of synne: my hearte in the myddest of my bodye is euen lyke meltyng waxe.

My strengthe is dyped vp lyke a porcherd, my tong cleueth to my gommenes, and thou hast brought me into the duste of death.

*For dogges are come aboute me, the counsaile of the wycked hath layed seage agaynst me.

They peaced my handes and my feete I myght haue tolde all my bones: as for them, they shooe starunge and lookynge vpon me.

They haue parted my garments among them, and cast lottes vpon my vesture.

Syng prayles vnto the Lorde (O ysaie: tes of his) geue thanks vnto hym for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

For his wrath endureth but the twinkling of an eye, and his pleasure is in life: heynesse may wel endure for a nyght, but ioye cometh in the morning.

As for me, when I was in prosperyte,
I said: I shal neuer fail more.

And wher? thou Lorde of thy goodnesse haddest made my hyl so strong.

But as soone as thou turnedest thy face fro me, I was brought in strece.

Then cryed I vnto the, O Lorde, yea vnto the Lorde made I my prayer:

What profit is ther in my bloude, if I go downe to corruption?

Mar the dust geue thanks vnto the? O:
that it declare thy sayntnesse:

Heare, O Lorde, and haue mercy vpon me: Lorde be thou my helper.

And so thou hast turned my heynesse in to ioye: thou hast put of my (v) sacke cloth, and girded me with gladnesse.

That myne honour myght syng prailes vnto the without ceasing: O Lorde my god
I wil geue thanks vnto the for euer.

The Notes.

(a) Here is it manifest, that hel is taken for the estate of the dead, as wel of the good, as of the e-uyl. As it is sayd. Gene. xxiij. g.

(b) He putteth of sackcloth, that putteth away sannes from his hart, for it was the maner of the Jewes to weare sackcloth when they were sorrowful in sadnes by any misfortune, or when they bewailed theyr wyckednes, as ye se in Eches, and many other places.

The. xxi. Psalme.

He sheweth wher with he strengthened his hope, what he despyed for, what he complained of, in what case he was, and how he was mysled when he and his were beset round about in the wyldernes of Moab, and sought a meane to escape. He prayseth the great goodnes of God toward al such as fear him. And moueth men to feare and loue of God, whiche can not forsake them that leane vnto hym.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of David.

I the o lord, is my trust: let me neuer be put to confusion, but deliuer me in thy * righteousness.

Bow down thine eare to me, make hast to deliuer me: be thou my strong rock and a house of defence, that þe mayest laue me.

For thou arte my stronge holde and my castell: O be thou my gyde, and lead me for thy names sake.

The. xxxi. Psalme.

lated p'suely for me, for þ art my strength.
I into thy hands I comēd my spryt: thou hast deliuered me. O Lord þ God of trath.
I hate them that hold of vanities, and my trust is in the Lord.

I wyl be glad and reioyse in thy mercy, for thou hast considered my trouble, thou hast knowen my soule in aduersity.

Thou haste not deliuered me ouer into the handes of the enemye, but hast set my feete in a large trome.

C Haue mercy vpon me. O Lord, for I am in trouble: mine eye consumed for very beuities, yea my soule and my body.

My lyfe is waken old wylth beaupnes, and my peaces wylth mounyng.

My strength faileth me because of myne aduersite, and my bones are corrupt.

I am become a very reprove among all mine enemies, my neighbours and they of myne own acquaintance are astraied of me: they that se me in the streete, conuey them selues from me.

I am cleue forgottē and out of mynd, as a dead mā: I am become like a broke vessel.

D For I haue heard þ blasphem of þ multitude, every mā abhorreth me: they haue gathered a counsel together agaynst me, and purposed to take away my lyfe.

But my hope is in the Lord, and I saye:
thou art my God.

My tyme is in thy hand: deliuer me fro the hand of myne enemies, and from them that persecute me.

Shew thy seruaunt the light of thy confession, helpe me for thy mercies sake.

E Let me not be confounded. O Lord, for I cal vpon the: let the vngodly rather be put to confusion, and brought vnto the hel.

Let the lying lips be put to silēce which euilly, disdainfully, & despitefully speake agaynst the ryghteous.

O how great and manifold is the good, wherby thou hast byd for the that fear the.

O what thynges bringest thou to passe for them that put theyr trust in the, euen before the sonnes of men?

F Thou hidest the p'suely by thine own pre-fere fro the proude mā, þ kepest the secrets in thy tabernacle, fro þ sight of tonges.

Thats be to þ lord, for he hath shewed me mercifulous great kindnes in a strong city.

For when the sodayne feare came vpon me, I sayd: I am cast out of thy syght.

Reuerthelesse, thou herdest myne humble prayer, when I cried vnto the.

O loue the Lord (al ye hys sayntes) for the Lord preseruethe the sayntful, and plens equally rewardeth be the proude doer.

Be strong therfore and take a good here vnto you, al ye þ put your trust in the lord.

The. xxxi. psalme.

The sheweth that al aduersities come of syn, þ he therfore is happy þ hath hys syns forgiven.
And further, þ both forgiuenes of synnes & the protection & defence of god are obtained by earnest acknowledginge of our offences, & seruet prayer.

An instruction of David

The. xxxii. Psalme. Fol. viii

B Lessed are they whose vnrightheousnes is forgiven, & whose sins are conered.

* Bless. d is the mā, vnto whō þ Lord im-puteth no sin, in whose spirit ther is no gile

For while I held my tong, my bones consumed away thorow my daily complaininge.

And because thy hand was so beny vpon me both day and night, my moysture was lyke the drouth in Sommer.

Therfore I confessed my syn vnto thee, and hyd not myne vnrightheousnes.

* I sayd: I wyl knowlege myne offence & accuse my selfe vnto þ lord, & so thou forgauest me the wickednes of my sin.

For this shal every salut make his prayer vnto the in due season, therfore shal the great water foudes comen hym.

Thou art my defence in trouble that is come about me, O compas thou me about also with the rope of deliuerance.

I implentoume the, and shewe thee the way wherby thou shalt goo, * I wil fasten myne eyes vpon the.

Be not ye nowe lyke horses and mules, wherby haue no vnderstandyng.

Whose mouthes thou must holde tyme byt and byde, if they wyl not obere thee.

Crete plagis shal the vngodly haue, but who so putterh hys trust in the Lord, mercy shal compasse hym on euery syde.

Be glad. O ye ryghteous, & reioyse in þ Lord, be ioyful al ye that are true of heart.

The. xxxii. psalme.

The sheweth and mouthmen byrgenlyve to praise God. And sheweth that al thynges are ful of hys goodnes.

Rioyse in the Lord, O ye ryghte-ous, for it becometh wel the iust to be thanketul.

Praise the Lord wylth harpe:
sing psalmes vnto hym wylth the lute, and instrumentes of ten stringes.

Sing hym a new song, yea, sing lustily vnto hym, and wylth a good corage.

For the word of the Lord is true, and al hys workes are sayntful.

Be loueth mercy and iudgemente, the earth is ful of the goodnes of the Lord.

By the word of the Lord were the hea-uens made, and al the hostes of them by the breech of hys mouth.

* He gathered the waters together as it were in a botel, and laped vp the deepe in secreete.

Let al the earth feare the Lord, and let all them that dwel in the world, stande in awe of hym.

* For looke what he sayeth, it is done:
and looke what he commaundeth, it standeth faste.

The Lord byngeth the counsaile of the Heathen to naught, and turneth the deuises of the people.

But the counsaile of the Lord endureth, and þ thoughtes of hys heart fro ge-neracion to generacion.

Blessed are the people þ holde the Lord in awe.

The xxxiii. Psalme.

for the Lord, and blessed is the folke whiche be hath chosen to be his heritage.

D The Lord looketh downe from heauen, and beholderth al the children of men: for his strong seate he considereth all them that dwell in the world.

That is: his strong seate, which is so strong that it cannot be moved.

He only hath fasthponed all the beastes of them, and knoweth al thei works.

A kyng is not helped by his own great host, neyther is a giaunte saued thowhe the myght of his own strength.

A horse is but a bayne chynge to saue a man, it is not the power of his strength that can deliuer hym. Beholde, the eye of the Lord loketh vnto them that feare hym, and put thei trust in his mercy.

E That he may deliuer thei soules from death, and seue them in the deare tyme.

Let our soule patiently abyde the Lord, for he is our helpe and shelde.

So shall oure heart reioyce in hym, because we haue hoped in his holy name.

Let thy merciful kynnes (O Lord) be vpon vs, lyke as we put our trust in the.

The xxxiii. Psalme.

D David prayeth the Lord, because he prouideth for his chosen in tyme of neede: and moueth al men to endeuer them selues to innocency and godlines, because such as are indued therewith, are rewarded with al goodnes.

* Of David, when he layned hym selfe to be made before Abimelech: whych dyng hym away, and he departed.

My alway geue thanks vnto the Lord, his prayse shal euer be in thy mouth.

My soule shall make her boast in the Lord, the (a) humble shal beate therof, and be glad.

O prayse the Lord with me, and let vs magnifye his name together.

I soughte the Lord, and he heard me, yea he deliuered me out of al my feare.

Thei that haue an eye vnto him, shal be lightened, & their faces shal not be ashamed.

Thys poore man cryed vnto the Lord, and he heard hym, yea, and deliuered hym out of al his troubles.

The Angell of the Lord pyched his tent round about them that feare hym, and deliuereth them.

O taste and se how frendly the Lord is, blessed is the man that trusteth in hym.

O feare the Lord, ye that be his saintes: for they that feare hym lacke no chynge.

The (b) cypshall want and suffer hunger, but they whych seke the Lord, shal want no maner of chynge that is good.

Come hyther, O ye chyldre, hearken vnto me, I wyl teach you the feare of the Lord.

* Who so lysteth to liue, and would saue (c) se good dayes.

Let hym restryne his yong from cull, and his yppes that they speake no gyle.

Let hym eschue euyl, and do good: Lette hym seke peace and ensue it.

righteous, and his eyes are open vnto thei prayers.

But the face of the Lord beholderth the meane that do euyl, to destoye the remembrance of them out of the earth.

When the righteous crye, the Lord heareth them, and deliuereth them out of all thei troubles.

The Lord is nye vnto them that are constryte in heart, and wyl helpe such as be of an humble spiryte.

Great are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lord deliuereth the out of all.

He keepeth all thei bones, so that not one of them is broken.

But my fortune shal not be vngodlye, and they that hate the righteous shal be gilty.

The Lord deliuereth the soules of his seruants, and al they that put their trust in hym, shal not offende.

The Notes

(a) Suche as haue determined with them selues to beate the crosse, and are euyl entreated of the world, because they are not of the world as in Ihon. xv. are they that are called humble and meke. These are displeased with their owne seruys, and thyr righteousnes, and do in renoucing them selues, conuerthe them selues into the hand of God, as vnto in Ier. xlv. b.

(b) By the cyphers are vnderstande the cruel rancours, vniuers, and such as loue of the sweate labour of other men. As I. Psalme, lxx. c.

(c) He seeth good dayes that syneth in peace and lyueth quietly in tranquillitie, and leadeth a peaceable lyfe. Ps. lxxv. d.

(d) The Lordes eyes do commonly signifye his fauour. As I. Psalme, lxx. b.

The xxxv. Psalme.

D He desireth the Lord to fight for him agaynst Saul and his adherentes, and to deliuer hym forth of thei handes.

Of David.

S Tryue thou with the, O Lord, & strue to shewe, fight against them that fight agaynst me.

Lay hand vpon the shield, and speake, and stande vp to helpe me.

Draw out thy swerde, and stop the way agaynst them that persecute me, saye vnto my soule: I am thy helpe.

Let them be confounded & put to shame, & seke after my soule: let the be turned backe and broughte to confusyon that pماغyn mischief for me.

Let them be as the dust before the wind, and the angel of the Lord scatteryng them.

Let they way be backe and appere, and the angel of the Lord to persecute the.

For they haue pryncely layed their net to destoy me without a cause, yea, & made a pye for my soule, which I neuer deserued.

Let a soden destruction come vpon him vnto wares, and the net that he had layed pryvely catche hym selfe, that he may fall into his owne mischief.

But let my soule be ioyfull in the Lord, and reioyce in his helpe.

All my bones shal saye: Lords, who is lyke vnto the? whych deliuereth the poore from those that are to strong for hym, yea the

The. xxv. Psalme.

the poore and the needy from hye robbers.

Like wyndes as theye blow, and say to my charge thynges that I knowe not.

Ether rewarde me euill for good, to the great discomfort of my soule.

Reuestheleffe, when they were sick, I put on a sack cloth: I humbled my soule with fastyng, and my prayer turned into myne owne bolome.

I behaued my self as though it had ben my friend or my brother, I went heuily as one that mourneth for hye mother.

But in mine aduersite they reioyse, and gather them together: Yea the very same come together agaynst me by wates, makinge mooves at me, and cease not.

With the greedy and scornful hypocrites, they gnashed vpon me with theyr teeth.

Lord, when wilt thou loke vpon this?

Restore my soule from the wycked remoure of them, my deatling fro the Lyons.

So wilt I geue thee thanks in the greate congregacion, and prayse thee among much people.

Let them not triumphe ouer me, that are myne enemies for nought: Let them not wynde with theyr eyes, that hate me without a cause.

And wyse: theyr comynge is not for peace, but they pynnyshalle woordes agaynst the outcastes of the land.

D They gape vpon me with theyr mouthes, saying: ther, ther: we se it with oure eyes.

Eyes thou seest. O Lord: holde not thy tong then, go not far fro me, O Lord.

Awake Lord, and stand vprauenge thou my cause, my God, and my Lord.

Judge me, O Lord my god, according to thy righteousnes, & theyr sculpe not ouer me.

Let them not say in theyr heartes: ther, ther, so woulde we haue it: Let them not say, we haue overcome hym.

Let them be put to confusion and shame, that reioyse at my trouble: let them be clothed with rebuke and dishonour, that boast them selues agaynst me.

Let the also be glad and reioyce, that saue my righteous dealing: yea, let them say alway: blessed be the Lord, whych hath pleasure in the prosperitie of hye seruant.

And as for my tonge, it shal be talkyng of thy righteousnes and of thy prayse, all the day long.

The. xxxvi. Psalme.
Let me prayse the goodnes of God according to that he sheweth not vpon hye mercy from the vngodly, when they haue grievously offended him. He sheweth also that the chosen receiue his goodnes before other, and prayeth hym more largely to distribute hye benefytes vnto them that knowe hym: and to dysper hym from the violence of the wycked: whose fall, and rayne he alway prayeth.

To the chaunter, of Dauid the seruant of the Lord.

A Wherein he meth me the wyckednesse of the vngodly, that ther is no feare of God before hye eyes.

For he dissembled before hye face, so long

The. xxxvii. Psalme.

thyis abhominable synne be found out.

The words of his mouth are vngodlynes and disceate, he will not be learned to doo good.

He imagineth mischief vpon his bed, he will come in no good way, nor refuse the thyng that is euyl.

Thy mercy, O Lord, reacheth vnto the heauen, & thy faithfulness vnto the clouds. Thy righteousnes staderh like & hee g most: rained, & thy iudgement like & great deepe.

Thou Lord preteract both me & beasts.

Honourous is thy mercy, O God, that the children of men may put theyr trust vnder the shadow of thy wynges.

They shal be satisfied with the plente of thy house, & thou shalt geue the dyne of the ryuer of thy pleasures.

For by the is the wel of lyfe, and in thy lyght, shal we se lyght.

Disperad forth thy louing kyndnes vnto them that knowe the, and thy righteousnes vnto them that are true of heart.

Let not the soore of pryde ouertake me, lette not the bande of the vngodlye cast me downe.

As for wycked doers, they fall, they are cast downe, and are not able to stand.

The. xxxviii. Psalme.

Let the prosperite of the euil woulde geue the good, he sayeth that vnto such as feare God, and lyue righteously, all thynges shall happen well, and that they shal in verie dede be happye, wher as the vngodly although they seme to doo ryght for a tyme, shal at the last be rooted, and wypped cleane out of the way.

A psalme of Dauid.

Let not thy selfe as the vngodly, be not thou enuious agaynst the euyl doers.

For they shal soon be cut downe lyke the grasse, and be wythered as the grene herbe.

* But thou thy trust in the Lord, and be doing good: so shalt thou dwel in the land, and verely it shal se the.

Despise thou in the Lord, and he shall geue the thy heartes desyre.

Commit thy way vnto the Lord, let thy hope in hym, and he shal byng it to passe.

He shall make thy righteousnesse as cleare as the lyght, and thy iuste dealinge as the noone daye.

Hold the syl in & Lord, & abide pacifely vpon him: but geue not thy selfe at one & hath prosperite, & liueth in abhominacion.

Leaue of thy wyrd, let go displicature, let not thy gelousy moue the also to do euyl.

For wycked doers shal be toucht sure, but they that paciently abyde the Lord, shal inherite the lande.

Suffer yet a lytle whyle, and the vngodly shal be cleane gone: thou shalt loke a strete hye place, and he shal be away.

* But the meke spyped shal possesse the earth, and haue pleasure in much rest.

The vngodly layeth mayne for the iuste, and gnaseth vpon hym with hye teeth.

BB. All. But

The. xxvii. psalme.

But the Lorde shall be glorified in
the day of his power.

But the Lorde laugheth hym to scorn, for he seeth that his bar is cumming.

The vngodly shall drawe out the sword, and bende theyr bowe, to caste downe the simple and poore, and to slay such as go the right waye.

Neuertheless, theyr swerde shall goo thorow theyr owne heart, and theyr bowe shall be broken.

A small thyng that the righteous hath, is better then great riches of the vngodlye.

For the armes
of the righteous shall be broken.

For the armes of the vngodlye shall be broken, but the lord upholdeth the righteous.

The Lorde knoweth the dayes of the Godlye, and theyr inheritaunce endureth for ever.

They shall not be confounded in the perilous tyme, and in the dayes of death they shall haue ynough.

As for the vngodly, they shall perishe: and when the enemies of the Lorde are in theyr flouers, they shall consume, yea euen as the smoke shall they consume awaye.

The
vngodly
shall not stand in
the day
his power.

The vngodlye shall borrowe and payeth not agayne, but the righteous is mercyfull and lybterall.

Such as be blessed of hym, shall possesse the land: and they whom he curseth, shall be rooted out.

The Lorde directeth a good mans goyng, and hath pleasure in hys waye.

Though
he

he shall not be hurte,
for the Lorde
upholdeth him with hys
hand.

Though he fall, he shall not be hurte, for the Lorde upholdeth hym with hys hand.

I haue bene yonge, and now am old: yet saue I neuer the righteous forsaken, nor hys seede to seke theyr breade.

The righteous is euer mercyfull, and lenderth gentylty, therefore shall hys seede be blessed.

Flye from euyl, and do the thyng that good, so shalt thou dwell for euer.

For the Lorde loveth the thyng that is righte, he forsaketh not hys sayntes: but they shall be preseerued for euermore: as for the seede of the vngodly it shall be rooted out.

Yea, the righteous shall possesse the land, and dwell therein for euer.

The mouth
of the righteous is erect:

The mouth of the righteous is erect:
cyed in wysdome, and hys tounge talketh of iudgement.

The law of his God is in his heart, therefore shall not hys footesleppes slide.

The vngodlye seeth the righteous, and goeth aboute to slay hym.

But the Lorde will not leaue him in hys hands, nor forsake hym whē he is iudged.

Hope thou in the Lorde, and kepe his way, and he shall so promote thee, that thou shalt haue the land by inheritaunce, and se whē the vngodly shall perishe.

I my self haue sene the vngodly in great power and flourishing like a grene bay tree: but when I went by, lo he was gonne: I sought him, but he could nowhere be found.

Kepe innocency, and take heed vnto the thyng that is right, for that shall bypunge a man peace at last,

The. xxxviii. psalme.

As for the transgressours, they shall gather together, and the vngodly shall be rooted out at the last.

The help of the righteous cometh of the Lorde, he is theyr strength in the tyme of trouble.

The Lorde shall stand by them, and saue them: he shall deliuer them from the vngodlye, and healepe them, because they put theyr trust in hym.

David taketh with a seruet dyscase, deserveth to be repayed therof, although hys synnes have de-serued to be chastened. He complayneth woful-fully of the intollerable violence of hys syn-nes, of the sayntnes of hys frendes, which forsake hym, and of the crueltie of hys enemies.
Then requyeth he the helpe of God, vnto whō he wholly committed hym selfe.

To the chaunter to bypunge to remembraunce. (a)

Remembre me not to rebuke (O Lorde) in thyne anger: O chasten me not in thy heauye dyspleasure.

For thyne arrowes sticke fast in me, and thy hand presseth me sore.

There is no whole part in my bodye, because of thy dyspleasure: there is no resceit in my bones, by reason of my synnes.

For my wyckednesse are gonne ouer my heade, and are lyke a sore burthen, so heauye for me to beare.

My woundes stynke and are corrupte, thorow my fooly shewes.

I am broughte into so greates trouble and myserye, that I goo mourninge all the daye longe.

For my lynes are cleane dyed by, and there is no whole parte in my bodye.

I am feble and sore smitten, I roare for the very dysquietnes of my herte.

Lorde, thou knowest al my despayre, and my grounyng is not byd from thee.

My hearte panteth, my strengthe hath fayled me, and the lychte of myne eyes is gonne from me.

My louers and frendes stande loo-kinge vpon my trouble, and my kynsmen are gonne a faere of.

They that sought after my lyfe, and to dooe me euyl, spake lyes, and ymagyned dysceate all the daye longe.

As for me, I was lyke a deafe man and hearde not: and as one that were dorme, not openyng hys mouth.

I am become as a manne that heareth not: and that can make no resistance with hys mouth.

For in thee, O Lorde, is my truste, thou shalt heare me. O Lorde my God.

My despayre is, that myne enemies try-umphe not ouer me: for if my foote slippe, they reioyse greatly agaynst me.

I am ready to suffer trouble, and my despaire is euer in my syght.

For I confesse my wyckednesse, and my synnes greue me.

The xxxix. psalme.

But myne enemies lye, and are myghty: & they that hate me without a cause, are many in number.

They that reward me euell for good, speake euell of me, because I folowe the thyng that good is.

Forake me not (O Lord my God) I go not farre fro me.

Haile the to helpe me, O Lord my succour.

The Notes.

(a) Understand, the benefite of God into the hearts of the people, because he had deliuered him from so paynfull disease, and restored him to hys health. & owe he it some thynke & thys whole psalme entreateth of the sickness of the soule, that is, of the sinnes wherein Dauid was exercised. And they vnderstande the title thus:
To hyng to remembrance, and to knowe oure corruption and frailties, taken away by Christ, to as many as repent and beleue.

(b) Some suppose that thys psalme, and the
vi. the xxx. and. xxi. do bel. rpe some grete and feruent sickness where with Dauid was soze troubled and viced. And th. it he in thys, & the other about rehered psalmes, complayneth vpon the greuous paynes whiche he suffered by the meanes of that sickness. Whych paines (saie they), he here callith a chastenyng in anger and heauye dyspleasure. The arrows and hande, that is the plague of God. Alike before in th. vi. psalme. a.

The xxxix. psalme.

He sheweth that although he were viced with the greuous paynes of hys sickness, yet he kept hym selfe so within his boundes, that he let no vnlikenge wordes escape hym in the tyme of hys complayninge, chieselye whyle the wycked heard hym.

To the chaunter for (a) Iudith, a psalme of Dauid.

Said: I will kepe my wayes that I offed not in my tonge.

And so I shutte my mouthe whyle the vngodly layed waite for me.

I helde my tonge, I was dumbe, I kept silence, yea even from good wordes, but it was payne and greue to me.

My heart was bore within me, & whyle
I was thus musyng, the fyre kyndled: so that I spake with my tong.

Lord, let me knowe mine ende, and the number of my dayes: that I may be certified what I want.

The Notes.

(a) Iudith is the name of a chaunter. f. Bar alip. v. d. s. x. v. a. By my thynke & Dauid made this psalme, and that it was wont to be song of the kind of singers, ouer whom Iud-ith bare rule. Some thynke it to be a certen tune after whiche the psalme was song.

The xl. psalme.

He repleth that he is ridde forthe of hys great weopardy by the helpe of God, and wondereth at his vnspurable goodnes toward the that feare him: and forre, lth he setteth not by sacrifices, but requirith the whole man, he co-mmiteth hym selfe vnto him: and saith that he will praise his righteousness and goodnes continuall. Then sheweth he the greuousnes of leopardie wherein he was, and the cause thereof, which was his sinne. At last he beseecheth God to ouerthrow his enemies, and to gladd
the hearts of the good.

To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

Waxed patiently I Lord, which enclined him selfe vnto me: and viced my callpge.

He brought me out of the boyleble pit, out of the myre and clape: he set my feet vpon the rocks, & ordered my goinges.

He hath put a newe song in my month, even a thankesgeyng vnto our God.

Many men serpege thes that feare the Lord, and put thei trust in hym.

Blessed is the mā that setteth hys hope

I will preache of thy rightuousnesse in the great congregacion: Lo, I will not ceasse my lippes, O Lorde, and that thou knowest.

I do not hyde thy rightuousnes in my hart, my talkynge is of thy truth and lawynge health: I keepe not thy lounge mercy and faythfulnesse backe from the great congregacion.

Turne not thou thy mercede from me O Lorde, but let thy lounge kyndnesse and truth alwaye preserve me.

For innumerable troubles are come about me: my synnes haue taken such hold upon me that I am not able to loke vp: yea they are mo in number then the beares of my heab, and my hart hath sayled me.

O Lorde, let it be thy pleasure to helpe me, make haste (Lorde) to heale me.

But let al those that seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the: and let al such as desire in theyr lawynge health, say alwaye: the Lorde be prayesed.

As for me, I am poore and in miserie, but the Lorde careth for me.

Thou art my heale: & redemer, make no long tarrynge, O my God.

The xlii. psalme.

In this psalme also looketh he of a dyscase wherein whyle he was holden, his enemies were greatly reioyced, hopinge that he shoulde be made awaye with the violence of his dyscase. And in which also his frendes had forsaken hym, but God holpe hym whiche alwayes woulde preserve hym: And therefore in the beginning, he pronounceth hym happye whiche perceaueth the counsell of God concerning hym.

(a) To the Chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

In p. scrip ture, poore signifieth a sorrowfull herte.

Blessed is he, that considereth the *poore: the Lorde shall helpe hym in the time of trouble.

The Lorde shall preserve him and keepe hym alwaye: he shall make hym to prosper upon earth, and shall not deliuer hym into the wyll of his enemies.

O blessed be the Lorde God of Israel, from henceforth and for euermore. Amen. Amen.

The seconde Treatise.

The.xlii. psalme.

The sheweth howe sorrowful he was because he was let from the holy assemble and feast of the Lorde, by the conspiraunce of his sonne Absalon, and howe he was disquieted with the voyces of the wicked, which blasphemed the desire of Godlynes, wherunto he was giuen, for a vaine and vnprofitable thyng.

To the chaunter, a monition of the sonnes of Corah.

Ike as the hart desireth the water brookes, so longeth my soule after the, O God.

My soule is a chertie for God, yea even for the lounge God: when shall I come, and beholde the face of God?

My teares are my meate daye & nyght whyle it is daye sayed vnto me: wher is now thy God?

Howe wyl I synke ther vnto, I poure ouer my herte by my selfe: for I woulde saye go hence with the multitude, and passe ouer with them vnto the house of God, in the voyce of prayse and thanksgyuyng, among such as kepe holy daye.

Why art thou so full of heynes, (O my soule) and why art thou so vnquiete within me?

O put thy trust in God, for I will yet geue hym thanks, for the heale of his countenaunce.

O God, my soule is vexed within me: therefore I remeber the lade of Nozbatne, and the lytle byl of Geronim.

One deepe calleth another with his voyce of thy wypples, all thy waues and water cloudes are gone ouer me.

The Lorde hath promysed his lounge kyndnesse dayly, therefore wyl I prayse hym in the nyghte season, and make my prayer vnto the God of my lyfe.

I wyl say vnto God my stony rocke: why hast thou forgotten me? why go I thus heuyl, whyle the enemye oppresseth me?

Whyle my bones are broke, while mine enemies cast me in the reer, dayly saying vnto me: wher is now thy God?

Why art thou so heuy (O my soule) & why art thou so disquieted within me?

O put thy trust in God, for I will yet geue hym thanks thank hym for the helpe of hys countenaunce, and because he is my God.

The xliii. Psalm.

¶ He deliuereth to be deliuered from the conspi-rers wth Absalon, & he may worshippe prayse God in hys holy temple.

* D O sende vpon me (O God) and defende my cause agaynst the vnholye people: O deliuer me from the disceitfull & wy-ked man.

For thou (O God) art my strength: why hast thou shut me from the? Why go I then so heuely, whyle I exerce oppression?

O sende out thy lyght and thy truth, that they maye leade me, and brynge me vnto thy holy hyl, and to thy dwellynge.

That I maye goo vnto þe altar of God, euen vnto the God whych is my ioye and pleasure, and vpon the harpe I geue thākes vnto the, O God, my God.

Why art thou so heuye (O my soule) & why art thou so dysquieted wthiu me?

O put thy truste in God, for I wyl rergeue hym thankses for the helpe of hys countenaunce; and because he is my God.

The xliiii. Psalm.

¶ He complayneth that Israell suffereth so griuous persecution for the honour of God, & holy luynges sake, and that yet God is not present wth hym in miracles doing, as he in times past was. And prayeth him to put forth his vower, and deliuer hys from the iniuries of the wyched.

To the chaunter an instruccyon of the sonnes of Corah.

W E haue herde wth our ears (O God) our fathers haue told vs, what thou hast done in thier tyme of olde.

How thou hast dyuen out the Heathē wth thy hand, and planted * the in: dom thou hast destroyed the nacjons and cast them out.

For they gat not the land in possession thorow thier owne sword, neyther was it thier own * arme that helped them.

But thy right hande, thine arme and the lghte of thy countenaunce, because þ haddest a fauoure vnto them.

Thou arte the Kinge and my God, þ sendest helpe vnto Jacob.

Thorowe the, wyl we ouerthrow oure enemies: and in thy name wyl we tread them vnder, that rise vp agaynst vs.

For I wyl not trust in my bowe, it is not my sword that shal helpe me.

But it is thou that sauest vs from oure enemies: and puttest them to confusyon that hate vs.

We wyl alway make our boast of God, and prayse thy name for euer. Selah.

But now thou forsakest vs, and puttest vs to confusyon, and goest not forth wth oure Hostes.

Thou makest vs to turne oure backes vpon oure enemies, so that they wyche hate vs, & people our goodes.

Thou lettest vs be eatē vp lyke shepe, & scatterest vs amouge the Heathen.

Thou sellest thy people for noughte, & takest no money for them.

Thou makest vs to be rebuked of oure neyghbours, to be laughed to scorn & had in derision of them that are rounde about vs.

Thou hast made vs a very byworde amonge the Heathen, and that the people shake thier beddes at vs.

Our confusyon is dayly before me, and the shame of my face couereth me.

For the voice of þe schanderer and blasphemer, for the enemye and auenger.

All this is come vpon vs, and yet haue we not forgottē the, nor behaued oure sel-ues vnfaithfully in thy couenant.

Oure hert is not turned backe, neyther oure steppes gone out of thy waye.

For thou hast (a) smitten vs in þe place of draggones, and couered vs wth the shadowe of death.

If we had forgottē the name of oure God, and holden vp oure handes to any straunge God.

Shoulde not God trowe it oute? for he knoweth the herte secretes of the herte.

But for thy sake we are kylled all the day long, and are colured as sheepe appointed to be slayne.

O Lord, why sleepest thou, wake, and cast vs not of for euer.

Wherefore (b) hidest thou thy face? wyle thou cleane forget oure myserye and oppression.

For oure soule is broughte lowe euen vnto the dust, and oure helye cleueth vnto the grounde.

Aryse O Lorde, helpe vs and deliuer vs for thy mercy sake.

The Notes.

(a) God smiteth vs in the place of dragons wher he condemneth vs to the place of dragons. That is to be in the captiuitie and bondage to oure enemies, beinge heathen, who, for crueltie may be called dragons. The same call th he the Madowe of death, for it is worse then death, & more to be feared, & to be put in al thynges to the arbitrarie pleasure of the vngodly, to hear the name of God continually blasphemed, all Godlines despised, and all manner of iniuries & wonges done to the followers thereof. Therfore sayth he. Thou hast couered vs with the shadowe of death, that is wth the verpe dar-keners of death.

fereth the good to be persecuted of the euil.

To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid, when the prophet Nathan came vnto hym after he (a) was gone in to Bethsabe.

Mercy vpon me (O God) after thy goodnes, & accordynge vnto thy grate mercyes, do awaye myne offences.

Wash me well from my wyckednesse, & cleanse me from my synne.

For I knowlege my fautes, and my synne is euer before me.

Agaynst the only, agaynst the haue I synned, and done euill in thy sight, that thou myghtest be iustified in thy saynges, and shouldest ouercome when thou art iudged.

Behold, I was borne in wyckednesse, & in synne hath my mother conceyued me.

But so, thou hast a pleasure in the truth, & hast shewed me secret wythdom.

Purge me wyth (b) hyssope, and I shall be cleane: wash thou me, & I shall be whiter then snow. O let me heare of ioye and gladnesse, that the bones wherby thou hast broken, maye reioyse.

Turne thy face from my synnes, & put oute all my mysdoes.

Make me a cleane herte, O God, and renew a right spyrte wythin me.

Cast me not awaye from thy presence, and take not thy holy spyrte from me.

O geue me the comfoite of thy helpe & gayne, and stablish me wyth thy spyrte.

Then shall I teache thy wayes vnto the wycked, that synners may be conuerted vnto the.

Deliuer me from bloude guiltynesse, O God, thou that arte god of my healeth, & my tounge prayse thy ryghteousnes.

Open my lippes, O Lorde, that my mouth maye shewe thy prayse.

For if thou haddest pleasure in sacrifice, I wolde geue it the: but thou delpect not in burnt offerynges.

The sacrifice of God is a troubled spyrte, a broken and contryte herte, O God, shalt thou not despyse.

O be sauourable gracions vnto Sion, that the walles of Ierusalem maye be builded.

For then shalt thou be pleased wyth the (c) sacrifice of ryghteousnes, wyth the burnt offerynges and oblatyons: then shalt they lape bullockes on thyne alter.

A Psalme of Asaph.

How louing is God vnto Israel: to such as are of a cleane herte.

Nevertheless my teete were almost gone, my treadynges had wel nye slyppe.

And why? I was greued at the wicked, to se the vngodly in such prosperite.

For they are in no perill of deathe, but stand fast lyke a palace.

They come in no misfortune lyke other folk, neither are they plagued like other me.

And thys is þ cause that they be so vult up in pryde, and overwelmed wth cruelty and vnyghtuousnes.

They crye wel for faunes, they do euen what they lyst.

Corrupt are they, and speake blasphemies malyciously, proude and presumptuous are theyr wordes.

They stretch forth the theyr mouthe vnto the heauen, and theyr tounge goeth thowme the worlde.

Therfore sal the people vnto them, and shewout luche they no smal auantage.

Tush (say they) how shuld god perceyue it: is there knowledge in the most byst?

To,

The. lxxiii. psalme.

Lo, these are the vngodlye, these prosper in the world, these haue riches in possessiō.

Should I then curse my bett in vayne (thought I) & wash my hands in innocē.

Wherefore should I be thus punished day-ly, and be chastened euery morning?

Yea, I had almost also said euē as they:
but lo, then shoulde I haue conspied the generacion of thy chyldren.

Then thought I to vnderstand this, but it was to hard for me.

Therfor I went into the sanctuary of god, and conspyed the ende of these men.

remember the actes and dedes of the Lord, done to his people. The Lord sayth he, that although they were unfaithful, yet byd he wonders in Egypt, he brought them from thence, although they provoked him to anger in the wilderness, yet he gave them abundantly his benefites. And after that, when they were destroyed, which came forth of Egypt, for they wished to see him brought to them, for he brought them out of Egypt, although they followed their fathers unfaithfulness, and despised the wonders done in the wilderness for their fathers in to the land promised, and drove out the inhabitants: In which, although he often punished them grievously, when they provoked and tempted him, and at the last in token of a great fruitful wrath, he gave them his daughter, suffered also the Ark to be taken from them in the tyme of Ely the High Priest: yet behelde he them favourably againe, giving them David to their king, and restoring godlines againe at Jerusalem. In which tyme he also prophesied of Christ under the shadow of David.

An instruction of Asaph.

Let my law, O my people, enclose your eares unto the wordes of my mouth.

I will open my mouth in parables, and speake of thynges of olde.

Which we have heard and knowe, and such as our fathers have told us.

That we should not hide them from the children of the generations to come: but to shew the honour of the Lord, his might and wonderful workes that he hath done.

He made a covenant with Jacob, and gave Israel a law, whereby he commaunded our fathers to teach their children.

That their posteritie might knowe it, and the children which were yet unborn.

So the intent that when they came up they might shew to their children the same.

That they also might put their trust in God, and not to forget what he had done, but to kepe his commandmentes.

And not to be as their forefathers, a generation that set not their heart right, and whose spirit was not true toward God.

Like as the child of Ephraim, which being banded and carrying bowes, turned them selves backe in tyme of battaile.

They kept not the covenant of God, and would not walke in his law.

They forgot what he had done, and the wonderful workes that he had shewed for them.

Miraculous thinges byd be in the sight of our fathers in the land of Egypt, even in the felde of Zoan.

He divided the sea, and lette them go thorow it, and made the waters to stande like a wall.

In the daye tyme he ledde them with a cloude, and all the nyght thorow it with a light of fyre.

He clove the hard rockes in the wilderness, and gave the drynke therof, as it had bene out of the great deapth.

He brought waters out of the stony rock, so that they gushed out like the founnteyns.

The. lxxviii. Psalm.

Yet for all this they sinned agaynst hym, and provoked the mooste best in the wilderness.

They tempted God in their hartes, and requyred meate for their lust.

For they spoke agaynst God, and sayd: yea, yea God shall prepare a table in the wilderness, shall he?

To he smote the stony rock, that the water streames gushed out, and the streames flowed forth: but how can he geve bread and proude flesh for his people?

When the Lord heard this, he was wroth, so the fyre was kindled in Jacob, and he was displeased agaynst Israel.

Because they beleued not in God, and put not their trust in his helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes above, and opened the doores of heauen.

He rained downe manna upon them for to eat, and gave them bread of heauen.

Then ate they angels foode, for he set them meate ynough.

Because the East wynde to blow vnder the heauen, and thowme his power he brought in the South wynde.

He made the fyre to raine upon them as chylde as dust, and fethered foules like as the sand of the sea.

He let it fall among their tentes, round about their habitacons.

So they eat, and were filled, for he gave them the thing they desired.

They were not disapointed of their lust.

But while the meate was yet in their mouthes: the veyn wrath of God came vpon them, slew the welchpest of them, and smote downe the chosen men of Israel.

But for all this they sinned yet more, and beleued not his wonderous workes.

Therefore their dayes were consumed in vanitie, and suddenly they perished gone.

When he saw them, they sought hym: and turned them early vnto God.

They thought then that God was their succour, and that the Lord God was their redemer.

Neverthelesse they dyd but flatter hym in their mouthes, and bysembled with hym in their tounge.

For their heart was not whole in him, neither continued they in his covenant.

But he was so merciful, that he forgave their misdoes, and destroyed them not.

Yea, many a tyme turned he his wrath away, and would not suffer his whole displeasure to styke.

For he considered that they were but as the heereuen a wynde that passeth away, and commeth not againe.

O howe ofte haue they grieved hym in the wilderness?

Howe many a tyme haue they prouoked hym in the desert.

They turned backe, and tempted God, and moued the holy one in Israel.

They thought not of his hande, in the daye

How he had wrought his miracles in Egypt, and his wonders in the land of soan.

How he turned their waters into blud, so that they might not drinke of the riuers.

How he sent fyre amonge them to eate them vp, and scogges to destroy them.

How he gaue them scutes vnto a caterpillar, & their labour vnto the greehopper.

How he beate downe their vynesardes with haille stones, and their molberry trees with the frost.

How he smote their cattel with hayles stones, and their flockes with boie thonder boltes.

How he sent vpon them the furyousnes of his wrath, anger, and displeasure: with trouble and falling in of euyl angels.

When he made a way to his feareful indignacion, and spared not their soules from death, yea and gaue their cattel ouer to the pestilence.

When he smote all the fynde borne in Egypt, the most principal and mightiest in dwellinges of Ham.

But as for his owne people, he led them forth lyke shepe, and carped them in a wildeernes lyke a flocke.

He broughte them out safely, that they should not fear, and ouerwhelmed their enemies with the sea.

He carried them vnto the borders of his sanctuary: euen into his hill, which he purchased with his right hand.

He did cast out the Heathen before them, caused their land to be deuided amonge them for an heritage, and made the tribes of Israel to dwel in their tentes.

For all this they reuoyced and displeased not his God, and kept not his couenant.

But turned their backs, and set a way lyke their forefathers, forsakinge the lyke a broken bow.

And so they greued hym with their hye places & prouoked him with their images.

When God heard this, he was wroth, & toke sore displeasure at Israel.

So that he forsooke the Tabernacle in Silo, euery habitation wherin he dwelt amonge men.

He deliuered their power into captiuitie, and their glory into the enemies hand.

He gaue his people ouer into the sword, for he was wroth with his heretage.

The fyre consumed their yong men, and their maidens were not geue to mariage.

Their priestes were slayne with the swerde, and there were no wydowes to make lamentacion.

So that Lord & awaked as one out of slepe, and lyke a Giante refreshed with wyne.

He smote his enemies in the bender partes, and put them to perpetual shame.

He refused the tabernacle of Joseph, and chose not the tribe of Ephraim.

Nevertheless, he chose the tribe of Iuda,

A psalme of Asaph.

God, the Heathen are fallen in to thyne heritage: the holy temple haue they despyled, and made Jerusalem an heape of stones.

The dead bodies of thy seruantes haue they giuen vnto the foules of the ayre to be deuoured, and the flesh of thy saints vnto the bestes of the land.

Their blood haue they shed lyke water on euery syde of Jerusalem, and there was no man to bury them.

We are become an open shame vnto our enemies, a verie scoyne and derision vnto them that are round about vs.

in Syon.

O Lord God of hostes, heate my prayer:
herken O God of Jacob.

Beholde O God our defence & looke vp on the face of thyne anoynted.

For one day in thy court is better then a thousande.

I hadde rather be a doore keeper in the house of my God, then to dwell in the tents
of the vngodly.

For the Lord God is a lycht and besker, the Lord wyl geue grace and worshyp, and no good thyng shal be wthhold fro them that lyue a godly lyfe.

O Lord God of hosts blessed is the man that putteth his trust in the. The. lxxxv. psal.

A propheete of the kyngdom of Christ, and a prayer for his commynge: wth a description of the felicitie wherwyt al thynges shal be ful, when it shal happen.

To the chaunter, a psalme of the sonnes of Corah.

Did, thou barest a loue vnto thy land, thou dyddest byng agayne the captiuitie of Jacob.

Thou dyddest forgue the offence of thy people, and coueredst all their spune. Selah.

Thou tokest away all thy dyspleasure, and turnedst thy selfe from thy wrathfull indignation.

Turne vs then, O God our Sautoure, and let thyne anger cease from vs.

Wylt thou be displeased at vs for euer? wylt thou stretch out thy wrath from one generacion to another?

Wilt thou not turne agayne and quicken vs, that thy people may reioyce in the?

I wyl herken what the Lord God wyl say: for he speaketh peace vnto his people and to his sayntes, that they turne not themselves vnto foolyshnes.

For bys saluacion is nre them that feare hym, so that glory shal dwell in oure land.

Mercy & truth are met together, righte-ousnes and peace kyssed eche other.

Truth shal clype out of the earth, & righte-ousnes shal looke downe from heauen.

And why? Lord shal shew louing kind-nes, and our land shal geue her increase.

as thou doest.

All nations whom thou hast made, shall come and worshyp before the, O Lord, and shal glorify thy name.

For thou art greete, thou doest wonderous thinges, thou art God alone.

Leade me in thy wape, O Lord, that I may walke in thy truch: O let my best de-syre in fearyng thy name.

I thanke the O Lord my God, and wyl praise thy name for euer.

For greete is thy mercye towarde me, thou hast deliuered my soule from the * nethermost hel.

O God, the proude are rysen agaynst me, and the congregacion of thy myghtye scheth after my soule, and sette not the before their eyes.

But thou, O Lord God, art ful of compassion, and mercy: long sufferynge, greete in goodnes and truth.

O turne the the vnto me, haue mercy vpon me: geue thy strength vnto thy seruauit, and helpe the sonne of thyne handmaide.

Shew some token vpon me for good, that they which hate me, may se it, and be a sha-

Unto thee I crye, O Lord, and early commeth my prayer before thee.

Lord, why puttest thou away my soule?
Wherfore hydest thou thy face from me?

Say strength is donne for verie sorrowe and myserie, wth fearfulness do I beare thy burthens.

Thy wrathfull displeasure goeth ouer me, the feare of the oppresseth me.

They come rounde aboute me daylye new and everlasting couenaunt whych is made by Ihu the sonne of Dauid, betwixt god and the chosen, shal neuer be broken and that vnder the sygare of Dauid and his posterity. In the beginnyng of the psalme he extollet the goodnes of God, by whych he vouchsafeth to make a couenaunt wth his sayntes.

An instruction of Ethan the Escabite.

My songe shalbe alway of the louping kindnes of the Lord, wth my mouth wll I euer be shew-ing thy faithfulness from one ge-neracion to another.

For I haue sayed, mercy shalbe sette vp for euer, thy faithfulness shalt thou stablish in the heauens.

* I haue made a couenaunt wth my chose
I haue sworne vnto Dauid my seruante.

Thy seide wll I stablish for euer, and set vp thy trone from one generacion to another. Selah.

O Lord the very heauens shall praise thy wondrous workes, yea and thy faithfulness in the congregacion of the sayntes.

For who is he among the cloudes, that maye be compared vnto the Lord? Yea, what is he amonge the Gods that is like vnto the Lord?

God is greatly to be feared in the councel of the sayntes, and to be had in reuerence of all them that are about hym.

O Lord God of Hostes, whoe is like vnto thee in power? thy trouth is rounde about thee.

Thou rulest the pride of the sea, thou stillest the waues therof, when they crye.

Thou breakest the proud, like one that is wounded, thou scarrest thine enemyes abrode wth thy mighty arme.

The heauens are thine, the earth is thine:
thou hast layed the foundation of the world.

world, and all that therein is.

Thou haste made the North and the South, Eabor and Hermon shall reioyse in thy name.

Thou hast a mighty arme, strong is thy hand, and hye is thy ryght hande.

Ryghteousnesse and equitye is the ba-siration of thy seate, mercy and trouth go before thy face.

Blessed is the people. O Lord, that can reioyce in thee, and walke in the lyghte of thy countenance.

They: deliue is in thy name al the daye long, and thowme thy ryghteousnes they shalbe exalted.

For thou art the glory of thy strength, and thowme thy fauour shalt thou lyt vp our voyces.

The Lord is our defence, and the holy one of Israel is our kyng.

Thou spakest some tyme in bystons vnto thy sayntes, & saydest: I haue layen help vpon one that is myghty, I haue exalted one chosen out of the people.

I haue found Dauid my seruant, wth my (a) holy oyle haue I anointed hym.

Say hand shal hold him faste, and myne arme shal strengthen hym.

The enemye shal not ouercome hym, & (b) a son of iniquitye shal not hurt hym.

I shall smite downe his foes before his face, and plage them that hate hym.

Say trouth also and my mercye shall be wth hym, and in my name shal his voynce be exalted.

I wll set his hande in the sea, and his ryght hand in the floudes.

He shall call me, thou art my father, my God, and the strength of my saluacion.

And I wll make him my spall voynce, he er then the kynges of the earth.

Say mercy wll I kepe for him for euer:
more, and my couenaunt shal stande faste wth hym.

His seide wll I make to endure for e-uer, yea, & his trone as the dayes of heauyn.

But if his chyldren forsake my law, and walke not in my iudgements.

Yf they breake myne ordynances, and kepe not my commandementes.

* I wll visyte theyr offences wth the rod, and theyr synnes wth scourges.

Reuerbelest, my louyng kyndnes wll I much as to I not utterlye take from hym, nor suffer punyssh-ment to faile.

Say couenaunt wll I not breake, nor dysaule the thyng that is donne oute of my lippes.

I haue sworne once by my holynes, that I wll not faile Dauid.

His seide shal endure for euer, and his seate also like as the sunne before me.

He shall stande fast for euermore as the moone, and as the faythfull wyne in heaven. Selah.

Thou hast turned backe the couenaunte of thy seruante, and caste hys crowne to the grounde.

Thou hast ouerthrowen all his hedges, and broken downe hys strong holdes.

Al they that go by, spople hym, he is become a rebuke vnto his neyghbours.

Thou hast set vp the right hande of hys enemyes, and makest all hys aduersaries to reioyse.

Thou hast taken away the strengthe of his swerde, and geuist hym not victorie in the battayle.

B Thou hast put our hys glorie, and caste hys crowne downe to the grounde.

The daies of his youth hast thou shortened, & couered him with dishonour. Selah.

Lord how long wilt thou hyde thy selfe, for euer? hal thy wrath burne like fyre?

O remember how short my tyme is, hast thou made al men for nought? What man is he that spured, and hal not fe death?

Woe a man deliuer hys owne soule frō the hand of hel? Selah.

A Didst thou set out refuge frō one generation to another.

Before the mountaynes were brought forth, or euer the earth and the world were made, thou art god frō euerlasting, and world without ende.

Thou turnest mē to destruction: Agayne thou saiest: come agayne ye chyldren of mē.

For a thousand yeres in thy syghte are but as yesterday that is past, and lyke as it were a nyght watche.

As soone as thou scatterest them, they are euen as a sene, and fade awaye sodenlye lyke the grasse.

In the mornynge it is grene and groweth up, but in the eueninge it is cut downe and withered.

The. xci. psalme.

For we consume away in thy displeasure, & are afraied at thy marvellous indignacion.

Thou settest out misdeedes before the, and our syns in the light of thy countenance.

For when thou art angry, al our dayes are gone, we bring our yeres to an ende, as it were a tale that is told.

The dayes of our age are thre score yeres and ten, and though we menne be so strong that they come to foure score yers, yet is thyr strength then but labour, and soone: so soone passeth it awaye, and we are gone.

But who regardeth the power of thy wrath, thy fearful and terrible displeasure?

O teach vs to number our dayes, that we may apply our hertes vnto wisdom.

Turne the agayne (O Lord) at the laste, and be gracious vnto thy seruantes.

O satisfy vs with thy mercye, and shal soone, so shal we reioyse and be glad al the dayes of our lyfe.

Comfort vs agayne, vnto the tyme that thou hast plagued vs, and for the yers wherem we haue suffered aduersite.

Shewe thy seruantes thy goodnes, and thyr chyldren thy glory.

And the glorious maiesty of the Lord our God be vpon vs: O prosper thou the worke of our handes vpon vs, O prosper thou our handy worke.

The. xci. psalme.

The. xxi. psalme.

The sabboth daye is a mete and convenient tyme to prayse the Lorde, because there is then leisure to thynke of his benefytes, and to geue hym thanks therfore.

A psalme of the songe for the sabboth daye.

It is a good thyng to geue thanks vnto the Lorde, & to synge praises vnto thy name, O most dyest.

To tell of thy louing kyndnesse earlye in the morning, and of thy trust in the nyght season.

Vpon an instrumente of ten stringes, vpon the lute, and with a songe vpon the harpe.

For the Lord hath made me glad thorow thy workes, and I will reioyse ouer the operation of thy handes.

O Lord, how glorious are thy workes, thy thoughtes are very depe.

An vnwise man will not know this, and a foole will not vnderstande it.

That the vngodly are greene as grass, and that all the workes of wyckednes do decaye to be destroyed for euer.

But thou Lorde, O moste dyest, abdest worlde without ende.

For so, thyne enemies, O Lord, lo, thyne enemies shall perishe, & all the workes of wyckednes shall be scattered abroad.

But my house shall be erected lyke the house of an unicorn, and shall be anointed with scented oyle.

Myne eye also shall see his lust of mine enemies, and myne care shall heare his despite of the wycked that rise up agaynst me.

The righteous shall flourish lyke a palme tree, and growe lyke a Cedre of Libanus.

As he as be planted in the house of the Lorde, he shall be frutefull, plenteous and greene.

That they maye see, howe true the Lorde my strength is, and that there is no vngodlynesse in hym.

The. xxi. psalme.

The. xxi. psalme. Fol. xxi.

He passeth the mastery of God for the creation of the worlde, and ouerthowynge of fearefull and myghty people.

The Lorde is kyng, and hath put on glorious apparel, the Lorde hath put on his apparell, & girded hym selfe with strengthe: he hath made the round world so sure, that it can not be moued.

From that tyme forth hath thy seate bene prepared, thou art set euerslastyng.

The floudes asyle (O Lorde) the floudes lyft up their noyse, the flouds lyft up their waues.

The waues of the sea are myghty, and rage boistfully: but yet the Lorde that dwelleth on hye, is myghtier.

Thy testymones (O Lorde) are very sure, thy promise breedeth thyne house for euer.

The. xxi. psalme.

He calleth for the iudgement of God against the wycked oppressours of the innocent & afflicted personnes.

Lorde God, to whome vengeance belongeth: thou God to whom vengeance belongeth, shewe thy selfe.

Asyle thou iudge of the worlde, and rewarde the proude after theyr deservynge.

Lorde how long shall the vngodly, how long shall the vngodly triumphe?

How long shall a wycked doctour speake so dysdaynfully, and make suche proude boastynge?

They smyte downe thy people, O lord, and trouble thyne heritage.

They murder the wydom & the straunger, and put the fatherlesse to death.

And yet they say: Truth, the Lorde seeth not, the God of Jacob regardeth it not.

Take heed, ye vnwise among people: O ye fooles, to whom will ye vnderstande?

He that planted the care, shall hee not heare? he that made the eye, shall hee not see?

He that nactureth the Deachen, and teacheth a man knowledge, shall hee not punyssh?

The Lorde knoweth the thoughtes of men: that they are but vayne.

Blessed is the man, to whom thou leashest (O Lorde) and teachest hym in thy lame.

That thou mayest geue hym patience in tyme of aduersyte, vntill the pyt bee dygged up for the vngodly.

For the Lorde will not sayle his people, neyther will he forsake his inheritance.

And why? iudgemente shall be turned agayn vnto vngodlynesse, and all suche as be true of heart shall solowe it.

Who shall rise up with me agaynst the wycked? who shall take my part agaynst the euill doctours?

The. xcvi. Psalm.

If Lord had not helped me, my soule had almost bene put to silence.

When I sayde: my foote hath slippyd, thy mercy (O Lord) held me vp.

In the multitude of the sorowes that I had in my heart, thy comfortes haue refreshed my soule.

Wylt thou haue any thyng to do wth the stoule of my wickednesse, w^{ch} p^rimage wth my schisme in the same?

They gather them together agaynst the soule of the ryghteous, and condeigne the innocent bloude.

But the Lord is my refuge, my God is the strengthe of my confidence.

He shall recompence them theyr wickednes, and destroye them in theyr owne malice: yea, the Lord our God shall destroye them.

The. xcvi. Psalm.

An exhortation to the earnest prayse of God.

Come let vs prayse the Lord, let vs hartly reioyce in the strengthe of our saluacion.

Lette vs come before his presence wth thankesguynges, & shewe our selues glad in hym wth psalmes.

For the Lord is a great God, and a great kyng aboue al Gods.

In his hand are all the corners of the earth, and the strengthe of his byls is his also.

The sea is his, for he made it, and his handes prepared the drye lande.

Come, let vs worshyppe and boine domne our selues: Let vs kneele before the Lord our maker.

For he is our God, & we are the people of his pasture, & the shepe of his handes.

Today if ye wyl heare his voice, hardē not your hartes, as when ye prouoked in tyme of temptation in the wyldernes.

Wher your fathers tempted me, proued me, and saw my workes.

Fourty yeres longe was I grieved wth this generation, and sayed: they euer erre in theyr hartes, they vnderstande not my wordes.

Therefore I said vnto the in my wrath, that they shoulde not enter into my rest.

The. xcvi. Psalm.

The moueth al creatures to the praise of god. A prophete of the kyngdome of Christ and of the increase thereof.

Sing vnto Lord a new song, synge vnto the Lord all his whole earth.

Sing vnto the Lord, & prayse his name, be reioyng of his saluacion from daye to daye.

Declare his honour among his Beastes, and his wonders among al people.

For the Lord is great, and can not wthholly be praised: he is more to be feared, then al Goddes.

As for all the Goddes of the Beastes, they be but ydols, but it is the Lord that Ascribe vnto the Lord (O ye kyntredes of the Beastes) Ascribe vnto the Lord worshyp and strength.

Ascribe vnto the Lord the honour of his name, bring presentes, and come into his court.

O worshyppe the Lord in the bewtye of holynes, lette the whole earth stande in awe of hym.

Tell it out among the Beastes, that the Lord is kyng: and that it is he whiche hath made the rounde world so fast, that it can not be moued, and knowe that he shall iudge the people ryghteously.

Let his beautes reioyce, and let the earth be glad: let the sea make a noyse, yea, and al that therein is.

Let the felde be ioyfull and all that is in it, lette all the trees of the woode leape for ioye.

Before the Lord, for he cometh: for he cometh to iudge the earth: yea, myghty & righteousnes shall be iudge the world, & the people wth his truth.

The. xcvi. Psalm.

Per prophete he also of Christ, in wh^{ch} God wonderfully shewed his power vnto the saluacion of his chosen, & to the ouerthrowing of theyr enemies, and of vain superstitions: vnto the knowledgyng of whom he also exhorteth.

The Lord is kyng, & earth may be glad therof: yea, the multitude of the Isles maye be glad therof.

Cloudes and darkenesse are rounde about hym, ryghteousnesse and iudgement are the habitation of his seate.

Ther goeth a fyre before hym, to burne by his enemyes on euery syde.

His lightynnges geue shynne vnto the world the earth seeth it, and is ascrayd.

The bylles melt lyke waxe at the presence of the Lord of the whole earth.

The very beuengs declare his ryghteousnes, and al the people se his glory.

Confounded be al they that worshyppe ymages, and dwelle in theyr Idols: worshyppe hym al ye Goddes.

Sion heareth of it, and reioysed: yea, and al the daughters of Iuda are glad because of thy iudgements, O Lord.

For thou Lord art the most byest ouer al the earth, thou art exalted far aboue al Goddes.

O ye that loue the Lord, se that ye hate the chynge whiche is curll: the Lord preseruethe the soules of his sarktes, he shall deliuer them from the had of the vnythly.

There is sprong vp a right for his ryghteous, and a ioyful gladnesse for such as be true harted.

of his holynesse.

The. cxi. psalme.

He here declareth the same that he dyd in
ps. lxxxviii. next before in the cxi.

A psalme.

Sing unto the Lorde a newe song, for he hath done maruelous thynges.

That so to

Worth his own right hand & wth his holy arme hath he gotten the victorye.

The Lorde hath declared his sauyng health, and his rightuousnes hath he openly shewed in the sight of the Heaue.

He hath remembered his mercye and truth toward his house of Israel: so that all the endes of the worlde, se the sauyng health of our God.

Shewe youe selues ioyfull vnto the Lorde all ye landes, syng, reioyce, & geue thanks.

Praise the Lorde vpon the harpe, sing to the harpe wth a psalme of thankesgynge.

Wth trompettes also and shawmes, O shewe youe selues ioyfull before the Lorde the kynge.

Let the sea make a noyse and al that therein is, reade the whole worlde, & all that dwell therin.

Let the cloudes clappe their hands, and let al the helys be ioyful together.

Before the Lord, for he is come to iudge the earth.

Yea wth rightuousnes shall he iudge the worlde, and the people wth equitye.

The. cxi. psalme.

This psalme declareth the goodnes and power of God, for the benefites and wonders doone to Israel.

The Lorde is kynge, be the people neuer so vnpatient: he syt-teth vpon the Cherubyns, be the earth neuer so vnquiet.

The Lorde is great in Sion, and hye aboue al people.

O let me geue thanks vnto thy great and wonderful name, for it is holy.

The kynge's power loueth iudgement, thou preparest equitye, & executest iudge-ment and rightuousnes in Israel.

O magnify the Lorde our god, far doune before his * foretelle, for he is holy.

Moses and Aaron among his priestes and Samuel amonge suche as call vpon his name: these called vpon the Lorde, & he heard them.

He saue them out of the cloudy pyller, for they kepte his testimonies, & the lawe that he gaue them.

Thou heardest them, O Lorde our god, thou forgavest them O God, and puny-shedst their iniquities.

O magnifie the Lorde our God, and worshyp hym vpon his holy hill, for the

The. c. & cxi. psalme. Fol. xxi.

Lorde out God is holy.

The. c. psalme.

A monye to the prayse of God in the holy assemble.

A psalme of prayse.

Be ioyful in God (all ye landes) & serue the Lorde wth gladnes, come before his presence wth ioye.

Be sure, that the Lorde he is God: It is he that hath made vs, and not we our selues: we are but his people, and the shepe of his pasture.

O go youe waye into his gates then wth thankesgynge, and into his court-es wth prayse, be thankfull vnto hym, and speake good of his name.

For the Lorde is gracious, his mercye is euerslastynge, and his truth endureth from generation to generation.

The. c. psalme.

He promyseth that he will execute the office of a godly and holy prince, that is to say, that he wyl both pur innocentie, and also op-presse the euil and auance the good.

A psalme of David.

Y songe shalbe of merite & iud-gement: yea, vnto the (O Lord) wyl I syng.

O let me haue vnderstanding in his way of godlines, vntil the tyme that thou come vnto me: and so shall I walke in my house wth an innocent harte.

I wyl take no wycked thyng in hand, I hate the sin of vnfaithfulnesse, it shall not cleaue vnto me.

* A scoward harte shall depart from me,
I wyl not knowe a wycked personne.

Who so pryncely sleaunders his neighbour, hym wyl I destroy: Who so hath a proud loke & an hye stomacke, I may not awaye wth hym.

Opne eyes shall looke for suche as be faythfull in his lande, that they may dwell wth me: & who so leadeth a godly life, shal be my seruant.

There shall no deceitfull person dwell in my house, he that telleth lyes shall not tary in my sight.

I shall soone destroye all the vngodlye of the land, that all wicked doers maye be rooted out of the cite of the Lord.

The. c. psalme.

A belement bewayling of the myschance of the holy people, in which they were almost oppressed wth innumerable injuries of the boysters and people that dwelte nexte vnto them, at their returne from Babylon, wher they came to repayne the temple and cty of Hierusalem.

A prayer of the afflicte, when he was in mo. and poured oute his complainte before the Lorde.

Hear me (a) prayer, O Lorde, & let my cryng come vnto the.

Hyde not thy face from me in the tyme of my trouble: encline thyne eares vnto me when I call, O heare me and that cryng soue.

The. cii. Psalm.

For my dayes are consumed awaye like smoke, & my bones are brent vp as it were a fyre brande.

My heart is smitten downe and withered lyke grasse, so that I forgette to eat my * bread.

That is a

For the voice of my gromping, my bone wyl scarce cleave to my flesh.

I am become lyke a pellicane in the wildernes, & like an owle in a broke wal.

I wake, and am euen as it were a spa-row sitting alone vpon the house toppe.

Myne enemyes reuyle me all the day longe, they laugh me to scoyne, and are sworne together agaynst me.

I eate ashes wth my bread, and myn-gle my drynke wth wepyng.

And that because of thyne indignacion and wrath, for thou hast taken me vp, and cast me awaye.

My dayes are gone lyke a shadowe, and I am withered lyke grasse.

But thou O Lorde endureste for euer, & thy remembraunce thowoute all generacyons.

maye prayse the Lorde.

For he loketh downe from hys Sanctuarie, out of the heauen doth the Lorde be-holde the earth.

That he maye heare the mourninges of such as be in captiuitie, and deliuer the chyldren of death.

That they maye preache the name of the Lorde in Sion, and hys worshyppe at Hierusalem.

them, and they shal be chaunged.

But thou art the same, and thy peaces shall not faile,

The. ciii. Psalm.

The chyldren of thy seruantes shall continue, and their sede shall prospere in thy syghre.

The Notes.

(a) The prayer is an earnest and effectouse communication of the heart wth God, and a dis-ligent consideration of the chynges that want in vs, concerning the luyng of hys glory and doynge his wyl, wth a burnynge and seruent desyre of spyrte, that requirerh hym to repaire and amend that whiche wanteth in vs, Psalm
v. a Prayer. xv. d. Every godly wythe, is also a good prajer.

The. ciii. Psalm.

The prayseth the goodnes of God toward men, wherby both forgerh them their synnes, & abashuntelpe dyspbuteth vnto the worldly goodes.

Of Dauid.

Praise the Lorde O my soule: & all that is within me prayse hys holp name.

Praise the Lorde O my soule,
and forget not all hys benefytes.

Whych forgerh all thy synnes, and healerh all thine infirmities.

Whych saueh thy lyfe from destructiō, and crounerh the wth mercy, & lounge kyndenesse.

Whych satisfieth thy desyre wth good thynges, making the pounge and lusty as an Eagle.

The Lorde executeth ryghtuousnesse and iudgemente, for all them that suffer wryng.

He weened hys wayes vnto Moyses, & hys workes vnto the chyldren of Israell.

The Lorde is full of compassion & mercy,
* long sufferynge, and of great goodnes.

He wyl not alwaye be chiding, neyther wyl he kepe hys anger for euer.

He hath not dealt wth vs after ouer synnes, nor rewarde vs accordyng to our wickednes.

For loke howe hys the heauen is in comparison of the earth, so great is his mercy also toward them that feare hym.

Loke howe wyde the East is frō þ west, so far hath he set out synnes from vs.

Yea, lyke as a father pitteth hys owne children, euen so is the Lorde mercifull vnto them that feare hym.

For he knoweth wherof we be made, he remembreth that we are but dust.

That a mā in hys tyme is but as grasse, and flouyseth as a floure of the field.

For as sone as the mynde goeth ouer it, it is gone, and the place thereof knoweth it no more.

But the merciful goodnesse of the Lorde endureth for euer and euer, vpon thē that feare hym, and hys ryghteousnes vpon theyr chyldren.

He rebuked the head sea, and it was dried up: so he led them throughe the depe as in a wyldernes.

Thus he saved them from the hand of the hater, and deliuered the from the hand of the enemye.

*Exo. xiii.

* As for those that troubled them, the one of them left.

Then beleued they in hys worde, and sang prayse vnto hym.

But whythin a myple they forgat hys workes, and would not abyde hys collicell.

A luste came vpon them in the wyldernes, so that they repned God in the desert.

Yet he gaue them their desire, and sent them ynough at their wylls.

They angered Moyse in the tentes, & Aaron the sapnt of the Lorde.

So the earth opened and swallowed vp Dathan, and couered the cōgregation of Abiram.

The fyre was kindled in their tchapp, the flame brent vp the yngodly.

So he sayde he woulde haue destroyed them, had not Moses hys chosen stande before hym in that gayne: his tūne away hys marshall indignacion, lest he shulde bestrope them.

Yea, they thought some of that pleatsaunt lande, & gaue no credence vnto hys worde.

But murmured in their tentes, & beckened not vnto the voyce of the Lorde.

Then lyft he vp his hand agaynst them to ouerthrowe them in the wyldernes.

To caste oute their sede among the nations, and to scatter them in the landes.

They toynd them selues vnto Baal
Deor, and ate the offeriūgs of the dead.

Thus they prouoked hym vnto anger with their owne inuencions, and p plage was great amonge them.

*Rom. xi.

* Then stode vp byrnes, and executed iustice, and so the plage ceased.

And that was counted vnto hym for righteousnesse, amonge all posterities for euermore.

They angered hym also at the waters of strife, so that Moyse was punished for theyr sakes.

Because they prouoked hys spirite, & he tolde them playnly with hys lippes.

Neither destroyed they the Heathē, as the Lorde commaunded them.

But were myngled amonge the Deas-ther, and leached theyr workes.

In so much p they worshipped their ma-ges, whych turned to their owne decaye.

ges, whych turned to their owne decaye.

Yea they offered theyr sonnes and their daughters vnto drupis.

And shed the innocent bloude of theyr sonnes and of their daughters, whych they offered vnto the ymages of Canaan, so p the land was defiled with bloude.

Thus were they cāpned with theyr own workes, and went a whoyringe with theyr owne inuencions.

Wherfore was the wrath of the Lorde kindled agaynst hys people, in so muche that he abhorred his owne enheritaunce.

And gaue them ouer into the hande of the Heathen, and they that hated them, were Lordes ouer them.

Theyr enemies oppressed them, and had them in subsercion.

Many a tyme byd he deliuer the, but they prouoked hym with theyr owne in-uencions, and were broughte downe for theyr wickednes.

Reuerbeleste when he saue theyr ad-uersitye, he heard their complaine.

He thought vpon hys couenaunt, and pytyed them, accordyng vnto the multitude of hys mercyes.

Yea he made all those that had led the away captiue, to pittie them.

ther vs from amonge p Heathen: that we maye geue thanckes to thy holpe name, & from the East, from the West, from the North, and from the South.

They wēt astray in wyldernes in an butrode way, & found no cōp to dwell in.

Hungrye and thirsty, and theyr soule faynted in them.

So they cried vnto the Lorde in their trouble, and he deliuered them fro theyr oppresser.

He ledde them forth by the right way, that theyr myghte go to the cytye where they dwelt.

O that men woude prayse the goodnes of the Lorde, and the wonders that he doeth for the chylidren of men.

For he satisfied the empty soule, & ful-

The. cxii. psalme.

Psal. cx. b. shadowe of death, beyng fast bounde in misery and * pson.

Because they were not obedient to the commandementes of God, but lyghtly regarded the counsaile of the moste hyghest.

They herce was vered wth labour, they fell downe, and there was none to helpe them.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble, and he deliuered them out of theyr distresse.

He brought the oute of darkenes and oute of the shadowe of deathe, and brake theyr bandes in sunder.

O that men woulde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde, and the wonders that he doth for the chyldren of men.

G For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

E For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

D O that men wold prayse the goodnes of the Lorde, and the wonders that he doeth for the chyldren of men.

That they woulde exalte hym in the congregacion of the people, and loue hym in the seate of the elders.

Whiche turneth the stoudes into drye land, and drieth vp the water springes.

A fruitfull land, maketh he barren, for þe mykednesse of the a that dwell therein.

E Agayne he maketh the * wyldeynes a * moray water, and water springes of a * moray.

For he hath broke þ (a) gates of braske, and smitten the barres of yron in sunder.

The. cxiii. psalme.

may buyde them a citty to dwell in.

That they maye some theyr groundes, & plante vyneyardes, to peld the frutes of increase.

He * blesteth them, so that they multiply exceedingly, and suffere not their cattel to decrease.

That is he maketh them to increase.

When they are multiplyed and brought lowe thow opprest, thow ane plage by trouble.

Though he suffer the to be enel increased thow tyrantes, or lette them wander out of the way in the wyldeynes.

Yet helpe he the poore out of myserie at the last, and maketh hym an housholde lyke a flocke of shepe.

The ryghteous wyl consore thes and reioyse, the mouth of all mykednes shall be stoppen.

Who so is wise, and pondereth these thynges well, shall vnderstande the louing kyndnesse of the Lorde.

The Notes.

(a) By the gates and barres, are vnderstande all instrumentes of helpe for warre. Whiche (how many or stronge) seue they be profotte nothinge agaynst the Lorde. A lyke maner of speche vseth Christe of the gates of hel, for the strength and powers of them that be in hel. Psal. xvi.

The. cxiii. psalme.

Psal. cxiii. b.

Awake, O my glory, awake lute and harpe, I my selfe wyl awake ryght early.

I wyl geue thankes vnto the Lorde amonge the people, I wyl singe prayses vnto the among the heauen.

For the greatnes of thy mercy is higher then the heauens, and thy faithfulness teacheth vnto the cloudes.

B

* Set vp thy selfe, O god, aboue þ hea- uens, and thy glory aboue all the earth.

Psal. cxiii. b. Psal. ix.

* That thy beloued may be deliuered, helpe the wth thy right hand & bear me.

God hath spoken in bys Sanctuary, which thing reioysed me.

I wyl deuise Sychem, and meete oute the valley of Suchoth.

Balaad is myne, Manasses is myne, Ephraim is the strength of my head, Iuda is my captayne.

Psal. cxiii. b.

Assur is my washpote, ouer Edom I wyl I stretche oute my shooes, Philistea shall be glad of me.

Who wyl lead me into the strong cite? Who wyl drynge me into Edom?

Shalt not thou do it (O God) whiche hast cast vs oute: thou God, that wentest not forth wth out hostes?

O be thou oure helpe in trouble, for thyne is the helpe of men.

The. xxi. & xxi. psalme.

The. xxi. psalme.

The power, wisdom, and goodness of God are praised, which are evident to be by his works: his praises done among the people of Israel. Praise the everlasting.

Stat. etc. 1
xxxv. 1. a.

Praise the Lord, O ye servants of the Lord, with instruments of music: secretly among the faithful, and in the congregation.

The works of the Lord are great, sought out of all the, that have pleasure therein.

His work is worthy to be praised, as had in honour, and his righteousness endureth for ever.

The merciful and gracious Lord hath done his marvellous works, that they ought to be had in remembrance.

He giveth meat unto them, that fear him, he is ever mindful of his covenant.

See howeth his people the power of his works, that he may give them the heritage of the Heathen.

The works of his hands are verities and judgement, all his commandments are true.

They stand fast for ever and ever, as are done in truth and equity.

He sent redemption unto his people, he hath commanded his covenant for ever, holy and reverent is his name.

Eccl. ix. b.

* The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, a good but standing have all they that do thereafter: the praise of it endureth for ever.

The. xxi. psalme.

He declareth the perpetual prosperity of them which fear and do worship God, and counterfeite his goodness.

Praise the everlasting.

Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord, as hath great delight in his commandments.

His seed shall be mighty upon earth, the generation of the faithful shall be blessed.

Riches and preciousness shall be in his house, and his righteousness endureth for ever.

Unto Godly there ariseth by light in the darkness: he is merciful, loving and righteous.

Well is he that is merciful, and senseth gladly, and pondereth his words with discretion.

For he shall never be moved, the righteous shall be had in an everlasting remembrance.

He will not be asayed for any evil tidings, his heart standeth fast, and believeth in the Lord.

His heart is stablished, he will not shrink, until he see his desire upon his enemies.

Job. xviii. a

Blessed be the name of the Lord, from this time forth evermore.

The Lord's name is worthy to be praised, from the rising up of the Sun unto the going downe of the same.

The Lord is above all Heavens, as his glory above the heavens.

Who is like unto the Lord our God, that hath his dwelling so high, whereby he humbled him selfe, to behold that is in heaven and earth.

Whered taketh up the simple out of the dust, and lifteth the poor out of the mire.

That he may set him among the princes, even among the princes of his people.

Whered maketh the barren woman (a) to kepe house, as to be a fruitful mother of children. Praise the everlasting.

The Notes.

(a) That is, to be fruitful, as to have a whole household of the fruit of her body, where as in this time of her barrenness, she sat alone. It signifieth not to hold an house of her own, for that do many barren that never have children.

The. xxi. psalme.

He bringeth forth the greatest and choicest miracles which the Lord did for Israel, when he brought them out of Egypt.

When Israel came out of Egypt and the (a) house of Jacob from among the strange people, Yea let them now that feare the Lorde confesse, that his mercy endureth for ever.

I called vpon the Lorde in trouble, and the Lorde hearde me at large.

I * The Lorde is my helper, I will not feare what man doeth vnto me.

The Lorde is my helper, & I shall despise vpon myne enemies.

It is better to trust in the Lorde, then to put any confidence in man.

It is better to trust in the Lorde, then to put any confidence in princes.

All heauen compassed me rounde about, but in the name of the Lorde will I destroye them.

They kepe me in on euery syde, but in the name of the Lorde, I will destroye them.

They came aboute me like bees, & were as sore as the fyre in the thornes, but in the name of the Lorde I will destroye them.

They thrust at me, that I myght fall, but the Lorde was my helpe.

E * The Lorde is my strenght, & my song, and is become my saluation.

The voyce of ioy & myrd is in the dwellinges of the ryghteous, for the ryght hande of the Lorde hath gotten the victory.

The ryght hande of the Lorde hath the premyence, the ryght hande of the Lorde hath gotten the victory.

I will not dre, but lyue, and declare the workes of the Lorde.

The Lord hath chastened and corrected me, but he hath not geuen me ouer vnto deathe.

O (a) Open me the gates of ryghteousnes, that I may go in there thorow, and geue thanks vnto the Lorde.

maundementes, and so shal I talke of thy wonderous workes.

My soule melteth away for very heuines,
O let me vp accordyng vnto thy woorde.

Take from me the waye of lyuge, and graunt me thy law.

I haue chosen the waye of truthe, thy iudgements haue I laied before me.

I speke vnto thy testimonies, O Lord, confound me not.

I wyl run the way of thy commaunde-mentes, when thou hast comforted my vete.

De.

my whole hearte.

Leade me in the path of thy commaundementes, for that is my desire.

Encline myne hearte vnto thy testimonies, and not to couerousnes.

O turne away myne eyes, lest they behold vanitie, and quicken me in thy waye.

O stablysh thy woorde in thy seruante, that I may feare the.

Take away the rebuke that I am ascaled of, for thy iudgements are answere.

Behold, my desire is in thy commaunde-mentes, O quicken me in thy ryghtousnes.

Thou.

O Lord, and thy laupng healeth accordyng vnto thy word.

That I may geue answer vnto my blas-phemies, for my trust is in thy word.

O take not the woordes of truthe vnto the sure of my mouthe, for my hope is in thy iudgements.

So shal I alway kepe thy law, yea so;

And I wyl make at lyberty, for I seeke thy commaundementes.

I wyl speake of thy testimonies eue for kynges, and wyl not be ashamed.

My deliue shall be in thy commaunde-mentes which I loue.

mentes which I loue.

My handes also wyl I lyft vp vnto thy commaundementes which I loue, and my talkyng shalbe of thy statutes.

Gain.

O thynke vpon thy seruante as chere, & hyng thy woord, when in thou hast caused me to put my trust.

For it is my comfort in my trouble, yea thy woord quickeneth me.

The proude haue me greatly in deris, & yet thynke not I from thy law.

I remember thyne euerlastyng iudger-mentes, O Lord, and am comforted.

I am horribly astroyed for the vngodly that forsake thy law.

Thy statutes are my songs in the house of my pylgrymage.

I thynke vpon thy name, O Lord, in the nyght season, and kepe thy law.

It is myne owne, for I keepe thy commaundementes.

Deib.

Thou art my portid, O Lord, I am put-posed to kepe thy law.

I make myne humble petition in thy presence wth my whole heart, O be merciful vnto me accordyng vnto thy word.

I call myne owne wates to remembrance, and turne my fete into thy testimonies.

I make haste, and prolong not the tyme, to kepe thy commaundementes.

The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I forget not thy law.

At mydnyght stand I vp, to geue thankes vnto thee, for the iudgements of thy ryghtousnes.

I am a companion of al them that feare the, and kepe thy commaundementes.

* The earth, O Lord, is ful of thy mercy,
O teache me thy statutes.

Terh.

O Lorde, thou hast dealt frendlye wth thy seruante, accordyng vnto thy woorde.

O leaue me thy kyndnesse, vnto tyme, and knowledg, for I beleue thy commaundementes.

Before I was troubled, I went wroth, but now I kepe thy woode.

Thou art good and frendlye, O teache me thy statutes.

The proude synners lyeth vpon me, but I kepe thy commaundementes wth my whole hearte.

They heart is as fatte as bystone, but my deliue is in thy law.

It is good for me that I haue bene in trouble, that I may leaue thy statutes.

The lawe of thy mouthe is deareer vnto me, then thousandes of golde and syluer.

Job.

Thy handes haue made me and fasthor-ned me, O geue me vnderstandyng, that I may leaue thy commaundementes.

They that feare the, wyl be glad wth thy seme, because I put my trust in thy word.

I know, O Lord, that thy iudgements are true.

whych are not after thy lawe.

All thy commandementes are true, they persecute me falsely. O be thou my heale.

They haue almoste made an ende of me vpon earth, but I forsake not thy com-mandementes.

O quicken me after thy louynge kynd-nes, and so shall I keepe the testimonies of thy mouth.

Lamed.

O Lord, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen.

Thy truth also remaineth from one ge-neracion to another: thou hast layd foundacion of the earth, and it abydeth.

They continue this day accordyng to thine ordinaunce, for all thynges serue the.

If my desire were not in thy lawe, I shoulde perishe in my trouble.

I wil neuer forget thy commandementes, for theye them thou quickenest me.

I am charye, O heale me, for I seeke the commandementes.

The vngodly say masse for me to destroy me, but I consyder thy testimonies.

It is that all thynges come to an end, but thy commandement is exceeding broad.

Mem.

O what loue haue I vnto thy lawe: all the day long is my talkyng of it.

Thou thorow the commandemente hast made me myn enemye, myne enemye, for it is euer by me.

I haue more vnderstandyng then all my teachers, for thy testimonies are my study.

Yea, I am wiser then the aged, for I kepe thy commandementes.

I restraime my feete from every euyl way, that I may kepe thy wordes.

I shynke not from thy iudgementes, for thou teachest me.

O howe sweete are thy wordes vnto my throat.

The.cxxx. psalme.

Yea, more then honpe vnto my mouth.

Thorow the commandementes I gette vnderstandyng, therefore I hate all falle wayes.

Reu.

Thy word is a lantern vnto my feete,
and a lght vnto my pathes.

I haue sworne and am steadfastly pur-posed, to keepe the iudgementes of thy righteousnesse.

I am troubled aboute measure, quicken me. O Lord, accordyng vnto thy worde.

Let the scetwyl offerpages of my mouth please the, O Lord, and teach me thy iudgementes.

* My soule is alwaye in my hande, yet doe not I forget thy law.

The vngodly haue layd a snare for me, but yet I swaue not I from thy com-mandementes.

Thy testimonies haue I claymed as myne heritage for euer, and whiche they are the very iope of my heart.

I apply myne heart to fulfyll thy statutes alwaye, euen vnto the ende.

Samech.

I hate the vngodly, but thy lawe dooe I loue.

Thou arte my defence and shylde, my trust is in thy worde.

I maye from me be wycked, I will kepe the commandementes of my God.

O stablysh me accordyng vnto thy word, that I maye hope, and let me not be dyspaynted of my hope.

Holde thou me vp, and I shal be safe:
yea, I shal euer be talkyng of thy statutes.

Thou treadest downe all them that despise from thy statutes, for theye perishe but dysceite.

Thou puttest awaye all the vngodlye of the earth lyke drosse, therefore I loue thy testimonies.

My flesh trembleth for feare of the, and I am afraide of thy iudgementes.

Qin.

I deale wyth the thyng that is false:
full and epght, O geue me not ouer vnto myne oppressours.

Be thou surety for thy seruant, to do him good, that the proude do me no wrong.

Oyne eyes are waiched awaye wyth lo-kyng for thy healt, and for the worde of thy righteuousnes.

O deale wyth thy seruant accordyng vnto thy louynge mercye, and teach me thy statutes.

I am thy seruant, O geunte me vnderstandyng, that I maye knowe thy testimonies.

It is tyme for the (O Lord) to lay to thine hand, for they haue defiled thy law.

For I loue thy commandementes above gold and precious stone.

Therefore holde I steepright all thy com-mandementes, and all false wayes I despise abhorre.

Thy testimonies are wonderful, therefore both my soule kepe them.

When thy word goeth forth, it giveth light and understanding, evn unto babes.

I open my mouth and draw in my breath, for I desire thy commandmentes.

O looke thou vpon me, and be mercifull, as thou wast to dooe vnto those that loue thy name.

Order my goings after thy worke, that no wickednes rapne in me.

O deliuer me from the wrongeous deuyngs of men, and so shal I hope thy commandmentes.

Show the light of thy countenance vnto thy seruaunt, & learne me thy statutes.

Myne eyes gush out with water, because men kepe not thy law.

Righteous art thou, O Lord, and true is thy iudgement.

Thy testimonies that thou hast commanded, are exceedinge righte and true.

My zeale hath euē consumed me, because myne enemies haue forgotten thy wordes.

Thy word is tried to the uttermost, and thy seruaunt loueth it.

I am smal and of no reputation, yet do not I forget thy commandmentes.

Thy righteousnesse is an euēlastinge righteousnesse, and thy law is true.

Trouble and heavinesse haue taken hold vpon me, yet is my desire in thy commandmentes.

The righteousnesse of thy testimonies is euēlastinge. O graunt me understandinge, and I shal lye.

I call vnto my whole heart, heare me, O Lord, I will kepe thy statutes.

Yea, euē vpon the doo I call, helpe me, and I shal kepe thy testimonies.

Early in the morninge doo I cry vnto the, for in thy word is my trust.

Myne eyes prevent the night watches, that I might be occupied in thy wordes.

Heare my voice, O Lord, according vnto thy leuynge kyndnesse, quicken me according as thou art wont.

They that hate me, that of malice persecute me, and are far from thy law.

Be thou vnto me as vnto also, O Lord, for thy promises are saythful.

As concerning thy testimonies, I haue knowen euē from the beginninge, that thou hast grounded them for euē.

O consider myne aduersitee, and deliuer me, for I do not forget thy law.

Maintaine thou my cause, and defende me, quicken me according vnto thy word.

Health is far from the vngodly, for they regard not thy statutes.

Great is thy mercie, O Lord, quicken me as thou art wont.

Manye there are that trouble me, and persecute me, yet dooe not I swerue from thy testimonies.

It grieueth me, when I see, that the trasgressours kepe not thy law.

Consider, O Lord, how I loue thy commandmentes, O quicken me with thy leuynge kyndnesse.

Thy word is true from euēlastinge, al the iudgementes of thy righteousnesse endure for euē.

The princes persecute me without cause, & but in vaine standeth in a me of thy wordes.

I am as glad of thy word, as one that spindeth great spyles.

As for lyes I hate and abhorre the, but thy law do I loue.

Seuen tymes a day do I prayse the, because of thy righteous iudgementes.

Great is the peace that they haue which loue thy law, & they are not offended at it.

O Lord, I looke for thy saving health, and do after thy commandmentes.

My soule keepeth thy testimonies, and loueth them exceedingly.

I kepe thy commandmentes and testimonies, for al my wayes are before the.

Let my complaynte come before the, O Lord, & geue me understandinge, according vnto thy word.

O let my supplication come before the, deliuer me according to thy promys.

My lippes shal speake of thy prayse, sayinge thou hast taught me thy statutes.

Yea, my tounge shal singe of thy word, for al thy commandmentes are righte.

Let thine hand helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commandmentes.

I long for thy saving health, O Lord, and in thy lawe is my desire.

O let my soule lye and praise the, that thy iudgementes may helpe me.

I go astray, lyke a shepe that is lost: O helpe thy seruaunt, for I do not forget thy commandmentes.

An affectionate complaynte of the Prophete beinge driven out of the lande, and abidinge among the wicked, that dyd al thinges by fraude and violence.

The song of the sheares.

In Hebrews Mabeloth, Abi. Ezra, thinketh it to be the beginninge of some songe, after whose tune the Psalmes that haue thys title were song. Other expound it to be a songe in a high place. Some ther be whiche saye that the Leuites sang all these Psalmes in Dauid's house, vpon the staires whiche wente from the chamber, wher the men assembled to the chamber wher the women commonly abode.

When I am in trouble, I call vnto the Lord, and he answereth me.

Deliuer my soule, O Lord from lying lippes, and from a dyscreetful tounge.

The.cxxi.cxxii. psal.

What reward shalbe given or done vnto the; thou false tongue?

psal. xlii. Eue my gyfte and sharpe actowes, with hote burning coales.

Woe is me, that my banishment endureth so longe, I dwell in the tabernacles of the sorrowfull.

My soul hath long dwelt among them, that be enemies vnto peace.

I laboured for peace, but when I spake therof, they made them to battayle.

The.cxxi. psalme.

My helpe cometh euen from the Lord, which hath made heauen and earth.

He wil not suffer thy foote to be moued, and he that keepeth the, slepe not.

Clare, v. 8.

* Beholde, he that keepeth Israel, both neyther slumber nor slepe.

The Lord hym selfe is thy keeper, the Lord is thy defence vpon thy ryght hand.

So that the sunne shal not burne the by day, neyther the moone by nyght.

The Lord preseruethe the from all euill, peate is the Lord that keepeth thy soule.

The Lord preseruethe thy goynge oute and thy comynge in, from this tyme forth for euermore.

The.cxxii. psalme.

Under the shadow and figure of Ierusalem he describeth the felicity of the congregation of Christ, and besyes of the sayntes, wishing euer the furtheraunce of it.

The songe of the scates.

I Was glad when they sayd vnto me: we wyl go into the house of the Lord.

Sure feere shal stand in thy gates, O Ierusalem.

Ierusalem is buylded as a cypre, that is as vntice in it selfe.

For ther the tribes go by, euen the tribes of the Lord to testify vnto Israel, to geue thanks, vnto the name of the Lord.

For ther is the seate of iudgement, euen the seate of the house of Dauid.

O pray for the peace of Ierusalem, they shal prosper that loue the.

Peace be with thy walles and plenteuousnes wyl in thy palaces.

For my brethren and companys sakes, I wyl wyshe the prosperitee.

Yea because of the house of the Lord our God, I wyl seke to do the good.

The.cxxiii. psalme.

The godly subd to the wicked, do affectuously desire god to deliuer them, for vnto him they wholly commit them selves.

The songe of the scates.

They had swallowed vs by quicken when they were so wretchedly dyspleased at vs.

Yea the waters hadde drowned vs, the streame had gone ouer our soule.

The depe waters of the proude, had gone euen vnto our soule.

But praised be the lord, which hath not geuen vs ouer for a pray vnto their teeth.

Our soule is escaped, euen as a byrd out of the snare of the fowler: the snare is broken and we are deliuered.

Sure helpe standeth in the name of the Lord, which hath made heauen and earth.

The.cxxv. psalme.

The church or congregation is in safety when the Lord defendeth it, and shal be prosperous wher he fauorably it and purge the wicked thereout.

The songe of the scates.

I Say that put their trust in the Lord, are euen as the mount Syon, which maye not be remoued; but standeth fast for euer.

The hyles stand about Ierusalem, euen so standeth the Lord round about his people, from this tyme forth for euermore.

That the rod of synners come not in to the lot of synners, lest the synners put their hande vnto wyckednes.

psalme.

As for such as turne backe vnto theyr owne wyckednesse, the Lord shal leade them forth with the euill doers: but peace be vpon Israel.

The.cxxvi. psalme.

The describeth the gladnes of the people returninge againe from Babilon, and vnder the figure hereof the reioyng of the Christen, which the sonne of God hath made free from the captiuitie of synne and death.

The songe of the scates.

Vhen the Lord turneth agayne the captiuitie of Syon, then shall we be lyke vnto them that dreame.

Then shal our mouth be filled with laughter, and our tounge wyl lope.

Yea shal it be said among the Heathen: the Lord hath done great things for them.

Yea, the Lord hath done great thynges for vs already, wherof we reioyse.

Thus

Turne oute captiuitie, O Lorde, as the spere in the southe.

They that some in reares, shall scape in ioye.

He that now goeth in his way weping,
and beareth forth good seede, shall come a-gayne with ioye, and bypunge his sheaves with hym.

The. cccviii. psalm.

By the onely lyberallie and gyfte of God ed, meate ministered: chylde, and those toward and thysly obayned.

* The song of the steares.

Except the Lord buyde the house, these laboure is but lost that builde it.

Except the Lord kepe the cytie, the watchmen wake but in vayne.

It is but lost labour that ye rise by ear-lye and take no rest, but eate the breade of carefulness: for looke to whom it pleasech hym, he geueth it in slepe.

Lo, chylde, and the faule of the wombe, are an heeprage and gyfte that cometh of the Lord.

Like as the arrowes in the hand of the Byant, even so are the younge chylde.

Happy is the man, that hath his quier

The. cccviii. psalm.

He that feareth God, shall do wel and fortunately at all seasons.

The song of the steares.

Blessed are al they that feare the Lord, and walke in his wayes.

For thou shalt eate the labours of thyne owne handes: O well is the, happy arte thou.

Thy myle shall be as the frutefull vyne, vpon the walles of thy house.

Thy chylde, like the olive brynche, rounde about thy table.

Lo, thus shall the man be * blessed, that feareth the Lord.

The Lord shall so blesse the out of Sion, that thou shalt see Iherusalem in prosperi-tye all thy lyfe longe.

Yea, that thou shalt se thy chylde's children, and peace vpon Israel.

The. cccviii. psalm.

Though the wyched do long and greatly persecute the goodly, yet shall they not preuaile ouer them: for they shall at lengthe perishe, when the goodly shall be in saftey.

The song of the steares.

Many a tyme haue they soughte a-

The. cxxviii. psalme.

Whe Babilon as required of Israel songs but they perpetually bewepted the destruction of Ierusalem.

By the waters of Babilon wec faste downe and weaple, when we remembered Syon.

As for our harpes, we hanged them vpon the trees, that are therin.

Then they that led vs away captiue, required of vs a song, and melody in our veynes: syng vs one of the songes of Syon.

How shal we syng the Lordes song in a strange land?

Will I forget the, O Ierusalem, lette my ryght hand be forgotten.

If I do not remember the, let my tongue cleaue to the roofe of my mouth: yea, if I prefer not Ierusalem in my myght.

Remember the children of Edom, O Lord in the day of Ierusalem, how they said, down with it, downe with it: euen to the ground.

G (a) O daughter of Babilon, thou shalt come to mysery thy selfe: yea happy shal be he that taketh thee as thou hast serued vs.

And he shal be that taketh thy children, and thy wyues, and thy daughters against the stones.

which hath deliuered him forth of al temptacions and promoted him vnto the dignitie of a kyng.

Of Dauid.

Will geue thanks vnto the, O Lord, with my whole heart, euen before the gods, I will syng praises vnto the.

I will worshyp towarde thy holy temple, and prayse thy name, because of thy louynge kyndnesse and truthe, for thou hast magnified thy woode, accordynge vnto thy great name.

When I call vpon the, thou hearest me, and enbrestest my soul with much strenght.

All the kynges of the earth shal prayse the, O Lord, when they heare the wordes of thy mouth.

Yea, they shal syng in the wayes of the Lord, that great is the glory of the Lord.

For though the Lord be hye, yet hath he respect vnto the lowly: as for the proud, he beholdeeth them a far of.

Though I walke in the myddest of trouble, yet shalte thou refreche me: thou shalt stretch forth thyne hand vpon the synners, and thy ryght hand shal saue me.

The Lord shal make good for me, yea, thy mercy. O Lord, endureth for euer, despyse not then the worke of thine owne handes.

The. cxxix. psalme.

Whe sheweth that al thynges are euident and open vnto God which made hym: and that he is euerp wher, and seeth al thynges.

To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

O Lord thou searchest me out, and knowest me.

Thou knowest my house sitting, and myne vpryng, thou vnderstandest my thoughtes a far of.

Thou art about my path, and about my bed, and spyst out al my wayes.

For lo, ther is not a word in my tgg, but thou O Lord knowest it al together.

Thou hast fastened me behinde and before, and laied thine hand vpon me.

Such knowledge is so wonderfull and excellent for me, I cannot attain vnto it.

Whither shall I go then from thy presence? or whither shall I go then from thy presence?

If I clyme vp into heauyn thou art there: if I go downe to hel, thou art ther also.

If I take the wynges of the morynge, & remain in the uttermost part of the sea,

Even ther also shal thy hand lead me, and thy ryght hand shal hold me.

If I saye: peradventure the darkenes shal couer me, then shal my ryghte be turned to day.

Yea, the darkenes is no darkenes, with the but the nyght is as cleare as the day, the darkenes and light are both alike.

For my capues are thine, thou hast couered me in my mothers wombe,

I will geue thanks vnto the, for I am wonderously made: marvelous at thy workes, & that my soule knoweth ryghte well.

equitie. That the very babes might haue myght, & that yong men might haue knowledg & vnderstandyng. By hearing, & wylle man shal come by more wisdom, and by experience he shal be more apt to vnderstand a parable, and the interpretation thereof, the wordes of the wyls, & the darke speeches of the same. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. But fools despise wylsdom and instructioun.

My sonne, heare thy father's doctrine, and forsake not the law of thy mother: for that shal bring grace vnto thy head, and shal be a chaine about thy necke. My son consent not vnto sonnetes, if they entyse the, and say: come with vs, let vs & lare waye for bloud, and luke pryncle for the innocent without a cause: let vs swalowe them vp lyke the bell, let vs deuoure them quicke and whole, as those that go downe into the pytt. So shal we synde al maner of collyre ryches, and fyll oure houses with spoyles. Cast in thy lot among vs, we shal haue al one purse.

My sonne, walke not thou with them, re- fraine thy foot fro their way. For they runne & cull and are hasty to shed bloud. But in varne is the net layed for the before the bydes eyes. Yea, they them selues lay waye one for anothers bloud, and one of them woulde lere another. These are the wayes of al such as be couctous, the one wold caugh another's life.

Wylsdom crieth withoute, and putteth forth her voyce in the stretes. She calleth before the congregacion in the opyl gates, and she wylle her wordes throughe the cite, saying: O ye chyldre, how long wyl ye loue chylpshenes? how long wyl the scorner's delite in scorning, and the vnwise be chyned vnto knowledg? O turne you vnto my correcciō, lo I wyl expre my mynde vnto you, and make you vnderstand my wordes. My sonne, then that I haue called and ye refused, I haue stretched out my hand and no man regarded it, but all my counsyles haue ye despysed, and set my correcciōs at naught: Therefore shal I also laugh in your destruction, and mocke you, when the thing that ye feare, cometh vpon you: even when the thyng that ye be afraid of, falleth in suddenly lyke a storme, & your misery lyke a tempest: yea, when trouble & heuynes cometh vpon you. When shal they call vpon me, but I wyl not heare: they shal seeke me early, but they shal not fynde me: And because they had knowledge, and receiued not the feare of the Lord, but abhorred my counsaile, and despysed my correcciō. Therefore shal they eat the frutes of their own way, and be fylled with their owne counsyles: for the turnyng awaye of the vnyse shal lere them: and the prosperite of foolcs shal be their owne destruction. But who so hath feared vnto me, shal dwell safely, and haue enough without any feare of euyl.

applye thyne heart then to vnderstanding, for if thou cresset after wylsome, and cal-lest for knowledge: if thou sekest after her is after manne and diggest for her as for treasure: then shalt thou vnderstande the feare of the Lord, and fynde the knowledge of god. For it is the Lord that geueth wisdom, out of hym in such cometh know ledge and vnderstandinge: He preseruethe the wellfare of the ryghteous, and defendeth them that walke innocently: he keepeth the in the ryght path, and preseruethe the way of hys sayntes. Then shalt thou vnderstand ryghteousnes, iudgement and equitye, reason and euerie good path. If wylsome enter into thyne heart, and thy soule deliue in knowledge, then shall counsaile preserue thee, and vnderstandinge shall keepe the.
That thou mayest be deliuered from the euyl waye, and from the man that speaketh froward thynges. From such as leaue the dye stete and make in the wayes of dark-nesse: whiche reioyse in doyng euyl, and desyre in wycked thynges: whose wayes are crooked, and thery pathes sclander-ous. That thou mayest be deliuered also from the straunge woman, and from her that is not thine owne, whiche geueth sweete wordes, forsaketh the ho lybande of her pouthe, and forgetteth the covenante of her God.

For her house is enclined vnto death, and her pathes vnto hel. Al they that go in vnto to her, come not agayne, neyther take they hold of the way of lyfe. That thou mayest walke in the good way, & keepe the pathes of the ryghteous. For the iust shall dwell in the lande, and the innocentes shall re-maine in it: but the vngodly shall be rooted out of the land, and the wycked doers shall be taken out of it.

The. iii. Chapter.

The commandementes of God shall be disligently regarded and obserued.

Sonne, forget not my lawe, but se that thyne heart keepe my commaundementes. For they shall prolonge the dayes and peaces of thy lyfe, and bypunge thee peace.
Let mercy and fowthfulness neuer go from the: bynde them about thy necke, & write them in the table of thyne heart. So shalt thou fynde sauoure and good vnderstandyng in the syght of God and me. But thy trust in the Lord with all thyne herte, and leane not vnto thine own vnderstanding.

In all thy wayes haue respecte vnto vnm, and he shall order thy garynges. * Be not wylsome in thine owne conceyte, but feare the LORD, and departe from euyl:

so shall thy name be whole, and thy bones stronge.

Honour the Lord with thy substance, and with the fructes of all thyne en-crease: so shall thy barne be fylled with plerteousnes, and thy presses shall flow ouer w sweete wyne. * Say sonne, despyse not the chastening of the Lord, neyther sainte wyl thou art rebuked of hym. * For whom the Lord loueth, he shall chasten: and yet he lieth in him, euen as a father in hys owne sonne. Wel is hym that findeth wylsome, and obtaieth vnderstanding, for he getteth of it is better then any marchandise of siluer, & the profit of it is better then golde.
Wisdom is more precious then precious stones:
and al thynges that thou canst desire, are not to be compared vnto her. Wylsome ryght hand is long lyfe, & vpon her left hand is ryches & honour. Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes, & al her pathes are peaceable. She is a tre of lyfe to the that lay hold vpon her, and blessed are they that kepe her fast.

Wylsome hath the Lord layed foundaciō of the earth, and thow vnderstandyng hath he stablished the heauens.
Thow vnderstandyng the depthes brake up, & the cloudes drop downe of the dewe.
Say sonne, let not these thynges depart fro thyne eyes, but kepe my lawe and my councel: so shall it be lyfe vnto thy soule, & grace vnto thy mouth. Then shalt thou walke safesly in thy way, and thy foot shall not stoble:
If thou sleepest, thou shalt not be a frayd, but shalt take thy rest and sleepe sweetely.
Thou needest not to be afrayed of any sodain fear, neyther of the vpolent rushynge in of the vngodly, when it cometh. For the Lord shall besiege the, and keepe thy foot that thou be not taken. Refuse not to do good vnto hym that shoulde haue it, so longe as thyne hand is able to do it. Saye not vnto thy neygbboure: go thy waye and come a-gayne, to morow wyl I geue thee: wher as thou haste nowe to geue hym. Intende no harm vnto thy neygbbour, sayng he doeth to dwel in rest by the. Strive not lyghly with any man, wher as he hath done the dame. Follow not a wycked man, & chuse none of hys wayes: for the Lord abhorreth the froward, but hys secret is amonge the ryghteous. The curse of the Lord is in the house of the vngodly, but he blesteth the dwellynges of the ryghteous. As for the scorneful, he shall laughe the to scoyne, but he shall geue grace vnto the lowly. The wise shall haue honoure in possession, but shame is the promotion that foolles shall haue.

But the wysdome, get the vnderstanding, forget not þ wordes of my mouth, & shrink not from them. Forsake her not, she shall preserve the: loue her, & she shall kepe the.

W The chiefe poynte of wysdō is, that thou be wylling to obteyne wysdome, and before all thy goodes to get the vnderstanding. Make much of her and she shall promote the: Yea, if thou embrace her, shee shall mynge the vnto honoure.

She shall make the a gracious head, and gaine the with a crowne of glorye. Hear my son, and receyue my wordes, that the peaces of thy lyfe maye bee manye. I will shewe the the waye of wysdom and leade the in the ryghte pathes. So that if thou goest therein, thou shalt no scarceneste vnder the, and when thou runnest thou shalt not fall. Take fast holde of doctrine, let her not go: kepe her, for she is thy lyfe. Come not in the pathes of the vngodlye, and walke not in the waye of the wycked. Eschue it, and go not therein: departe asyde, and passe ouer by it. For they can not seepe, except they haue spide done some mischefe: neyther take they anye rest, except they haue spide done some harme. For they eate the breade of wyckednesse, and drynke the wyne of robberye. The pathes of the vyrgineous shyneth as the lychte, and is euer brighte and brighte vnto the perfecte daye. But the waye of the vngodly is as the darkenes, wherein men fall, or they be aware.

My sonne, marke my wordes, and encline thyne eare vnto my saynges. Lette them not departe from thyne eyes, kepe them euen in the myddest of thyne herte. For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynd them, and heale vnto all theye bodyes. Kepe thyne heart wth all diligence, for there vpon hangerh lyfe. Put awaye from the a fowarde mouth, and let the lippes of slander be farre from the. Let thyne eyes beholde the thynge that is ryghte, and let thyne eye liddes lōke straighthe before the. Wounde the pathe of thy fere, so shall all thy wayes be sure. Turne not asyde, neyther to the (a) ryghte hande nor to the left, but wythholde thy fere from euill.

The Notes.

(a) By the ryghte hande is vnderstande the false and wycked confidence in wykes, and by the left, desperaciō. To turne asyde or adde to the right hand is to ad þ to the word of god which God neuer commaunded. To turne asyde or bowe to the left hande, is to take awaye from the word of God, or do that whiche is forbidden. As it is wyrtten in Deutero. xxiij. b. and Josue. xxij. b.

O My son, geue hede vnto my wordes, and bote thyne eare vnto my pudente: þ thou mayste regarde good counsell, and that thy lippes maye kepe nourtoure. For þ lippes of an harlot are a dropping hony cōbe, & her throte is softer then oyle. But at the laste she is as hytter as wormewood, and as sharpe as a two edged sword. My sonne, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace þ bosome of another woman? For euery mannes wayes are open in the syght of the Lord, and he pondereth all theye gorniges. The. vii. Chapter.

The hands of the sower. Go to the Sower (thou Sower) consider her ways, and let me to be wise. She hath no girdle, no teacher, no leader: yet in the summer she proueth her meare, and gathereth her foode together in the harvest. * Howe long is thy sleep, thou slouther man? When wilt thou arise out of thy sleep? Yea sleep on still a while, slumber a while, folde thyne handes together yet a while, & thou shalt sleepe: so shall pouertie come vnto the, & one & treaueller by the waye, and necessitie like a weapened man. A dissembling person, a wycked man goeth wth a froward mouth, he winketh wth his eyes, he tokeneth wth his feet, he pounceth wth his fingers, he is euer vngynge in his chiefe and frowardness in his herte, and causeth disorde. Therefore shall his destruction come hastely vpon hym, suddenly shall he be all to broken, and not be healed.

There be fyve thynges wherby the Lord hateth, and the seventh he utterly abhorreth. My son kepe thy fathers commaundementes, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother. Put them vp together in thyne herte, & brud them about thy neck. What they may leade & where thou goest, preserue the when thou art a slepe, & that when thou awakest, thou mayest talke of them. * For the commaundement is a lantern, & the lawe a light, a chastenynge, & nontrouthe is the waye of lyfe: that they maye kepe the from the euill woman, and from the flatterynge tongue of the harlot: & thou lust not after her bewte in thyne herte, & lest thou be taken wth her same lokes. An harlot will make a man to beg his bread, but a maried womā wyl hunt for the precious lyfe. My son take care in thy bosome & his clothes not be brent: for can one go vpon hote coales, and his feet not be hurt? Eue so, whosoever goeth into his neighbours wyfe, & toucheth her, can not be vngiltye. Men do not betely despyse a thefe that stealeth to satisfye his soule, when he is hungry: but yf he may be gotten, he restoreth agayne seven times as much, or els he maketh redempcion wth all the good of his house: But who so committeth aduoutry wth a woman, he is a sole, and byngers his lyfe to destruction. He getteth hym self also shame & dishonour, such as shall neuer be put out. For the gelousy & wrath of & man wyl not be increased, no thoughte thou woldst offer hym greute gyftes to make amendes, he wyl not receyue them.

commaundementes ought to be kept: Wisdom apperites and despyes ought to be honoured.

My son, kepe my words, and lay up my commaundementes by the.

Kepe my commaundementes and my lawe, euen as the apple of thyne eye, & thou shalt lyue. Bynde them vpon thy fingers, and write them in the table of thyne herte. Say vnto mysdome: thou art my sister, and call vnderstandynge thy kynswoma: & that she may kepe the from the strange woman, and fild the harlot which geneth swete words. For oute of the window of my house I looked thorow & beheld, and beheld the simple people: and amonge other younge folkes, I spied one yong sole going ouer the streets, by & corner in the way toward the harlots house; in the twilight of the evening, when it began now to be nyght & darcke. * And behold, there met hym a woman in a harlots apparell, a discearfull, wanton & vntedfast woman, whose feet could not abyde in the house: nowe is she wylhout, now in & streets, lurcheth in euery corner. He caught the younge man, kysed hym, and was not ashamed, sayinge: I had a vowe to paye, and thus haue I persourme it. Therefore came I forth to mete the, that I myght seeke thy face, and so I haue founde the. I haue deckt my bedde wth couerynges and clothes of Egypte. My bedde haue I made to smell of myrrour, Aloes, and Cynamon. Come lette vs lye together, and take sure pleasure tyl it be daye lyghte. For & good mā is not at home, hee is gone farre of. He hath taken the bagge of money wth hym: whoe can tell when hee cometh home? Thus with manye swete wordes she ouercame hym, and wth her flatterynge lippes she wanne hym.

Immediately hee folowed her, as it were an ore led to the slaughter (and lyke as it were to the stocks, where foules are punished) so longe tyl she had wounded his lyue wth her dart: lyke as yf a byrd bested to the snare, not knowynge that the parrell of his lyfe lyeth there vpon.

Deare me nowe therefore (O my son) and make the wordes of my mouth. Let not thyne herte wandre in her wares, and be not thou disceayned in her pathes. For manye one hath hee wounded and caste downe, yea, manye a strange man hath she slayne. Her house is the waye vnto del, where men goe downe into the chambers of death.

The prayse of the wisdom of God.

Doeth not wisdom crye? doeth not understanding putte forth her voice? Standeth she not in the hye places, in the streets and wayes, doth she not crye before the whole ctyte, and in the gates where men go out & in? It is you, O ye men (sayeth she) whome I call. Vnto you (O ye chyldren of men) liste I by my voyce. Take

Take hede vnto knowlege o ye ignorant, be wise in herte o ye fooles. Heare earre, for I wyll speake of greate matters, and open my lippes to tell thynges that bee ryghte. For my throte shalbe talkynge of the trouth, & my lippes abhorre vngodlynesse. All the wordes of my mouthe are ryghteous, there is no frowardnesse nor falshe in them. They are all plain to such as wyll vnderstande, and ryghte to them that synke knowledge. Receyue my doctrine therfore, and not syluer: & my knowledge, more then fyne golde. For wysdome is more worth then precious stones, yea, all the thynges that thou canst desyre, are not to be compared vnto it.

I wysdome haue my dwellinge wyth knowledge, and prudent counsaill is mine orne. Wyth me is the feare of the Lorde, and the eschynge of euill. As for pryde, dysdayne, and euell wape, and a mouthe that speaketh wycked thynges, I utterly abhorre them. I can geue counsaill, and be a gyde: I haue vnderstandynge, I haue strenght. Whom me kynge reygne: whom me, princes make iust lawes. Whom me, lordes beare rule, and all iudges of the earth execute iudgement. I am louinge vnto those that loue me, and they that seke me early, shall synke me. Ryches and honoure are wyth me, yea, excellent goodes and ryghteousnesse. My fruite is better then golde and precious stone, and myne increase more worth then fyne syluer. I walke in the way of ryghteousnes, and in the strete of iudgemente. That I maye sende prosperitie to those that loue me, and to encrease theyr treasure.

* Chap. ix. b

The Lorde hym selfe hadde me in possession in the begynnynge of his wayes, or euer hee began his workes afore tyme. I haue bene ordeyned from euerlastynge, & fro the begynnynge, or euer the earth was made. When I was boine, ther were neither depthes nor sprynges of water. Before the foundations of the mountaynes were layed, yea, before all hylls was I boine. The earth and all that is vpon the earth was not yet made, no nor the ground it selfe. For when hee made the heauens, I was presente: when he set vp the depthes in ordie: when hee hanged the cloudes aboue: when he fastened the sprynges of the depe: When he shut the sea wythin certain boundes, that the waters should not go ouer theyr markes. When hee layed the foundations of the earth I was w hym, ordering all thynges, deluytynge dayly, and reioysse alwaye before hym.

As for the round compass of this world, I make it to full, for my delyte is to bee amonge the chyldren of men. Therefore hearken vnto me, o ye chyldren, for blessed are they that kepe my wayes. O geue ear vnto nouerout, be wise, and refuse it not. Blessed is the man that heareth me, watheruge daylye at my gates, and geaynge attendaunce at the postes of my doores. For who so synketh me, synketh lyfe, and shall obtrayne sauoure of the Lorde. But who so offendeth against me, hurte his owne soule. All they that hate me, are the louers of death.

Wise mouth all men to embrace her. The propertye of a wyse.

Wysdome hath buylded her selfe an house, & hymen oure * seuen pilers: she hath kylled her vitalles, poured out her wyne, & prepared her table. She hath sente forth her maydens to crye vpon the hiest place of the cite: Who so is ignorant, lette hym come hyther. And to the unwise she sayde: O come on pour wyne, eate my bread, & drinke my wyne, wher I haue poured out for you. Forsake ignorance, & ye shall lyue, and se that ye go in the waye of vnderstandynge. Who so reprouerh a scornfull personne, getteth hym selfe dishonour: and he that rebuketh the vngodly shalnerh hym selfe. Reproue not a * scooner, lest he owe the euill wyll: but rebuke a wyse man, & he wil loue the. Be a discreete man but an occasion, and he wil be the wiser, teache a ryghteous man, and he wil encrease. The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wysdome, and the knowledge of holye thynges is vnderstandynge. For whome me thy dayes shalbe prolonged, and the peaces of thy lyfe shall be multiplied. If thou be wyse, thy wisdom shall do thy selfe good, but if thou thynkest scoone therof, it shalbe thyne orne barne. A foolish wylles woman, full of wordes, & such one as hath no knowledge, stretteth in the doores of her house vpon a hole, aboue the cite, to call suche as go by, and walke streight in theyr wayes. Who so is ignorant (sayeth she) let hym come hyther, & to the unwise she saith: stolen wares are swete, and the bread that is pryuelly eate, hath a good taste. But they consider not that death is ther, and that her gesses go downe to hell.

Wyse men laye up knowledge, but the mouth of the folke is the destruction. The cytye mans goodes are his strange hold, but pouerty oppresth the pore. The rightwylle labourerth to do good, but the ungodly vseth his encrease vnto synne. To take hede vnto the chastenynge of nourse, is the way of life; but he that refuseth to be reformed, goeth wronge. Damblyng lippes kepe harted secretly, and he that speaketh and sleander, is a fool. Wher muche bablinge is, there must nedes be offence: he that restraineth his lippes is wisest of all. An innocent young is a noble treasure, but the heart of the ungodly is notynge worth. The lippes of the righteous fede a whol multitude, but folkes shall die in their owne folly. The blessing of the Lord maketh rich men, as for carefull traualle it doth nothinge thereto. A folke doth wickedly and maketh but a sport of it: neuerthelesse it is wisdom for a man to beware of suche.

The thyng that the ungodly are afraid of, shall come vpon them, but the righteous shall haue their desire. The ungodly is like a tempest that passeth ouer, and is no more sene, but the righteous remaineth sure for euer. As vineger is to the teeth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, euen so is a flouglth person to them that send him forth. The feare of the Lord maketh a long life, but the peaces of the ungodly shall be shortned. The patient abidynge of the righteous shall be turned to gladnesse, but the hope of the ungodly shall perish. The waye of the Lord geueth a courage vnto the godly, but it is a feare for wicked doers. The righteous shall neuer be ouerthrowen, but the ungodly shall not remaine in the land. The mouth of the iuste wil be full of wysdom, of wisdom, but the tongue of the forward shall perish. The lippes of the righteous are occupied in acceptable things, but the mouth of the ungodly take them to the worst.

The .xi. Chapter.

The Proverbes

A false balance is an abominacion: but a true weyght pleaserh hyr. Where pride is, ther is shame also and confusion: but wher as is lowlynes, ther is wisdom. The innocent dealinge of the iuste shall leade them, but the unfaithfulnesse of the despoilers shall be their owne destruction. * Riches helpe not in the day of vengeance, but rightuousnesse deliuereth from death. The rightuousnes of the innocent orderh his way, but the ungodly shall fall in his owne wickednesse. The rightuousnes of the iuste shall deliuer them, but the despoilers shall be taken in their owne ungodlynesse.

* When an ungodly man dieth, his hope is gone, the confidence of riches shall perish. The rightuous shall be deliuered out of trouble, and the ungodly shall come in his steade. Whoso wylth the mouth of the disssembler is his neighbour destroyed, but whoso knowledgeth that the iuste be deliuered. When it goeth well with the righteous, the cytye is merpe: and when the ungodly perishe, ther is gladnes. When the iuste are in wealthe, the cytye prospereth; but when the ungodly haue the rule, it decayeth. A foolc byngeth up a slander of his neyghboure, but a wise man wyl kepe it secret. A disssembler person wyl discover many thynges, but he that is of a saydful heart, wyl kepe counsaile. Wher no good counsaile is, there the people decaye: but wher as many are that can geue counsaile, there is wealthe. He that is suretye for a stranger, butteth hym selfe: but he that medleth not wylth suretyshyppe, is sure. A gracious woman mainteyneth honesty, as for the mygher, they maintayne riches. He that hath a gentle liberal stomache is merciful: but who so butteth his neyghboure, is a tyrant. The labour of the ungodly prospereth not, but he that soweth rightuousnes, shall receyue a sure rewarde.

Like as rightuousnes byngeth lyfe: euen so to cleane vnto euyl: byngeth death. The Lord abhorreth a faryed harte, but he hath pleasure in them that are vnderstand.

It shall not helpe the wicked, though they lay all theyr handes together, but the feare of the righteous shall be preserved. A saye woman without discrete manners, is lyke a ringe of golde in a swynes snout.

The iuste labour for peace and tranquility, but the ungodly for disquietnesse.

Some man geueth oute his goodes, and is the richer, but the mygarde (haupyngh) wyl depart from nothyng, and yet is euer in pouerty. He that is liberal in geuyng, shall haue plenty: and he that watereth, shall be watered also hym selfe. Who so boordeth up his corne, shall be cursed among the people: but blessinge shall

The.xii. Chapter.

V who so longeth wisdom, let the sonnet to be refortified: but he that hateth to be reprimed, is a foole. A good mā is acceptable vnto the Lord, but the wylled wyl be cōdemone. A man can not endure in vngodlynesse, but the roote of a righteous shall not be moued. A stedfast woman is a * crowne vnto her husband: but she that behaueth her selfe vnwisely, is a corruptiō in hys bones. The thoughtes of the righteous are right, but the imaginations of the vngodly are disceatfull. The talking of the vngodly is, howe they may lay waite for bloude, but the mouth of the righteous wyl deliuer them. O euer thou canst turne the about, the vngodly shall be ouerthrowen: but the house of the righteous shall stand. A man shall be commended for hys wisdom, but a foole shall be despised. * A synner leman to hys labourerth and moorkerth, is better then one that is gorgious and wanteth bread. A righteous mā regardeth the lyfe of his cattell, but the vngodly haue cruell herres. * He that selleth hys lande, shall haue pldreousnes of bread: but he that foloweth his neg, is a very foole. The desyre of the vngodly hunterth after myschiefe, but the roote of the righteous bringerth forth fruite. The wycked fallerth into the snare wherof he maketh of hys owne mouth, but the iust shall escape out of perill.

Euerie man shall enioye good, accordyng to the innocēce of hys mouthe, and after the workes of hys handes shall he be rewarded. Loke what a * foole is he that in hande, he chynkerth it well done: but he that is wyse, wyl be counsayled.

A iust man wyl tel the truth, and shew the thynge that is right: but a false wyman discyuerth. A schandefous person pryncerth lyke a swerd, but a wise mans tonge is wholsome. A true mouth is euer constant, but a dissimylinge tounge is soonē chaunged. They that pmygn euill in theyr mynde, wyl discyue: but the counsaylers of peace shall haue joy folowynge them. Ther shall no myfortune happen vnto the iust, but the vngodly shall be spylled wpth myscry.

The Lord abhorreth disceatfull lpps, but they that labour for truthe, please hym. he that hath vnderstandynge, can hys wyse: but an vndiscrete bett tellethe out hys folpshues. A diligent hand shall beate rule, but the tole shall be vnder tribute. Deauynesse discouragerth the bett of man, but a good worde maketh it glao agayne. The righteous is libereall vnto hys neyghboure, but the waye of the vngodly wyl discerue them selues. A disceatfull man shall synne no vantage, but he that is content wpth that he hath, is more worth then golde. In the waye of righteousness ther is lyfe, as for any o- ther way it is the path vnto deatth.

The.xiii. Chapter.

A wise sonne wyl receaue his fathers warning, but he that is * scornful, wyl not heare when he is reprimed.

A good man shall enioye the fruite of hys mouthe, but he that hath a scornful mynde shall be spoyled. he that keperth his mouth, keperth hys lyfe: but who so speake vnadvised, synnerth darne. The Lord gethe would saue haue, and can not get hys desyre: but the soule of the diligent shall haue plenty. A righteous man abhorreth lps, but the vngodly shall merch with other and hym selfe. A righteousnesse keperth the innocent in the way, but vngodlynes shall ouerthrowe the sinner.

Some men are ryche, though they haue nothyng: agayn some men are poore by usinge great ryches. Wp good euerie man deliuereth hys lyfe, & the poore wyl not be reprimed. The lyght of the righteous maketh ioyful, but the candle of the vngodly shall be put out. Amonge the proude ther is euer stryfe, but amonge those that do all thynges wth aduysment, ther is wylledome. Hasty goodes are soonē spent, but they that be gathered together wth the hand, shall increase. A byrtyng for a thynge is deferred getteth the bett: but when the desyre cometh, it is a tre of lyfe. Who so despyseth the worde, de- stroyeth hym selfe: but he that seareth the commandemente, shall haue peace. The lawe is a wel of lyfe vnto the wyse, that it maye kepe hym from the fynes of deatth. Good vnderstandynge geuerth fauour, but hardie is the waye of the disorders. A wyse man doth all thynges wth discretion, but a foole wyl deace hys folly. An vngodly me Tanager bringerth myschiefe, but a faithfull embassoure is wholsome. he that chynkerth scorn to be refortified, cometh to pouertie & shame, but who so receaueth correction, shall come to honoure.

When a desire is broughte to passe, it deliterth the soule: but foolcs abhorre hym that eschuerth euill. he that goeth in the company of wyse men, shall be wyse: but who so is a companion of folcs, shall be butt. A schiefe foloweth vpon synners, but the righteous

A Wylse womanne vnholderh her house, but a * foolyshe wyfe plucketh it downe. Who so feareth the Lorde, shall kepe in the ryghte path; and regardeth not hym þe abhorreth the wapes of the Lorde. In the mouth of the foolyshe, is the boastyng of lordshyp, but the lippes of the wyse wyll beware of such. Wherho * oren are, ther the tribbe is empty; but wher the ore laboureth ther is much fruite. A falschull wyf-nesse wyll not dissimble, but a false record wyll make a lye. A scornfull body seeketh wylsdomme, and findeth it not; but knowledge is easy to come by vnto hym that wyll vnderstand. He that thou meddle not wyth a foole, and do as though thou haddest no knowledge. The wylsdomme of hym that hath vnderstandinge, is to take hede vnto his wape; but the folyshenes of the wyse, dysceuerh. Fools make but a spoite of spynne, but there is fauourable loze amonge the ryghteous. The herte of hym that hath vnderstandinge wyll neyther dysparre for anye sorowe, nor be so presumptuous for anye sodayne ioye.

The herte is sorowfull euen in laughter, and the end of mirth is heuynesse. An vnfaithful personne shalbe filled wyth his owne wapes, but a good man wyll beware of such. An ignorant body beleueh al thinges, but who so hath vnderstandinge, looketh well to his goynges. A wyse man feareth, and departeth schewel, but a foole goeth on presumptuously. An vnpatient man, dealeth folyshly, but he that is well aduysed doeth other wapes. The ignorant haue folyshnes in possession, but the wyse are crowned wyth knowledge. The euil that bowe them selues before the good, & the vngodly shal wait at the doores of the ryghteous. The poie is hated euen of his own neighbours, but the ryght hath many frendes.

E Who so desuyseth his neyghbour, doeth a myghte; but blessed is he that hath ppye of the poie. They that ymagyn wyckednes. Shall be disapoynted; but they that muse upon good changes vnto such shall happen mercy and faythfulnesse. Wyls- gent labour bringeth ryches, but wher many haue wordes are, trulye ther is scarcenesse. Ryches are an ornament vnto the wyse, but the ignorance of foolcs is very folyshnesse. A faythful wyneke deliuereth soules, but a lyar dysceuerh the. The feare of the Lorde is a stronge holde, for vnto his he wyll be a sure defence.

The feare of the lorde is a well of lyfe, to auoid þe snares of deaith. The increase and prosperite of the comens is the Kinges honoure, but the decaye of the people is the confusion of the prince. Science is a token of wylsdomme, but wylsdomme and happy displeasure is a token of folyshnesse. A me- ryte here is the lyfe of the body, but rancoure consumeth away the bones. He that doeth a poore man wronge, blasphemeth his maker; but who so hath ppye of the poie, doth honoure vnto god. The vngodlye is afraied of euerye payell, but þe ryghteous hath a good hope euen in deaith. Wylsdomme resteth in the herte of hym that hath vnderstandinge, and he wyll teach the that are vnlearned. Righteousnes setteth vp the people, but wyckednes byngeth folke to destruction. A dyscrete seruante is a pleasure vnto the kynge, but one that is not honest prouoketh hym vnto wrath.

The xli. Chapter.

A Soft answer pucteth downe displeasure, but slowwarde wordes prouoke vnto anger. A wyse tongue commen- deeth knowledge, a folysh mouth babbleth oute nothyng but folyshnesse. The eyes of the Lorde loke on euery place both vpon the good and bad.

A wholsome tongue is a tree of lyfe, but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde. A foole dyspyseth his fathers correctyng, but he that taketh hede whan he is reprimed, shal haue the more vnderstanding.

In þe house of the ryghteous are great ryches, but in the increase of the vngodlye, ther is myforder. A wyse mouth poureth out knowledge, but the herte of the folysh doth not so. The Lorde abhorreth the sacryfice of the vngodly, but the prayer of the ryghteous is acceptable vnto hym.

The * wape of the vngodly is an abhor- minacion vnto the Lorde, but who so so- loweth ryghteousnesse, hym he loueth. He that forsaketh the ryghte stee, shall be sore punyshed; and who so hateth cor- rection, falleth into deaith. The hel wyth her payne is knowne vnto the Lorde, how muche more then, þe bettes of men? A scornfull bodye loueth not one that rebuketh hym, neith wyll he come amonge þe wyse. A mery herte maketh a chearfull counte- naunce, but an vnquyet mynde maketh it heup. * A wyse hert wyll see after know- ledge, but the mouth of foolcs medleth wth folyshnesse. All the dayes of the poie are mi- serable, but a quiet hert is as a continual feast. Better is a lytle wyth the feare of þe Lorde, then greate treasures; for they are not wythoute

En angry man stretteth up stiffe, but he that is patient, shall be discorde. The war-re of the mouthfull is full of thornes, but the street of the rightuous is well clenched.
A wise soune maketh a glad father, but an undiscere body shamerh bys mother.
A fool retoyseth in folys the thynges, but a wise man loketh well to bys owne go-ynges. Unadvised thoughtes shal come to naught, but where as men are that can geue counsell, they be stablished. O howe ioyful a thyng is it a man to geue a coue-nient answer. O howe pleasaunte is a worde spoken in due season. The ware of lyfe leadech vnto heaue, that a man shuld betraye of hel beneth.

The Lord wyl breake down the house of the proud, but he shall make fast þe doers of the withdowe.

The Lord abhorreth the pynag-erous of the wycked: but pure wordes are pleasaunt vnto hym. The courtous man totyeth up bys owne house, but who so hateth rewarde shal lye. A rightu-ous man museth in bys mynde howe to do good, but þe mynde of þe vngodly pyngeth how he may do harme. The Lord is far from the vngodly, but he heareth the prayer of the rightuous. Like as the clarenesse of the eyes retoyseth the hert, so doeth a good name fede the bones.
The eare that harkened vnto wholesome warnyng, and enclyneth thereto, shal dwelle amonge the wise. He that refuseth to be reformed, despyseth bys owne soule: but he that sumyppeth hym selfe to correction, is wise.

to the Lord, and looke what thou deuysest, it shal prosper. The Lord doeth all thynges for bys owne sake, yea when he kepech the vngodly for the day of wrath.
The Lord abhorreth all presumptuous and proude hertes, there maye neyther strength nor power escape.

Prov. v. d.

With lowyng mercy and faythfulnes synnes be forgiven, and who so feareth the Lord, he eschuech euill. * When a mans wayes please the Lord, he maketh by his very enemies to be bys frendes. Better is it to haue a lytle thyng wyth rightuousnes, then great rentes wrongeously gotten. A man deuyseth a ware in bys hert, but it is the Lord that ordereth bys goynge.

When the prophete is in the lippes of the kynge, bys mouth shal not go wrong in iudgement. A true measure and a true balaunce are þe Lordes, he maketh all weightes. It is a greute abhominacion when kynges are wycked, for a kynges seat shoulde be holden up wyth rightuousnes.

Rightuous lippes are pleasaunt vnto kinges, and they loue hym that speaketh the truethe. The kynges displeaure is a messaunge of death, but a wise man wyl pas-cpe bym. The chearful countenaunce of the kyng is lyfe, and bys louyng fauor is as the eueryng dew.

Kynges.

To haue wysdom in possession is better then golde, and to get vnderstandyng is more worth then syluer. The path of the rightuous eschuech euill, and to be so looketh well to bys wayes, kepeth bys owne soul. The rightuousnes goth before destruc-cion, & after a proud stomak ther foloweth a fall. Better is it to be of humble mynde wyth the lowly, then to deuyse the spoyle wyth þe proude. He that hadleth a matter wysely, obteyneth good: & blessed is he, þe putteth bys truste in the Lord. Who so hath a wise vnderstandyng, is called to counsell, but he þe ca speaketh false getteth murtheres. Vnderstandyng is a well of lyfe vnto hym that hath it, as for the cha-stityng of foolis, it is foolshenes. The hert of þe wise enfourmeth bys mouth, & amendeth the doctryne in bys lippes.

Fayre wordes are as hony combe, a refectyng of the mynde, and helth of the bones. * Ther is a way that men thynk

Yes a very foole (when he holdeth his tonge) is counted wysse, and to haue vnderstanding, when he sheweth his lypes.

The. xxiij. Chapter.

V Who so hath pleasure to sow discord, pyketh a quicquell in euery thyng. A foole hath no delite in vnderstanding, but only in those thyngs, wherein his heart reioyseth. Wher vngodlynes is, there is also dysdayne: & so there foloweth shame & dishonour. The wordes of a mans mouth are lyke depe waters, and the wel of wisdom is lyke a full streame. It is not good to regarde the personne of the vngodly, or to put backe the ryghteous in iudgement. A foolles lippes are euer by a ling, & his mouth prouoketh vnto battaile. A foolles mouth is his owne destruction, and his lippes are the snare for his owne soule. The wordes of a slanderer are very woundes, & go thowme onto the inmost partes of the body. Who so is slouthful and slacke in his labour, is the brother of hym that is a waster. The name of the Lorde is a strong castel, the ryghteous lieth vnto it, & shal be saued. But the cyche mans synnes are his strong hold, yea he taketh them for an hye wall round aboute hym. After pryde cometh destruction, and honoure after lowlines. * He that geueth sentence in a matter before he heare it, is a foole, and worthy to be confounded.

A good stomake dyspuyeth awaye a mans disease, but when the liver is vexed, who may abyde it? A wyse heart laboureth for knowledge, and a prudent care seeketh vnderstandyng. A liberalite bringeth a man to honoure and maye hym, and setteth hym amonge great men. The ryghteous accuseth hym self for of al, if his neyghbour come, he shall fynde hym. The lot pacifieth the variance, and parteth the myghty: & the vntre of brydels strygeth a castell, & they that holde together are lyke the bar of a palace. A mans bellye shal be satisfied with the fruite of his owne mouth, and mych the increase of his lippes shal be filled. Deceit & lyfe stande in the power of the tounge, he that toucheth it, shall enioye the fruite thereof. Who so sendeth a wyse, sendeth: he a good thyng, and receyuerh an wholsome benefyte of the Lorde. The poore maketh supplicacion and prayeth mekely, but the cyche geueth a rough answer. A frende that helpeeth in loue, doeth a man more frendshyppe, and richer faster vnto him, then a brother.

The. xli. Chapter.

Better is the poore that lyueth godly, than he that blasphemeth that is but a foole. Where no discrecion is, there the soule is not wel: & who so is swift on fote, stumblith hastyly. Folyshnes maketh a man to go out of his waye, and this is his heuynesse agaynst the Lorde. Riches make many frendes, but the poore is forsaken of his owne frendes. A false witness shal not remayne unpunished, and he that speaketh lyes, shal not escape. The multitude hangeth vpon greate men, and euery man fauoureth hym & geueth rewarde.

As for the poore, he is bared among all his brythren: yea, his owne frendes forsake hym, and he that geueth sentence vnto wordes, getteth nothyng. He that is wysse, loueth his owne soule: and who so he that speaketh lies shall perishe. Delucate ease becommeth not a foole, muche more vnseemly is it, a bound man to haue the rule of priuces. A wyse mā putteth of displeasure, & it is bys honour to let some fautes passe. The kinges distaunce is like the roarynge of a Lyon, but bys friendship is lyke the dewe vpon the grasse. An vndiscrete son is the leuines of bys father, and a bratylunge wyse is lyke the top of an house, where thowme it is tuct droppyng. House and cyches may a man haue by the herpage of bys elders; but a discrete woman, is the gyfte of the Lord.

Slouthfulnes byngeth slepe, and an ydel soule shall suffer hunger. Who so keepeth the commandemente, keepeth bys owne soule: but he that regardeth not bys way, shall dye. He that hath pytie vpon þ pore, lenderh vnto the Lord: and loke what he laperh oute, it shalbe payed hym agayne.
Chastē thy sonne wþple ther is hope, but lette not thy soule be moued to fere hym.
For greate wrath byngeth harme, theres for let hym go, and so mayst thou reache hym more nourtoure. D geue care vnto good counsaill, and bee content to be re-fourmed, that thou mayst be wyse here after.

There are many deuises in a mans heart, neuertheles the counsaill of the Lord shall stande. It is a mans worthyp to do good, and better it is to bee a poore man, then a dissembler. The feare of the Lord preseruethe the lyfe, yea it geueth plenteousnes, whate the bystraciō of any plage.
A thowfull body shattereth bys hand into bys bosom, so that he can not put it to his mouth. * If thou smitest a scozeful person, the ignorant shall take better heed:
if thou repprouest one that hath vnder-standing, he will be the wyser. He that butterh bys father, or shattereth oute bys mother, is a shūmesul & an vnworthi son. Gif sonne heare nomore the doctrine that lea-derh the away from the wordes of vnder-standing. A faulse witness laugheth iud-gemēt to scozne, and the mouth of the vngodly eaterh by wyckednes. Wyrmen-tes are ordayned for the scozefull, & strep-pes for fooles backes.

The.rr.Chapter.

Vaine is a voluptuous thyng, & dis-reues causeth sedition: who so de-lyreth therein, shall neuer be wyse.

The kynge oughte to bee feared as þ roaring of a Lyon, who so prouoketh hym vnto anger, offenderh agaynst bys owne soule. It is a mans honoure to kepe hym selfe from strepe, but they that haue pleasure in brawling, are fooles euery one. A thowfull bodye will not go to plowe for colde, therefore shall he go a beggyng in Sommer, and haue nothinge. Wyse coun-saill in the heart of man is lyke a water in þ depe of the earth: but he that hath vnder-standing, byngeth it forth. Ganye there is be that are called good doers, but where shall one fynde a true saythfull mā? Who so leaueh a godly and an innocent lyfe, happye shall bys children be whom he lea-ueth behind hym. A kynge that sitteth in iudgement, and loketh well aboute hym, dyneth awaye all euill. * Who can saye:

my hart is cleane, I am innocent fro synne?
I vse many maner of weyghtes, or two maner of measures, both these are abhominable vnto the Lord. A childe is knowen by bys conuenciō, whether bys workes be pure and ryght. As for the beatinge of the care and the syghte of the eye, the lord hath made them boeth.

Delyte not thou in slepe, lest thou come vnto pouertie: but open thynne eyes, and þ shalt haue bread enough. It is naught, It is naught (saye men) when they haue it, but when it is gone, they geue it a good word. A mouth of vnderstanding is more worth then golde, many precyous stones, and costrelymels. Take bys garmente that is suettye for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnkowen mans take. Euery man lyketh the bread that is gotten with disceare, but at the laste bys mouth shalbe fylled with grauell.

Throwe counsaill the thynges that men deuise go forwarde: and with byscre-tion ought warres to be taken in hande.
Agyle not wþth hym that bewrapeth secrettes, and is a sleaunter, & disceuereth wþth bys lippes. Who so curseth bys father & mother, bys lyght shalbe put oute in the myddel of darkenes. The herpage that cometh to hastely at the fyrst, shall not be praysed at the ende.

Saye not thou: I will recompense euill, but put thy trust in the Lord, and he shall defende the. The Lord abhorreth two maner of weyghtes, and a faulse balance is an euill thyng. The Lord oys-dieth euery mans goynges, for what is he that vnderstandeth bys owne wayes? It is a snare for a man to blasphemē þ which is holy, and then to go about with bowes.
A wyse king destroyeth the vngodly, and byngeth the whele ouer the. The lantern of the Lord is the breath of man, & goeth thowme all the inward partes of the body. Mercy and saythfulness preserue the kynge, & with lounge kyndnes bys seate is holden vp. The strength of yowngmen is theiþ worthyppe, and a gray head, is an honoure vnto the aged. Woundes dyue a man euill, and so doo streppes the inward partes of the bodye.

The.rr.Chapter.

The kinges heart is in þ had of þ Lord, & lyke as see the ryuers of water: he maye tūne it whether soeuer he will. Euery mā thinketh his own way to be right, but the lord iudgeth the bettes.
To doo righteousnes and iudgement is more acceptable to þ Lord then sacrifice.

The.xvii. Chapter.

A presumptuous loke, a proude stomake, & the laterne of the vngodly, is synne. The deuices of one þ is diligente, byynge plentifulnes: but he that is vnadvised, cometh into a poverte. Who so boordeth wth ryches wth the discrefulnes of his tēg, he is a foole, and lyke vnto them that seke their own deatch. The robberies of the vngodlye shalbe theyr owne destruccion, for they wold not do the thyng þ was ryght.

B The wayes of the frowarde are strange, but the workes of hym that is cleane, are ryght. * It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe, then wth a bratwyllynge woman in a wyde house.

The soule of the vngodlye wytheth enel, and hath no pyrie vpon hys neydoure. * When the scoonefull is punyshed, the ignorant take the better hede: and when a wyse man is warned, he wyll receaue the more vnderstandinge. The righteous enfourmeth the house of the vngodlye, but the vngodlye goo on syl after theyr owne wyckednesse. Who so stoppeth hys eare at the crying of the poore, he shal crye hym selfe and not be hearde. A pryncerwarde pacifyeth displeasure, and a gyft in the bo some sylleth furyousnes.

The lust delieth in doinge the thyng that is right, but the workers of wyckednes abhorre the same. The mā that wandereth oute of the waye of wysdome, shal remayne in the congregacion of the dead. He that hath pleasure in bankers, shal be a poore man: Who so delieth in wyne and delicates, shal not be riche. The vngodlye shalbe geuen for the ryghteous, & the wycked for the iuste. * It is better to dwell in a wyldernesse, then wth a chydng and angry woman. In a wyse mans house ther is greate treasure, and plentifulnesse, but a folysh bodye spendeth vp all. Whoe so foloweth ryghteousnesse and mercy, sonder both lyfe, ryghteousnes and honoure. A wyse man wynerth the crye of the myghty, & as for strength that they trust in, he byngeth it downe. Who so kepeth hys mouth and hys tong, the same kepeth hys soule from troubles. He that is proude and presumptuous, is called a scoonefull man, whiche in warth darre worke maliciouslye. The voluptuousnes of the flouthfull is hys own deatch, for hys handes wyll not laboure. Hee couereth and beseteth (a) all the day long, but the righteous is alwaye geuynge, and kepeth not brnge backe. * The sacryfice of the vngodlye is abhominacion, for they offer the thynge that is gotten wth wyckednes. A false wytnesse shal perishe, but he þ wyll be content to heare, shal alway haue power to speake him selfe. An vngodlye man goeth for the caualy, but the iust refouteth hys owne ware. * There is no wysdome, there is no vnderstandinge, there is no counsell agaynste the Lorde.

The horse is prepared agaynste the day of battayl, but the Lorde geueth the victory.

The.xviii. Chapter.

A * Good name is more worthe than the great riches, & louing fauour is better then syluer and golde.

Whether ryches or poverte doo mete vs, it cometh at of god.

A wyse manne seeth the plage and byderh hym selfe, but the folysh go on syl & are punyshed. The ende of lowlynes, and the feare of God, is ryches, honoure, prosperite, and healt. Spere and suare are in the way of the frowarde, but he that wyll kepe hys soule, lette hym syl from suche.

If þ teachest a chyld in hys youth what way he shulde go, he shal not leaue it whē he is olde. The ryche rulerh the poore, and the borower is seruaunte to the lender.

He that someth wyckednes shal receiue sorowe, and the rod of hys plage shal be sore hym.

* A louing eye shalbe blessed, for he geueth of hys bread vnto the poore.

Caste oute the scoonefull man, & so shal sterte go out wth hym, yea variatice and slander shal cease.

Who so delieth to be of a cleane herte, & of gracious lypes, the kynge shal be hys frende. The eyes of the Lorde perserue knowledge, but as for the wordes of the despitfull, he byngeth the to naughte.

The flouthfull bodye sayeth: ther is a flon wthout, I myght be sayn in the stete.

The mouth of an harlot is a depe pyt, wher in he fallith that the lorde is angry wthal.

Foolyshnes sticketh in the herte of the iad, but the rod of correccion dryueth it awaye.

Who so doth a poore man wrong to increaschys owne ryches, geueth comenly vnto the ryche, and at the last cometh to poverte hym selfe.

My son, bowe down thine eare, & heken vnto the words of wysdome, applye thy mynde vnto my doctryne: for it is a pleasaunte thyng, if thou kepe it in thyne herte, and practyse it in thy mouth: that thou mayst alwaye put thy truste in the Lorde.

Haue not I warned the very oft wth counsell & learninge: that I myght shew the truth and that thou wyldest the verye myghtest answer them that lay any thyng agaynst the?

He that thou robbe not the poore because he is weak, & oppresse not the simple in iudgement: for the Lorde hym selfe wyll defende theyr cause, and do violence vnto the that haue vled violence.

WAKE no frend wyth an angry wyllful man, and kepe no company wth the furious: lest thou learne hys wayes, and receaue hurt vnto thy soule.

Be not thou one of them that bynd theyr hand vpon promise, & are succre for dette: for if thou hast no thyng to paye, he shal take away thy bed stē vnder þ.

Thou shalt not remoue þ lade make, which thy fore elders haue sette.

Seest thou not, that they whiche be diligēt in theyr busynes, stande before kynge and not among the simple people?

My son, if thy verte receaue wysdome, my verte also shall reioyse, yea, my reynes shall be verpe glad, if thy lyps speake the thyng that is ryght. * Let not thyne heart be gelous to some sinners, but kepe the syl in the feare of the Lorde (b) all the daye longe: for the ende is not yet come, and thy payent as bydyng shall not be in vayne.

Pro. xxiij. a. and c. b. As before in the. xij. d

My son, geue eare and be wise, so shall thyne verte prospere in the way. Kepe no company wth wyne dybbers & riotous eaters of fleshe, for such as be dronkarde and riotous shall come to povertie, and he that is geuen to much slepe, shall go wth a ragged cote. Geue eare vnto thy father that begat the, & despyse not thy mother when she is old. Labour for to get thyne selfe not awaye wysdome, but trow and vnderstandyng (for a tygredous father is matulous glad of a wise son, and despyeth hym) so shall thy father be glad, & thy mother that bare the, shall reioyse.

My son, geue me thyne verte, & lette thine eyes haue pleasure in my wayes. For an whore is a depe graue, and an harlot is a narrow pyt. She luckerh lyke a thefe and those that be not aware, she byngeth vnto her. Where is woe? where is sorrow? where is stryfe? where is brawnyng? where are woundes without cause? where be red eyes? Euen among those that be eue at the wine, and seke out wher the best is. Take not vpon the wyne, howe red it is, and what a coloure it geueth in the glasse. It goeth doune softly, but at the laste it byteth like a serpent, and styngeth, as an Alder. So shall thyne eyes loke vnto straunge women, & thyne verte shall muse vpon straunge thynges. Yea thou shalt be as though thou slepest in the myddest of the sea, or vpon the toppe of the mast. They wounded me (saith thou sape) but it hath not hurt me, they smote me, but I felt it not. When I am well wakened, I wyl go to the dyspiche agayne.

The. xxiii. Chapter.

Be not thou gelous ouer wyse & red men, and despye not thou to be among them. For they be verie ymagineth to do butte, and they lypes talke of mischete. A house of wysdome, an house shall be buylded, & wth vnderstanding it shall be set up. Thow discretiō shall the chabers be fylled wth all cosely & pleasane thynges. A wise man is stronge, yea a man of vnderstandinge is better the he that is myghty of strength. For wth discretiō must warres be taken in hand, and where as a many that can geue counsell, there is victory. Wisdome is an hye thing, yea euen to the foole, for he (a) dare not open his mouth in the gate. Be that ymagineth myschete, maye well be called an vngacious personne. The thought of the folye is synne, and the scornfull is an abominacion vnto men. (b) If thou bee ouersene and neglygent in tyme of nede, then is thy strength but smal.

a. b. yd. xij. d. Certe xij. a Despue them that go vnto death, and are led awaye to be slayne, & be not neglygent therein. If thou wylt saye: I knowe not of it: Thanketh thou that he wylt made the vertes, both not consyder it? & that he wylt he regardeth thy soule, seeth it not? Shall not be recedence euerie man accordyng to his woikes? My sonne, thou eatest honey & the swete honey combe, because it is good and swete in thy mouth. Euen so shall the knowledge of wysdome be vnto thy soule, as soone as thou hast gotten it.

And there is good hope, yea thy hope shall not be in vauille. Lay no pryng warre wyckedlye vpon the house of the ryghteous, and disquiete not his resting place. For a iust man falleth (c) seven times, and ryseth vp agayn, but the vngodly fall into wyckednes. Reioyce not thou at the fall of thyne enemye, and let not thyne heart be glad when he stomberh. Let the Lorde (when he seeth it) be angry, and turne his wrath from hym vnto the. (d) Let not thy wrath and gelousy moue the, to folowe the wycked and vngodlye. the asse a bydle, & a rod to p foolers back.
Beue not the soole an answer after his but make the soole an answer to his fol pynes, lest he be wyse in his owne cons ceate. He is lame of his fete, yea drunken is he in banyspe, that comitteth any thyng to a soole. Lyke as it is an vnsemy thyng to haue legs, and yet to halt, euen so is a parable in the foolers mouth. He that set but a soles warth is heuier then they both.

warthe is a cruell chynge, and surpousnes enuy? An open rebuke is better then a secret loue. Fawthful are the woundes of a louer, but the kisses of an enemy ar disceatful. Werth is ful, abhorreth an honi cōbe, but vnto him that is hongry, euerie sower chynge is swete. He that oft tynes stratterh, is like a byrde that forsaketh her nest. The bett is glad of a wyete ornament and sauour, but a stomake that is geue good coun-

Man perceyue hym well pnaughe. When tpygbrouse menne are in prosperite, then doth honout florish: but when the vngodly come up, the state of men chaungeth. He that byrdeth hys synnes, shall not prosper: but who so knowledgeth them and forsa- keth them, shall haue mercy.

Mel is hym that stode alway in a wete as for hym that hardeneth hys hert, he shall fall into myschyfe. Lpke as a coatynge lion, and an hungre beare, euen so is an vngodly pynce ouer the poore people.

When the pynce is without vnderstandyng, ther is great oppression and wrong: but if he be suche one as hateth couetous- nes, he shall longe raygne. He that by vpro- lence sheddeth any mans bloude, shall be a rennagate vnto hys graue, and no mā shall be able to succoure hym. Who so leadech a godly and an innocent lyfe, shall be safe: but he that goeth forwarde wayes, shall once haue a fall. * He that tyllith hys land, shall haue plentyousnes of bzead: but he that soweth idlenes, shall haue pouerty (nough. A saythful man is greatly to be commen- ded, but he that maketh to much bad for to be tpyche, shall not be vngylpe. To haue respect of persons in iudgement, is not good: And whp: he wyl do wrong, yea, euen for a piece of bzeade.

He that wyl be tpych al to soone, hath an enylepe: and consydereth not that pouerty shall come vpon hym. He that rebuketh a man, shall spede more sauour at the last thā he that flattereth him. Who so robber his father and mother, and saith it is no synne, the same is lyke a murderer. He that is of a pround stomache, flattereth by slepe, but he that putteth hys trust in the Lord, shall be wel fedde. He that trusteth in his owne hert is a foole: but he that dealeth wylfely, shall be safe. He that geueth vnto the poore, shall not want: but he that turneth away hys eyes fro such as be in necessite, shall suffer great pouertye hym selfe. When the vngodly ac- come up, men are sayne to hyde them sel- ues: but when they perishe, the ryghteous increase.

The xxix. Chapter

He that is stryncked and wyl not be resourmed, shall sodenly be destroyed without helpe. When the ryghteous haue the ouer hande, the people are in pros- perite: but when the vngodly beareth rule, the people mourne. Who so loueth wysdō, maketh hys father a glad manne: * but he that kepeth harlots, spendeth awaye what he hath. With true iudgemente the kynge letterh up the land, but if he be a man that taketh gyltes, he turneth it vpside downe. Who so flattereth hys neyghbour, layeth a nette for hys feere. The synne of the wic- ked, is hys owne snare, but the ryghteous shall be glad and reioyce.

The ryghteous consydereth the cause of the poore, but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandyng. Wycked people bypnyng a tpyche in decay, but wyse men set it up a-

A foole pouereth out hys spyrte al toge- ther, but a wyse man kepeth it in tpyl after- ward. If a pynce deyle in lyes, al his ser- uantes are vngodly. The poore and the lender mete together, the Lord lpgoteneth both they: eyes. The feare of the kyng that saythfully iudgeth the poore, shall con- tinue sure for euetmore.

The rod and correction mynyshet wylf- dome, but if a chyld be not looked vnto, he byngeth hys mother to shame. When the vngodly come up, wyckednes increaseth: but the ryghteous shall se thep: sal. Outtoute by sonne wpth correcciō, and he shall com- fort the, yea, he shall doo the good at thpne hert. When no * prophēt is, there the peo- ple perishe: but mel is hym that kepeth the law. A scraunt wyl not be the better for wordes, for though he vnderstand, yet wyl he not regarde them.

If thou seest a manne that is hasty to speake vnadvised, thou mayest truse a foole more then hym. He that deylecarely byngeth by hys seruante from a chyld, shall make hym hys master at lengthe. An angry man stirreth up stryfe, and he that beareth euil wyl in hys mynde, doth much euill. After pyphe cometh a fall, * but a lowlye spyrte byngeth great wylfpype. Whoso kepeth compagne wpth a thpse, hateth his owne soule: he beareth blasphemies, and telleth it not fourthe. He that feareth meyne, shall haue a fall: but who so putteth hys trust in the Lorde, shall come to honoure. Many there be that seeke the pynces sauour, but eueri mans iudgement cometh from the Lorde. The ryghteous abhorreth the vngodly: but as for those that be in the tpyghte waye, the wycked hate them.

Abundance of riches, of pleasure, and of beauty, are vayne thynges.

Then said I thus in my heart: Howe I

I bought seruantes and maydens, and had a greate howsholde. As for cattell and shepe, I had more substance of them, then al they that were before me in Iherusalem:

3943

I gathered silver and gold together, even a treasure of kynges and landes.

I provided me fingers & women, which could play of instrumentes, to make me myght and pastyme. I gat me drynkyng cuppes also and glasses. Shortly, I was greater and in more wysdom, then all my predecessours in Jerusalem. For wysdom remained with me, and looke whatsoeuer mine eyes desyred, I let them have it: and wher in soeuer my heart desyred or had any pleasure, I withheld it not from it. Thus my heart reposed in al that I did, and this I took for the portion of al my travayle. But when I considered all the woorkes that my handes had wrought, and all the laboures that I had taken therein, lo, all was but vanity and vexacion of mynde, and nothyng of any value vnder the sunne. Then turned I me to consider wysdome, error, and foolpynes: (for what is he among men, that myght be compared to me the kyng in such woorkes?) and I saw that wysdome excelleth foolpynes, as lare as lyght dothe darknes. * For a wyse man beareth his eyes about in his head, but the foole goeth in the darknes. I perceyved also that they both hadde one ende. Then I thought I in my mynde: If it happen vnto y foole as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour any more for wysdome? So I confessed wythin my heart, that thys also was but vanity. For the wyse are eate as lytle in remembraunce as the foolpyshe, and al the dayes for to come, shalbe forgotten, yea the wyse man dyeth as wel as the foole. Thus beganne I to be weary of my lyfe, in so much that I could swape wyth nothyng that is done vnder the Sunne, for al was but vanity and vexacion of mynde: Yea I was weary of al my labour, wherby I had taken vnder the Sunne, because I shoulde be sayne to leaue them to another man that cometh after me: for who knoweth whether he shall be a wyse man or a foole? And yet shal he be Lord of al my labours, wherby I wyth such wysdome have taken vnder the Sunne. Is not thys a vayne thyng?

D So I turned me to refrayne my mynde from al such trauaile as I toke vnder the Sunne, for so much as a man shoulde weep hym selfe wyth wysdom, wyth vnderstanding and oportunitie, and yet be sayne to leaue hys laboures vnto another, that neuer sweate for them. Thys is also a vayne thyng and a great mysery. For what getteth a man of al the labour and trauaile of hys mynde, that he taketh vnder the sunne, but heynnes, sorowe and dysquyetnes all the dayes of hys lyfe? In so much that his heart can not rest in the nyght. Is not thys also a vayne thyng? Is it not better then, for a man to eate and drinke, and his soule to be merry in hys labour? Yea I saw that this also was a gift of God: For who may eate, drinke, or drynge any thyng to passe mythoure hym? And why? He geueth vnto man what it pleaseth hym, whether it be wysdom, vnderstanding, or gladnes. But vnto the sinner he geueth weynes and sorrow, that he maye gather and heape together the thyng that afterward shalbe geuen vnto hym whom it pleaseth god. This is now a vayne thyng, yea a veyr dysquyetnes and vexacion of mynde.

The.iii. Chapter.

All thynges come in theyr tyme, and passe away in theyr tyme.

Every thyng hath a tyme, yea all that is vnder the heauen, hath hys course and tyme reason. There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante, and a tyme to plucke vp the thyng that is planted:

A tyme to slay, & a tyme to make whole: A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde vp:

A tyme to weep, and a tyme to laugh:

A tyme to moune, and a tyme to dance:

A tyme to cast away stones, and a tyme to gather stones together:

A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrain from embracing:

A tyme to wryn, and a tyme to lese:

A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spend:

A tyme to cut in pyeces, & a tyme to sow together.

A tyme to kepe sylece, & a tyme to speake:

A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate.

A tyme of war, and a tyme of peace:

What hath a man els (that both anye thyng) but weynes and labour? For as touchynge the trauaile and carefulnes wherby God hath geuen vnto men, I see that he hath geuen it them, to be excused in it. Althys hath he ordayned maruelous goodly: to euery thyng in hys due tyme. He hath placed ignorance also in y heartes of men, that they shoulde not fynde out the ground of hys woorkes, wherby he doth frō the begynnyng to the ende. So I perceyued, that in these thynges there is nothyng better for a man, then to be merry, and to do wel so long as he lyueth. For all that a man eareth and drinke, yea whatsoeuer a man enioyeth of all hys labour, the same is a gift of God. I considered also that whatsoeuer God doth, it continueth for euer, and that nothyng can be put vnto it, nor taken from it: and that God doth it to the intent that men shoulde fear hym. The thyng that hath bene, is nowe: and the thyng that is for to come, hath bene afore tyme: for God restoreth agayne the thyng that was past. Moreover, I saw vnder the sunne vngodlynes in the stead of iudgement, and iniquitie in stead of righteousnes. Then thought I in my mynde: God shal separat the righteous from the vngodly, and then shall be the tyme and iudgement of al counceils and woorkes. I comened wyth myne own heart also concernyng the chyldren of men, how God hath chosen them, and yet let them be appeare as though they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto man as it doth vnto beastes, and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yea, they haue both one manner of breath, so that (in this) a man hath no preeminence aboue a beaste, but all are subdued vnto vanitie. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of duste, so shall they all turne vnto duste agayne. Who knoweth the spiryte of man that goeth vppwarde, and the breath of the beaste that goeth downe into the earth? Therefore I perceiue that there is nothinge better for a man, then to be ioyful in his labour, for that is his portion. But who shall bring him to see the thing that shall come after him?

The.iii. Chapter.

The miseries of the innocent. The superfluous labours of men. The hyde that is poore and wylle.

I turned me and considered all the hyolence wrought that is done vnder the sunne: and behold, the teares of such as were oppressed, and there was no man to comfort them, or that woulde deliuer and defende them from the violence of the oppressours. Wherefore I iudged these that are dead, to be more happy then such as be aljue: yea, hym that is yet vnborn, to be better at ease then they be, because he seeth not the miserable workes that are done vnder the sunne.

Againe, I saw that all trauaile and diligence of labour was hated of euery man. This is also a vayne thing, and a vexacion of mynde. The foole foloweth his bandes together, and careth vppon his owne flesh. One handfull (sayth he) is better to my rest, then both the handes full with labour and trauaile. Againe, I turned me, and behold yet another vaine thing vnder the sunne. There is one man, no more but by himselfe alone, vppon neyther child nor brother: yet is there no end of his careful trauaile, his eyes can not be satisfied with riches, (yet both he not remember him selfe, and say:) For whom do I take such trauaile? For whose pleasure do I thus consume away my life? This is also a vayne and miserable thing. Wherefore two are better then one, for they may well entoyne the profit of their labour. If one of them fall, his companion shall helpe hym vppon agayne: But two is hym that is alone: for if he fall, he hath not another to helpe hym vppon. Agayne, when two sleepe together, they are warme: but how can a body be warme alone? One may be overcome, but two may make resistance: A drie scold is not byghly broken. A poore chyld being wylle, is better then an olde kynge, that doteth, and can not bedate in tyme to come. Some one cometh oute of prison, and is made a kynge: and another whiche is borne in the kynngdome, cometh vnto pouertie. And I perceyued that all men luyng vnder the sunne, go with the second chyld, that cometh vppon in the steede of the other.

As for the people that haue bene before hym, and that come after him, they are innumerable: yet is not thynge the greater thowth hym. This is also a vayne thing, and a vexacion of mynde. When thou comest into the house of God, kepe thy foot (a) and draw nie (b) that thou make it heat: that is better then the offerings of foolles, for they knowe not what euyl they do.

The.v. Chapter.

A monition to beware of rage commuication. We oughte not to maruell at the oppression of the poore. The curious is not satisfied with his riches.

Be not hasty with thy mouth, and let not thynge beere speake any thing rashly before God. For God is in heauen, and thou vpon earth, therefore let thy word be seuer. For wher much carefulnes is, ther are many dreames: and wher many wordes are, ther men may heare foolles. * If thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slack to performe it: As for solyng vowe, he hath no pleasure in them. If thou promise any thing, pay it for better it is that thou make no vowe, then if thou shouldest promise, and not pay. Use not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to synne, that thou say not before the aungel: my foolshyn is in the laute. For then God wyl be angry at thy voyce, and destroye all the monykes of thyne handes. And why? wher as are many dreames and many wordes, ther are also diuerse vanities: but loke that thou feare God: If thou seest the poore to be oppressed, and wroghfully dealt withal, so that equitie and right of the lawe is wasted in the land: maruel not thou at such iudgement, for one great man keper touch not hand: and the myghty help them selues together. The whole land also with the fieldes and all that is therein, is in subjection and bondage vnto the kynge. He that pouerly mony, wyl neuer be satisfied with money: and who so delicteth in riches, shall haue no profite thereof. Is not this also a vayne thing? Where as much riches is, there are many also that spend the away: And what pleasure more hath he that possideth this, saying that he may looke vpon them with his eyes? A labouringe manne sleepeth sweetely, whether it be lytle or much that he eateth: but the aboundance of the rich wyl not suffer hym to slepe.

Yet is there a sore plage, whiche I haue seene vnder the sunne (namely) riches kept to the hurt of hym that hath them in possession. For oft tymes they perishe with his great misery and trouble: and if he haue a chyld, it getteth nothinge. * Lyke as he came naked oute of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, and carperth nothing away with him of all his labour. This is a miserable plage, that he shall go awaye even as he came. What helper is hym then, that he hath laboured in the wynde?

The comen transacyon rebeth, wher the spirit of a man go vppward & the breath of a beaste downward wynde: Al the dayes of hys lyfe also muste he eate in the darcke, wyth greate carefulnes, sprekennesse and sorowe. Therefore me thynte it a better and farther thyng a man to eate and drynke, and to be refreshed of al hys labour that he taketh vnder the sunne, al the dayes of hys lyfe, which god geueth hym, for thys his porcion. For vnto whom soeuer God geueth ryches, goodes, and power, he geueth it him to enioy it, to take it for his porcion, and to be refreshed of hys labour: thys is now the gyfte of God. For he thynteth not much howe longe he shall lyue, for so much as God fylleth hys heart wyth gladnesse.

The. vii. Chapter.

The mysery of the rich and courteous. The difference of a foole and a wyse man.

There is yet a plage vnder the Sunne, as it is a generall thyng among men: when God geueth a manne ryches, goodes, and honour, so that he wanteth no thyng of al that hys heart can desire: and yet god geueth hym not leaue to enioy the same, but an other manne spendeth them. Thys is a vayne thyng, and a miserable plage. If a man beget an hundred chyldren, and lyue manye yeres, so that hys dayes are many in number, and yet can not enioy hys good, neyther be buried: as for him I say, that an vntimely byrth is better the he. For he cometh to naught, and goeth hys way into darckenes, and hys name is forgotten. Moreover, he seeth not the sun, and knoweth of no rest neyther here nor there: Yea though he lyued two thousande yeres, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not al to one place: Al the labour that a man taketh, is for hym selfe, and yet hys desire is neuer fylled after hys mynde. For what hath the wyse more then the foole? What healeth he the poore, that he knoweth to walke before the spynge? The sight of the eyes is better then that the soule should so departe awaye. Howebeit thys is also a vayne thyng, and a dysquyetenesse of mynde. What is more excellent then man? yet can he not in the law get the victorye of him that is myghtyer then he: A vayne thyng is it to cast out many wordes: but what hath a man els. ¶ The. vii. Chap. ¶ That which passeth our strengthes and wises, ought we not to seke after.

For who knoweth what is good for man lyuing, in the dayes of hys vayne lyfe, which is but a shadow? Or who may tel a man what shall happen after hym vnder the Sunne.

* A good name is more worth then a precious oymment, and the day of death is better then the day of birth. It is better to go into an house of mourning, then into a banqueting house. For there is the end of al man, and he that is liuing taketh it to herte. It is better to be sory then to laugh, for where the countenance is heavy, the heart is ioyfull. The heart of the wise is in the mourning house, but the heart of the foolish is in the house of mirth. It is better to grieve to the chastening of a wise man, then to heare the song of foolcs. For the laughing of foolcs is like the cracking of thornes vnder a pot: And that is but a vaine thing. Who so doth to long, maketh a wise man to go out of his witte, and destroyeth a gentle heart. The ende of a thyng is better then the beginning. The patient of spirit is better then the hie minded. Be not hastily angry in thy mind, for wrath resteth in the bosom of a foole. Say not thou: what is the cause that the dayes of old time were better then they be now? for thou were no wise question. Wisdom is better then riches yea much more worth then the price of sight. For wisdom becometh as well as money, and the excellent knowledge and wisdom geueth life vnto him that hath it in possession. Consider the worke of God, howe that no man can make the thing straight which he maketh crooked. Wile wel the tyme of prosperitie, and remember the tyme of misfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can fynde nothyng els.

These two thyngs also haue I considered in the tyme of vauitye: that the iust man perissheth for his righteousness sake, and the vngodly liueth in hys wickednes. Therefore be thou neither to righteous nor ouerwise, that thou perissh not: he neither to vnrightheous also, nor to foolish, lest thou be before thy tyme. It is good for thee to take hold of this, & not to let that go out of thy hand. For he that feareth God, shall scape them al. Wisdom geueth more courage vnto the wise, then ten mighty men of the citie: for there is not one iust vpon the earth, & dothe good, and synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery word that is spoken: lest thou hear thy seruant curse the: for thynne own herte knoweth that thou thy selfe also haste oft tymes spoken euill by other men. All these thyngs haue I proued because of wysdom, for I thought to be wise: but he went farther from me then he was before, yea and so depe that I myght not reach vnto her. I applyed my mynde also vnto knowledge, and to secke oute science, wysdome, and vnderstandinge: to knowe the foolishnes of the vngodly, and the errour of doynge foolcs. And I founde, that a woman is betterer then dearthe: for she is a very angie, her hearte is a net, and her handes are cheynes. Who so pleasech God shall scape from her, but the synner, wyl be taken wyth her.

Behold (sayth the Preacher) thys haue I diligently seached out and proued, that I myght come by knowledge: which as yet I seke and fynde not. Among a thousande men I haue found one, but not one woman among al. To this only haue I found, that God made man iuste and ryghte, but they seke dyuerse sorcelles, wher as no man hath wysdome and vnderstandinge, to geue answer thereunto.

The viii. Chapter.

The kynges commaundement ought to be obeyed. Gladnes is one of the chyefe thynges vnder the sunne.

Visdom maketh a mans face to shyne but malice putteth it out of fauour. Keepe the kynges commaundement (I warne the) and thou shalt not be ashamed vnto God. Be not hasty to go out of thy sight, and so thou continue in no euill thing: for what soeuer it please thy lord, that do thou. Like as when a kyng geueth a charter, his commaundement is myghty: such so who may say vnto hym, what dost thou? Who so kepeth the commaundement, shall fele no harme: but a wyse man is better dysscedeth tyme and maner. For euery thyng we haue oportunitie and iudgement, and this is the thyng that maketh men full of carelesnes and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come, for who wyl tel hym? Neyther is ther any manne that hath power ouer the spyrte, to kepe syl the spyrte, nor to haue any power in þe tyme of death: it is not he also þe can make an end of the battail, neyther may vngodlynes deliuer hym that medleth wth all.

All these thynges haue I considered, and applyed my mynde vnto euery worke that is vnder the sunne: howe our mā hath lordship vpon another to his owne harme. For I haue oft sene the vngodlye broughte to theyr graues, and fallen downe from the hye and glorious place: in so muche that they were forgotten in the cite, wher they were had in so hye and great exultacion. This is also a vaine thyng. Because now what euyl works are not hastily punished, the heart of man geueth hym selfe ouer vnto wyckednes. But though an euyl person offend an hundred times, and haue a longe lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shall go wel with them that feare God, because they haue hym before his eyes. Againe, as for the vngodly, it shall not be wel wth hym, neyther shall he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadow, so shall he be that feareth not god. Yet is ther a vanitie vpon earth: wher be such mā, vnto whiche it happeneth as though they had the works of the vngodly. Againe, ther be vngodly, wth whome it goeth as though they had the woorkes of the ryghteous. This me thinke also a vaine thing.

Therefore I commende gladnes, because a man hath no better thyng vnder the sun, then to eate and drynke, and to be merie: for that shall he haue of his labour of the dayes of the lyfe, whiche God geueth hym vnder the sunne. When I applyed my mynde to learne wysdom, and to know the traualle that is in the world (and that of such a fashon, that I suffered not mine eyes to slepe neyther daye nor nyght) I vnderstode of all the works of God, that it is not possible for a man to attain vnto the works that are done vnder the sunne: and though he bestowe his labour to seeke the out, yet can he not teache vnto them: yet though a wyse man woulde vnder take to know them, yet myght he not fynde them.

The ix. Chapter.

A man wotteth not, by the ryghteousnes of his own workes, whether he be worthy of loue or hate. A man ought to lye in mercy wth his wyse. A prayse of wysdom.

For all these thynges purposed I in my mynde to seeke out. The righteous and wyse, yea and theyr (a) workes also are in the hand of God: and (b) there is no man knoweth eith the loue or hate of the thyng that he hath before hym. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: It goeth wth the ryghteous, as wth the vngodlye, wth the good and cleane, as wth the vncleane: wth hym that offereth, as wth hym þe offereth not: lyke as it goeth wth the vertuous, so goeth it also wth the sonner: As it happeneth vnto the persecuted, so happeneth it also vnto hym that is feared to be forsmorn. Among all thynges that come to passe vnder the sunne, this is a mystrye, that it happeneth vnto all alike: This is the cause also that the Leattes of men are full of wyckednes, and mad foolshenes is in them: heretofore as long as they lyue, wher they dye. And why? As longe as a man lyueth, he is careless: for a quicke dog say they, is better then a dead lion: for they that be leuynge, knowe that they shall dye: but they that be dead, knowe nothing, neyther deserue they any more. For theyr memory all is forgotten, so that they be neither lauded, hated, nor euided, neyther haue they any more part in the world in all that is done vnder the sunne. Woe thou thy waye then, eate thy breade wth love, and drynke thy wyne wth gladnes, for thy workes please God. (c) Let thy garments be al way wyntre, and let thy head want none ornament. Use thy selfe to lye softly wth thy wyfe whom thou louest, all the dayes of thy lyfe, which is but vaine, that God hath geuen the vnder the sunne, all the dayes of thy vanitie: for that is thy portion in this life of all thy labour & traualle that thou takest vnder the sun. What soeuer thou takest in hand to do, that doo wth al thy power: for among the deade, wher as thou goest vnto, there is neyther worke, counsell, knowledge, nor wysdome. So I turned me vnto other thynges vnder the sunne, and I saw that in cunning, it helpeth not to be wyse: in battayle, it helpeth not to be strong: in sedynge, it helpeth not to be wyse: to ryches, it helpeth not to be satel: to be had in fauour, it helpeth not to be cunning: but all lyeth in tyme and fortune. For a man knoweth not his tyme, but like as the fyshes are taken wth the angle, and as the byrdes are caught wth the snare. Euen so are men taken in the perilous tyme, wher it cometh sodenly vpon them. This wysdome haue I sene also vnder the sunne, and me thought it a great thing.

The voyce of the church.

Behold, about Salomons bedstede ther stande, i.e. valaunt men of the myghty in Israel. They hold swerdes ouerpyne, and are expect in warre. Every man hath bys swerde vpon his thygh, because of feare in the myghty. King Salomon hath made him selfe a bedstead of the wood of Libanus, & pylers are of syluer, the couering of gold, the seat of purple, the ground pleasantly panned for the daughters of Ierusalem.

The church speaking of Christ.

Go forth (O ye daughters of Sion) and behold king Salomon in the crown wher wth his mother crowned him in the day of his marriage, and in the day of gladnes of his bert.

The.iii. Chapter.

The voyce of Christ.

O howe fayre art thou, my loue, howe fayre art thou: thou hast dones eyes, beside & which lye hid within. I by heart lockes are like a flock of shepe that be clipped, which goe first vpon from the washyng place: wher every one beareth two ewes, and not one vnfruitful among them. Thy lyps are lyke a rose coloured rhybonde, thy wordes are lovely: thy chekes are lyke a peice of a pomegranate, besides & whiche lye hid within. Thy necke is lyke & tower of David buylded wth bulwarke, wher vpon ther hang a thousand shylles, pea al the weapens of the gyautes. Thy two breastes are lyke two tymys of yong roes, whych seue among the lylles.

The spouse speaketh to hym selfe.

O & I might go to the mostaine of Egypt, & to the vil of frankincense: till daye breake, and till the shadowes be past away.

The voyce of Christ speaking to the church.

Thou art all fayre, O my loue, & no spot is ther in thee. Come to me from Libanus, (O my spouse) come to me from Libanus, come soone the nexte way from the top of Aman, from & top of Sanctus & Hermon, from the lions denues, and from the mountaynes of the leopards. Thou hast wounded my heart. O my sister, my spouse, thou hast wounded my herte, wth one of thyne eyes, & wth ons cheine of thy necke. O howe fayre and lovely are thy byests, my sister, my spouse? Thy byests are more pleasant then wyne, and the smell of thyne ointments pasterd all spyes. Thy lyps, O my spouse, drop as the honny combe, pea my like and honny is vnder thy tounge, and the smell of thy garments is like & smell of frankincense. Thou art a wel kept garden, O my sister, my spouse, & art a well kepte water spryng, a sealed well. The frutes & sprut in the, are lyke a verpe paradysse of pomegranates wth swete frutes: as Appelle, Arbus, Safford, Calamus, and al & trees of Libanus: myrrour, Aloes, and al the best spyes. Thou art a wel of gardens, a well of spryng waters, whych tenned downe from Libanus.

Christ calleth the Heathen.

Wth thou Northwinder, come thou southerwinder, and blowe vpon my garden, that the smell thereof maye be caryed on euery syde: pea that my beloued maye come into my garden, & eate of the frutes and apples that growe therein.

The.v. Chapter.

Christ speaketh to the church.

Come into my garden O my sister, my spouse: I haue gathered my myrrour wth my spye. I wyl eate my honny and my honny combe, I wyl drynke my wyne and my mylike.

Christ speaketh to the Apostles.

Eate, O ye scendes, drynke and be merry, O ye beloued.

The voyce of the Church.

As I was a shepe, and my hert making, I heard the voyce of my beloued, when he knocked.

The.iii. Chapter.

The. v. Chapter.

Christ to the Church.

Open to me (sayde he) O my sister, my loue, my dowe, my derlyng: for my head is full of dewe, and the lockes of my heare are full of the myghty oyls.

The voyce of the sponselle.

I haue put of my robe, howe can I do it on agayne? I haue washed my feete, howe shal I style them agayne?

The voyce of the Church speaking of Christ.

But whē my loue put in hys hand at the hole, my heart was moued toward hym: so that I stode vp to open vnto my beloued.
My handes dropped with myrrour, and the myrrour ranne downe my fingers vpon the locke. Neuerthelesse when I had opened vnto my beloued, he was departed, and gone bys waye.

Now like as afore time when he spake, my heart could not longer restryne: Euen so now I sought hym, but I could not find hym: I cryed vpon hym, neuerthelesse he gaue me no answer.

The Church complaineth of her persecuters.

So the watchmen that went about the citty, founde me, smote me, and wounded me. Yea they that kept the walles, toke away my garment fro me.

The sponselle speaketh to her companions.

I charge you therfore, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, if ye fynde my beloued, that ye tel hym how that I am speake for loue.

The voyce of the Synagoge.

Who is thy loue above other louers, O thou sayrest among women? O what can thy loue doo, more then other louers, that thou chargest vs so straitly?

The Church, answering Christ.

As for my loue, he is myghty and read coloured, a synghuler personne among many thousandes: his head is the most fine gold, the lockes of hys heare are bushed, broune as the eucynge: hys eyes are as the eyes of doves by the water brookes, washed with mylke, and remapnyng in a plenteous place: hys cheekes are lyke a garden bed, wherein the Apocaries plant all maner of sweet thynges: hys lips drop as floures of the most principall myrrour, hys hands are full of gold ringes and precious stones. His body is as the pure puerp, deck ouer with Sappires. His legs are as pillers of Marbel, set vpon sokettes of gold:
hys face is as Irbanus, and as the beauty of Cedre trees: His throte is sweete, pea, he is altogether lovely. Suche one is my loue, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, suche one is my loue.

The voyce of the Synagoge speakynge to the Church.

Whither is thy loue gone then (O thou sayrest among womē) whither is thy loue departed, that we may seeke him with thee?

The. vi. Chapter.

Salomons Ballets.

The voyce of the Church.

My loue is gone downe into his garden, vnto the sweete smellyng beds, that he may refresh hym selfe in the garden, and gather floures. My loue is myne and I am hys, whych seeth among the Lilies.

Christ to the Church.

Thou art pleasaunt (O my loue) euē as louelynes it selfe, thou art sayre as Ierusalem, glorious as an armye of men, with thy banners. Turne away thyne eyes fro me, for they make me to proude. Thy deare locks are like a flocke of goates vpon the mount of Galaad. Thy teeth are lyke a flocke of shepe that be clypped, which go out of the washynge place: wher euer one heareth two thynges, and not one vnfrui-ful among the. Thy cheekes are lyke a piece of pomegranate, beset with thyne lily-
es. Thy eyes are lyke the score quenes, four score concubynes, and yong women without number. But one is my dowe, my derlyng. She is the only beloued of her mother, a dear vnto her that bare her. Whē her daughters saw her, they said, she was blef-sed: Yea & quenes & concubines praised her.

The voyce of the Synagoge.

What is she this, that peepeth out as the moorning? sayre as the Moone, excellent as the Sunne, glorious as an armye of men with thy banners?

Christ to the Synagoge.

I went downe into the nut garden, to se what grewe by the brookes, to looke if the vynepards flourished, and if the pomegranates were shot forth.

The voyce of the Synagoge.

Then the charertes of the prynces of my people made me sodenly afrayed.

The voyce of the Church cal-lyng agayne the Synagoge.

Turne agayne, turne agayne, O thou Sulamite, turne agayne, turne agayne, that we may looke vpon the.

The. vii. Chapter.

Christ to the Synagoge.

What pleasure haue ye more in the Sulamite, then when she daunceth among the men of war?

Christ to the Church.

O howe pleasaunt are thy treadynge with thy shooes, thou prynces daughter?
Thy thyghes are lyke a sayre Jewell, whych is brought by a connyng woozke master.
Thy navel is lyke a rounde goblet, whiche is neuer about drynck: Thy wombe is lyke an heape of wheat, set about with lilies.
Thy two breasts are lyke two twins of yong does: Thy necke is as it were a tower of puerp: thyne eyes are lyke the water poles in Besebon, besyde the porten of Bathrabbim: thy nose is lyke the tower of Irbanus, whych looketh toward Damascus: That beade that standeth vpon the, is lyke the Carinell: the beate of thy head is lyke the lappes purple folded vp in plates.

¶ The Church speaking of Christ.

O come on my loue, let vs go forth into the field, and take oure lodgyng in the villages. In þe mornynge wyl we ryse by tymes, and goo to the vineyard: yf it bee

The propheticall þ at the cominge of Christ al strength & power shall be put forth of Ierusalem.

Euery man can eschew a person moued in anger: for what doth he wysely? Euen so shall the Lorde of hostes take awaye from Ierusalem & Iuda all possessions and power, all meate & drinke, the capitayne and the souldyer, the iudge and the prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the most wysefull of fiftie yeres olde, and the honourable: the senators & men of vnderstandynge: the masters of craftes and orators. And I shall geue you chyldre to be your prynces (saith the Lorde) and babes shall haue the rule of you. One shall euil be doynge violence and wronge to another. The boye shall presume agaynst the elder, and the yole person agaynst the honourable. Yea one shall take a frende of hys owne kyndred by the bosome, and saie: thou hast (a) clothynge, thou shalt be ouer head: for thou maist kepe vs from thys fall and perill.

Then shall he sweate and saie, I cannot helpe you. Wherfore ther is neither meate nor clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Ierusalem and Iuda must decay, because that both their wordes and counselles are agaynst the Lorde, they prouoke the presence of hys maiesty vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyr countenance bewrayeth them, & they declare theyr owne synnes & felasies, as the Sodomites, and hyde them not.

Woe be vnto theyr soules, for they shalbe heuily rewarded. Then shall they saie: O happye are the godlye, for they maye enioye the scates of theyr sturges. But woe be to the vngodly & vnepghuous, for they shalbe rewarded after theyr workes. O my people (b) crye oute & crye oute, and women haue rule of the.

O my people, thy leaders discerne the, and read out the wayes of thy forestepps. The Lorde is here to common of the matter, and standeth to geue iudgemente wth the people. The Lorde shall come forth to reason wth the senators and prynces of hys people, and shall saie thus vnto them: He is ye that haue burnt vp my winelard, the robbery of the poore is in your house. Wherfore do ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the innocents? This shall be

Je god of bootes reuile them.

Moreouer thus sayth the Lord: Seinge þ daughters of Syon are become so proud, and come in wryth stretched out neckes, & w bayne wanton eyes: scynge they come in trippynge so nyctely w they: fete: Therfore that the Lord (c) haue the heades of þ daughters of Syon, and make they: beauty bare in that day. In that daye shall þ Lord take a maye they: gozgioufnes of they: apparel and spages, they: nes, pattlerres, rollers, & braccellers, & bones, the goodly flouted, wynde and brodered tayment, huches and head bandes, tynges and garlands, holy day clothes and vales, ketchines and pynges, glasses and smokes, bonnettes and taches.

And in steede of good smelle, there shall be stynke among them. And for they: gyddles there shall be loose bandes. And for well set herre, there shall be baldnesse. In steede of a stomacher, a sarke cloth, and for they: beauty, w lecherednesse and sunne burnynge. Their housbandes, & they: myghte men shall perishe wryth þ sword in battayle.

The Notes in the.iii. Chapter.

(a) That is, thou art better apparelled and reche than we, helpe vs wryth fode & othe things necessarye. All the curses whiche the prophete here reciteth, were fulfilled in the destruction of Ierusalem.

(b) Some reader: tractours or extortioners. We notably the courtousnes of pyrrists and priests. And here calleth the poore widdowes, the fatherlesse, and all that are destitute of the comforte of they: world, they: people, whos the þ haues then oppressed: nowe priests, and such as fol to haue the felure to be spiritual: Justlye called tractours, in as muche as they require their right as they call it, more by mennes tradicions, then by the word of God: and do not so lene soules to God, as money for them selues. Oppresse, that is spoyl, pyl, and euen thaur, so that they wante leaue oughte. What house, folde, or Marchaundise is there, that rendereth they: not some what? Whether there be chyldren christened, or marriages made, or men come to the table of the Lorde: whether the lyche be by yted, or the dead buried, there is euer somewhat required. Furthermore they are not onely accused to be covetous, but also to be women, that is effeminate and womanly: because they mooste flirtheys and pdeleys speche and wast that, whiche they haue escaped with sugallenge, violence, and mooste naughtye fallowes.

(c) To haue the heades of wemene, is to make them confounded and ashamed, for it is a shame to a woman to be shaven. 1. Cor. xi. 5. So that the prophete here by significy, by a borrowed speech, that the Lord shall make the daughters of Syon (by whiche vnderstand, the women of Iudee) confounded & ashamed, & bynge they: to extreme aduersitie and pouerpe, and euen to naught. Josephus maketh mention that Ierusalem, whiche was the chiefe cytye therof, was ones so famished that a certayne woman of the cytye ate her owne childe. Albeit, some vnderstand euen here also by þ daughters of Syon the townes, villages, and castelles of Syon: as it doth in deade often signyfy in þ scriptures.

For wante of men. vit. women desyre to haue one man

At that tyme shall their (a) gates mourne and complaine, and they shall sit as desolate folke vpon þ pearth (b). The shall seue wyues take holde of one man and saye: we wyl lave all oure meate, and clothynge together in common, onelwe that we maye be called thy wyues, and that this shamefull reproche maye be taken from vs. After that tyme shall the * braunch of the Lord be beautifull and myghty, and the fruyt of the earth shall be fayre and pleasaunt, for thole tractelless that shall spring therof. Then shall the remnaunte in Syon, and the remnaunte at Ierusalem be called holy: nameyve all suche as are wyrtten amonge the luyng at Ierusalem what tyme as the Lorde shall washe awaye the desolacion of the daughters of Syon, and pouge the bloud out from Ierusalem with the wynde of they: smoke and sper. Moreouer vpon all the dwellynge of the byll of Syon, and vpon they: hole congregacion, shall the Lorde proude a cloude and smoke by daye, and the shynynge of asmyngre fyre by nyghte: for all they: gloire shall be preserued. And Ierusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of beate in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a man maye kepe him for wether and rayne.

The Notes of the.iii. Chap.

(a) The Gates shall mourne and complaine because not onely the soldpares shall peryshe wryth the sword, but also the Judges and geuerers of sentence. We takerh the place of iudgement for the iudges: for in the Gates was iudgemente wonte to be geuen Ruth. iii. 9. Or, esen the Gates shall be destroyed, and no man shall inter in or go oute thereat: for the Gates mourne, if the people be not often seen in the.

Well I shall tell you howe I will do wth my vineparde: I will take the (a) hedge from it. that it maye perpeche, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be troden vnder foote. I will laye it wast, that it shall neyther be troysted nor cut, but beare thornes and byrns. I will also forbyd the cloudes, that they shall not raine vpon it. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde, & conspyre not the worke of hys hands. Therefore cometh my folke also in captiuitie, because they haue no vnderstandyng.

They glorie shall be myrte wth hunger, & they pype shall be matted for thyrst. Therefore gage they hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that pype, bozopug, & wyldome, wth such as resoyse therein, may descende into it.

Thus shall man haue a fall, he shall be brought lowe, and the hyge lookes of & proude laped downe. But the Lorde of hostes, that holy God, shall be exalted, and vntouched, wher he shall declare hys equitye and ryghteousnes after thys maner: When shall the lambes eat theyr appoynted fodder, and shall see plentifully in & moystaynes. Wo be vnto bayne persons that draw wickednes vnto them as it were with a corde, and spynne, as it were with a cart rop, whiche vse to speke on thys maner: let hym make hast now, & go forth wth hys worke, that we may se it. Let & counsel of the holy one of Israel come and drawe nye, that we maye knowe it.

Wo be vnto them that cal euyl good, & good euyl: whiche make darknesse lycht, & lycht darknesse: that make sowter swete, and swete sowter. Wo be vnto them that are wise in their owne sight, and bynke them selues to haue vnderstandyng. Wo be vnto them that are cunning men to sup out wyne, and expect to see by drunkennes.

Therefore is the wrath of & Lorde kindled also agaynst hys people, & he (b) shalke hys hand at them, & he shall smyte so that the hylles shall tremble. And their carcases shall lye in the open streetes lyke myrte. After all thys, the wrath of God shall not cease, but he shall stretch hys hand wyder. And he shall geue a token vnto a strange people, & call vnto them in a farre countrey: and behold they shall come hastily wth speede. There is not one sapient nor feble among them, no nor a flugghe nor decay petid. There shall not one of the put of the gyrdle from hys loynes, ne lose hys sarchet of hys shoo. The Notes of the .v. Chapter.

(a) In the hedge and wall is figured the custodie of Iungels, wherewith the people of God (whiche is called the vineparde of the Lorde) was compassed about and defended.

(b) To make & stretch forth hys hand at them, is to prouide & make ready to stryke them, and greuouly to punysh them for theire synnes. As after in the iiii. g. If he stretch forth hys hand who will wth hym we it agayne.

The .vi. Chapter.

Esaie sawe the glorie of the Lorde, and was sent to prophesye the desolation of Ieruse.

In the same year that kynge Oziah died, I sawe (a) the Lorde sitting vpon an high and glorious seat, and hys traine fylled the palace. I sawe aboute hym seraphims, wherof euery one had sixe wings. With twayne eche couered hys face, & with twayne hys fete, and wth twayne did he flye. They cryed also eche one to other in thys maner: holy holy holy, so the Lorde of hostes. The hole world is ful of hys glorie. Yes the postes and dorechekes moued at theyr cryng, & & house was ful of smoke. Then I sayde: O moos me (for I was astonished) that I (whiche am a man of vncleue lippes, and dwell among people that haue vncleue lippes also) holde & & kinge and Lorde of hostes wth myne eyes.

Then stode one of the Seraphims vnto me, me, haupnge a bore cole in hys bā, which he had taken from the aulter wprb the rōgues, and touched my mouth, and sapoe: so, thys hath touched thy mouth, & thyn vncyghteousnesse is take awaye, and thy spaine forgyuen. After thys I hearde the voyce of the Lorde, takynge aduysment on thys maner: Whom shall I sende, & whoe wpll be oure messenger? The I sayd: here am I, sende me. And so he sayd: go and tell thys people: * ye shall breake in dede, but ye shall not vnderstand, ye shall playnly se, and not perceyue. And then the herre of thys people, stoppe they eares and shut they eyes, that they se not wprb they eyes, heare not wprb they eares, and vnderstand n yth they herres, and conuerse and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde, how longe? he answered: vntill the ciyties be utterly wprb out inhabitours, and the houses wprb pure men, till the land be also desolate, & ly vnbuilded. For the Lorde shall take the men far awaye, so that the lande shall lye wast. Nevertheless, the tenth parte shall remayne therein, for it shall conuerse and be fruitful. And lykewyse as the Eerebiuthes and oketrees brynge forth they frutes, so shall the holp scde haue frute.

The. vii. Chapter.

The Spyns moue vnto the agaynst Jerusalem, & virgin shall beare a childe.

It happened in the tyme of Achaz the sonne of Ioarham, whiche was the sonne of Oziah kynge of Iuda: that * Razin the king of Siria, & Shabek the sonne of Romelias king of Israhel, went vp toward Ierusalem to besiege it, but wānt it not. Now whē the house of Dauid (that is Achaz) herd word therof, * Siria and Ephraim were confederat together, hys heart quaked (pea, and * hertes also of hys people) lyke as a tree in the feld, that is moued wprb the wynd.

Then sayed God vnto Esay: go meete Achaz (thou and thy sonne Shear Rasub) at the head of the ouce poole, in the foote pathe by the fullers ground, and say vnto him: take hede to thy selfe, and be syl, but feare not, neyther be faunte herred for these two tables, * is, for these two smokynge spire brands: the wyath and furiousnesse of Razin the Sirian, and Romelias sonne: because that the kynge of Siria Ephraim & Romelias sonne haue wickedly conspired agaynst the, saynge. We wpll godowne into Iuda, bere them and bring the vnder vs, and let a king there euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus sayth the Lorde god therto: He shal not so go forth, neyther come so to passe: for the head ctyr of the Sirias is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Razin. And after. v. &. lx. yere, shall Ephraim be no more a people. And the chiefe ctyr of Ephraim is Samaria, But the heide of Samaria, is Romelias sonne. And if ye beleue not; yett shall no promyse be kept wprb you.

Moreover God spake vnto Achaz, sayng: requyre a token of the Lorde thy God whether it be toward the depty beneth or toward the heygth aboue. Then sayde Achaz: I wpll requyre none, neyther wpll I tempte the Lorde. The Lorde answered: Then heare to ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not thought for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must geue my god also? And therefore the lord shall geue you a token of hym selfe: Beholoe, a virgin shall conceiue and beare a sonne, and shall call hys name * Emmanuell. Lett & vny shall be eat, & he may knowe to eschue the euill, and chose the good. But or euer that chylde come to knoweledge, so eschue the euill and chose the good, the lande (that thou art so afraid for) shall be desolate of both her kynages.

The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy sacred house, suche as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Iuda thowme the kynge of the Assirians.

* For at the same tyme shal * lord (a) tobylde for the syes, that are about the water of Egypte, and for wees in the Assirians lande. These shall come, and shall lyge in all the valeys, in the vaultes of stone, vpon all grene thynges, & in all corners.

At that same tyme shal * lord * shal the hearte of the head, and the feete, and the beards cleane of, wprb the (b) rasour, that he shall pare them wythall beyond the water, namelpe, wprb the kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man yue wprb a cowe, and tme shepe. Then because of * aboundaunce of milke, he shall make butter & eat it. So that euerie one whiche remayneth in the land, shall eat butter and honpe. At the same tyme all vineyardes (though there be a thousande vytes in one, and met solde for a thousande spluctynges,) shall be turned to briers and thornes. Lyke as they shal come into the land wprb arrowes and bowes, so shall all the lāde become briers and thornes. And as for all bylles that nowe are hewen downe, thou shalt not come vpon them, for fear of briers and thornes. But the cattell shal be bypue thyther, and the shepe shall fede there.

As for them that dwell in the lande of the shadowe of deathe, vpon them shall the lyghte shyne. Shalt thou multiplye the people, & not increase the top also? They shall reioyse before the euen as men make mery in batuell, & as men that haue gotten the victorie, whē they deale the spoyle. For thou shalt breake the (a) yoke of the peoples burthen: the staffe of thy sholder, and the rod of thy oppressoure, as in the * (b) day at Madian.

Jude vii. t.

Moreover all temerarious and sedycious power, (yea where there is but a core spyled wth bloude) shall be burnt, and fede the fyre. For vnto vs a child shall be borne, and vnto vs a sonne shall be geuen. Vpon thy sholder shall the kyngdome lye, and he shall be called wth thy owne name, The wonderous geue of counsel, the myghty God, the euerslastyng father, the prince of peace: he shall make no end to encrease the kyngdome & peace, and shall sit vpon the seate of Dauid and in thy kyngdome, to set vp the same, to stablish it wth equyte and ryghtousnesse, from thenceforth for euermore. Thy shall be the gelauspe of the Lord of hostes byng to passe.

The Lord sente a worde into Jacob, the same is come into Israel. And the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwell in Samaria, can saye wth pryde and hye stomakes, on this maner: The tyle worke is fallen downe, but we will builde it wth harder stones. The mulber sybber is broken, but we shall sette it vpon agayne wth Cedre. Neuertheles the Lord shall prepare Razyn the enemye agaynst the, and so order theyr aduersaries, that the Syrians shall lay hold vpon them before, and the Philistines behind, and so deuour Israel wth open mouth.

After all this, the wrath of the Lord shall not cease, but yet thy hand shall be stretched out still. For the people turned not vnto hym that chastised them, neyther do they seke the Lord of hostes. Therefore the Lord shall rote out of Israel boeth heade and taile, branck & twyg, in one daye.

By the heade, is vnderstande the Senatour and honorable man, & by the taile the prophete that preacheth lyes. For all they which enfourme the people that they be in a ryghte case, such be discipules. Such as men thynke also to be perfecte among these, are but cast awaye.

Therefore shall the Lord haue no pleasure in theyr yongemen, neyther saue theyr fatherlesse and wydowes. For they are altogether ypoctites and wycked, and all theyr mouthes speake solly. For this cause shall the wrath of the Lord of hostes fall vpon the land, & the people shall be consumed, as it were wth fyre, no man shall spare his brother. If a man do turne hym to the ryght hand, he shall samph, or to the lefte hande to eate, he shall not haue ynoughe. Every man shall eate the fleshe of his owne arme. What wyl ye do in tyme of visitaciō and disceuciō, that shall come from farre? To whom wyl ye sende for helpe, or to whom wyl ye geue pouer honour, that he may kepe the: that ye come not amonge the prisoners, or lye amonge the deade? After all this shall not the wrath of the Lord cease, but yet thy hand shall be stretched out still. Woe be also vnto Assur, whiche is a staffe of my wrath, in whose hande is the rod of my punishment. For I shall send hym hym amonge those Apocryphes people, amonge the people that haue deſerted my diſſaucture, ſhall I ſend hym, that he maye utterly robbe them, ſpoyle them, & treade them downe lyke the myre in the ſtreete.

Howe be it, hys meynynge is not ſo, nepether thynckerh hys bette of thys ſaſhion.
But he ymagyneth onelye howe he maye ouerthrowe and deſtroye muche people, for he ſaith: are not my prynces all kynges? Is not * Calno as caſpe to wyne, as Chathamis? Is it harder to conquere Antiochia then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria?
As who ſaith: I were hable to wyne the kingdome of the Idolaters & theyr god-des, but not Ierusalem and Samaria.

Shal I not go vnto Ierusalem and theyr Images, as I byd vnto Samaria, & theyr Images?

Wherefore the Lorde ſaith: As ſoone as I haue perſourmed my hole worke vpon the hill of Sion and Ierusalem, then will I alſo viſite the noble & ſtout kynge of Affria, with hys wyſedome and prync.
For he ſtanderh thus in his owne cōfite.

Thys do I thowme the power of myne owne hand, and thowme my wyſedome.
For I am wyſe, I am he that remoue the landes of the people. I rob theyr prynces and (lyke one of the worthies) I dryue the from theyr dyne ſcates. My hande hath foundede oute the hoſtes of the people, as it were a neſt. And lyke as egges that were layde here and there, are gathered together: So do I gather all countreyes. And there is no manne, that dare be ſo bold, as to touch a ſether, that dare open Dns mouth, or ones wyſper.

But both the are boalt to ſelfe agaynſt hym that bewerd therewith, or both the ſawe make anye ſtakyng, agaynſt hym that ruleth it? What were euen lyke, as if the rob byd exalt it ſelfe agaynſt hym that beareth it, or as though the ſtaffe ſhoulde magnifye it ſelfe, as who ſaith: it were no wood. Therefore ſhall the Lorde of Hoſtes ſende hym power in hys rypes, and burne vp hys power, as it were worth a fyre. But the lyghte of Iſraell ſhall be that fyre, and hys Sanctuary ſhalbe the flame, and it ſhall burne, and burne vp hys thornes and bryers in one day, yea all the glory of hys wodes and ſickes ſhalbe conſumed with bodye & ſoule. As for hym ſelfe, he ſhalbe as one chaſed awaye. The trees alſo of his ſyeld ſhalbe of ſuch a noiſe, that a chyld may tell them.

After þ day ſhal the remnant of Iſrael, and ſuch as are eſcaped oute of the houſe of Jacob, ſeke no more comfort at hym þ ſmote them, but ſhall cōfort them ſelues with faithfullneſſe & truth in the Lorde, þ holp one of Iſrael. The remnant, yea and the powerfull of Jacob, ſhal comerte vnto God þ mighty one. For though thy people (O Iſrael, be as the ſand of þ ſea, yet ſhal I but the remnant of them onelye conuert vnto hym: Deſect is the iudgemente of hym that ſtanderh in ryghtrouſneſſe, and therefore the Lorde of Hoſtes ſhal perfectly fulfill the thynge that he hath determined in the myddell of the hole worlde.

Therefore thus ſaith the Lorde God of Hoſtes: Thou my people that dwelleſte in Syon, be not aſcaped for the kynge of the Affrians. He ſhall wag hys ſtaffe at the ſea, and beat the wyth the rod, as the Egyptians byd ſometyme. But ſoone after, ſhall my wrath and myne indignacion be fulfilled agaynſt theyr blaſphemys.

Wherefore the Lorde of Hoſtes ſhal prepare a ſcourge for hym lyke as was the punyſhment of Madian vpon the mount of Dieb. And he ſhal lyfte vp hys rod over the ſea, as he byd ſometime ouer the Egyptians. Then ſhall hys botchen be taken from thy ſhoulders, and hys pocke from thy necke, yea the ſame pocke ſhall be corrupte for very ſaures. He ſhall come to Gath, and go thowme towarde Egypt.

But at Gath ſhall he muſter hys hoſte, and goo ouer the ſea. Gabaah ſhall be theyr reſtynge place. Iſdamah ſhall be aſcaped, Gabaah ſhall be aware. The voyce of the noyſe of thy hoſtes (O daughter Gallym) ſhalbe hearde vnto Lays and to Anathoth, wherche alſo ſhalbe in trouble. Madmena ſhal tremble for feare, but the ctytyns of Gadym are many, yet ſhall he remayne at Rob that day. After that, ſhal he lyft vp hys hand agaynſt the mount Sion, and agaynſt the hill of Ierusalem. But ſe the Lorde God of Hoſtes ſhal take awaye the pride of thyence with feare. He ſhall ben cōdome the pride, and fell the hre mynded. The thornes of the wood ſhalbe cōſed out with pyon, & Libanus ſhal haue a myghty fil.

The xi. Chapter.

The propheteſh of the nauyng of Abime, and of hys people, of the remnant of Iſ-rael, and of the ſaith of the heathen or gentyles

After this there ſhal come a red ſmyth of the kynrede of Iſſe, and a vloc: ſome oute of hys rore. The ſpyrit of the Lorde ſhal lyght vpon it, & ſpirt of wyſdome, & vnderſtodyng: the ſpirt of cōſel, & ſtrength, the ſpirt of know ledge and of the ſeate of God: & ſhal make bya-feruent in the ſeate of God.

For he ſhal not geue ſentence after the thynge that ſhal be broughte before hys eyes, neether reſpōne a myter at the ſpide bearyng: but with ryghtrouſneſſe ſhal he iudge the poore, and with helynes ſhal he reſourme the ſymple of the worlde.

He ſhall ſmyte the (a) worlde with the
(b) ſtaffe of hys mouth, & with the beech of hys mouth ſhal he ſlaue the nycked. & the lyghtnouſneſſe ſhalbe the gribble of hys dunge of hys raynes. Then ſhall the parde shall lye down by the gate. Bullocks, Irons, and carrel shall kepe company together, so that a lytle chyld shall dyue the forth. The cowe and the bere shall fede together, & theyr ponge ones shall lye together. The lyon shall eate straw lyke the ore, or þe cow. The child while he sucketh, shall haue a desyre to the serpens nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put his bande into the Lokatrice benne. Roman shall do euill to another, no man shall destroy another, in al the hil (c) of my Sanctuary. For the earthe shall be ful of þe knoweledge of the Lorde, euen as though the water of the sea flowed ouer the earthe.

Then shall the Gentyls enquire after the tote of Jesse (whiche shalbe set vp for a token vnto the Gentiles) for his dwel-lynge shalbe glorious. At the same tyme shall the Lorde take in hand againe, to con-querre the remnant of his people (whiche are left alpyne) fro the Assytians, Egiptians, Arabians, Assyrians, Elamites, Cal-depes, Antiochians, and Ilandes of the sea. And he shall set vp a token among the Beryls, and gather together the disper-sed of Israell, pea and the outcastes of Iuda from the foure corners of the world. The barred of Ephraim, and the enemie of Iuda shall be clene rooted out, Ephraim shall not beare euill wyl to Iuda, and Iuda shall not hate Ephraim, but they boerh together shall lye vpon the shulders of the Philistines toward the West, and spoyle them together þe dwell toward the East. The Ibumites and the Gassites shall let theyr bades fall, & the Ammonites shalbe obediende vnto them.

The Lorde also shall cleaue the tungen of the Egyptians sea, and with a mygh-tye mynde shall he lyft vp his bande ouer Nilus, and shall smite his seven streames and make men go ouer drye shod.

And thus shall he make a waye for his people, that remayneth from the Ar-rians, lyke as it happened to the Israelites, in that tyme they departed oute of the land of Egypt.

my health, in whom I truste, and am not asayed. For the Lorde is my strength, and my praise, he also shal be my refuge. There-fore with love shall ye drawe water oute of the (a) welles of the Sauoure, and the shal ye late: Lette vs geue thanks vnto the Lorde, and call vpon his name, and declare his coucelles among the people, and kepe the in remembraunce, for his name is ex-cellete. O synge prayles vnto the Lorde for he doth greate thinges, as it is knowne in all the worlde. Cry out, and be glad, thou þe dwellest in Sid, for greate is thy prince, the holy one of Israel.

The Notes of the. xiii. Chap.

(a) The welles of the Sauoure are the worde of God, the doctrine of the Gospel and promi-ses of Christ, wherwith tremblyng soules and afflicted consciences are refreshed. Oute of these (sayeth he) that they shal drawe water not oute of mens traditions, whiche are but podels.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

The prophecy of the destruction of Babilon, the captivity, and the comynge agayne of the people.

Thys is the heauye (a) burthe of Babilon, which say the sonne of Amos did se. Make some tokens to the hye (b) hills, cal vnto them, hold vp your hand, that the princes may go in a þe dore. For (c) I wyl sende for my (d) debites and my gyautes (sayth the Lorde) and in my wrath I wyl cal for suche, as triumphe in my gloire.

Wylth that, me thoughte I hearde in the mountaynes a noyse, lyke as it had bene of a greate people: and a rushynge as though the kyngedomes of all nac-yons had come together, (And the Lorde of Hostes was the Captayne of the hole armye) as they had come not only oute of sacre countreys, but also from the en-des of the heauens. Euen the Lorde hym selfe wylth the ministers of his wrath, to destroye the hole land. Gourneth therfore, for the day of the Lorde is at hande, and ch-mereth as a destroyer from the Almyghyte. Then shal all handes be lerten downe, and all mens hartes shal melte awayne, they shal stand in feare, carefulnesse and sorow shal come vpon them, and they shal haue paine, as a woman that traualyth wylth chyld.

(e) One shall eue be abashed of another, & theyr faces (f) shal burne lyke the flame.

For so, the day of the Lorde shall come, terrible, full of indignacion and wrath, to make the lande waste, and to roote oute the synne therof. For the flakkes and pla-nets of heauen shal not geue theyr lght, the sunne shal be quenched in the rising, & the moone shal not shyne wylth his lght. And I wyl punish the wyckednesse of the

(g) world, and the synnes of the vngodly sayeth the Lorde. The hye stomackes of the proude wyl I take awaye, and wyl lape downe the boastyng of tyrantes. I wyl make a man deater then fine gold and

and a man to be more worth, then a golden wedge of Ophir. Moreover I will make the heauen, that the earthe shall remoue out of her place.

Thus shall it go with Babylon, in the wrath of the Lord of hostes, in the day of his fearfull indignacion. And Babylon shall be as an hunted or chased Doe, and as a flocke without a shepheard. Euerie man shall turne to his owne people, and see echone into his owne lande. Who so is founde alone, shalbe shot thowhe. And who so gather together shalbe destroyed with the sword. * Their children shalbe slayne before their eyes, their houses spoiled, and their wives caughed. For so, I shall bringe up the Medes agaynst them, whiche shall not regarde silver, nor be desirous of gold. Then shall pong nys homes be knapped a sunder. The Medes shall haue no pitye vpon women with childe, and their faces shall not spare the children. * And Babylon (that gloire of kyngdomes and betwixt of the Caldes honour) shalbe destroyed, even as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorra. It shal neuer be more inhabited, neither shall there be any more dwelling there, from generation to generation.

The Arabians shall make no tentes there, neither shall the shepherdes make their foldes there anye more, but mylke heastes shal lye ther, and the houses shalbe full of greete oules, & screeches shall dwell ther, and Ases shall daunce there: the lytle Oule shall cry in the palaces, one after another, & Dragons shalbe in the pleasaunt parlours. And as for Babilons tyme it is at hand, and her dayes may not be longe absent.

The.xliii.Chapter.

The retourne of the people from captiuitie.

The prosperity of the people of God, & affliction of their enemies. The pyte of Babylon.

But the Lord shall be mercifull vnto Jacob, he will take vp Isaac againe, and set them in their owne lande. Strangers shall cleaue vnto them, and get the to the house of Jacob. They shall take the people, and carpe the home with the. And the house of Isaac shall haue them in possession for seruantes and maydens, in the lande of the Lord. They shall take those prisoners, whose captiues they had bene afore, & rule those that hadle oppressed them. When the Lord nowe shall bringe the to rest, from the trauayle, feare, and harde bondage that thou wast laden withall; then shalt thou vse thy mockage vpon the kynge of Babylon, and say. Howe happeneth it that the oppressoure leauech of? Is the golden tribute come to an end? Doubtles the Lord hath broken the staff of the vngodlye, and the scepter of the lordly. Whiche whe he is worth, smyteth the people with durable strokes, and in his wondrous he persecuteth them, and tamereth them continually. (b) And therefore the hole worlde is nowe at rest and quietnesse, & men sing for ioye. Yea euen the fyre trees & Ceders of Libanus reioyse at thy fall, saying: Nowe that thou arte layde downe, there come no more to destroye vs. (c) We also tremble at thy commynge, all myghtye men and princes of the earth, for the beforthe. All kynges of the earth stande by frome their seates, that they maye all (one after another) singe and speake vnto the: Art thou wounded also as we? arte thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pyte is gone downe to hell. Mothes shalbe layde vnder the, and wormes shalbe thy coueringe.

Howe arte thou fallen frome heauen (d) Lucifer) thou saye morninge childe: hast thou gotten a fallen to the grounde, thou that (not withstanding) diddest subdue the people? And yet thou thoughtest in thyne herte: I will clyme vp into heauen, and make my seat aboue the stars of god. I will sit vpon the glorious mounte toward the North, I will clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and will be lyke the hyghest of all. Yet dare I saye, that thou shalt be broughte downe to the depe of hell. They that se the, shall nametwylke vpon the, and thyncke in themselves, sayinge: Is this the man that broughte all landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes ascrayd? Is this he that made the worlde in a maner waste, and layed the cyties to the grounde, whiche let not his prisoners go home?

Howe happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lye, euerie one at home in his owne palace, with worshyppe, and thou art caste oute of thy graue lyke a wyld?

Euen because that thou haste wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. For the generacion of the wycked shalbe wth out honour, for euer. There shall a waye be soughte to destroy theyr chyldren, for theyr fathers wyckednes, they shall not come by agayne to possesse the lande, and fill the world full of castels and towne.

I will stand by agaynst them (sayeth the Lord of Hostes) and roote oute the name and generacion of Babylon (sayeth the Lord) and will geue it to the Otters, and will make water podels of it. And I will swepe them oute wth the besome of destruction, sayeth the Lord of Hostes. The Lord of Hostes hath sworne an othe, sayinge: It shall come to passe as I haue determined, and shall be fulfilled as I haue denysed. The Multitudes shalbe destroyed in my lande, and vpon my mountaynes will I treade them under foote. Whether shalwe bys pocke shal come from you, and bys burthen shalbe taken from your shoulders. Whys drupse hath God taken thowme the hole worlde, and thus is bys hand stretched oute ouer al people. For if the Lord of Hostes determin a thynge: who will dysanulle it? And if he stretch forth bys hande, who will holde it in agayne?

The same yere that kynge Achaz died, God threatened by Esay on thys maner: Actoyse not (o hole Palestina) as though the rod of hym that beatech the were broken, for out of the serpentis rore, they shal make a cockatrice, and the scurpe shalbe a fyre moorme. But the poore shal fede of the best thyngs, and the simple shal dwel in safety. Thy rotes will I destroy wth hunger, and it shall slaye the remnaunce. Mourne ye portes, wepe ye cytyes, and fence thou (o hole Palestina) for there shall come fro the North a smoke, whose power no man may abyde. Who shal the mayntaine the messages of the Gentils? But the Lord shall establishe his ion, & the poore of my people shal put theyr trust in hym.

starre; whiche he calleth the chyld of the moynge, because it appeareth onely in the moynge. The meanyng is: No suche thyngs ought to haue happened vnto the, that in earth wast lyke the moynge starre, whiche no man can take oute of heauen: And thou that wast so myghtie, that thou destroyedst what people thou wouldest, and vnto whome it was a pastime to ouerthowe narrows, haste receyued suche measure as thou broughtest. Such a like thynge is there in Ezechie. xlviii. Against Egipte Egiptus.

The.xv. Chapter.

The prophecy agaynst Moab.

Moys is the heupe burthen vpon Moab. Ar of Moab was destroyed, (as me thoughte) in the nyght season. The walles of Moab perished in the nyght, and banished away. They went to Bath and Dibon in the hye places, for to wepe. Moab dyd moune fro Bebo to Medba. * Al theyr heades were (a) polled, and all theyr beards shaued. In theyr stretes were they gyded about wth sacke clothe. In all the tops of theyr houses & stretes was ther nothyng, but mourninge and wepyng. Belebion and Eleale cryed, that theyr voyce was heard vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab bleared & cryed for wep for some of theyr myndes. Wo is my hert for Moabs sake. They fled vnto the ctyte of Zoar, whiche is lyke a saye full bullocke, they went by to Ruben wepyng. The waye toward Bozouaim was full of lamentacion for the hurte.

The waters of Ammon were dyed by, the grasse was withered, the herbes destroyed, and what necessary grene thyng ther was beside. In lyke maner the thynge was left the of theyr substance, they carried it by water to Araby. The ctyte went ouer the hole land of Moab, fro Eglaim vnto Ber was ther nothyng but mourning. The waters of Dimon were full of blud, for þe enemy had sent thither a bdd of men, whych as a lid, lay waye for the rest of the land, & for the þ were escaped.

(a) In tymes past it was a token of mourninge to shau the heade, and to clyppe the bearde, and therfore sayeth the Propheete, that the Moabites cut awaye theyr beards, for sorowe and carefullnesse. A lyke thynge haue we in Ieremie. vii. f. Cut of thine heare, and cast it awaye.

The.xvi. Chapter.

The destruction of Moab.

Men sent the Lords of the land a man of warre, from the rocke that steth toward the desert (a) vnto the hyll of the daughter Syon. (For as for þ (b) daughters of Moab, they were as it had bene a tremblyng byde, that is put oute of her nest, by the fere of Senon,) whiche messaunger sayed: gather youre counsell, come together (c) couer vs wth your shadowe (d) in the myddaye, as the nyght doeth: hyde the

Whethered, and bewray not them that are fled, let the persecuted Moabites dwell among you, be our open refuge against the destroyer:
for the adversary oppresseth us, the robber vndoth vs, and the tyrantes dispueth vs out of our land. But the throne of poute kingdome is full of grace, therefore be that sytteth vpon it with faithfulness and truth in the house of David, knowe the thyng and do bys dyligence to helpe shortly, according to equitie and righteousnes. As for Moabs pryde (shall they answer) it is wel known. And although they be excelsente proude arrogante, and bye mynded, yet is their strenght nothing lyke. And therfore Moab complaineth vnto Moab, where thow they come al to mourne, and nowe that they be smytten, they take theyr deuyce beneth by the bycke wall, and make theyr complayne.

Jer. xlviii. 1.

The suburbs also of Beſebon, were made waste, and the princes of the Ben-tles hewed down the vineyardes of Sib-ma, whych were planted with noble grapes, and spread vnto Iacer, and went vnto the ende of the deserte, whose branches stretched theyr selues forth beyond sea. Therfore I mourned for Iacer, and for the vine-yardes of Sibma, with greate sorowe I poured my teares vpon Beſebon and Eleale, for al theyr songes were layed downe, in theyr haruest and gatheringe of theyr grapes. Myrrh and chere was gone out of the feld and vineyardes, in so muche, that no man was glad nor song. Ther went no treader into the vineyardes, theyr merpe chere was layed downe. Wherefore my bely tumbled (as it had bene a lute) for Mo-abs sake, and myne inward members, for the bycke wals sake. For it happened thus also when Moab saw that he was turned vnderdowne, he went vpon hye into her Sanctuarie, to make her prayer ther, but he myght not be heald. Whys is the de-uice, which the Lord toke in hande at that tyme against Moab. But nowe the Lord sayth thus: In thye year shall the power of Moab with theyr pompe (which is great) be minished, lyke as the burth of an hyred seruant. And as for the remnant of the, they shall be left: then a fewe, and not rekened muche worth.

Jer. xlviii. 1.

The Notes of the.xvi. Chapter.

- (b) That is, towncs, citie, and villages.
- (c) That is, refresh vs that are afflicted, and geue vs a place to harbour in.

cution. So is the mydday often taken, as in the

The.xvii. Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Damascus.

Thy is the heuy burth vpon Damascus. Beholde, Damascus shall be no more a ctyte, but an heape of broken stones. The citie of Aroer shall be waste; the castel shall lye there, and no man shall fray them away. Ephraim shall no more be stronge; and Damascus shall no more be a kyngdom. And as for the glory of the renant of the Syrians, it shall be as the glory of the children of Israel, sayth the Lord of hostes. At that time also shall the glorye of Jacob be very poore, & his fatnes leane.

It shall happen to them, as when one sheateth in haruest, which cutterh his handful with the sickle, and when one gathereth the sheaves together in a valley, of (a) Ra-phaim, there remaineth yet some eares of
uer. Or as when one shakerh an olive tree, whych synnderh but two or thre olue berpes about in the toppe, and foure or fyue in the branches. Thus the Lord God of Israel hath spoken.

Jer. xlviii. 1.

Then shall man conuert againe vnto his maker, and turne bys eyes to the holy one of Israel. And shall not turne to faulters that are the worke of bys own hands, neither shall he looke vpon groues and ymages, whych his synners haue wrought. At the same tyme shall theyr strong ctytes be desolate, lyke as were ones the forsaken plowes and cozne whych they forsoke, for feare of the chyldren of Israel.

So shalt thou (o Damascus) be desolate, because thou hast forgotten God thy sauour, and hast not called to remembrance the rocke of my strength. Wherefore thou hast also set a sapie plante, and grafted a straunge branche. In the day when thou shalt plante it, it was greete and gaue soone the fruit of thy seede. But in the day of haruest, thou shalt reape an heape of sorowes and myrrours.

As be to the multitude of much people that rushe in lyke the sea, and to the heape of folk that run ouer al lyke great waters.
For though so many people increase as the flowing waters, and though they be armed, yet they shal be sat of, and vanysh awaye lyke the dust with the wynde vpon an hill, and as the whyle winde thow a royme.
Though they be fearefull at nyghte, yet in the morning it is gone with them. Whys is theyr porcion that do vs harme, and becitage of them that robbe vs.

Aberr. Chapter.

¶ He prophesieth ſyl agaynſt Egypt.

3 Egyp is the heuy burthen vpon Egypt. Beholde, the Lord wyl(a) cpe vpon a swift cloude, & come into Egypt. And the Gods of Egypt shal tremble at his comming, and the heart of Egypte shall quake within her. For thus sayth the Lord: I wyl ariere by the Egyptians one agaynst another among the selues, so that one shalbe euer agaynst his brother and neyghboure, yea one cpe a-gaynst another, and one kyngdom against another. And Egypt shalbe choked in her selfe. Whe they aske counsell at their gods, at their prophetes, at their Sorclapers, and Wyches, then wyl I bringe their counsell to naught.

Al myl delyuēt Egypt also into the ban-des of greuous tulers, & a cruel kyng shall haue the rule of them (b) The water of the sea shall be drawen out, Nilus shall synke as mowe, and be dryen vp. The ryuers also shall be drawen out, the welis shall decrease and drye awaye. Reedes and rushes shall fayle, the grasse by the waters syde, or by the ryuers banke, ree, and what soeuer is sowen by the waters, shall be withered, destroyed, & brought to naught. The fyshers shall mourne, al such as cast angells in þe water, shall complayne, and they that fyedde theyr nettes in the water shall saynt bea-
red. Such as labour vpon flaxe and spylke, shall come to pouertie, and they also that weaue fine works. Al the poudes of Egypt, al the pollicy of theyr Mottes and dyches shall come to naught.

Yea the vnderseete Prynces of Iordan, the councel of the wyse Senarours of Iherusalem, shal turne to fooltynes. Those that dare boaste and sape of Iheraas behalfe: I am come of wyse people, I am come of the old regal progeny. But wher at now thy wise men? Let them tel the and shewe the what the Lord of hostes hath taken in hande against Egypt. Fowles are those Prynces of ty of the p^rerocke. For the Lord hath made Egypt droncken with the spirit of errour, & and they shal vse it in al matters, euen like as a dronke man goeth spurning about. For Egypt shal lacke good councell, so that they shal not knowe what to do, neyther begyn-nyng noz ende, neyther vpon the land neyther on the water.

Then shall the Egyptians helpe vnto wome, astraied, and astraied, at the lisyng vp of the head, which the Lord of hostes shal lyft vp ouer them. The lande of Iuda also shal make the Egyptians afraied, who so dorbe but speake vpon it, shal put them in feare. And that because of þe counsel which the Lord of hostes hath deuised against the.
Then shal the true cities of Egypte speake wyrth þe Canaanites tong, and sweate by the Lord of hostes, and Heliopolis shal be one of them. At the same tyme shal the Lord of hostes haue an auter in the myddest of the land of Egypt, wyrth this tytle thereby: Unto the Lord. This shal be a token of restymour vnto the Lord of hostes in the lande of Egypt, wher they shal crye vnto him, because of those that oppresse them, that he shal send them a captaine, and a Sautoure to deliuer them.

Forcouer Egypte shalbe broughte vnto the Lord, & the Egyptians also shal knowe the Lord at the same time, they shal do him reuerence wth peace offringes, and wth incense offringes, they shal promise hym offeringes, yea, and paye hym also. Thus the Lord shal smite Egypt, and deale it again, so shal they tume to the Lorde, and he also shall haue mercy v^{pp} them, and saue them. The shal ther be a comen way out of Egypt into Assyria. The Assyrians shal come into Egypte, and the Egyptians into Assyria. The Egyptians also and the Assyrians shall bothe haue one Gods seturpe. Then shal Israel wth honout be the thyrde to Egypt and Assur. And the Lorde of hostes shall blesse them, sayinge: Blessed is my people of the Egyptians. Assur is the woorker of my handes, but Israel is myne inheritance.

Some had leuer haue this to be figurately applyed. As that be certayne waters of the Gospel, wherby the holy goste getteth, so are there also the troublous waters of Egypt, that is, of worldly doctrine. Therefore when the word of God is once heard, those waters dry vp. For the holy goste comprehendeth the world of synne, and openeth and declareth the workes of darkness. In these waters do reedes and rushes growe, that is vayne and trefelinge workes, such as are the workes of hypocrites, which after the outward shew and appareance seeme greene and frethe, but are withyn vayne and nought worthe.

Agaynst Egypt and Ethiopia.

In the same yere that Tharchan came to Asdod, when Sargon the kyng of the Assyrians sente hym, what tyme as he also besyged Asdod, and was in the same season. Then spake the Lord vnto Elay the sonne of Amoz, saying: go and loke of that sacke cloth from thy loynes, and put of thy shooes from thy feete. And so he dyd, going naked and bare foote. Then said the Lord: wher as my seruant Elay goeth naked and bare foote, it is a token and spanglyng of the chynge that after thre yere shal come vpon Egypt and Ethiopia. For euen thus shal the kyng of the Assyrians dyue both yong and olde, as prisoners, naked & bare foote out of Egypt and Ethiopia. And shal dyscouer the shame of Egypte. They shal be also at theyr wyttis ende, and a shamed one of another, the Egyptians of the Moosians, and the Moosians of the Egyptians, at the syght of theyr glory. Moreover they that dwel in the Isles, shal se euen the same day: behold, thys is our hope, to whom we fled to seke help, that we myght be deliuered fro the kyng of the Assyrians. How wyl we escape?

The .xxi. Chapter.

Agaynst Babylon, Idumea, and Arabia.

Thys is the heuy burthen of the wast sea. A greuous vision was shewed me lyke as when a storme of wynde and rayne tulleth in from the wyldernes, that terrible land. Who so may dysceyue (sayd the voyce) let hym dysceyue. Who so maye destroy, let hym destroy. Up Elan, besyge it, O Gadai, for I wyl syl all theyr grownges. With thys the reynes of my backe wer ful of payne. Dauges came vpon me, as vpon a woman in her trauayle. When I herd it, I was abashed: and when I looked vp, I was astayed. My heart panted, I trembled for feare. (b). The darknes made me feareful in my mynde.

Yea soone make readye the table (sayd thys voyce) kepe the watche, & eat drynck. Up ye captaynes, take you to your shylde, for thus the Lord hath charged me, go thy way and set a watch man that he may tell what he seeth. And when he had wayted dyligently, he saw two horsmen, the one tydyng vpon an asse, the other vpon a Camel. And the Lyon cryed: Lord, I haue fast wayting al the whole day, and haue kept my watche al the nyght. With that came Tharchan the one tydyng vpon a charet, wherby he smered and sayd: Babylon is fallen, she is turned vpsyde downe, and all the ymages of her gods are smytte to the ground. This (O my felow thersers and fanners) haue I hearde of the Lord of hostes the God of Israel, to shew it vnto you.

The heuy burthen of Duma.

One of Seir cryed vnto me: Watchman what hast thou clipped by nyght? watchman, what hast thou cryed by night? The watchman answered. The day breaketh on, and the night is comming. Yf thou request be earnest, then aske and come agayne.

The heuy burthen of Arabia.

At euen ye shal abyde in the wood, in the way toward Dedanum. Here the thursty with water (O ye citezens of Tema) mete those with bread that are dead. For they shal run awaye from the weapen, from the drawn swearde, from the bent bowe, and from the greate battayle. For thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: ouer a yere shal al the power of Cedar be gon, lyke as wher the offyce of an hyrd seruant goeth out. And the remnant of the good archers of Cedar, shal be very fewe. For the Lord god of Israel hath spoken it.

The Notes of the .xxi. Chapter.

(a) By the waste sea is vnderstand Babylon, & is so called, because of the exceeding great cruelties and tyranny, wherewith it excelled the Jewes. Hereof is there a prouerbe: Babylon is a sea of cupis, and euen the waste of the sea, that is the most tempestuous and desolate place, and that is lest possible to be sayled thowgh.
(b) By darknes here do some vnderstand tribulation and aduersite, as before in the .v. g. Yf we looke, &c, it shal be darknes and sorow.

The heuy burthen vpon the valley (a) of visions. What hast thou ther to do that thou climmed vp into the house top, O thou city of myacles, sedicious and wylful? saying thy sayne men are neyther kylled wth swerd, nor dead in battel. For al thy captaynes get them to theyr horses from the ordinance, yea they are altogether cidden away, and fled far of. When I receyued that, I sayd: awaye from me, that I may wepe bytterly. Take no labour for to comfort me, as touchyng the destruccions of my people. For thys is the daye of the Lord of hostes, wher in he wyl plage, tread downe, and weede out the valley of byssions, and breake down the wals, with such a cracke, that it shal geue a sounde in the mountaynes.

I sawe the Elamites take the quyuets to carre and to horse, and that the walles wer bare from harnes. The goodly ballets wer ful of charers, the horsmen made the soone to besyge the gates. When was the

of his fathers house, of the chyldren and chyldeys chyldren, al apparel smal & great, al instrumentes of measure and masure.
They shal come to passe (sayeth the Lord of hostes.) when the nayle that is fastened to the place of the hygh faythfulnesse, shal be plucked of. And when the weyght that hangeth vpon it, shal fall, be broken, and betren in peeces: for the Lord hym selfe hath sayd it.

to restore it agayne.

A heuy burthen vpon Tyrus. Mourn ye wyppes of Tharlis, for she is thro-wen downe to the ground, and conquered of the that are come from Cethim.
The indwellers of the Ilandes; the mar-chauntes of Sidon, and they that occupie the sea (of whom thou wast ful sometyme) are at a point. For by sea wet they fruytes brought vnto the, and al maner of corne by water. Thou wast the comen market of al people. Sidon is soyr for it, yea and all the power of the sea complaine, & sayth: O that I had neuer traualled wth child, & that I had neuer boyne any, that I hadde neither noyr shed hope, nor broughte vyne daughter. As soone as Egypt perceyued it, she wyl be as soyr as Tyrus is selfe. So ouer the sea mourn ye that dwell in the Iles: is not that the glayous cyp, whych hath bene of lōg antiquyte? whole natiues dwelling far of, comend her so greatly?
Who hath deuised such thyngs vpon Tyrus the crowne of al cypes, whole marchauntes and captaynes wth the highest and princel-pal of the world? Euen the Lord of hostes hath deuised it, that he may put down all pompe, and mynyshe all the glayre of the world. So thow wyl thy lād (O thow daughter of the sea) as men goo ouer the water, and ther is not a gyble more.

Thus the Lord that remoueth the king-domes, and hath taken in hande agayn that myghy Canaan to coore it out, hath stretched out his hande ouer the sea, and sayd: From hence shal thou make no more march (O thow daughter of Sidon, for thou shalt be put downe of the Cethims. Stand vp therfore, and go wth the enemy wll cary the, wth thou shalt also haue no rest.
Behold, (for thyne ensample:) The Chal-dyes were such a people, that no man was like them, they builded them, he set vp his castels and palaces, and broke them doune agayne. And therfore mourn (ye shippes of þ sea,) for your power shalbe throwe downe.

After that, shal the. lxx. yeres of Tyrus (euen as long as their kynges lyfe was) be forgotten. And after. lxx. yeres it shal happen to Tyrus as wth an hatlot that plateth vpon a lute. Take thy lute (saye men to her) and go about the cypre, thou art yet an vnknowen wenche, make pastime wth dyuers ballers, wherby thou mayest come into acquaintance. Thus shal it happen after thre score and ten yeres: The Lord shal vsyte the cypre of Tyrus, and it shal come agayne to her marchaundysse, and shal occupie wth all the kyngedomes that be in the worlde. But all her occupy-inge and wyppynge, shalbe halowed vnto the Lord. For then shal they laye vp nothyng beynde them nor vpon heapes, but the marchaundysse of Tyrus shal belonge vnto the cypriens of the Lord, to the feding and susteyning of the hongyre, and to the clothyng of the aged.

The. xxiii. Chapter.

A prophete vpon the tribulation that shall fall vpon the world, because of synne.

BEhold, the Lord shall waste and plage the world, he shall make the face of the earth desolate, and scatter abroad the inhabitants thereof. The shall the (a) priest be as the people, & master as the servant, the dame lyke the mayde, the seller like the buyer, he that lenderth vpon vsury, lyke vnto hym that borrower vpon vsury, the creditor, as the debtor. Yea miserably shall the world be wasted and cleane destroyed. For the Lord hath so determined in hym selfe. The earth shall be heuye and decaye. The face of the earth shall perishe and fall away, the proude people of the world shall come to naught. For the earth is corrupte of her inhabitants.

For wher they haue offended the law, changed the ordynances, and made the (b) euellastynge testament of none effecte. And therefore shall I curse denoure the earth, for they & dwel thereon haue sinned, wherfore they shall be vrent also, and those that remaine shall be very few. The swete wine shall moun, the grapes shall be wake, and al that haue bene merp in heart, shall sighe. The myrrour of tabernacles shall be laid downe, the chere of the ioyfull shall cease, and the pleasure of lutes shall haue an end, ther shall no more wine be dronke with myrre, the beere shall be bitter to them that drinke it, the wycked cities shall be broken downe, al houses shall be shut & no man may come in.

In the streets shall there be left by a cye because of wyne, al mens chere shall vanishe away, and al ioy of the earth shall passe. Desolation shall remaine in the cities, and the gates shall be smitten wyth wastenes. For it shall happen vnto al landes and to al people, lyke as when a man smyterh downe the olives, that are left vpon the tree, or sekerh after grapes, when the wyne gatherynge is out. And those same (that remain) shall lyft up theyr voice, & be glad, and shall magnify the glory of the Lord euen from the sea, and prayse the name of the Lord God of Israel, in the valeies and Islands. We beare songes song to the prayse of the ryghteous, from al the endes of the world. Therefore I must speake: O myne vnfruitfulness, O my pouerty, Who is me, al is full of synners, whych offende of purpose and malpce. And therefore, O thou that dwellest vpon the earth, ther is at hand for the, feare, pte, and snare. Who so escapeth the terrible cpe, shall fall into the pte. And yf he come out of the pte, he shall be taken wyth the snare. For the windowes aboue shall be opened and the foundation of the earth shall moue. The earth shall geue a great cracke, it shall haue a sore rushe, and take an horrible fall. The earth shall shacker like a broken man, and be taken awaye lyke a tent. Her myldeades shall lye so heauye vpon her, that she must fall, & neuer ryse vp agayne.

At the same tyme shall the Lord muster together the hye host aboue, and the kynges of the world vpon the earth. These shall be coupled together as prysoners be, and shall be shut in one ward and punished innumerable daies. The Moone and the Sunne shall be ashamed, when the Lord of hostes shall rule them at Ierusalem vpon the mount Sion, before and with his excellent conseil.

Other vnderstande thereby the law of charpety. For that is no newe commaundement, but a comaundement fro the beginning. The law of charpety is the law of the spirit. He that loueth his neyghbour hath fulfilled the law. Rom. xiii. Gal. v.

The. xxv. Chapter

A thanksgyving to God for his woorkes.

O Lord, thou art my God, I wyl praise thee, and magnify thy name: For thou bringest maruelous things to passe, according to thing old counceils, truly and stedfastly. Thou makest of towines, heapes of stone, and bead cities, broken wals. The palaces of the wycked destroyed thou out of the city, that they shall neuer be buylded agayne. Therefore & very rude people must magnify the, and & cities of the cruel bea then must feare the. For thou art the poore mans healpe, a strengthe for the needefull in his necessitye.

Thou art a defence against euil werther, & a shadow against the heate. But vnto the presumptuous, thou art lyke a strong wynde, that casteth downe the boasting of the vngodly, thou kepest men from heate, wyth the shadow of the cloudes, thou curtest of the bryanches of tyrantes.

Moreover the Lord of hostes shall once prepare a feast for al people vpon the hye. A plenteous, costly, pleasaunt (a) feast, of fat and wel fed beastes offwete and most pure thyngs. Vpon the (b) hye shall he raise away the side vale that dangerh before the face of al the people, and & couering therewith al Gentils are couered. As for deary, he shall utterly consume it. The Lord God shall wype away the teares from al faces, and take awaye the confusion of his people thorow the whole world. For the Lord hymselfe hath sayd it.

At the same tyme shall it be sayd: lo, this is our God in whom we put our trust, and he healed vs. This is & Lord that we haue waited for. Let vs reioyce and belice in his health. For the hande of the Lord reacheth vpon this hye. But Moab shall be thershe downe vnder hym, lyke as the straws in troden vnder feete in a dung hye. For he shall stretch out his handes vpon hym, lyke as a wyminer dothe to wy mine. And wyth the mind. Who wil compell me, that I greatly forgetting al fayrfulnes should burne it up at ones with thornes and bushes? Or who wil enforce me to kepe or make peace?

It wil come to this point, that Jacob shall be rooted againe, and Israel shall be grene, and beare flowers, and they shall fill the hole world with theyr fruyte. Smyteth he not his smyter, as euill as he is smyten hym he is murdered? Every man recompenseth with the measure that he receaueth. He must vnto his fore winde as vnto þ daies quity of Jacob be thus reconcyled. And so shall he take away al the scut of his synnes.

As for aulter stones he shall make the as stones beaten to poulver, the groues and pools shall not stand. The strong cities shall be desolate, and the sayre cities shall be left like a wilderness. The carrel shall feede and lye ther, and the shepe shall eat it vp. Ther baruest shall be brent, theyr wyues whiche were theyr betwix when they came for the,
shall be defiled. For it is a people withoute

And ther ſhall the chyldren be choſen oute one by one. Then ſhal the great trompette be blowne, ſo that theſe whych haue bene deſtroyed in the Affrians land, and thoſe that be ſcattered abroad in Egypte, ſhall come and worſhipp the Lord at Jeruſalem upon the both mount.

The Notes of the xxviii. Chapter.

(A) By the ſwearde of the Lord is underſtande the worde of God, and the ſentence of the euerlaſting iudge. Wpith it is the drupl and the power of Ierichoſt ſterne.

(b) Heuathen betokeneth here the drupl after ſome erpoliteurs, albeit that it properly ſpyngeth a Whale, as is ſaid. Job. xl. c. Serpentes do alſo betoken the drupl, becauſe of their ſwiftnes & wilynes. Gen. iii. c. The Heb. underſtand here by ſerpentes myghty bynges and pyntes.

The xxviii. Chapter.

Agaynſt the pyntes of Ephraim, and agaynſt falſe Pyntes and Preachers.

V To be to the crowne of pryde, to the broken Euphrates, and to the ſadynge ſoure, to the gloire of bys pompe, that is upon the top of the plentyous valley, whych men be ouerladen with wyne. Behold, the ſtrengthe and power of the Lord ſhal breake into the land on euer ſyde, lyke a tempeſt of vayne that beateſt downe ſtrong holdes, and lyke an horrible, myghty, and overflowing water. And the proud crown of the broken Euphrates, ſhal be troden under ſoore. And as for the ſadynge ſoure the gloire of bys pompe, whych is upon the top of the plentyous valley, it ſhal happen vnto hym, as to an vntimely fruit, before ſ heauen come. Which as ſoone as it is ſene, is by & by deuoured, or euer it come wel in a mans hand.

W And then the Lord of hoſtes ſhal be a ſoyful (a) crowne, and a glorious garland vnto the remnant of bys people. Vnto the lowly, he ſhal be a ſpyrte of iudgemente, and vnto them that dyue away the enemyes from the gates, he ſhal be a ſpyrte of ſtrength. But they go wrong by the reaſon of wyne, they fall and ſhacker becauſe of ſtronge dyuſe. Yea euen the piſteſſes and prophetes them ſelues go amys, they are broken wth wyne, and weake byrned thowgh ſtrong drinke. They erre in ſcrnyng, and in iudgement they ſaple. For al tables are ſo ful of homit & ſilchpnes that no place is cleane. (b) What is he amonge the, that can teach inſtruct or enſoume the chyldre, which are meaned from ſucke, or taken frō the breaſts, of any other faſhion then? Command that may be commaunded, byd that may be bidden, ſayd that may be ſayd, kept back that may be kept back, here a lye, ther a lye. And therfore the Lord alſo ſhal ſpeake wth liſpynge ſpys, & wth a ſtraunge language vnto this people, to whom he ſpake afore of this maner. Thys ſhal byrge reſt if one reſreſhe the weaſpe, pea, thys ſhal byrnger reſt. But they had no myl to beat. And therfore ſ Lord ſhal ſwee their ſtuburnes. Command that may be commaunded, byd that may be bidden, ſayd that may be ſayd, kept back that may be kept back, here a lye, ther a lye. That they may go forth ſayd backe ward, be broſed, ſtared, and taken. Wpeth ſore beat the word of the Lord, yf mockers that rule the Lordes people, whych is at Jeruſalem. For ye comferte poure ſclues thus: Tuſte, dearh and tre are at a popur, and as ſo; hel, we haue made a condrepon wth it, & thoughte ther breake out any ſore plage, it ſhal not come vpon vs. For wth byſcepte wyl we eſcape, and wth bynibles nes wyl we deſcude our ſclues. Therefore ſayth the Lord God: Behold, I wyl laye a ſtone in Sion, a great ſtone, a coſtly* corner ſtone for a ſure foundatiō, that who ſo putteth bys truſt in t ym, ſhal not be confounded. Argteouſnes wyl I ſet by agayne in the balaunce, and iudgement in the weyghes. The tempeſt of vayne ſhal take awaye your refuge, that ye haue to diſcine wth al, and the overflowing waters ſhal break downe your ſtrong holdes of diſſimulation. Thus the appoyntment that ye haue made wth death, ſhal be done awaye: and the condreion that ye made wth hel ſhal not ſtand. When the great deſtruction goeth thowgh, it ſhal al to tread you. It ſhal take you quyte awaye before it. For it ſhal go forth early in the morning, and conſume onely that dope and that nyghre. And the very ſcare onſy ſhal teache you wher ye deare it. For the bed ſhal be ſo narrowe, that a man can not lye vpon it. And the coſtlyng ſo ſmal, that a man may not minde hym ſelfe cheetn. For the Lord ſhall ſteppe forth as he byd vpon the moſt* Herazin, and ſhal take on as he byd vpon the bare of Sabaon, that he may byrge forth the bys deuice, bys (d) ſtraunge deuice and fulſill bys worke, bys wdderful worke. And therfore make no mockes at it, that your captiuitie increaſe not, for I haue hearde the Lord of hoſtes ſay, that ther ſhal come a ſo darre deſtruction and plage vpon the hole earth. Take heede and heare my voyce, pōder and marke my wordes wel. Sacrb not the houſband mā euer in dar ſeaſō earneſtly to bys land: he moueth and ploweth his ground to ſow. And when he hath made it plaine, he ſoweth it wth ſitches or comſtr. He ſoweth the wheate and barley in theyr place, Milium and Rye alſo in theyr place. And that he maye doo it ryghre, bys God teacherh hym and ſheweth hym. For he readeſt not the ſythes out wth a wain, neyther byrgeth he the carre here and there ouer the comſtr, but he threſeth the ſitches oute wth a ſlarke, and the comſtr wth a cobbe. But the wheate he gryneth to make breade thereof: In as muche as he can not byrge it to paſſe wth treaſdng oute. For neyther the byoofing that the carre wheeles make, nor bys beaſtes can geinde it. The. xxi. Chapter.

The destruction of Jerusalem. Agaynst the commaundmentes of men.

Woe unto the, O Arpell, thou cypre that David man. Take per some peaces, and let some leaves yet passe ouer: the shall Arpell be desreged, so that the shall be heuy and sorrowful, and shall be vnto me even as a Lyon. For I wyl say spee to the round about, and keepe the in wyth towers, and graue vp dykes agaynst the.
And thou shalt be brought low, and speake out of the earth, and thy wordes shall goo dubly out of the ground. Thy voyce shall come out of the earth, lyke the voyce of a wyche, and thy talkynge shall growe oure of the myre. For the multitude of thine enemyes shall be (a) lyke meledust. (b) And the number of thy prynces shall be as the dust that the wynde taketh awaye todayntly.
Thou shalt be dyspyed of the Lord of hostes wyth thundre, earthquake, and wyth a great cracke, with the whyle wynde, tempest, and wyth the flame of a consumynge fyr. But now the multitude of all the people that went out agaynst Arpell, the hole host, the strong holdes, and syege, is lyke a dreame whych appeareth in the nyght. It is lyke as when an hungry mā dreameth that he is eatynge, and when he waketh, he hath nothing: lyke as when a chyrly man dreameth that he is dyspyng, and when he waketh, he is faynte, and his soule vnpacysse.

So is the multitude of all people that muster them selues agaynst the hpl of Sy-on. But ye shall be at your wits end, ye shall be abashed, ye shall shaker and reele to and fro. (c) Ye shall be dronke, but not of wine.
Yea, ye shall tal, but not thowme dronkennesse. For the Lord shall geue you an harde sleepynge spyte, and hold down your eyes:

The Prophecy

namely your prophetes and heads which should see, them shall be couer. And al bys-ons shall be vnto you, as the wordes that stande in a sealed letter, when one offereth it to a man that is learned, and saith: read vs this letter. Then he answereth: I can no reade it, for it is shure. But if it be geuen to one that is not learned, or sayd vnto hym: reade this letter. Then sayth he:
I cannot reade.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: For vs much as the people drawe vnto me with their mouth, and prayse me byghlye with their lippes (where as they heare newe beleffe is farre from me, and the feare whych they owe vnto me, that such they fore wyl I also shewe vnto this people a marueylous terribile and greate thynge.

(Namely this:) I wyl destroy the * wyldome of their wise, and the understanding of their learned men shall perishe. Woe be vnto them that seeke so deepe to hyde their ymagination before the Lord, whyle they rehearse their counsels in darckenes, and say: who seeth vs, or who knoweth vs? Whych ymagination of pourses is euen as when the potters clay taketh awflemente, as though the worke myght say to the worke master: make me not: or as when an earthen vessel sayth of the potter: be understanderd not. (d) Se ye not that it is barbe by, that Libanus shall be turned into Charnel and that Charnel shall be take as a wood?
Then shall deafe men understand the wordes of the booke, and the eyes of the blinde shall se wythout any cloude or darckenesse.
The oppressed shall hold a mery feast in the Lorde, and the poore people shall reioyse in the holy one of Israel.

Then shall the furious people cease, and the mockers shall be put away, and al they that do wronge, shall be plucked out, suche as laboure to drawe men vnto spure, and that dysceane hym, whiche reproue them in the gate, and such as turne good persons to vanytye. And therefore the Lorde (euen the defender of Abraham) saith thus vnto the house of Jacob.

Howe shall not Jacob be ashamed, nor his face confounded, when he seeth among his children (whom my hands haue made) such as valow my name amongs the, that they may sanctifye the holy one of Jacob, and feare the God of Israel, and that they whych afore tyme were of an erroneous syde, haue now understandynge, and that such as before could not speake, are now learned in my lame.

Ye shall be feble, and fall as ye goo, ye shall be renegates for the confusion, feare, hate, and persecution of al men: not for drunkennes or stronge drynke, whiche ye shall want. Some expound this sentence of them that be drunken in hypocrisie and vylly mutation: and of them that be ful of the vyrgineousnes of theyr owne workes.

And that the playne felde (whiche are signified by Chamel) shall become rough and full of bushes. The tyme that Christ should come, is the more tyme he meaneth, whiche the scripture dothe ofte call a more tyme. He shall the vnfertile rough and woddye heathen (whiche is vnderstande by Libanus) he turned vnto the region of Chamel: the congregation of church, and vnto the true seruice of the true God which is vnderstande by Chamel: that fructfull and well tilled felde.

The. xxx. Chapter.

A curse agaynst them that forsake the counsell of God, and speke vnto the counsell of men: he threateneth the reule of the people, whiche after the destruction of Ierusalem went into Egypte.

Vo be to those wyngynge chyldren (sayeth the Lord) whiche seke counsell, but not at me, whiche take a web in hand, but not after my wyl, that they may heape one synne vpon an other. They goo downe into Egypte (and aske me no counsell) to seke helpe at the power of Israhel, and comfort in the shadow of the Egypciens. But Israhels helpe shall be your confusion, and the comforte in the Egypciens shadow shall be your owne shame. Your rulers haue bene at zoan, and your messengers came vnto Hanes. But ye shall all be ashamed of the people that maye not helpe you, whiche shall not byng your strength or comforte, but shame and confusion.

Your beasts haue borne burthens vpon theyr backs toward the south, thow the way that is full of perill & trouble, because of the lyon and lionesse, of the Cockatrice and sharyng dragon. Yea the mules bare your substance, and the Camels brought your treasure vpon theyr crooked backs, vnto a people that can not helpe you. For the Egypciens helpe shall be but vaine and lost. Therefore I tolde you also that your pryde shoulde haue an ende. Wherefore go hence and wyte them chys in theyr tables, and note it in a booke: that it maye remayne by theyr posterity, and be kept.

For it is an obstinate people, vnfaithfull chyldren. Chyldren shall not hear the law of the Lord. They dare say to the prophetes: medle with nothing, & vnto the scribblers, tel vs of nothing for to come, but speake stonde in words vnto vs, & preach vs false things. I read out of the way, go out of the path, turne the holi one of Israel from vs. Therefore thus saith the holi one of Israel: forasmuch as ye haue cast of your beuty, & charyted your selues wyth power & nimble-nes, and put your confidence therein: therefore shall ye haue this myschance agayn for your destruction and fall, lyke as an hie wall that falleth because of some cyst (or blast) whose breaking cometh sodenly.

And your destruction shall be as an earthe pot which breaketh, no man touching it: yea & breaketh so sore, that a man shall not fynde a shewer of it to seche fyre in, or to take water ther wyth out of the pyt. For the Lord God, even the holi one of Israel hath promised thus: Wyth silfiring and rest shall ye be healed, in quietnesse and hope shall your strength be. Notwithstanding ye regard it not, but ye wyll saye: No, for thus are we constrained to lye vpon horses. And therefore shall ye lye, we must ride vpon swift beastes, and therefore your persecuters shall yet be swifter. A thousand of you shall lye for one, or at the most for tene, which do but only geue you euyl wordes: yll ye be desolate as a hypp. mass vpon an hie mountein, and as a beaken vpon an hyl.

Yet standeth the Lord waitinge, that he may haue merce vpon you, & lyftech hym selfe vp, that he may receiue you to grace. For the Lord God is righteous, happy are al they that wait for him. For thus (o thou people of Syon, & ye citizens of Ierusalem) shall ye neuer be in heauines, for doubtlesse he wyll haue merce vpon the. As soone as he heareth the voyce of the cry, he will helpe the. The Lord giueth you the bread of aduersity, & the water of trouble. But thine instructer shal not far from thee: if thine eyes loke vnto thine instructer, & thine ear hark to his word, & cryest after the, & sayest: this is the way, go this, & turne neyther to the right hand, neither to the left.

Moreover if ye destroy the syluer workes of your ydols, & cast away the golde copes that ye dect the with (as sylthynes) & say: get you hence, then wyll be geue rayne to the seede, that ye shall sow in the earth, and geue you bread of the increase of the earth, so that all shall be plentuous and aboundant. Eke catel also shall be fede in the broad medowes, yea, thine oren and agules that tye the ground shall eat good fodder, which is purged with the sanne. Goodly riuers shall flowe out of al hyr mountaynes and hylles. In the daye of the great slaughter when the towers shall fall, the Agone shall shyne as the Sunne. And the Sunne shall be seuen fold, and haue as much shyne as in seuen dayes besyde.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

In that day shall the Lord bynde by the brooked sores of the people, and heale their woundes. Behold, the glorie of the Lord shall come from farre bys face shall burne that no manne shall be able to abyde it, bys lippes shall wagge for verie indignacion, and bys tounge shall be as a consuming fire. Bys breache lyke a vehemente floude of water whiche goeth vp to the throte. That he may take away the people which haue turned them selues to banyte, and the byrdle of erroure, that lyeth in other folkes chawes.

But ye shall sing as ther was in the nyght of the holy solemnity. Ye shall reioyse from your heart, as they that come with þe pyper, when they go vp to the mount of the Lord, vnto the rocke of Isaacell. The Lord also shall set vp the power of bys voyce, and declare bys terribile arme, with bys angere countenance, yea and the flame of the consuming fyre, with the earthquake, tempest of wynde, and harle stones. Then shall the Assyrians feare also, because of the voyce of the Lord wherby shall smyte hym with the rod. And the same rod wherby the Lord wil send vpon hym, shall moue the whole foundation: with trumpe, with noyse of war and battaile to destroy. For he hath prepared the fyre of payne from the begynnyng, yea euen for kynge also. Whys hathe he made depe and wyde, the noysshing therof is fyre and wood innumerable, wherby the breath of the Lord kyndleth as it were a marche of byrmstone.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

He curseth them that forsake God, and seeke for the helpe of men.

Vnto be vnto them that go down into Egypt for helpe, and truste in horses, and comfort them selues in chariots, because they be many, and in horsemen, because they be lusty and strong. But they regard not the holpe one of Israel, and they aske no question at the Lord. Where as he neuertheles plageth the wycked, and yet goeth not from bys woorde, when he sepyeth forth and taketh the victorie agaynst the household of the froward, and agaynst the helpe of eury doers. Nowe the Egyptians are men, and not God, and they horses fleshe, and not spirite. And as soone as the Lord stretcheth out bys hand, then shall the healer fall, and he that shoulde haue bene helped, and shall altogether be destroyed. For thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Lyke as the Lyon, or Lyons whelpe roareth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afayed thowgh he the multitude of shepherdes cry out vpon hym, ne yet he abashed for al the heape of them: So shall the Lord of hostes come downe from the mount of Sion, and defend, bys byll. Lyke as byrdes flutter about their nestes, so shall the Lord of hostes kepe, saue, defende, and deliuer Ierusalem. Therefore, O ye chylidren of Isaacell, turne agayne, lyke as ye haue exceded in your going backe. For in that day euerp man shall cast out his ydols of syluer and golde, whiche ye haue made with your synful hande. (a) Also also shall be layne with the swerde, not with a mans swerde. A swerd shall deuoure hym, but no mans swerde. And he shall flye from the slaughter, and bys seruantes shall be taken prisoners. He shall go for fear to his strong holds, and bys princes shall flye from bys badge. Whys hathe the Lord spoken, whose lycht burneth in Sion, and his fyre in Ierusalem.

(a) Also also shall be layne with the swerde &c. The Prophet should here come to prophesie of the great destruction that happened vnto Sennacherib. ii. Paral. xxxi. c. i. E. i. Chap. xxxi. g. whiche was done by the swerd of the angell, not by the swerd of man, as ye may ther see. Sennacherib was the king of Assyria, and therefore is the destruction of the Assyrians whiche happened vnder hym, signified by this woode. Also. Some (because the Prophet saith before in the text, moueth the people to forsake Idols) expound it thus: Not by our ydols, not by our strength, not by mannes helpe: whiche al maye be called the swerd of man: that our spiritual enemy which is signified by this perpy: but by the power of God, and the invincible swerd that can not be conquered which the angel slew sixty thousand land in one nyght. The. xxxi. Chapter.

The conditions of good rulers and officers

Behold, the kyng that gouerne after the rule of rightuousnes, and the princes that rule accordyng to the ballaunce of equitye. He shall be vnto men as a defence for the wylde, and as a refuge for the tempest, lyke as a ryuer of water in a thursty place, and the shadow of a great rocke in a hye land. The eyes of the sepyng shall not be dymme, and the eares of them that heare, shall take diligent heed. The heart of the vniuersite shall attayne to knowledge, and the vniuersite tounge shall speake plainly and distinctly. Then shall the mygards be no more called gentle, ne þe churles bydetall. But the churle wyll be churlyshly mynded, & his heart wil worke euil & play the hypocrite, & imagin abhominacions agaynst God, to make þe byggye leane, & to withhold dyne from the thursty. These are the peryllous weapons of the couetous, these be bys shameful counsailes: that he maye begyle the poore with dysceitfull wordes, yea euen ther as he shoulde geue sentence with the poore. But the liberal person ymagyneth honest thynges, and cometh by with honesty.

A rype (ye rype and ydle cittytes) harken vnto my voyce. Ye carelesse cittytes, marke my wordes. After peaces and daies shall ye be be brought in leate. O ye carelesse cytyes. For harveste shall be oute, and the stappes gatherynge shall not come, O ye cytyes, ye shall be ashamed and remoued: when ye se barrennes, the nakednes and preparynge to warre: Ye shall knocke vpon your brestes, because of the pleasaunt felds, and because of the fruitful vineyard. My peoples fildes shall bring thornes & thistles, for in euery house is voluptuousnes, and in the cyties wilfulness. The palaces also shall be broken, & the greatly occupied cytyes, desolate. The towers and bulwarkes, shall become denyes for euermore, the pleasure of mulcs shall be touned to pasture for shepe: vnto þe tyme þe spirit be powred vpon vs from aboue.

D Then shall the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the plenteous fild shall be reckoned for a wood. Then shall equys dwell in the desert, and cygheuousnes in a futefull lande. And the reward of cygheuousnesse shall be peace, and her fruite rest and quyetnesse for euer. And my people shall dwell in the Innys of peace, in my tabernacle and pleasure, wher ther is synng in them all. And when the bad faileth, it shall sal in the wood and in the cytye. O how happy shall ye be when ye shall safely som your scde besyde al waters, and dryue thither the feete of your oxen and asses.

The. lxxiii. Chapter.

D The synng agaynst the Afflicions. A description of them that shall be the Royd.

A Therefore woe be vnto thee, o robber, shalt not thou be robbed also? and vnto thee that laiest wayte, as who saie, ther should no waite be layed for thee? Woe vnto thee whych dost hurte, enen so shalt thou be hurt also. And as thou laiest waite, so shalt wayte be layed for thee also.

D Lord be merciful vnto vs, we wayte for thee. Thine arme is at a point to visite vs, but be thou our helpe in þe tyme of trouble. Beant that the people may flie at the angre of thy voice, and that at thy vprising the Gentyls may be scattered abroad, and that they (a) spople may be gathered, as the greshoppers are comenly gathered together into the pytte. Stande vpon Lord, thou that dwellest on hye. Let Sion be filled with equyte and cygheuousnesse.

D Lette truthe and faythfulnesse be in her tyme: power, healtbe, wysdome, knowledge, and the feare of God are her treasure. Beholde, they aungels crye with oute, the messengers of peace wepe bitterly. The stretes are waste, ther walketh no man therein, the appoyntment is broken, the cytyes are despyed, they are not regarded, the desolate eache is in beauty. Lybanus taketh it but for a spoite, that it is hewen downe: Saron is lyke a wilderness: Basan and Charnell are turned vpsyde downe. And therefore sayth the

D Lord: I wyl vp, not e wyl I get vp, now wyl I acyse. (b) Ye shall conceyue subtille and beate straw, and pour (c) spyrte shall be the fyre, that it maye consume you: and the people shall be burnt lyke lyne, and as thornes burne that are vnto men of, and cast in the fyre.

D Nowe praye to ye that ate sacre of, nowe I doo for them, and consyder my glorie, ye that be at hande. The synners at Sion are strayed, a sodayne fearfulness is come vpon the popoles. What is he among vs, saie they, that wyl dwell by that consuming fyre? Whych of vs may abyde that euerslastyng beate? He that leadech a godly lyfe (say I) and speaketh the truthe: He that abhorreth to dooe violence and dysceite: he that keepeth his hand that he touche no reward: whych stoppeth his eares that he heare no counsell against the innocent: whych holdeth downe his eyes that he se none euyl.

D Be it is that shall dwell on hye, whose sauegarde shall be in the true rocke, to him shall be geuen the cyghre true meate and drynke. His eyes shall se the kyng in his glorie, and in the wyde worlde, and his beate shall delyre in the seate of God.

D * What shall then become of the synners of the Gentout? What of hym that teacheth chylidren? There shalt thou not see a people of a strange tounge to haue so dysfused a language that it maye not be vnderstand: neyther so straunge a speech but it shall be perceyued.

D Ther shall syon be sene, the head cytye of our solempne feastes. There shall thyne eyes see Iherusalem, that glayous habytation: the tabernacle that neuer shall remoue, whose nayles shall neuer be rakt out worlde wythoute ende, whose cordes euer cyghon shall neuer corrupte: for the glayous mathepe of the Lord shall ther be present amonge vs. In that place wher saye broade ryuers and streames are. Shall neyther Galey rowe, nor great ship sayle. For þe Lord shall be out captayn, the Lord shall be our lawe gyuer. The Lord shall be our kyng, and be hym selfe shall be our sautour. Ther are the cordes so layed abroad, that they cannot be better. The mast set vp of such a facyon, that no banner nor sayle hangeth thereon: but there is dealed greate spople, yea lame men runne after the pray. There speth no manne that sayeth: I am speke, but al euyl is taken awaye from the people that dwell there.

The xxxiiii. Chapter.

The last destruction of the Synagoge, in which the kingdom and priesthood of the people was translated to the Church and congregation of Christ.

Come ye Beate and beate, take hede ye people. Hearken thou earth, and al that is therein: thou rounde compass and al that groweth thereupon, for the lord is angry with al people, and hys dyspleasure is kyndled agaynst alle the multitude of them, to curse them, and to destroye them. So that they shal be cast out, and theyr bodies shal be as chaffe: that euen the very hills shal be mete wth the bloud of them. Al y stars of heauen shal be consumed, and the heauyn shal fold together like a rol, and al y stars therof shal fall, lyke as the leaues fall from the vyues and sytrees. For my swearde (saye he) shal be barbed in heauen, and shal immediatly come downe vpon Idu-mea, and vpon the people whiche I haue cursed for my vengeance.

B And the Lords sword shal be ful of blud, and be rusty wth the fatnes and bloud of lambes and goates, wth the fatnes of the kynders of wyethers. For the Lord shal kyl a great offering in Besra, and in the land of Idumea. There shal the Thyraxes fall wth the Bulles (that is wth the gyffes) and theyr land shal be washed wth bloud, and theyr ground corrupte wth fatnesse. Unto the alse (O Sion) shal come the day of the vengeance of God, and the reere when thynne owne iudgements shal be recompensed. Thy founteynes shal be turned to pytch, and thynne earthe to byrmstone, and therwyt shal the land be kyndled, so that it shal not be quenched day nor nyght: but smoke euermore, and so forth to lye waste. And no man shal go thorow thy lande for euer: but Bellicens, Strokes, great oules, and Trauens that haue it in possession, and dwell therein.

For God shal spred out the lyne of desolation vpon it, & weygh it wth the stones of empynes. When kynges are called vpon, ther shal be none, and al princes shal be away. Thornes shal growe in theyr palaces, nettels and thysels in theyr stoghol-des, that the dragons may haue theyr pleasure therein, and that they may be a court for Estriches. Ther shal Traunge bysures, and monstrous beasts meete one another, and the mylde keepe compaigne together. Ther shal the Lamia lie, and haue her lodgynge. There shal the hedgehog build, & be ther at home, and bring forth his yong ones. There shal the kytes come together & be one to hys lyke.

Seeke thorow the Scripture of the Lord, and read it. There shal none of these thynges be left out, there shal not one (ne such lyke) faple. For what hys mouth commaundeth, that same doth hys spryte gather together (or fulfyller). Vpon whom so euer the lot falleth, or to whom be deaseth it, & whiche lyne: these shal possesse the endurancie from generation to generation, and dwell therein.

For y glory of Libanus, the beuty of Chamel & Saton shal be geuen her. These shal knowe the honoure of the Lorde, and the maiesty of our God. And therfore strengthen the weake handes, and comforte the feable knees.

Say vnto the that are of a fearful herte: be of good chere and fear not. Behold your God cometh to take vengeance and to rewarde. God cometh hys own self, and wyl deliuer you. Then shal the eyes of the blynde be lightened, and the care of y deaf opened. Then shal the lame man (b) leape as an harte, and the domme mans tounge shal geue thanks.

In the wyldernes also ther shal welles spring, and founteynes of water in the desert. The drye ground shal turne to crytts, and the thyrste to springes of water. Where as Dragons dwelt afore, ther shal growe sweete floures and greene rushes. There shal be foote pathes, and common stetes, this shal be called the (c) holy way. No vn-cleane pect shal go thorow it, for the Lord hym selfe shal goo wth them that waye, and the ygnorance shal not erre. There shal be no spon, and no rauynge beaste shal come therein, nor be ther, but men shal go there free and safe. And the redemed of the Lord shal conuerte, and come to Spon wth thanks geuyng. The xxxvi. Chapter.

Jerusalem is assiged by Sennacherib, in the tyme of kynge Hezekiah.

iii Reg.
xxviii.

ii. Paral.
xxii. a.

At the xliiij. yer of king Ezechias, came Sennacherib kynge of Assyria downe, to laye siege vnto all the stronge Cityes of Iuda. * And the kynge of the Assyrians sent Rabshakeh from Lachys toward Jerusalem against kynge Ezechias, wth a greuousse veste, wherby he set hym by the con- duit of the ouer pole, in þe way that goeth thowme þe sulles lande. And so ther came forth vnto hym Eliakim Belshahs sonne, the president, Sobna the scribe, and Ioab Asaphs sonne the secretarie.

And Rabshakeh sayd vnto the: Tell Ezechias that the great kynge of Assyria sayth thus vnto hym: What presumptiō is this that thou trustest vnto? Thou sayest peraduenture, thou hast counsel & power enoughe to maynteyne this warre: or els wherfore trustest thou, that thou castest thy selfe of frome? Lo, thou puttest thy truste in a broken staffe of a reede (I meā Egypt) which be that leaneth vpon it, it goeth into hys hande, and shoteh hym thowme.

When so is Pharaoh the kynge of Egypt vnto all them that truste in hym. But if thou woldest saye to me: we truste in the Lorde our God. A goodly God in dedde: whose bygd places and alters Ezechias toke downe, and commaunded Iuda and Jerusalem to worshyppe only before the alter. Abide the, thou hast made a condic- tion wth my Lorde the kynge of Assyria: that he shulde geue the two thousand horses: art thou able to set men vpon the? Sepunge nowe that thou canst not respise the power of the smallest prince that my Lorde hath, howe darest thou trust in the chariots and horsemen of Egypt? More ouer, thoukest þe I am come downe by thet to destroy this lande wthout þe Lorde's wyl? The Lorde said vnto me, go down into the lande that thou mayst destroye it.

Then sayd Eliakim, Sobna, and Ioab vnto Rabshakeh: Speake to vs thy sec- uantes (we pray the) in the Syrians lan- guage, for we vnderstand it wel. And speake not to vs in the Jewes tounge, lest þe folke hear, wherby they shal be wroth. Then an- swered Rabshakeh: Thouke þe that the kynge sent me to speake this oulpe to you? Harbe he not sente me to them also þe vpon the wal: that they be not compel- led to eate their owne donge, and drinke theyr owne stile wth you?

And Rabshakeh stode styll, and cryed wth a loude voice in the Jewes tounge, & sayed. Howe take hede howe the greates kynge of the Assyrians gyueth you warnynge.

Thus sayeth the kynge: Lette not Ezechias disceyne you, for he shal not be habile to deliuer you. Wherfore let not Ezechias as cōferte you in the Lorde, wherby he saith: The Lorde wthout doubt shal defende vs, and shal not geue ouer this cyrie into the hande of the king of the assyrians, be- leue hym not. But thus sayth the kynge of Assyria: Obtene my fauour, enclayne vnto me: so may euery man enioy his byneparde and syggerces, and drinke the water of hys cesterne, vnto the tyme that I come my selfe, and byynge you into a lande that is lyke your owne: wher in is wheate and wyne, wherbye is bothe lomen & pch fede, and plantes wth byneparces. Let not Ezechias disceyne you when he sayeth vnto you: the Lorde shal deliuer vs.

Might the gods of the Gentiles kepe euery mannes lande from the power of þe kynge of the Assyrians? Where is the God of Demath & Arphad? Where is the God of Sepharuaim? And who was habile to defend Samaria out of my hande? Or which of all the Goddes of the landes, hath deli- uered their countreye out of myr power, so that the Lorde shulde deliuer Jerusalem fro my hande? Vnto this Ezechias mes- sengers helde their tounge, and answered not one word: for the king had charged the that they shulde geue hym none answer. So came Eliakim Eliashs sonne the pre- sident Sobna the scribe, & Ioab Asaphs sonne the secretarie, vnto Ezechias wth rent clothes, & told him þe wordes of Rab- shakeh.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

Ezechias humbleth himselfe before the lord. The arme of Sennacherib is layde of the Angel of the Lord, and he hym selfe is kyl- led of hys own sonnes.

Vhen Ezechias heard that, he tēte his clothes, and put on a sackcloth, & wente into the temple of the Lorde.

But he sent Eliakim the president, Sobna the scribe wth the eldeste priestes clo- thed in sacke, vnto the Prophet Esay the sonne of Amoz, and they sayd vnto hym: Thus sayed Ezechias: This is the day of trouble, of plage, & of wrath, lyke as when a chyld commeth to the birth, but the wo- man hath no power to byynge it forth.

The Lorde thy God, no doubt, hath wel consydered the wordes of Rabshakeh, wherby hys Lorde the kynge of Assyria hath sent to despy and blasphemie the liuinge God, wth such wordes as the Lorde thy god hath herd eryght wel. And therfore lyft vp thy prayer for the remnaunce that yett are lefte. So the secuautes of kynge Ezechias came to Esay.

And Esay gaue the this answer: say thus vnto your Lorde: thus saith the Lorde: Be not afraied of the wordes that thou hast herde, wherby the kynge of Assyria's secuautes haue blasphemed me. Beholde, I wil cause a wind go ouer him:

Ex. lviij.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

as soone as he heareth it, he shall go again into his countrey, there will I destroy him with the sword. Some when Isababek returned, he founde the kynge of Assyria layinge siege to Robuab, for he hadde understode, that he was departed from Lachys. For there came a rumoure, that Sennacherib kynge of Ethiopia was come forth to war agaynst hym.

E And when the kynge of Assyria hearde that he sent other messengers to king Eszechias, with this commaundment: Say thus to Eszechias kynge of Iuda: Let not thy God deceyue thee in whom thou dost trust, and sayest: Jerusalem shall not be given into the handes of the kynge of Assyria. For thou knowest well howe the kyniges of Assyria haue handled all the landes that they haue subiected, & hopest thou to escape? Were the people of the Gentiles (whome my progenitors conquered) deliuered at any tyme thowme these goddes? As namely, Bozan, Baran, Iezeph, and the chylde of Eden, whiche dwell at Tbalassar. Where is the kynge of Hamath, and the kynge of Arpad, and the kyng of the cite of Sepharuaim, Ena and Aua?

Some when Eszechias hadde receyued the letter of the messengers, and red it, he wente by into the house of the Lorde, and opened the letter before the Lorde. And Eszechias prayed before the Lorde, on this manner: O Lorde of hostes, thou God of Israel, whiche dwellest upon Cherubinne. Thou art the God that onely is God of all the kyngdomes of the world for thou onely hast created beautie & etid. Encline thine eare, Lorde, and consider, open thine eyes, O Lorde, and se, and ponde all the words of Sennacherib, whiche he hath sente bys embassage to blasphemie & lusing god.

B It is true, O Lorde, that the kyniges of Assyria haue conquered all kyngdomes and landes, and caste theyr goddes in the fire. For my standynge those were no goddes, but the workes of mens handes, of wood or stone, therefore haue they destroyed them. Delouer us then, O Lorde our God, from the handes of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the earth may knowe that thou onely arte the Lorde. Then say the sonne of Amoz, sent unto Eszechias, saying: Thus saith the Lorde God of Israel: wher as thou hast made thy prayer unto me, as touchynge Sennacherib, this is the answer, that the Lorde hath given concernynge hym.

E Despyled arte thou and mocked, o (a) daughter of Sion, he hath shakyn his head at the o daughter of Jerusalem. But thou Sennacherib, whome hast thou destroyed and blasphemed? and agaynst whom hast thou lysed up thy voyce, and exalted thy proude lookes? euen agaynst the holpe one of Israel. Thou with thy seruantes hast blasphemed the Lorde, and thus holdest thou of thy selfe: I couer the hye mountaynes and spydes of Libanus with my boylemen.

And there will I cutte downe the hygh Cedre trees, and I sayest fyre trees. I will by into the heigth of it, and into the chiefe of the tymbre woddes. If there be no water, I will graue and drynke. And as for waters of defence, I shall dry them by with the fete of myne boyle. Yes (sayest thou) hast thou not herd what I haue taken in hande, and broughte to passe of old tyme? What same will I do nowe also: waste, destroye, and bynne stronge cityes vnto heapes of stoues. For theyr inhabitours shall be lyke lambe me, broughte in fear & chounded. They shall be like gras and grene herbes in the felde, like the bape upon house toppes, that withereth afore it be growen by.

I knowe thy wayes, thy goynge forth, and thy comynge home, yea and thy maner: I knowe agaynst me. Therefore thy fury shal be agaynst me, & thy pride is come before me. I will put a * ruge in thy nose, and a bridle in the chawes of the, & turne the aboute euen the same waye thou comest. I will geue the also this token, O Eszechias, this yere shalt thou eate that is kept in store, and the next yere such as groweth of hym selfe, and in the thirde yere thou shalt sow and reape, yea thou shalt plante vineyardes, and enter the frutes therof.

And such of the house of Iuda as are escaped, shall come together, and the remnant shall take coate beneth, and bring forth the frute aboute. For the escaped shall go oute of Jerusalem, and the remnant from the mounte Sion.

And thus shall the gelousye of the Lorde of hostes bynne to passe. Therefore thus saith the Lorde, concernynge the kyng of the Assyrians: He shall not come into the cite, and shall shooe no arrowe into it, there shall no chylde hurt it, neyther shall they digge aboute it. The same waye that he came, shall he retourne, and not come at this cite, sayeth the Lorde.

And I will kepe, & saue the cite (sayeth he) for myne owne, and for my seruante Dauids sake.

* Thus the angell wente forth, and slew of the Assyrians booke, an hundred foure score and fyue thousande. And when men arose by earlye (at Jerusalem,) they holde all laye ful of dead bodies. So Sennacherib the kyng of the Assyrians brake by and dwelt at Ninus. Afterwarde he chaunced, as he prayed in the temple of Asrahys God, Adramalech, and Sarsar his owne sonnes, slewe hym with the swerde and fledde into the lande of Ararat. And Asar Hadon his sonne raygned after hym.

temple. For the dead and buried can not loue & prayse the, wryth theyr materiall tonges or her-tes. Neyther can my death, net my buryenge, be at this season for the settinge oute of the glasse. For all the world will be feared with this thy iudgement: And the wicked will impute my death to the ouerthrowinge of Idolatrye, & to the puttinge downe of the byasen Serpente.

(c) They that go downe into the graue prayse not thy truth, that is, hope not for the truth of thy worldly promises, whiche thou hast promised vnto suche as walke vnder the shadowe of the lawe. But if thou graunte a man his lyfe, if anye man recouer his sicknesse and lyue: he shall acknowledge thy goodnes euen as I now geue thanks vnto the for the benefite of my health, which thou hast restored me.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Ezechias is reproued of Esay, because he hid his treasure vnto the Embassadors of Babylon.

At the same time Merodach Baladā, Paladams sonne, kynge of Babilō, sent letters & presentes to Ezechias. For he vnderstode how he had bene sicke, & was recouered agayne. * And Ezechias was glad thereof, & shewed them the commodities of his treasure, of siluer, of gold, of spices and cotes, of precious oyles, al that was in his cupboards and treasure houses. Ther was not one thyng in Ezechias house, and so thorowe oute all his kyngedome, but he let them se it.

Then came Esay the Prophet to kynge Ezechias, & sayed vnto hym. What haue the men sayde, & from whence came they vnto the? Ezechias answered: they came oute of a larte cōstrey vnto me, out of Babylon. Esay sayd: what haue they looked vpon in thyne house? Ezechias answered: All that is in myne house haue they sene: & ther is nothinge in my treasure, but I shewed it the. Then sayd Esay vnto Ezechias: Vnderstande the woide of the Lord of hostes.

* Beholde the tyme will come that euer thyne house whiche is in thyne house, and al that thy progenytours haue layd vp in store vnto thyne daye, shall be caried to Babylon, and nothyng left behynde. Thyne sayeth the Lord. Yea and part of thy sonnes that shall come of the, and whom thou shalt get, shall be caried hence, and become geilded chamberlaines in the kynge of Babilōs court: The sayd Ezechias to Esay: Now God proouere his own word, which he hath spokē. He sayd moreouer: so there be peace and saythfulnesse in my tyme.

The xl. Chapter.

The conuynge of Sainte John Baptiste. The preparation of the Apostles. The callinge of the Gentiles.

Be of good cheere my people, be of good cheere (sayth your God) comforte Ierusalem, and tell (a) her that her trauaile is at an ende, that her offence is pardoned, that she hath receyued of the Lordes hand sufficient correction for all her synnes. A voyce cryeth: prepare the waye for the Lord in the wilderness, make straight the path for our God in the desert. Let al vales be exalted, & euery moūntayne & hyl be layed low. What so is crooked, let it be made straight, and let the rough places be made playne fyeldes.

(b) For the glorie of the Lord shall appeare, and all fleche shall se it, for wher the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: Some cry. And I sayd: what shall I cry? Then spake it: that all fleche is graske, and that (c) all beauty thereof, is as the floure of a field.

The graske is withered, the floure falleth away. Euen so is the people as graske, wher the byrd of the lord blaweth vpon them. The graske withereth, or the floure falleth away: But the worde of our God endureth for euer. Moreouer the voyce cryed thus.

(d) Go vnto the hill (o Sion) thou that bringest good tydings, lift vp thy voyce with power, o thou preacher Ierusalem.

Lift it vp without feare, & say vnto the cryes of Iuda: behold your god, behold the Lord, euen the almyghty shall come with power, & beate rule with his arme. Behold he bringeth his treasure with him, & his workes go before hym. He shall fede his flocke lyke an herd man. He shall gather the lambs together with his arme, and carie them in his bosome, & shall bynde the entreate those that beare younge. &

Who hath holden the waters in his fyst? Who hath measured heuen with his spanne, & hath comprehended all the earth of the world in three fingers? Who hath wyped the mountaynes & byls? Who hath reformed the mind of the Lord? Or who is of his cōseil to teache hym? At whos hand he asked cōseil, to make him vnderstand, & to leane hym the way of iudgement: to teach hym science & to instruct hym in the way of vnderstanding? Behold, all people are in cōparison of hym, as a droppe to a bucket full, & are counted as the least thyng of the balace weyerb. Beholde, the Isles are in cōparison of hym, as the shadowe of the sunne beame. Libanus is not sufficient to minister fyre for his offeryng, and all the bestes thereof are not pough to one sacrifice. All people in comparison of hym are reckened as nothyng, yea vayne banitie and emptinesse.

To whom then will ye liken God? or what similitude will ye set vnto hym? Shall the caruer make hym a carued image? and shall the goldsmith couer him with golde, or caste hym into a forme of syluer plates? Moreouer shall the ymage maker (that the poore men whiche is disposed maye haue some thyng to set vp also) seke oute and chose a tree, that is not rotten, and carue of it an ymage that moueth not? Know ye not this? Herde ye neuer of it? Hath it not bene preached vnto you from the begynnyng? Haue ye not bene informed of this sithens the founda-dation of the erth was layde, that he spyt-terh upon the circle of the world and that all the inhabitantes of the worlde are in comparyson of hym, but as grethoppers?

That he spreadeth oute the beaues as a tent to dwell in: that he byngeth wimces to nothing, and the iudges of the erth to duſte: ſo that they be not planted nor ſowen agayne, neyther they ſtockeroted agayne in the earth: For as ſoone as he bloweth upon them, they wither and fade away, lyke the ſtaw in a whiclewynde.

To whome nowe myll ye lyken me, and whome ſhall I be like ſaith the holy one?
Liſte by your eyes on hys, and conſyder.
* Who hath made theſe thynges, which come out by ſo greate heapes? and he can call them all by theyr names. For theris nothyng byd vnto the greatneſſe of hys power, ſtrength, and myght. Some may then Iacob rhycke, or how maye Iſraell ſaye: My wayes are bydde frome þe Lord, and my God knoweth not of my iudgementes. Knoweſt thou not, or haſte thou not herd, that the everlaſtinge God the Lorde whiche made all the corners of the earthe, is neither wele nor ſaure: and that hys myſdomme cannot be comprehended: but that he giveth ſtrength vnto the wey, and power vnto the ſaynt? Chyldren are wele and ſaure, and the ſtrongest ma-fall. * But vnto them that haue the Lorde before theyr eyes, ſhall ſtregthe be increaſed. Eagles wynges ſhall growe vpon the:
When they runne, they ſhall not falle: and when they goo, they ſhall not be wey.

If these thynges, and that the holy one of Israel bringeth them to passe. Stande at your cause sayth the Lord, & bringe forth your strongest ground: consuleth the kyng of Jacob? Let the Goddes come forth to them selues, and shewe us the thynges that are past what they be: let them declare them unto us that we may take the to herte, & know them here after. Further lette them shewe us thynges for to come, and tell us what shall be doone hereafter: so shall we knowe that they be goddes. Shewe some thyng either good or bad: so wyl we both knowe the same, and tell it out.

Beholde, ye goddes are of nought, and your makinge is of noughte, but abominacion hath chosen you. Hearethelste * I have made up one from the north, & he shal come. And another from the East, whiche shall call upon my name, and shall come to the princes, as the porter to his clay, and as the potter treadeth downe the myre:

Who told that afoie?

So wyl we confesse and saye, that he is rightuous. But ther is none that sheweth or declareth any thyng, there is none also that heareth your wordes. Beholde, I wyl friste graunte them of Sion and Jerusalem to be euangelistes. But when I consider, there is not one amonge them that prophesyeth, neyther (when I aske hym) that answereth me one worde. Lo, theyked are they and saye, with the thynges also that they take in hand: yea worde are they, and emptie, with theyr Images together.

The Notes.

(a) I bringe forth the floudes in the hylls. &c.
In hyge places that be easie to se, wherunto flythe more sone come, wyl I prepare not lytell welles, but great floudes of holy doctrine in playne felde and lowe places, (sprynge & fountayne) that the lame or clouthfull shall haue no excuse, but that all the thyng may come to the worde of lyfe.

(b) I turne the wyldernes into ryuers &c. That is: I makethe doctrine of truth so general and easy to all men, that wher as were before wast wyldernes by which vnderstand the terours of the heath wherewith they had made all un-fruitfull and drye) that now by the grace of the holpe ghost, be ryuers of the water of verite.
Where all was full of Idolatrye, of abomination and of synnyng creatures: there shall the herdes of the chosen be watered with godly wylsome thow the Gospel a glad sprynge: & shal be indued with sayth, wherby they maye bothe profit them selues and other: and so shall they be fruitful. Wyldernes is ofte thus take, as before in the. xxv. a.

an oute coper, nor an hye mynded person.
Hys voyce shal not be hearde in the streets.
A dyoused rede shal be not breake, and the smokinge flar shal be not quene: but faith-full and truly shal he geue iudgemente.
He shal neither be ouersene ne basped, that he maye restore rightousnes vnto the earth:
and the Gentiles also shal kepe his lawes.
For thus sayeth God the Lord vnto hym (euen he that made heauens, and spredde them abroad, and set forth the earth with her increase: whiche geueth bread vnto the people that is in it, and to the that dwell therin) I the Lord haue called the in right-eousnes, and ledde the by the hande.

Therefore wyl I also defende the, & geue the for a covenant of the people, and to be the lighte of the Gentyles. What thou mayste open the eyes of the blinde, lette out the prisoners, and them that sit in darknes, oute of the dongeon house. I my selfe, whose name is the Lord, whiche geue my power to none other, neyther myne honoure to the Goddes, shewe you these new thynges, and tel you them: or they come, for olde thynges also are come to passe.

Synge therefore vnto the Lord, a new songe of thankes grynge: blome oute his prayse vnto the ende of the worlde.
They that be vpon the sea, and al that is therin, prayse him, the Isles, and they that dwell in them. Let the wyldernes with her cryes lyfte vp her voyce, the towne also that be in Cedar.

Let them be glad that sitte by the rockes of Aene, and let them crye downe frome the hyge mountaynes: as cryynge almightie vnto the Lord, & magnifyinge him amonge the Gentiles. The Lord shal come forth as a giant, and take a Romake to hym lyke a scche man of warre. He shall crys and cry, and ouercome his enemyes.

I haue sone houlden my peace (sayeth the Lord) should I therfore be aspyl, & kepe silence for euer? I wyl cry lyke a traue-lynge woman, and once wyl I destroye and deuoure. I wyl, make waste both mountayne and hyll, and dye vp euery grene thyng that groweth thereon. I wyl dye vp the floudes of water, and dryue vp the ryuers. I wyl bringe the blinde into a strete that they knowe not: and lede them into a fote pathe, that they are ignoraunt in. I shal make darkness lyghthe before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streyght. These thynges wyl I doo, & not forget them. And therefore let the con-uerter, and be ashamed earnestly, that hope in Idolles, and saye to facioned Images:
ye are our goddes.

Deare, o ye deafe men, and sharpen your syghtes to se, o ye blinde. But who is blinder then my seruaunt? Or so deafe as my messengers whome I sente vnto them? For who is so blinde as my people and they that haue the rule of them?

They are lyke as if þu understodest muche, and keptest thy tongue: or if one herde me, but were not obedient. The Lord be merciful vnto the for his rightuousnes sake, and that his word might be magnified & praised. But it is a mischeuous and wicked people. Their yonge men belonge all to the snare, and shall be put into prison houses. They shall be carped away captiue, & no man shall leuse the. Euer shall be trodden vnder foote, and no man shall labour to bring them agayne. But who is he among you that pandereth this in his mynde, that considereth it, and taketh it for a warning in tyme to come?

Who suffered Jacob to be trodden vnder foote, and Israel to be spoyled? Did not the Lord? Nowe haue we sinned agaynst hym, & haue had no desyre to walke in his wayes, neether ben obedient vnto his law. Therefore hath he poured vpon vs his wrathful displeasure, and strong baraste, whiche maketh vs haue to doo on euery syde, yett wyl we not understande: He burneth vs vp, yett synketh it not in to oure heetes.

The. xliii. Chapter.

God promisseth to sende his Christ, whiche shall deliuer his people. He forgiveth synnes for his owne sake.

But now the Lord that made the, O Jacob, and he þu fashioned the, O Israel, saith thus: Feare not, for I wyl defende the. I haue called the by name, thou art myne owne. When thou wentest in þu water, I was by the, & the strong floudes shoulde not plucke the away. When thou walkest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, & the flame shall not kindle vpon the. For I am the Lord thy God, the holpe one of Israel, thy saviour. I gaue Egypte for thy deliuerance, the Assyrians and the Sabees for thee: bicause þu wast deare in my sight, and because I ser by the, and loued the. I pulled all men for the, & deliuered bo all people for thy sake, that thou shouldest not feare, for I was with the. I wyl bringe thy seede from the East, and gather the together from the West. I wyl saye to the North, let goo. And to þu South: kepe not backe: but bringe me my sonnes from far, and my daughters from the endes of the world: Namely all those that be called after my name: For the haue I created fashioned and made for myne honoure.

Bring forth the that people, whether they haue eyes, or be blind, deafe, or haue eares. All nations shall come in one, and be gathered in one people. But whiche amonge ponder goddes shall declare such thinges, and tell vs what is to come? Lette them bring thei witnessses, so that they be free: for the men shall hear it, & saye it is trouth. But I bring you witnessses (saith þu Lord) euen those that are my seruantes, to whome I haue chosen to thintene that ye myght be certified, & geue me saythfull credence:

pea and to conspyre: that I am he before whom there was neuer any God, & that there shall be none after me. I am onely the Lord, & withoute me is there no saviour. I geue warrynge, I make hole, I reache you that ther shoulde be no steunge God amonge you. And thes recorde muste ye heare me vnto selues, saith the Lord, & I am God. And eue he am I from the begynnyng, and there is none that can take aye thyng oute of my hande. And what I doo, can no man chaunge.

Thus saith the Lord, the holpe one of Israel your redemer: For your sake I wil sende to Babylon, and bringe all the strongest of the from thence: Namely the Chaldees þu bolle the of thei wyppes: Euen I the Lord your holpe one whiche haue made Israel. I am your kynge. Moreouer thus saith þu Lord, eue he þu maketh a way in the sea, & a foote pathe in the myghtye waters: whiche bringeth forth the charrettes and horses, the bolle & the power, & they maye fall a slepe, and neuer rise, and be extinct lyke as towne is quenched.

Ye remembre not thynges of olde, and regarde not thynges that is passe. (a) Therfore beholde: I shall make a newe thinge, and shortly shall it appere, ye shall well knowe it, I haue tolde it you before, but I wyl tell it you agayne. I wyl make streetes in the deserte, & riuers of waters in the wyldernes. (b) The wyld beasts shall worshippe me: the Dragon and the Ascherche. For I shall geue water in the wyldernes, and streemes in the deserte: that I maye geue drynke to my people, to whome I chose: thes people haue I made for my selfe, and they shall (c) theme forth my praise. For thou (Jacob) woldest not call vpon me, but thou haddest an bullocke towarde me, O Israel.

(d) Thou gauest me not thy younge beastes for burnt offeringes, neether dyddest thou honour me with thy sacrifices. Thou boughtest me no deare prices with thy troupe, neether purchasedst the fatte of thy sacrifices vnto me. How be it I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offeringes, neether greuous in incense.

(e) But thou hast laden me with thy synnes: and werped me with thine vngodlynesse.

(f) Whereas I yett am euen he onely that for myne owne selfes sake do a waye thyne offences, and forget thy synnes: so that I wyl neuer thynke vpon them.

(g) What me nowe in remembrance (for we wyl reason together) & shewe what thou hast for thee to make thee quyte.

(h) Thy first father offended sore, and thy rulers haue sinned agaynst me. Therefore I euer suspended, or sene the chiefest princes: I dyd curse Jacob, and gaue Israel in to reuylse.

The Notes of the. xliii. Chapter.

(a) Therfore beholde, I shall make a newe thinge.

II. I. I.

I shall give thee the best treasure, and the thing which is secretly kept: that thou mayest knowe that I the God of Israel haue called thee by name: and that for Jacob my seruantes sake, and for Israel my chosen.

B For I called thee by thy name, and ordeined thee: or euer thou knewest me: Euen I the Lorde, before whom there is none other: for about me there is no God. I haue prepared thee: or euer thou knewest me: that it might be knowne frome the risinge of the sunne, to the goinge downe of the same, that all is nothinge without me. For I am the Lorde, and there is elles none. It is I that created the light and darkenes: I make peace and trouble: yea euen I the Lorde do all these things.

(a) The beasts aboute shall droppe downe, and the cloudes shall rapne rightousnesse. The earth shall open it selfe, and bringe forth the belche, and thereby shall rightousnesse shewe it selfe. Euen I the Lorde shall bring it to passe.

Woe be vnto him that chydeth with his maker, the potsherd with the potter: Sareth the clare to the potter, what makest thou? or thy worke serueth for nothinge? Woe be vnto him that saith to his father: why begettest thou? And to his mother: why bearest thou? Thus saith the Lorde, euen the holpe one and maker of Israel. Aske me of things for to come, concerninge my sonnes: and put me in remembrance, as touchinge the workes of my handes: I haue made the earth, and created man vpon it. With mine handes haue I spread forth heauen, and geuen a cōmaundement for all the hostes therof.

I shall wake him up with rightousnesse, and ordeine all his wayes. He shall buyde my cōtye, and let out my prisoners, & that neyther for gyfte nor rewarde, saith the Lorde of hostes.

The Lorde hath sayd moreouer: The occupiers of Egypte, the marchauntes of the Moors and Sabees, shall come vnto the with tribute, they shall be thyne, they shall folowe thee, and go with cheynes vpon theyr feete. They shall fall downe before thee, & make supplicacion vnto thee. For God (without whom there is none other God) shall be with thee.

O how profoude arte thou, O God, thou God and saupoure of Israel: Confounded be ye, and put to dishonour: good hence together with shame, all ye that be worke masters of error: (that is worshippers of Idoles.) But Israel shall be saued in the Lorde, whiche is the euellastynge saluation: They shall not come to shame nor confusion, worde withoute ende.

For thus saith the Lorde: euen he that created heauen, the God that made the earth, that fashioned it, and sette it forth: I haue not made it for nought, but I made it to be inhabited. Euen I the Lorde, without whom there is none other. I haue not spoken secretly, neyther in darke places of the earth. It is not for nought, that I sayde vnto the seede of Jacob: seke me. I am the Lorde, whiche when I speake, declare the thinge that is righteous and true. Let them be gathered and come together, let the drake nye byrdes that are escaped of the people: Dene they any vnderstandynge that set vp the stocks of theyr Idolls, and pray vnto a God that can not helpe them? Let men draw nye, let them come byrther, and aske counsel one at another, and shewe forth: What is he, that tolde this before? or who spake of it, euer sence the begynning. Haue not I the Lorde done it: without whom there is none other God? the true God & saulour, and there is elles none but I? And therefore tourne you vnto me (all ye endes of the earth) so shall ye be saued: for I am God, and there is else none. I sware by my selfe: oute of my mouthe cometh the worde of rightousnesse, and that maye no man tourne: but all knees shall bowe vnto me, and all tungen shall swere by me, sayinge: Certely in the Lorde is my rightousnesse and strengthe. To him shall men come: but all they that chynke scorn of him, shall be confounded, and the vole seed of Israel shall be iustified and prapled in the Lorde.

The Notes.

(a) Some rede, ye heauens, sende downe your dew from above, and let the cloudes rapne. ve. The Prophet despayeth that kynge Cyrus may come and helpe the people of Israel, vnder this figuringe Christ, & vnder Israel & church. For though he shoulde saye: wolde God the heuens powers wolde so geue their grace, as the earth wold not refuse to receiue it: so & here after our heauen be not of brasse, for our sinnes sake: Deuter. xxxiii. b. but that by goddes grace, the rayne of saluacion wolde fall on vs, and rightousnesse droppe downe from heauen, to make our bertes fertile and frutefull: & Christe our saulour, whiche is the rightousnesse of the chosen, wolde come forth of the earth, & bringe forth the blossomes of saluacion. This petitiō dothe the Lord promise to performe, sayinge: Euen I the Lorde shall bringe it to passe.

The xlvi. Chapter.

Idolatrye is reproued. The heathen that cōmeth by Christ is prophesied.

Euerlastynge (a) Well shall fall, & Idols shall be broken, whose Images are a burthen for the beasts and cattell to ouerlade them, and to make them weyre. They shall synke downe, and fall together, for they maye not ease them of theyr burthen, therefore must they go into captiuitie.

Harken vnto me, O house of Jacob, & all ye that remaine yet of the household of Israel, whom I haue borne from your mothers wombe, and brought you up from your byrthe, till ye were growne: I wolde the shall beate you vnto your last age: I haue made you, I will also nourishe you, beate beate you, and saue you. Whome wyl ye make me lyke in faction or Image, that I may be like hym? Ye foolles (no doubt) wyl take oute syluer & golde of youre purses, & wepe it, & hyre a goldsmith to make a god of it, & men may knese downe & worship it.

Baruch. vi. Yet muste he be taken on mennes shoul- ders and borne, and set in hys place, that he maye stande and not moue. Alas that men shoulde crye vnto hym whych geueth no answer: & deliuereth not the man that calleth vpon hym from hys trouble.

Consydre thys well and be ashamed.

(b) Go into your owne selues (O peccators: negates.) Remember the thynges whych are passe sence the begynnyng of the worlde: that I am God, and that there is elles no God, yea and that there is no thyng lyke vnto me. In the begynnyng of a thyng, I shewe the ende thereof: and I tell before, thynges that are not yet come to passe. With one worde is my de- uise accomplished, and all my pleasure fulfilled. I call a (c) byrds out of the East, and all that I take in hande oute of far countreys, as soone as I commaunde, I byrge it thither: as soone as I thynke to deuis a thyng, I do it.

Heare me, O ye that are of an hye Ro- macke, but farre from rygthousnesse. I shall byrge fyt my ryghtousnesse. It is not far, & my healt shal not tary long away. I wyl lay healt in Sion, and geue Israel my glory.

The Notes of the. xlv. Chapter.

(a) Balaam and Bala were Jdoles of the babylonians. The. l. with the Prophete, Malke ouer- throwen by the hoste of Egyptus.

(b) To go into them selues, is, to take good ad- uisement and cal to remembrance.

(c) He meaneth byrge Egyptus, whych shoulde come swiftly as a byrd flyeth, and destroye Ba- bylon, and let the Israelites at lyberte. He shoulde fulfill that whych the Loyde had deuis- sed and decreed. In him is figured Christ whych with the lyght of hys worde purgeth the whole worlde of erreours and Idolatreys, and setteth the consciences at peace and liberte. He flyeth swiftly out of the East, that is out of heu- en: wher vpon he is called the day spryng from on hys. Luke. i. g.

The. xlvii. Chapter.

The worde of the Loyde against Babylon.

But as for the (O daughter) thou vlt- ryst Babylon. (a) Thou shalt sit in dust, thou shalt sit vpon the grounde, & not in a throne (O thou maiden of Chal- dea) Thou shalt no more be called tender and pleasaunt (b) Thou shalt byrge forth the quene & grind mee, put downe thy stomacher, make bare thy knees, and shalt make thowth & water riuers. Thy shame shall be discouered, and thy priuites shal be sene. For I wyl auenge me of the, & no man shal let me, saith our redemer, whiche is called the Loyde of hostes, the holy one of Israel.

Syt syl, hold thy tonge, and get the in to some darke corner, O Daughter Chal- dea, for thou shalt be no more called la- dy of kyngdomes. I was so wroth with my people, that I punished myne inheri- taunce, & gaue the into thy power. Neuer thelesse, I shewed the them no mercy, but euē the very aged men of the dyddesse thou oppresse righte fore w your yoke, and thou thoughtest thus: I shal be ladye for euer. And besyde all that, thou hast not regar- ded these thynges, neither cast what shoulde come after. Heare now therfore thou wil- ful, that fittest so carelesse, & speakest thus in thine heart: I am alone, and without me is ther none: I shal neuer be widowe, nor desolate agayn. And yet both these thynges shall come to the vpon one day, in the twink- lyng of an eye: namely wydowehood and desolation.

They shal myghtily sal vpon the for the multitude of thy wyches, & for the grea- te beape of thy coureters. For thou hast con- sorted thy selfe in thy disceitfulness, and hast said: No man seeth me. Thyne owne wysdome & connyng hath dysceyued the. In the thou hast said: I am alone, and thou me ther is none. Therfore shall trouble come vpon the, and thou shalt not knowe from whence it shall aryse. Myschefe shall sal vpon the, whych thou shalt not be able to put of. A sodayne myschefe shal come vpon the, or eue thou be a wate.

Some go to thy coureters, and to the multitude of thy wyches (whome thou hast bene acquainted withall from thy youthe) if they maye helpe the, or streng- then the. Thou hast byrtherto had many counsels of them, so let the beaungasers and the beholders of stars come on nowe and deliuer the: yea and let them shewe, when these newe thynges shall come vpon the. Beholde, they shal be like straw, whych ysit be kyndled with fyre, no man may cryde it for the vehemencie of the flame: And yet it geueth no sinders to warme a man by, nor cleare fyr to syt by. Euen so shall they be vnto the whom thou hast bled and occupied from thy youthe. Every one shal shewe the hys erroneous way, yet shal none of them defende the.

The notes of the. xlvii. Chapter.

(a) To sit in the dust is, to be brought lowe, to be poorly arayed and decked, to sit without pompe, and to fall from her state and degre, as it is sayd Iona. iii. c. The Prophete here describeth the destruction of Babylon vnder the figure of a proud quene: whiche was delictously and beutifully brought up, and after fell into extreme pouerty, myserye, and wretchednes.

(b) He vnderstandeth by the quene, or (as some reade) myll: scruple, poo, & and bylestate and condition.

The. xlviii. Chapter.

The yocillie of the Jewes is reproveth. The Loyd alone will be worshypped whych hath cholen vs, and whych locoueth vs for hys owne sake.

II. li. Heare

Hear these, O thou house of Jacob, for they are called by the name of Israel, and are come out of one stocke into Juda, whiche sweare by the name of the Lord, & beare witness by the God of Israel (but not with truth & right) whiche are called free men of the holie cytre, as they that take for comfort in the God of Israel, whose name is Lord of hostes.

The thynges that I shewed you ever since I beganning: Have I not broughtre to passe immediatly as they came out of my mouth, and declared the? And they are come, how be it I knew that thou arte obstinate, and that thyne necke hath an

(a) Iron veyne, & that thy brow is of brasse. Nevertheless I have ever since I beganning shewed the of thynges for to come, & declared the unto the, or ever they came to passe, that thou shouldest not say: myne Idol hath done it, my earne or caste I maye have shewed it. Heare and consider all these thynges whether it was so & prophesied them: But as for me, I tolde & before at the begynnyng, newe & secrete thynges that thou knewest not of. And some done nowe not of olde tyme, wherof thou never heardest before they were brought to passe, that thou canst not say: I knewe of them. Moreover ther be some wherof thou hast neyther herd nor knowen, neyther have they bene opened unto thyne eares afore tyme. For I knew that thou wouldest maliciously offend, therfore have I called the a transgressoure, even from thy mothers wombe.

Nevertheless for my names sake, I have withdrauen my wrath, & for myne honours sake I have overseene thee, so that I have not rooted the oute. (b) Behold I have purged the, and not for money. I have chosen the in the fyre of purtie. And that only for myne own sake: for I geue myne honour to none other, that thou shouldest not despise me. Herken unto me O Jacob, & Israel whome I have called. I am even he that is, I am the first and the last. My hand is the foundacion of the earth, & my right hand spaneth out the heavens. As soon as I called the, they were ther. Gather you all together, & hearken: Whych of pander goddes hath declared this, that the Lord wyl do by the king of Babylon (whiche he loveth and saureth) and by the Chaldees bys arme? I my selfe alone have tolde you this before. Yea I shall call hym, and bynge hym forth, and geue hym a prosperous journey. Come nye and heare this: have I spoken any thyng darkely since the begynnyng? wyl a thing begynne, I am there.

Wherefore the Lord God with bys spirit hath sente me. And thus sayth the Lord God thyne avenger, the holy one of Israel: I am the Lord thy God whiche reache the profitable thynges, and leade the way that thou shouldest go. If thou wylt not regard my commaundement, thy welthynges shall be as the water streame, and thy rightousnes as the mares flowsinge in the sea. Thy sede shall be lyke as the sande in the sea, and the frute of thy bodie, lyke the grauell stones therof. Thy name shall not be rooted out, nor destroyed before me. Ye shall go a waie from Babylon and escape the Chaldees with a merie voyce. This shalbe spoken of, declared abroad, and go forthe unto the ende of the worlde, so that it shalbe sayed: The Lord hath defended bys servaunt Jacob, that they suffered no hurt, when they travayled in the byldernes. He claue the rockes aunder, and the water gushed oute. As for the ungodly, they have no peace, sayeth the Lord.

The notes of the xlviij. Chapter.

(a) By this he meaneth that the people of Israel were stubborne, crowarde, rebellious, untraceable, dreuly and chamelelle.

(b) Some reade: Behold I have purged the: but not as silver: I have chosen the oute of the fournelle of affliction. For mine own sake, for mine owne sake have I done this: for lyke whome woulde they pollute my trulie I wyl not geue my glory to any other. Herken. etc. The same espond it thus. I would not suffer the wholye to perishe: for if I had pioused and purified the as gold & silver is pioused & purified, from whiche all maner of dross is cleansed, there shoulde no thing have remained in the: very fewe, yea none shoulde have bene saved. But I broughte I vnder, and pioused the in the fournelle of affliction, that is, I wrapped the in captivite and bondage in Egypt, from whiche I afterwarde delivred the. And this have I done for myne owne sake, that is onely for myne owne name and glory, of myne owne gent. lnes & louynge kindnes, not for any of thy merites and deservynges, whiche were none at all. For howe woulde the gentiles and heathen have poluted, defiled and blasphemed my name, if I had rooted oute myne owne people, and so have made the truth of the piousles whiche I had determined to fulfill in Chyche, vaine & untrue? For as well this people of my trulie, as the glory of the blessing promised in the seade of Abraham and David, wyl I not geue unto another people or nation. The health of the worlde shall come of the Jewes. John. iiii. And from none other. The glad thynges of health that the whole worlde receyve of no other then of Chyche, by the preachynge of the Apostles etc.

The xlix. Chapter.

Chyche shall gather together all nations be they never so farre of.

(a) Arise, hearken unto me, and take heed ye people from farre. The Lord hath called me from my byrth, and made me:

Wyl commit my cause and my worke vnto the Lord my God. And now saith the lord: euen he that fashioned me from my mothers wombe to be hys seruante, that I maye byng Jacob agayne vnto hym: how best, I traill wyl not be gathered vnto hym agayne. In whose sight I am great, which also is my Lord, my God, and my strenght. Let it be but a small charge, that thou art my seruant, to set vp the kynredes of Jacob, and to redoe the destruction of Israel, if I make the not also the lghte of the Gentyls that thou maiest te my health vnto the ende of the worlde. Mozeouer thus sayth the Lord the auenger and bolpe one of Israel, because of the abhorring and despising among the Gentils, concerning the seruant of al them that bear rule, Kyngs and princes shal se, and acise and worship, because of the Lord that he is faithful, and because of the holp one of Israel, whiche hath chosen the.

And thus sayth the Lord: * In the tyme appoynted wyl I be presente wth the. * and in the houre of health wyl I helye the, and deliuer the, I wyl make the a y ledge for the people, so that thou shalt helpe vp the earth agayne, and challenge agayne the scattered heritages. That thou maiest say to the prisoners: go forth, and to them that are in darkenes: come into the lght, that they may fede in the hye wayes, and gette theyr lyfing in al places. There shall neyther hunger nor thurst, heate nor sun hurt them. For he that fauoureth the, shal leade them, and geue them drynke of the springe wels, I wyl make waies vpon al my mountaynes, and my fote pathes shal be exalted. And behold, they shal come from the North, some from the North and West, some from the South. * Reioyce ye heauens, and sing praises thou earth. Take of ioye, ye hylls, for God wyl comfort hys people, and haue mercy vpon hys, that be troubled.

Then shal Syon say: * God hath forsaken me, and the Lorde hath forgotten me.

(c) Doth a wyfe forgette the chyld of her wombe, and þ sonne whom she hath borne? And thought she doo forget, yet wyl not I forget the. Behold, I haue wyrtten the vpon my handes, thy walles are euer in my sight. * They that haue broken the down, shal make haste to builde the vp agayn, and they that made the waste, shal dwel in the. Lift vp thine eyes, and looke about the, al these shal gather them together, and come to the. As truly as I lue (sayth the Lord) thou shalt put them al vpon the, as an apparel, and gyd the to the as a byrde doth her Jewels. As for thy land that lyeth desolate, wasted, and destroyed, it shal be to narowe from the, that shal dwel in it. And they that would deuoure the, shal be farre away. (d) Then the childe to home the barren shall bynge forth vnto the, shal saye in thine eare: thys place is to narowe, syt nye together, that I maye haue room.

Then shalt thou thyne by thy selfe. Who hath begotten me these: seynge I am barren and alone, a captiue and an outcast? And who hath nuryshed them vp for me? I am desolate and alone, but from whence come these?

And therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Behold, I wyl stretch out myne hande to the Gentyls, & set vp my token to the people. They shal byng the thyr sones in their laps, and carry thy daughters vnto the vpon theyr shouldeys. For kynges shal be thy noursing fathers, and Quenes shal be thy noursing mothers. They shal fall before the myghty faces that vpon the earth, and licke vp the dust of thy feete, that thou maiest know howe that I am the Lorde. * And who so putteyth hys trust in me, shall not be confounded. Who spoyleth the gyraunt of hys praye: or who taketh the prisoner from the myghty? And therfore thus sayth the Lord. The prisoners shal be raked from the graunt, and the spoyle deliuered from the violent: for I wyl maintayn thy cause agaynst thine aduersaries, and saue thy sone. And wyl fede thine enemies with theyr owne flesch, and make them drynke of theyr own bloud, as of stete wyne. And al flesh shal know (O Jacob) that I am þ Lord thy salout, and strong auenger.

Thus sayth the Lord: Wher is the byl of your mothers (a) deuorcement, that I sent vnto her: or wher is the vsurer, to whom I sold you? Behold for your own offences are pefolde, and because of your transgression is your mother forsaken. For why woulde no man receyue me, when I came: and when I called, no man gaue me answer. Was my hand cleane smytten of, that it myght not helpe: or had I not power to deliuer: so at a worde I drynke vp the sea, and of water flouds make dry land: so that for want of water, the fysh corrupt and dye for thys. The Notes of the I. Chapter.

(a) God was not the cause why the congregation of the Jewes (whiche is vnderstande by mother, & was once hys spouse) was deuoyed and forsaken: but they owne offences deuoyed the,
and was the cause whye they were solde to the vlures, and geuen ouer into the handes of the Gentyls, of heathen, and sparled amongst the Arabians, Persians, Babylonians, Grece-ans and Romaynes.

(b) As who say, ye your selues haue kynled the spye of my vengeance wyth yowre offences: I was no causer thereof: ye must therefore suffer the punishment thereto belonging. For it cometh of your owne deservynge that I do lay my hand

The.ii. Chapter.

Consolation and comforte is promised vnto the faythful.

Hearken vnto me, ye that holde of righte-ousnes, ye that seke the Lord. Take heede vnto that stone wherout ye are hewed, & to that graue wherout ye are dygged. Consider Abraham your father, & Sara that bare you how that I called him alone, prospered hym wel, & encreased him, how the Lord cōso-led Syb, & repaired al her decay, makinge her desert as a paradise, & her wyldernes as the garden of the Lord. Myrrh and ioye was ther, thankesgeyving and the voyce of praise. Haue respect vnto me that, o my people, & lay thine eare to me, for a law and an ordinaunce shal go forth from me, to lighten the Gentyls. It is at hand, that my healt and my rightousnes shal go forth, and the people shal be ordered with myne arme.

The Isles (that is the Gentyls) shal hope in me, & put theyr trust in myne arme.
Lyfte vp yowre eyes toward heauen, and looke vnto the earth beneath. For the heauens shal vanishe away lyke smoke, and the earth shal scape lyke a cloth, and they that dwel therin, shal perishe in lyke manner. But my healt endureth for euer, and my rightous-nes shal not ceas. Therefore verily come ye that haue pleasure in rightousnes, thou people that bearest my law in thine herte.
Feare not the curse of men, be not afrayed of theyr blasphemys and reuylynges, for wormes and mothes shal eat them vp lyke cloth and wol. But my rightousnes shal endure for euer, and my sauing healtre from generacion to generacion. Wake vp, wake vp, and be strong, O thou (a) arme of the Lord, wake vp lyke as in ymes past, cure and sence the world began.

Ps. xxi. 6

proud lucifer, and betwen the dragon in pieces? Art not thou euen he which hast dyed vp the depe of the sea? which hast made plain the sea ground, that the deliuered myghte go thorow? That the redeemed of the Lord which turned agayne, myght come forth vnto God, that to endure for euer? That myrrh and gladnesse myght be wyth them that sorow, and woe myght be for them?
Yea I, I am euen he, that in al thyngs geuet you consolacion. What art thou then that fearest a mortal man, the child of man whych goeth away as doth the floure. And forgottest the Lord that made thee, that spred out the heauens, and layed the foundacion of the earth. But thou art euer a-frayed for the spghte of thine oppressoure, whych is ready to do harme. What is the wrath of the oppressoure? It cometh on last, it maketh haste to appeare. It shal not perishe, that it shold not be able to destroy, neither shal it faile for faule of nothyng.
I am the Lord thy God, that make the sea to be still and to rage, whose name is the Lord of hosts. I shal put my worde also in thy mouth, and desed the with the turning of my hand, that thou maiest plat the hea-uens, and lay the foundations of the earth, and say vnto Sion: thou art my people.

The Notes of the. li. Chapter

(a) The arme of the lord here signifieth Christ, and the redemptor of the world, and the putting propeth the Prophet that it cometh.

(b) The cup of the Lordes wraoth signifieth the affliction that we suffer, because we have done aunce that he taketh of us, for theyr offences.

An exhortation to iudgements and ryghteousnes, and to the spiritual keepinge of the Sabbath. Agaynst Shepherdes that despoyle thep? flocke.

A Thus sayth the Lord: kepe equity and do ryght, for my sauing health shalbe opened. Blessed is the man that doth this, and the mans chylde whych keepeth the same. He that taketh heed, that he vnderstande not the Sabbath, that is he that keepeth hym selfe that he do no euill. Then shal not the straunger whiche cleaueth to the Lord, say: Alas, the Lord hath shut me cleane out from hys people. Repether shall the gilded man say: lo, I am a drye tree.

For thus saith the Lorde: I will bring into the world a people, saith the Lorde, that shall be called by my name, that shall be chosen, that shall be my people, that shall be my treasure, that shall be my inheritance, that shall be my people, that shall be my treasure, that shall be my inheritance, that shall be my people, that shall be my treasure, that shall be my inheritance.

Thus saith the Lord God which gathereth together the scattered of Iſrael. I will bring yet another congregation to hym. All the beaſtes of the field, and all the beaſts of ſ wood, ſhal come to deuour him. For hye (a) watchmen are all blynde, they haue altogether no vnderſtandynge, they are all ſome dogs, not being able to barked, they are ſcreepe. Noo greſſe are they and lye ſnoozynge, they are Hamelleſſe dogges, that neuer be ſatiſfied. The ſheperdes alſo in lyke maner haue no vnderſtandynge, but euey man turneth hye owne waye, euey one after hye owne couetouſnes wryth all hye power. The Notes of the 1st Chapter.

(A) By these blinde watchmen, vnder stande the chiefe Priests, the Scribes, and Pharisees, &c. Whiche were the peruersers and deuylers of the law of God: These for filthy lucre sake abused the true seruyce of God, and were the chiefe causers of the forsaking of Israel. They were doubleminded, and sought not that which was for the edification of the people, and for the glory of God, but that which was for their owne private profit and pleasure. They were doubleminded to roote out vyce, and to plant vertue, and dyuen into the profound and deepe sleep of ignorance, idleness, of lecherousnes, and of pryde. As oft as the Prelates of the people, Bishops, Abbates, and they that auntee them selues for religious be such, they hangeth a great scourge over the whole Roche of Christ.

De. lvi. Chapter.

GThe Jews are rebuked for their sin re done to Christ.

But in the meane season the righteous perisheth, and no man regardeth it in his heart. Good godly people are taken away, and no man considereth it. James saith, that the righteous is conueyed awaye in holow the wycked, that he him self might be in test. Ipe quietly vpon his bed, and liue after his owne pleasure. Come hither ther fore ye charmers children, & resonnes of the aduourtee and the bore. Wherein take ye your pleasure? Tpon whō gape ye with your mouthe, and bleate out your song?
Are ye not children of aduourtee, & a seede of dissimulation? Ye take your pleasure vn der the oaks, and vnder al grene trees, the child beryng name in the valleys, & conues of stons. Thy parte shalbe with the stonye rockes by the ryuer. Yea even these shalbe thy parte. For ther thou hast poured meat ouersee that? Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaynes, thou wentest vp thy bed, with them. Thou wentest straight to bridges with oyle and dyuerse ornaments, (that is) thou hast sent thy messengers farre of,

and yet art thou fallen into the pit thereby.
Thou hast had trouble for the multitude of thine owne wayes, yet saydest thou neuer: I will leave of. Thou thinkest to have life (or health) of thy selfe, & therefore thou believest not that thou art speke. For when thou art ashamed or feare, seynge thou hast broken thy promise, and rememberest not me, neither hast mee in thine heart.
Thou thinkest thou shalt also will holde my peace (as afore tyme) that thou fearest me not? Yea verely, I will declare thy goodnes & thy workes, but they shall not profit the while I crie, let thy choler beape believer. But the wynd shall take the al away, & carry the into the ayre. Nevertheless, they put they trust in me, shall inherit the land, and have my help by in possession.

B And therefore thus he saith: Make ready, make ready, and cleanse the streete, take up what ye can out of the way that leadech to my people. For thus sayth the lorde and excellent, even he that dwelleth in everlastyngnes, whose name is the holpe one. * I dwel by above, and in the sanctuary, and with hym also, that is of a contrite and humble spirit, that I may breake a troubled mynde, and a cōfite here. For I chide not ever, and am not wroth without end. But the blaspheming goeth to me: though I make the heath I am wroth with hym for his cōfousnes and lust. I smyte hym, I hide me, and am angry when he turneth hym selfe and soloweth the byway of his own heart. But if I may se his right way again, I make hym hole, I leade hym and restore hym unto them to whom he maketh sorfull, and that woe sor for him. I make the fru-ites of thankesgeyng, I geue peace unto them that are far of, and to them that are nye, say I the lorde I will make hym hole.
But the wycked are lyke the raggynge sea, that can not rest, whose water somerth with the myre and grauell. Even so the wycked shalle have no peace, sayth my God.

The. lviij. Chapter.

¶ The lorde by the mouth of the Prophet responseth to the people, for they fastynge which wer ful of a pōcrys.

A And therefore cry now as longe as I canst. Leave not of, lyf up thy voyce lyke a trumpet, and shew my people they offences, and the house of Jacob their synnes. For they seke me daily & wil know my wayes, even as it were a people that hid right, and had not forsaken the statutes of they God. They argue with me concerning right iudgement, and wil pleade at the law with they god. Wherefore fast we (say they) and thou seest it not. We put out spues to straitnes, & thoue. Gardest it not.

to smyte hym with your fist that speaketh unto you. Ye faste not (as sometyme) that your voyce myght be heard about. Thinke ye they fast please me, that a man should chasten hym selfe for a day, and to wythe his heade about lyke an hoke in an heapy clothe, and to lye upon the earth? Shoulde that be called fastynge, or a daye that please the lorde? But they fastynge please not me, tyl the tyme be thou lose hym oute of bondage, that is in thy danger, that thou breake the oth of the wycked bargaynes, that thou let the oppressed go free, and take from them al manner of buttens. It please not me, tyl thou deale thy bread to the hungry, and byng þ poor fatherles home into thy house, when thou seest the naked that thou couer him, and hide not thy face from thine owne fleche.

Then shall thy lyght breake forth as the morning, and thy health as the righte ly, thy rightousnes shall go before thee, and the glory of the lorde shall embrace the.

Then if thou callest, the lorde shall answer the: if thou cryest, he shall saye: here I am.
Yea, if thou layest away thy buttens and holdest thy synners, and ceasest from blasphemous talkynge, if thou hast compassion upon the hungry, and refrehest the troubled soule, Then shall thy lyght spring out in the darkness, and thy darkness shall be as the noone day. The lorde shall ever be thy gyde and satisfye the desyre of thine heart, and fyl thy bones with maye. Thou shalt be lyke a fresh watered garden, and like the fountaine of water, that neuer leaveth dryning. Then the places that haue euer bene waite shall be buylded of the, ther shall thou lay a foundation for many kindes. Thou shalt be called the maker up of bedges, & þ builder again of the way of the Sabbath.

Yea if thou turne thy se from the Sabbath, so that thou do not the thing whiche please thy selfe in my holy day, then shalt thou be called unto the pleasur, holy, and glorious Sabbath of the lorde, wher thou shalt be in honoure, so that thou do not after thine owne imagination, neither seke thyne owne will, nor speake thyne owne words. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in the lorde, wher shall eat the be above the earth, and see the wyth the herbage of Jacob thy father, for the lorde's owne mouth hath so promysed.

The Notes of the. lviij. Chapter.

¶ The fast remaineth yet among the chyldren, for the chastenynge of the body, and at that age from vyce, will we yet neither under-stande nor heare of: but I praye they with the Ie-wes both that we do God a great pleasure wher we faste, and also that wee then faste, when we abstayne from one thyng, and fyl oure bellies with another. And verely in this thyng both our supersticion extend the supersticion of the Jewes. For wee neuer read that they ever ooke it for a fast to abstayne from fleche, & cate rather for the oth whiche they make (as they cal it.)

The

The Lord is mighty to save, and ready to heare our requestes.

Behold, the Lords hand is not so shortened that it can not helpe, neyther is hys eare so stopped that it maye not heare. But your mysdedes haue separated you from your God, and your synnes hide his face from you, that he heareth you not.
For your handes are defyled with blood, and your fingers with vncyghtuousnes.
Your lippes speake lyes, and your tong setteyth out wyckednes. You ma regaderth cyghteousnes, and no man iudgeth truly.
Every man hopeth in vayne thynges, and ymagineth dysceyte, conceyvethe werynes, and byngeth forth euyl.

them, ther cometh vpon a serpent. (d) These web maketh no cloth, and they may not couer them with theyr laboures. (e) Theyr dedes are the dedes of wyckednes, and the worke of robbery is in theyr handes. Ther fete runne to euyl and they make haste to shed innocent bloude. Theyr counsailes are wycked counsailes, harme and destruction ar in theyr waies. But þ way of peace they know not. In theyr goings is no equity, theyr wayes are so croked þ whosoever goeth therein, knoweth nothyng of peace.

And this is the cause that equitye is so farte from vs, and that the cyghtuousnesse cometh not nye vs. We looke for light, lo it is darknesse: for the morning shyneth, see, we walke in the darke. We grope lyke the blynd vpon the wal, we grope euen as one that hath none eyes. We stibie at þ noone daye, as though it were toward nyght: in the falling places lyke men that are halfe dead. We roie al lyke Beares, and myrne styl lyke doves. We looke for equitye, but theyr is none: for health, but it is farte from vs. For our offences are many before thee, and our synnes testify agaynst vs. Yea we must confesse that we offend, and acknowledge that we do amysse: Namelye transgress and dessemble agaynst the Lorde, and fall awaye from our God: vnyng presumptuous and trayturous imaginations, and callyng false matters in our heartes. And therfore is equitye gone asyde, and cyghteousnesse standerth farof: truth is fallen down in the strete, and the thinge that is playne and open may not be shewed. Yea þ feuthe is layed in prison, and he that rescapeth hym selfe from euyl, must be spoiled.

When the Lorde sawe this, it dyspleased hym sore, that ther was no where any equitye. He sawe also that there was no man whych had pitie thereof, or was gre-ued at it. And he helde hym by hys own power, and cleaved to his owne cyghteousnes.
He put cyghteousnes vpon hym for a brest plate, and set the helme of health vpon his head. He put on maynt in stede of clothyng, and tooke gelyuspe about hym for a cloke (lyke as toben a man goeth forth wythefully to recompence hys enemyes, and to be auenged of hys aduersaries.) Namelye that he might recompence & reward the Filians, tober thow the name of the Lord myghte be feared from the yfrynge of the Sunne, and hys mayesty vnto the goynge downe of the same.

For he shall come as a vyolente water frecame, whiche the wynde of the Lord hath moued. But vnto Spon there shall come a redemer, and vnto the in Jacob that turne from wyckednes, sayth the Lorde, I will make this couenaunt with them (sayth þ Lorde) My spirit that is come vpon the, & þ wordes which I haue put in thy mouth, shal neuer go out of thy mouth nor out of the mouth of thy cylder & cyldren, from this tyme forth for euermore.

the Lord. All the cattel of Cedar shalbe gathered vnto the, the rammes of Babalon shal serue the, to be offered vpon mine altar, whiche I haue chosen, and in the house of my gloire, whiche I haue garnished.

(a) But what are these that lye here lyke the cloudes, and as the Doves flynge to theyr wyndowes?

The Lord also shal gather them vnto me, and specially the shippe of the sea: that they may bring the sonnes from far, and theyr syluer and theyr gold wylb them, vnto the name of the Lord thy God, vnto the holpe one of Israell, that haue gospelyd thee. Straungers shal buyde by thy walles, and theyr kynges shal do the seruyce. For when I am angere, I smyte thee: and when it pleaseth me, I pardon thee. Thy gates shal stand open wyll both day and nyghte, and neuer be shutte, that the booke of the Gentyls may come, and that theyr kyngs may be brought vnto the. For euerye people and kyngdome that seruerd not thee, shal perishe, and be destroyed wylb the swearde. The glory of Libanus shal come vnto the. The (b) Fyre trees, Wodes, and Ceders togyther, to garnyshe the place of my Sanctuarie, for I wyl glorifie the place of my seate.

Moreover those that come knelyng vnto the, that haue vered the: & all they that despyed thee, shal fall downe at thy foote. Thou shalt be called the city of the Lord, the holy Shil of Israell. Because thou hast bene forsaken and hated, for that no manne went thowme the, I wyl make the glorious for euer and euer, and to full thowme oute all posterities. Thou shalt sucke the mylke of the Gentyls, and kynges breasts shal fede the. And thou shalt knowe that I the Lord am thy saulour and defender, the myghty one of Iacob. For brasse, wyl I geue the gold, and for yron syluer: for wood brasse, and for stonys Iron. I wyl make peace thy ruler, and ryghteousnes thyne ofspere. Violence and robbery shal neuer be herd of in thy land, neyther harme and destruction wythin thy border. Thy walles shalbe called health, & thy gates the praise of God. * The sunne shal neuer be thy day lycht, and the lycht of the Moone shal neuer shyne vnto the: but the Lord hym selfe shal be thyne euerlastyng lycht, and the God shalbe thy glory.

* Thy sunne shall neuer go downe, and thy Moone shall not be taken away, for the Lord hym selfe shalbe thy euerlastyng lycht, and thy sorrowfull dayes shalbe rewarded thee. Thy people shall be all Godly, and possesse the laude for euer: the floure of my plantyng, the worke of my handes, wherof I will reioyse. The poungest & least shal grow into a. & the simplest into a strong people. I the Lord shal worlpe bring this thyng to passe in bys tyme.

(b) By the fyre trees and such lyke, are signified dyntes and rulers that gouerne the people, as before in the .x. c. As who should say: euen the mooste excellent manne shall be adioyned vnto the church, and helpe much to the furtherance thereof.

The .x. Chapter.

The prophete that Christ shalbe anointed, and sent to preache.

I* The speere of the Lord God is wylb me, for the Lord hath anointed me, and sent me, to preache good tydings vnto the poore, that I myght bynde up the wounded hartes, that I might preache despytaunce to the captiue, and open the prison to the that are bound: that I might declare the acceptable ycare of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God: that I myght comfort al them that are in heauynes, that I myght geue vnto them that mourne in Sion, beautye, in the seede of aches, ioyful oymment for syghyng, pleasant rayment for an heauy mynde: That they myght be called excellent in ryghteousnesse, a plantyng of the Lord, for hym to reioyse in.

They shal buyld the longe rougher wyldernes, and set up the old desert. They shal repaire the wast places, and such as haue bene voide thowme many generations. Straungers shal stand and seeke your cattel, and the aleuynes shal be poure plowmen and repers. But ye shal be named the pylfys of the Lord, and me shal cal you the seruantes of our God. Ye shal enioye the goodes of the Gentyls, and triumphe in theyr substance. For your greate reprofe and shame, shal they haue ioy, that ye may haue parte wylb them. For they shal haue double possession in theyr land, and euerlastyng ioy shalbe wylb them. For I the Lord, whiche loue ryght, and hate robbery (though it wer offered me) shal make their workes ful of ioyfulness, and make an euerlastyng couenaunt wylb them.

Theyr seede also and theyr generacion shal be knowne amonge the Gentyls, and amonge the people. All they that see them, shal knowe that they are the byrge blessed seede of the Lord. And therfore I am ioyful in the Lord, and my soule reioysed in my God. For he shal putte vpon me the (a) garmente of health, and couer me wylb the mantel of ryghteousnesse. He shal deck me lyke a bydegrome, and as a byde that hath her apparel vpon her. For lyke as the grounde bringeth forth the scyre, and as the garden shooeth forth the seede: So shal the Lord God cause ryghteousnesse, and the feare of God to flourish forth before al the Beathan.

Of the redemption promyſed to the people

A V What is he this, that cometh from Edom wylth ſtained red clothes of Boſra: (which is ſo coſtly cloth) and cometh in ſo ſimply wylth at his ſtrēgth?
I am he that teacheth righteouſnes, and am of power to helpe. Wherefore is thy clothing red, & thy rayment lyke hys that treadeth in the wyne preſſe? I haue troden downe myne enemies in my wrath, and ſet my ſete vpon them in my indignation.

And theyr bloud ſprang vpon my clothes, and ſo haue I ſtained al my rayment. For the daye of vengeance that I haue taken in hand, and the peate of my deliuerance, is come. I looked about me, and ther was no man to ſhew me any helpe, I ſet downe, and no man helde me up. Then I held me by myne owne arme, and my ſeruentelle ſuſtained me. And thus haue I trode downe the people in my wrath, and bathed them in my diſpleaſure: In ſo much that I haue ſhed theyr bloud vpon the earth.

I wyl declare the goodnes of the Lord, pea and the prayſe of the Lord for al that he hath geuen vs, for the greate good that he hath done for Iſrael: which he hath geuen them of hys owne ſauour, and accordyng to the multitude of hys louing kindneſſes.
For he ſayd: Theſe no doubt wil be my people, and no ſhyrnpnge chylde, and ſo he was theyr ſauoure. In theyr troubles he forſoke them not, but the angel that went forth from hys preſence, deliuered them: O bett loue and kindnes that he had vnto them, redeemed he them. He hath borne them, and caried them vpon ever ſence the world beganne. But after they prouoked hym to wrath, and vexed hys holy mynde, he was theyr enemye, and fought agaynſt them hym ſelfe. Yet remembred he the old tyme of Moyses and hys people: How he broughte them from the water of the ſea, as a ſhepherd doth hys ſheep: how he had geuen hys holy ſpirit among them: how he had led Moyses by the right hand wylth hys glorious arme: how he had deuyded the water before them (whereby he gat hym ſelfe an euerlaſtinge name) how he led them in the depe, as an horſe is ledde in the playne, that they ſhoulde not ſtumble.
The ſpirit of the Lord led them, as a tame beaſt goeth in the ſpeld.

Thus (O God) haſte thou led thy people, to make thy ſelf a glorious name wylth al. Look downe then from heauen, and behold the dwelling place of thy Sanctuary and thy glory. How is it, that thy gelouſpe, thy ſtrengthe, the multitude of thy mercyes, and thy louing kindnes wyl not be intreated of vs? yet art thou our father.
For Abraham knoweth vs not, neyther is Iſrael acquainted wylth vs. But thou Lord art our father and redeemer, and thy name is euerlaſtinge.

L O R D wherefore haſt thou ledde vs oute of the wape? wherefore haſt thou hardened oure heartes, that we feare thee not? Be at one wylth vs againe, for thy ſeruauntes ſake, that are of the generacyon of thyne heritage. Thy people hath hadde

(a) God is co. nted to reioyce, when the people foloweth hys mynde and wyl, and that he therfore doth them good, and geueth them his benefites. As the saying haue ye in Jerem. xxxi. 9. I wyl haue a lust & a pleasure to do them good. &c.
(b) They shal nether be chyd nor olde man, &c.
The meaning is: They shal no man be delpyed in the vayne hope of thys mortal lyfe. They that be but euen pounge of age that haue profyted in fayth & holy woorkes, & that loke not thys pleser lyfe, shal thynke them selues old ynoughe. And that for the conspation, and desyre of the lyfe to come, whych they knowe eyght wel shal be much better.

(c) Some read: He shal be counted pounge.
(d) And if he that is an hundredth yere of age &c.
The prophet meaneth hereby that although the wyched come to an exceeding greute age, yet thynke they that they haue not lyued ynoughe, so that theyr damnacion be the greater.

(e) The Wolfe & the Lambe shal fede together
&c. The meaning is, p the most wyched cruel me shal at the commyng of Chyrlt, agree wryth the good and peaceable: And that the Gentyles (whych for theyr beastly lyuynge, are often syg-nyfied vnder the name of beastes) shal be at vni-te wryth the saythful, and the one lyue lounghly wryth the other wrythout stryfe. The verbe same saying haue ye before in the. xl. a. and. b.

(f) But earth shal be the serpentes meate, that is wryth earth shal the serpent be content, and ney-
ther slay man, nor hurt hym wryth her venome.

The. lxxvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mens hand. He despyseth sacrifices done wrythout mercy and fayth. God comforteth them that are troubled for hys sake. Among the Chyrlten, the Sabbath is continuall.

Actes. vii. f. Thus sayth the Lord: becauf is my seat,
& the earth is my fore stole. (a) Wher shal now the house stand that ye wyl buyld vnto me? And wher shal be the place that I wyl dwell in? As for these thynges, my hand hath made them al, and they are al created, sayeth the Lord.

Whych of them then shal I regarde? Euen hym that is of a lowlye troubled sprite, and standeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an oxe for me, bothe me so great dyhonour, as he that killeth a man.
He that kylleth a sheepe for me, choketh a dog. He that byngeth me meat offerings, offereth swynes blood: Who so maketh me a memorial of incense, prayseth the thinge that is vntyght. Yet take they such wailes in hand, and theyr soule delpyeth in these abhomynacions.

Therefore wyl I also haue pleasure in laughynge them to scoyne, and the thyng that they feare, wyl I bynge vpon them.
For when I called, no man gaue answer:
when I spake, they would not heare. But byd wickednes before mine eyes, and chose the thynges that dysplease me. Heare the worde of God all ye that feare the thyng whych he speaketh. Your biethen that hate you, and caste you out for my names sake, say: let the Lord magnify hym selfe, that we may se your gladnes, and yet they shal be confounded.

For as touching the city and the temple
I heare the voyce of the Lord, that wyl reward, and recompence hys ennemys, lyke as when a wyfe byngeth forth a ma child,
o: euer she suffer the paine of the byrth and angursh of the trauaile. Who euer herd o:
few such thynges? both the grounde beare in one day? O: are the people borne all at once, as Spd beatech her sonnes? For thus sayth the lord: Am I he that maketh othee to beare, and beate not my selfe? Am not I he that beatech and maketh barren, sayeth
the Lord: I relosse wryth Ierusalem, and be glad wryth her, al ye that loue her. Be loyfull wryth her, all ye that mourned for her.
For ye shal sucke comfort out of her brea-
stes, and be satisfied: ye shal taste, and haue delpre in the plesurousnes of her power. For thus sayeth the Lord: Behold. I wyl lecpeace into her, like a water founteyne, and the
might of the beache like a flowing streame.
Then shal ye sucke, ye shal be borne vpon her sydes, and be loyfull vpon her knees.
For lyke as a chyld is choyced of hys mother, so shal I comfort you: And ye shal be comforted in Ierusalem. And when ye see this, your heart shal reioyse, and your bones
shal flourish lyke an herbe.

Thus shal the hande of the Lord be knowen among hys seruantes, and hys in-dygnacion amonge hys ennemys. For be-holde, the Lord shall come wryth fyre, and
hys charet shal be lyke a whyle wind, that he may recompence his vengeaunce in his wrathe, and hys indygnacion wryth the flame of fyre. For the Lord shall iudge all fleshe wryth the fyre, and wryth hys swerde, and ther shal be a greute number slayne of the Lord. Such as haue made them selues holp and cleane in the gardens, and those that haue eaten swynes flesch, myce, and o:

The prophet meaneth hereby that although the
wyched come to an exceeding greute age, yet
thynke they that they haue not lyued ynoughe, so that theyr damnacion be the greater.

(e) The Wolfe & the Lambe shal fede together
&c. The meaning is, p the most wyched cruel me shal at the commyng of Chyrlt, agree wryth the
good and peaceable: And that the Gentyles (whych for theyr beastly lyuynge, are often syg-nyfied vnder the name of beastes) shal be at vni-
te wryth the saythful, and the one lyue lounghly wryth the other wrythout stryfe. The verbe same saying haue ye before in the. xl. a. and. b.

(f) But earth shal be the serpentes meate, that is wryth earth shal the serpent be content, and ney-
ther slay man, nor hurt hym wryth her venome.

The. lxxvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mens
hand. He despyseth sacrifices done wryth-
out mercy and fayth. God comforteth them that are troubled for hys sake. Among the Chyrlten, the Sabbath is continuall.

Actes. vii. f. Thus sayth the Lord: becauf is my seat,
& the earth is my fote stole. (a) Wher
shal now the house stand that ye wyl
buyld vnto me? And wher shal be the place that I wyl dwell in? As for these thynges, my hand hath made them al, and they are
al created, sayeth the Lord.

Whych of them then shal I regarde? Euen hym that is of a lowlye troubled spy-rite, and standeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an oxe for me, bothe me so great dyshonour, as he that killeth a man.
He that kylleth a sheepe for me, choketh a
dog. He that byngeth me meat offerings, offereth swines blood: Who so maketh me a memorial of incense, prayseth the thyng

that is vntyght. Yet take they such wailes in hand, and theyr soule delpyeth in these
abhomynacions.

Therefore wyl I also haue pleasure in
laughynge them to scoyne, and the thyng that they feare, wyl I bynge vpon them. 3d Ioue. i. a.
For when I called, no man gaue answer: 3d Ioue. vii. f.
when I spake, they would not heare. But
byd wickednes before mine eyes, and chose the thynges that dysplese me. Heare the woorde of God all ye that feare the thyng whych he speaketh. Your biethen that hate
you, and caste you out for my names sake,
say: let the Lord magnify hym selfe, that
we may se your gladnes, and yet they shal
be confounded.

For as touching the city and the temple
I heare the voyce of the Lord, that wyl tesward, and recompence hys ennemis, lyke
as when a wyfe byngeth forth a ma child,
o: euer she suffer the paine of the byrth and angush of the trauaille. Who euer herdo o:
few such thynges? both the grounde beare
in one day? O: are the people borne all at once, as Spd beatech her sonnes? For thus sayth the lord: Am I he that maketh othee
to beare, and beate not my selfe? Am not I
he that beatech and maketh barren, sayeth
the Lord: I relosse wryth Ierusalem, and be glad wryth her, al ye that loue her. Be loy-
full wryth her, all ye that mourned for her.
For ye shal sucke comfort out of her brea-
stes, and be satisfied: ye shal taste, and haue delpre in the plesurousnes of her power. For
thus sayeth the Lord: Behold. I wyl lec-
peace into her, like a water founteyne, and the
might of the beache like a flowing streame.
Then shal ye sucke, ye shal be borne vpon
her spyes, and be loyfull vpon her knees.
For lyke as a chyld is choyced of hys mother, so shal I comfort you: And ye shal be comforted in Ierusalem. And when ye see this, your heart shal reioyse, and your bones
shal flourish lyke an herbe.

Thus shal the hande of the Lord be kno-
wen among hys seruantes, and hys in-dygnacion amonge hys ennemis. For be-holde, the Lord shall come wryth fyre, and
hys charet shal be lyke a whyle wind, that he may recompence his vengeaunce in his
wrathe, and hys indygnacion wryth the flame of fyre. For the Lord shall iudge all
fleshe wryth the fyre, and wryth hys swerde,
and ther shal be a greute number slayne of
the Lord. Such as haue made them selues holp and cleane in the gardens, and those that haue eaten stonyes flesch, myce, and o: ther abhomynacions, shal be taken awaye together sayth the Lord.

For I wyl come to gather al people and tounge wryth theyr workes and ymagina-cions: these shal come, and see my gloire.
Vnto them shal I geue a token, and sende certayne of them (that be delpyered) amonge the Gentyles, into Cilicia, Asyca,

The Notes of the. i. Chapter.

(a) It is a necessarie thinge to the vnderstanding of the Prophetes, to know the stories of the tymes, wherein they prophesied. The stories of Jeremies tyme ye haue in the fourth of the bygges, from the twenty and one Chapter to the ende of booke: and in the seconde of the Chronicles, from the. xlii. chapter to the ende also. He prophesied aboute. xli. yeres.

(b) I sanctified the. i. That is, I dedicated, chose, appointed, and prepared, a set the a spede, to be a Prophet vnto the people. So in John. i. g. Saye ye then vnto hym, whome the father hath sanctified. i. that is, hath chosen. i.

(c) For a Prophet or preacher to gyde by his lopnes, is boldelye and constantlye to resist the false opinion, a doctrine of schyleres, and euen to empynt in them the worde of truth (whiche engendyth hate) whether they will or nill: and that not once or twise, but vntyll suche tyme as they either amend, or elles were angry and furiose wth it. Yea, and then to see more by the commaundment of the Lord, then by power and tyrannye of thys worlde: and not to see by the thyratynnges of rulers, whiche canne do nothinge but that which God permitteyth and suffereth them: therfore are they not to be feared of an obedienc and sayethfull seruant of the Lord.

The. ii. Chapter.

God reherceth his benefites done vnto the Jewes. Against Priestes and Prophetes, or preachers that contume and despise God. The Jewes are destroyed because they forsake God, and because they ran a whorish synge after Idoles.

Moreouer the worde of the Lord commaunded me thus: So thy way, crye in the eares of Ierusalem, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lord: I remember the for the kynndesse of thy youth, and because of thy stedfast loue, in þ thou folowedst me thowome þ wyldest: nelle, in an vntilled lande. Thou Isteall wast halowed vnto the Lord, and so was thy first frutes: All they that deuoured Isteall, offended: my fortune fell vpon the, sayeth the Lord. Heare therfore the word of the Lord, O thou house of Iacob, and all the generacion of the house of Isteall. Thus sayeth the Lord vnto you.

What vnfaithfulnesse sounde your fathers in me, that they wente so far awaye from me, fallinge to synne, a beyng so vaine? They thought not in their hertes: Wher haue we left þ Lord, that brought vs oute of the lande of Egypt, that led vs thowome the wyldernes, thowome a desert and rough land, thowome a dry & a deadly lande, yea a lande that no man had gone thowome, and wherein no man had dwelt? And when I had brought you into a pleasant wel buided land, þ ye myght enioye the frutes and all the commodities of the same, ye wente forth, and defiled my land & brought mine heritage to abominacion. The Priestes them selues sayd not ones: Wher is the Lord? They þ haue the lawe in their bandes knowe me not. The shepherdes offende agaynst me. The Prophetes tes do seruite vnto Baal, & folowe suche synnges as shall byng them no profyt.

Wherfore I am constrained (sayeth the Lord) to make my complaint vpon you, and vpon your chyldren. So into the fles of Ierhym, and loke well, sende vnto Iesabab, take diligente hede, and se, whether such synnges be done there, whether the Gentyles them selues deale so falsly and vntrewly wth their goddes, whiche ye are no goddes in dede.) But my people hath geuen ouer theyr bye honoure, for a synge that may not helpe them.

Be astonysed, O ye heauens, be astayed and abashed at suche a synge, sayeth the Lord. For my people hath done two euyls. They haue forsaken me the well of water of life, and digged them pyttes, peauile and broken pyttes that holde no water. As Isteall a bonde seruauant, or one of the household? Why is he then so spoiled? Why do they roze and crye then vpon him as a Isteall? They haue made his land waste, his cyties are so bent vp, that there is no man dwelling in them. Yea the chyldren of (a) Soph and Taphnes haue despyled thy necke.

Cometh not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, euer sence he ledde the by the waye? And what hast thou nowe to doo in the strete of Egypt: to drynke foule water? Either what makeste thou in the waye of Assiria? To drynke water of the floude? Thyne owne wyckednesse shal reprove the, and thy tynnyng away shal condemne the: that thou mayest knowe and vnderstand howe euyl and hurtfull a synge it is, that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, and not feared hym. sayeth the Lord God of hostes.

I haue euer broke thy yoke of olde, and burst thy bondes: yet sayest thou, I wyl no more serue, but (lyke an harlotte) thou runnest aboute vpon all hye hylls, and amonge all grene trees, where as I plant the out of the noble grapes, & good vntes. Howe art thou turned the into a byttere, vnseful, and straunge grape? Yea, & that so soure, that though thou walke the wth * Aitrus & make thy selfe to sauour wth þ sweete smellynge herbe of Boryth: yet in my syght thou arte stayned wth thy wyckednes, sayeth the Lord thy God.

Sape not nowe: I am not vnclene, and I haue not folowed the gods. Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in the woodes, valleyes, and dennes: so shalt thou know what thou hast done. Thou arte lyke a swyre Promedary that goth easely bys way: and thy wantonnes is lyke a wyld Ass that vseth the wyldernes, and that snoffeth and bloweth at bys wyl. Who can tame the? Al they that seeke the, shall not saye, but fynde the in thine owne vnclennes. Thou kepest thy foote from nakednes, and thy throte from thyrste, and thynkest þ in thy self: tush, I wyl lase

This is the cause, that the rayne and enenning dew hath ceased. Thou hast gotten an hoore for head, & canst not be ashamed. I haue shewed also howe I toke the v^p, beyng but a childe, and gaue the a pleasaunte lande for thynne heritage, yea and a goodly host of the Heathen: and howe I commaunded the that thou shouldest * call me father onl^y, and not to thynke frome.

mat. xx. iii. c

B But lyke as a woman sailer her loner, so are ye vnfaithfull vnto me (O ye house of Israel) saith the Lord. And therefore the voyce of the chyldren of Israel was herde on euery syde, weyninge & wayl^yng: for they haue defiled they^r way, and forgotten God they^r Lord.

O ye whynckynge chyldren, tourne agayne (sayinge: lo, we are thynne, for thou arte the Lord our God:) And so shall I heale your backturninges. The hylls fall, & all the hye prides of the mountaynes, but the helth of Israel standeth onl^y vpon God our Lord.

Confusion hath deuoured oure fathers labour from oure pouth v^p: yea, they^r shepe & bullockes, they^r sonnes & daughters. So doo we also slepe in our confusioⁿ, and shame conereth vs: for wee and oure fathers seld out pouth v^p vnto this day, haue synned agaynst the Lord our God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord our God.

The notes of the.iii. Chapter.

(a) That is, thou hast loured, worshipped, & serued many Idoles of the Gentiles, in hylls, woodes, valleyes, & ides, and in many other places as we often reade in the Bible: and hast forsaken me thy houbande, contrary to the maner of honeste married women, wherefore thou art worthy to be deuoyled: yet turne and repent and forgiue the earnestly, and I will not styke to receyue the agayne.

The.iiii. Chapter.

I The true repentaunce: or returning to God. we shopen to the destruction of the herte. The destruction of Ierusalem is prophesied, for the malice of they^r hertes.

I Israel, if thou wylt turne the, then turne vnto me, saith the Lord. And if thou wylt put away thynne abominacions out of my syght, thou shalt not be moued: And thalt stonde. The Lord saith: in truth in equity and ryghtousnesse: and all people shall be fortunable and fortun^y in hym. For thus saith the Lord to all Iuda and Ierusalem: plow your land, & sow not among the thornes.

Be circumcised in the Lord, and cutte awaye the foreskinne of your hertes, all ye of Iuda, and all the indwellers of Ierusalem: that my indignacion breake not oute lyke fyre, and kynble, so that no man maye quenche it, because of the wickednes of your ymaginacions.

De. x. b.

Speache in Iuda and Ierusalem: crye out and speake: blowe the trumpets in the land: crye & euery man may heare, and say: Gather you together, and we will go in to stronge cityes. Set vpon the roken in Syon, speede you, and make no taryinge, for I wyl bringe a greate plage, and a greate destruction from the North. For the spople of the Gentyles is broken vpon from his place, as a lyon out of his denne, & he maye make the lande waste, and destrope the cities, so that no man maye dwell therein.

Wherefore gird your selues aboute wth sacke clothe, (a) mourne and wepe, for the fearefull wrath of the Lord shall not be wthdrawen from you.

At the same tyme (saith the Lord) the herte of the kynge and of the princes shall be gone, the prestes shall be as they^r dead, and the prophetes shall be sore aseyed. Then sayde I: O Lord God, haste thou then disceyued this people, and Ierusalem, saying: ye shall haue peace, and now the swearde goeth thorow their lynes: Then shall it be sayed to the people, and to Ierusalem: (b) the cometh a warre wth the North: thorow the waye of my people, but neyther to slayne, ne to cleanse.

(c) After that there shall come vnto me a stronge wynd, and then wyl I also geue sentence vpon them. For lo, he cometh downe lyke as a cloud, & his charerers are lyke a storme wynde: his horsemen are swifter then the Eagle. Wo vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Ierusalem, washe thynne herte from wickednesse, that thou mayst be helped. Howe longe shall thy noy some thoughtes remayne wth the?

For a voyce from Dan, and from the hyl of Ephraim speaketh out, and telleth of a destruction. Behold the Ierushalem warnyng, and preache vnto her, that her destroyers are comynge frome farre countreys. They tel the cities of Iuda the same also, they shall geue the warnyng in euery place lyke as I watche mine in the feild. For they haue prouoked me to wrath, saith the Lord.

Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue brought I vnto this: this is thine owne wickednesse & disobedience that hath possessed thynne herte: ad my bely, ad my bely (saith thou crye,) howe is my herte so sore? my hert pantech wth thin me, I can not be styll, Isa. i. b.

The v. Chapter.

for I haue heerd the crying of the scorpions and peales of warre.

They crye murder vpon murder, the hole lande shall perishe. Inmediatlye my tentes were destroyed, and my hangynge in the twinklinge of an eye. How long shall I se the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trumpettes?

Euertheles, thys shall come vpon the because my people is become folishe, and hath utterly no vnderstandinge. They are the chyldren of folysheesse, & without any discrecion. So do euyl they haue wyllynge, but to do well they haue no wyllynge. I haue looked vpon the earth: and se, it is waste and voyde. I looked towarde heauen, and it had no shynne.

I beheld the mountaynes, and they trembled, and all the hylls were in feare: I looked aboute me, and ther was no body, & all the byrds of the ayre were away. I marked well, and the plowed fildes was become waste: yea all they cities were broken downe at the presence of the Lorde, and indignacion of his wrath.

For thus haith the Lorde sayd: The hole land shall be desolat, yet wil I not the haue done. And therfore let the earth mourne, & let the beaue be sorowfoule: for the thyng that I haue purposed and taken vpon me to do, shall not repent me, and I wyl not go from it. The hole land shall lye for the noyse of horsemen and bowmen: they shall run into the denues, into woods, and clyme vpon the stony rocks. All the cryes shall be voyde, and no man dwellynge therein.

What wylt thou now do, thou beynge destroyed? For though thou clodest thy selfe with scarlet, and deckest the thyng golde, though thou paintest thy selfe with colours, yet shalt thou be as thy selfe in vaine.

For those that hyre to haue ben thy great fauourers shall abhorre the, and goo about to slea the. For, me thynke I heare a noyse, lyke as it were a woman traueyllynge, or one labourynge of her first childe: Euen the voyce of the daughter Sion, that casteth out her armes, & smoweth, sayynge: Ah, mo is me, how sore vexed and saynt is my herte, for them that are slayne?

The notes of the. xiiij. Chapter.

(a) To mourne in scripture, signifieth some time to make an vnmeasurable and grievous lamentation, as when a man for impatience and griefe on tith his owne bodye, reareth his clothes, reareth his hear, &c. So in. Mat. xxiii. e. And then shall all the kyndes of the earth mourne.

(b) Some reader: he byp wnderstandeth out of the hygher places of the wyldernes, by the way of the daughter of my people &c. They vnderstand by the waye, the kyng of Egypt. And by the way of his people, the way whiche he ledde his people whē they came forth of Egypt, whiche was through the wyldernes. Exo. xiii. v.

(c) After this shall there come vnto us a strange myne &c. By this wnde is vnderstande the kyng of Babilon and his armye.

The Prophecy

The v. Chapter.

In Jewrye is there no rightous or saynt: full man founde, eyther amongst the people, or the rulers, for whose sake the lord should spare the ctye: wherfore Jewrye is destroyed of the Assyrians.

Like thou shalt Ierusalem: beholde and se: Seke thou shalt Ierusalem also within, if ye can fynde one man that doeth equal and righte, or that labourer to be sayntfull: and I shall spare hym (saith the Lorde.) For though they can say: the Lord lyueth, yet do they sweare to dysceyne: Where as thou (o Lord) * look only vpon saynt and truthe.

Thou hast scourged the, but they take no repentance: thou hast corrected the for amēdment, but they refused thy correction. They made theyr faces harder the a stone, and wolde not amēde.

Therfore I thoughte in my selfe: yet aduertise they are so simple and foolish, that they vnderstande nothyng of the Lordes waye, and iudgements of oure God. Therfore wyl I goo vnto theyr heades and rulers, and talke with them: if they knowe the way of the Lorde, and the iudgements of oure God. But these (in lyke maner) haue broken the pike, and burst the bandes in sunder.

* Wherfore a lyon oute of the woode shall hurte them, and a wolfe in the euenynge shall destroye them. The ear of the mountayne shall lye louchynge by theyr ctyes, to teare in pieces all the that come thertout. For theyr offences are many, & theyr departing away is greete. Shoulde I the for all thys haue mercy vpon the? Theyr childre haue forsake me, & sworn by the that are no gods. And albeit they were bounde to me in marriage, yet they fel to aduoutry, & haunted barlotres houses.

In the desyre of vncleyn lust, they are become lyke to stoned horses, eury man neperth at his neygghours wyfe: shoulde I not correcte thys saynt the Lorde?

Shoulde I not be auenged of eury people, that is lyke vnto thys? Clyme vp vpon theyr walles, beate them downe, but destroye them not utterly, * cut of theyr bryanches, because they are not the Lordes. For vn sayntfullye hath the house of Isracil and Iuda forsaken me, saynt the Lorde. They haue deuied the Lorde and sayde: it is not he. Tush, there shall no mysfortune come vpon vs, we shall se neperth swerde nor hunger. As for the warrynge of the propheies, they take it but for a word: yea ther is none of these whiche wyl tell them, that suche thynges shall happen vnto them.

Wherfore thus saynt the Lorde God of hostes: because ye speake suche wordes, beholde: The wordes that are in thy mouth wyl I turne to fyre, and make the people to be wood, that I may consume them.

Lo, I wyl bynne a people vpon you

The destruction of the Jewes. The Lord mooueth the people to amendment, rechevynge by their synnes. He recheveth the lying doctrine of the Prophets and pyelles, and theyr countenances also.

At the same tyme, sayeth the Lord, the bones of the kinges of Iuda, the bones of the wyse men, the bones of the priests and prophetes, yea and the bones of the kinges of Ierusalem, shall be brought out of their graues, and layde against the sunne, the moone, all the beauly host, whom they loued, whom they serued, whom they ratified, whom they sought to worshippe: They shall neyther be gathered together, ne buried, but shall lye vpon the earth to their shame and despising.

And all they that remaine of this wicked generation, shall desire more to dye then to lyue whersoever they remaine, & wher as I scatter them, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Thus shalt thou say vnto them also, Thus sayeth the Lord: Do men fall so, that they arise not up agayne? And turne they so farre away & they neuer chert? Wherfore then is this people and Ierusalem gone so far backe, that they turne not agayne. They are euer the longer, the more obstinate, and wyl not be conuerted.

Howe dare ye say this, we are wyse, we haue the lawe of the Lord among vs?

Beholde the disceyfull pen of the scrybes, setteth forth lyes: therefore shall they be confounded, they shall be a frayd & taken: for lo, they haue caste oute the word of the Lord: what wysedome can then be among them? Wherfore I wyl geue their wyues vnto strangers, and theyr felldes to destruction.

From the lowest vnto the hiest, they folowe all synfull lye: and from the priest vnto the priest, they deale all with lyes. Neuertheles, they heale the hurt of my people with sweete wordes, saying: peace, peace, wherther is no peace at all.

Jer. xvi. c.

The xi. Chapter.

(A) Moreover I will gather them in, sayth the Lord, so that there shall not be one grape upon the vine, ne one fig upon the fig tree and the leaves shall be plucked off.

Then will I cause them to depart & say: why prolong we the time? Let us gather our selves together, and go into the strong city, that we be in rest: for the Lord our God hath put us to silence, and (b) given us water more with gall to drinke, because we have sinned against him.

Woloked for peace, and we fare not better, we waited for the time of health, & lo, here is nothing but trouble.

Then shall the noise of his horses be heard from Dan, the whole lande shall be asayed at the neighing of his strong horses, for they shall go in and denoure the lande, with all that is in it: the cypres, and those that dwell therein. Moreover, I will send

(c) Cockatrices and serpentes among you (which they will not be charmed) and they shall bite you, sayth the Lord.

For so it is come upon me, and heavynesse vereth my heart: for lo, the voice of the cryenge of my people, is heard from a farre countrey: is not the Lord in Zion? Is not the King in her? Therefore when have they grieved me (saith the Lord saye) with their images and soolye strange facions?

The havenest is gone, the summer hath an ende, and we are not healed. I am sore vexed, because of the hurt of my people: I am heave, and abashed: for there is no more temple at Gabaon, & there is no sanctuary that can heale the hurt of my people.

The Notes of the. xlii. Chapter.

(a) Moreover I will gather them in. &c. The meaning is: I will gather the Jewes from all the partes of Jewye unto Jerusalem. There shall no figge, grape, or other fruit remaine in the villages or fieldes: and so shall they have no luste to abide there, but shall be fayne to flye to the citye. Wherfore caused he them to flye, and ther also I myght them, and delivered them into their enemies hands. Whiche punishment had they sinned deserved.

(b) I have given us water more with gall to drinke, that is, hath wrapped us in myserie & wretched chyldeome.

(c) I will send Cockatrices and serpentes. &c. That is, I will bring among you a fierce company of scoundraves, with whose deadly arrows and barres and tryes, ye shall be slayne as though ye should perishe by the strokes of venomous byttinges of Cockatrices & serpentes.

and go seeke the, for they be all aduenterers and a thynkyng sort. They bend theyr shylles lyke bowes, to shoote oute lyes. As for the truth, they maye nottunge awaye withall in the worlde. For they go from one wickednes to another, & hold nothing of me, sayth the Lord. Yea, one must keepe hym selfe from another, no man maye safely trust his own brother: for one brother hath determined another, & one neyghbor begyleth another. Yea one dissembleth to another, & they deale wth no truth. They have practised theyr tonges to lye, & take great paynes to do myserie. They have set their stole in the midst of disceyte, & for verye dissimylng falsehead they will not knowe me, sayth the Lord. Therefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes: behold, I will mete them & trye them, for what shuld I els do to my people? Their tonges are lyke sharpe arrows to speake disceyte. Wherfore theyr mouth they speak peaceably to theyr neyghbour, but secretly they lay waite for hym. Shuld I not punish the for these thynges sayth the Lord? or shuld I not be avenged of any such people as this? Upon the multitude of theyr iniquities I will take up a lamentacion & sorowful crye, & a mourninge upon the faire playnes of Jerusalem, namely, how they are so blyt by the sword, & how they are so vexed by the bowe, that they have no more: yea a man shall not deace one brast cipe there.

they that dwell in the wyldernes. For all the Gentyles are vncircumcised in þe fleshe, but all the house of Israel are vncircum-

The .x. Chapter.

The constellacions of the starres are not to be feared. Of the wickednes of Idols, and of the power of God. Of myll curates.

Hear the worde of the Lorde, that he speaketh vnto the, O thou house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Ye shal not lerne after the maner of the heathen, & ye shall not be afrayed for the tokens of heauen: for the heathen are afrayed of suche, & all the customes and lawes of þe Gentyles are nothyng but vanyte. They hew down a tre in the wood wth þe bades of the workman, & sacpon it wth þe axes: then couer it ouer wth golde or syluer, they fasten it wth nayles and hammeres, that it moue not. It standeth as a pyke as þe palme tree, it canerther speake ne goo, but must be borne. Be not ye afrayed of suche, for they can doo neyther good ne euill. But ther is none lyke vnto thee, O Lorde, and great is þe name of thy power. Who wold not feare thee? Or what kynge of the Pannies wold not obey thee?

B For amonge all the wyse men of the Pannies, and in all theyr kyngedomes, there is none that maye be lykened vnto the. They are all together vnlearned and vnwyse. All theyr connyng is but vanytie: namelye woode, syluer whych is brought out of Tharsus, and beaten to plates, and golde from Sphyx: a worke that is made wth the hand of the crafter man and the casser, clothed wth yelow speke & scarlet: euen so is the worke of theyr wyse men all together. But the Lorde is a true God, a lynyng God, and an euclastynge king.

Yf he be wrothe, the earth shaketh: all the Gentyles may not abyde bys indignaciō.

As for theyr gods, it may well be sayde of them: they are no gods & neyther made heauen neyther earth: therefore shall they perishe from the earth, and from all thynges vnder heauen. But (as for oure God) he made the earth wth bys power, and wth bys wysedome hath he fynished the whole compass of the world, wth bys discrecyon hath he spred oure the heauens.

At bys voyce the waters gather togy-ther in the abyss, he draweth vp the clou-sselesse Jacobs porcion is not suche: but it is he that hath made all thynges, and Israel is the rod of bys suberbitaunce. The Lorde of hostes is his name. Put away thyne uncleannes oute of the lande, thou that arte in the stronge cyties. For thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I will now thrust out the inhabitants of this lande a greate way off, and trouble them in suche foure as they shall no more be founde.

Alas howe am I hurt? Alas howe payne full are my scourges vnto me? For I consped this sorowe by my selfe, and I must suffer it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my cordes are broken. My chyldren are gone fro me, & can no more be found. Howe haue I none to spede oute my tent, or to cyon oute of the North: to make the crytyes of Iuda a wyldernesse, and a dwel-

A curse of them that obey not the worde of Goddes promise. The people of Iuda followinge the steppes of theyr fathers, worshipped straunge goddes. The Lorde sayeth he will not heare the Jewes, and forbyddeth also Jeremie to praye for them.

This is an other sermon, whiche the Lorde commaunded Jeremie to preache, sayinge: Heare the wordes of the couenaunte and speake vnto all Iuda, and to al that dwel at Ierusalem. And say vnto the: thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: Cursed be euery one that is not obedient vnto the wordes of thys couenaunte: whiche I commaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought the out of Egypt from the (a) piron fornaice, sayinge: Be obedient vnto my voyce, and do accordyng to all that I commaunde you: so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God, and will kepe my promise that I haue sworn vnto your fathers: namelye that I wolde geue them a lande whiche floweth with mylke and honny, as yee are come to passe thys day. Then answered I, and sayde. Amen. It is euen so, Lorde, as thou sayest.

When the Lorde sayde vnto me agayne: preache thys in the euyres of Iuda, & round about Ierusalem, and saye: Heare the wordes of this couenaunte, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exhorted your fathers, euer sythens the tyme I broughte them oute of the lande of Egypte, vnto thys daye. I gaue them warnyng by tymes, sayinge: Harken vnto my voyce. Neuerthelesse they wolde not obeye me, nor enclayne theyr eares vnto me, but folowed the wycked imaginations of theyr owne hertes.

And therefore haue I accused them as transgressours of all the wordes of thys couenaunte that I gaue them to kepe, whiche they (not withstandinge) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: It is tolde out that holt Israel, and all these citezens of Ierusalem, are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemies of theyr forefathers, whiche hadde no luste to heare my worde. Euen lykewyse haue these also folowed straunge goddes, and worshipped them. The house of Israel & Iuda haue broken my couenaunte, which I made with theyr fathers.

Therefore thus sayth the Lorde: Behold, I will sende a plague amonge you, wherby ye shall not be hable to escape: & I doubt ye cry vnto me, I will not heare you. Whiche shall the townes of Iuda, and the citezens of Ierusalem goe and call vpon theyr goddes, vnto whome they made theyr oblacions, but they are not hable to helpe them in tyme of their trouble. For as manye cities as thou hast, O Iuda, so manye goddes haste thou also. And loke howe manye steres there be in the, O Ierusalem, so manye shamefull sulcers haue ye set vp, to offer vpon them vnto Baal. But praye not thou for thys people: byd neyther prayse ne praye for them, for though they cry vnto me in theyr trouble, yet will I not heare them.

(b) Thou beloued, why dost thou so shamefull great blasphemies in my house? Euen as though that holpe the myght absolue the, specially whiche thou hast made thy host of thy wyckednes. The Lorde called the a grene olyue tre, a fayre one, a frutefull one, a goodlye one; but now that there is a contrarye report of the abode, he will burne the vp, and destroy thy branches. For the Lorde of hostes that planted the, hath deuised a plague for the. O thou house of Israel and Iuda, for the euill that ye haue done to prouoke hym to wrath, in that ye dyd seruite vnto Baal.

This, O Lorde, haue I lerned of the, and vnderstande it: for thou haste shewed me theyr imaginations. But I (as a meke lambe) was caried awaye to be slayne: not knowyng that they hadde deuyfed such a counsel agaynst me, sayinge: we will destroy thys meate with (c) wood, & dryue hym out of the land (d) of the lyuynge, that thys name shall neuer be thought vpon.

Therefore I will beseeche the nowe, O Lorde of hostes, thou righteous iudge, thou that repest the reynes and the bettes, let me see the auenged of them: for vnto the haue I committed my cause. The Lorde therfore spake thus of the cyprians of Anathoth, that sought to sleme, sayinge: Preache not vnto vs in the name of the Lorde, or elles thou shalt dye of oure handes: Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I will vspite you. Your younge men shall perishe with the sword, your sonnes and your daughters shall utterly dye of hongre, so that none shall remayne. For vpon the cyprians of Anathoth will I bringe a plague, the yere of their visitacion.

As lyke as so that I loued so well, haue I geuen in to the handes of myne enemies. Myne herpyage is become vnto me, as a lion in the wood. It cryed oute vpon me, therefore haue I forsaken it. Myne herpyage is vnto me as a speckled byde, a byrd of diuerse colours is vpon it. So hence and gather al the beastes of the feldes together, that they maye eat it vp.

(b) Diuerse heardmen haue broken doune my byneparde, and troden vpon my porcion. Of my pleasaunt porcion, they haue made a wyldernes. They haue sayde it waste: and now þe it is waste, it spgyerh vnto me. Yea, the hole lande lyeth waste, & no man regardeth it.

The destroyers come ouer the heathen euery waye, for the swerde of the Lord shall consume from the one ende of the land to the other, & no fleshe shall haue rest. They shall come to breake, & scape thornes. They shall take herpyage in possession, but it shall do them no good. And ye shall be confounded of your owne wynnynge, because of the great wrath of the Lord.

(c) Thus sayeth the Lord, vpon all myne euill neyghbours that saye bande on mine herpyage, whiche I haue geuen my people of Israell: Beholde, I wyl plucke them (namely Israell) oute of theyr land, and put oute the house of Iuda from the. And when I haue cored the out, I wyl be at one wyth them agayne, and wyl haue mercy vpon the: and bringe them agayne, euery man to his owne herpyage, and in to his lande.

And if they (namely that trouble my people) wyl learne the wayes of them to swere by my name: The Lord lyueth, (lyke as they lerned my people to swere by Baal) then shall they be rekened amonge my people. But if they wyl not obeye, then wyl I roote oute the same folke, and destroye them sayeth the Lord.

(a) Thus spake the wyched of the Prophete by the way of rebuke. As though they had sayd by a parable. Whē thou wast but in a litle town, thou couldest not beare the persecution of thine owne citizens & householdes folkes: howe wylt thou then beare the pynnes and chiefe rulers of Iuda, and the Nobles of Ierusalem. And after, by the practicable sure lande, is vnderstand Iudath, and by the pyde of Jordan, Ierusalem. The lytell riuier of Anathoth is not to be compared to the great flowing streames of Jordan. If he were dyspyled of his owne auditors, howe shoulde he be heard of other, and those greater and excellent?

Mouet, thus sayeth the Lord vnto me: go thy way & get the a lyne bryche, and gyde it aboute thy loynes, and let it not be wet. The I got me a bryche, accordyng to the commaundement of the Lord, & put it aboute my loynes. After this the Lord spake vnto me agayne: Take the bryche that thou hast prepared, about the, and get the by, and go vnto Euphrates, & hie it in a hole of the rocke. So wente I, and byd it, as the Lord commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, that the Lord spake vnto me: Arise, and get the to Euphrates & set the bryche thence, whiche I commaunded the to byde there.

Then went I to Euphrates, and digged vp, & toke the bryche frome the place where I hadde byd it: and beholde the bryche was corrupte, so that it was profitable for nothyng.

Then sayeth the Lord vnto me: thus sayeth the Lord: euen so wyl I corrupt the pyde of Iuda, and the haulte mynde of Ierusalem. This people is a wyched people, they wyl not hear my worde, they folowe the wyche, & magnacions of their own heart, & hang vpon straunge gods, the haue they serued and worshipped: & therefore they shalbe as this bryche that settyeth for nothyng.

Thou shalt not praye to do thys people good. For though they faste, I wyll not heare they prayers. And though they offer burnt offerpynges & sacrifices, yet wyll not I accepte the. For I wyll destroy the wth the sword hunger and pestilence. The answered I: O Lord God, the prophetes will I pouce thei^r wyckednes vpon them.

Thys shalt thou say also vnto the. Myne greate harme, and shall perishe with a greate plage: for if I go into the fyeld, lo, it city: lo, they be al famished of hunger.

Yea, thei^r prophets also and p^riestes shall be led into an unknowne lande. Hast thou then utterly forsaken Iuda (said I?) Dost thou so abhorre Sion? Dost thou so pla-ged vs, that we can be healed no more? We looked for peace, and ther cometh no good: for the tyme of health, & lo here is nothyng

The xv. Chapter.

The Lord wil not heare Moses or Aaron, if they pray for the people, but wil wrappe them in many myseryes. The cause of such greate myseryes.

I Then spake the lord vnto me, and said:
I haue sent Moses and Samuel Roode before me, yet haue I no bett to thes people. Dyrue them a way, that they maye go oute of my syghre. And if they saue vnto the. Whypther shall we go, then tel the: The Lord giveth you thys answer: Some vnto death, some to the swerd, some to hunger, some into captivity. For I will bryng four plages vpon them, sayeth the Lord. The swerd shall strangle them, the dogs shall deuour them, the foules of the ayre, and beas-tes of the earth shall eat them vp, and destroy them. I will scatter them about also, in al kyngdomes and landes to be plagued, because of Manasses the sone of Ezechias kyng of Iuda, for the thynges that he dyd in Ierusalem.

Who shall then haue pity vpon the, O Ierusalem? Who shall be sorp for the? O who shall make intercession to obtayne peace for the, saying thou goest fro me, & turnest back: maide sayeth the Lord: Therefore I will stretch out myne hand agaynst thee, to destroy thee, and I will not be entreated. I will scatter the abroad wth the same on euery syde of the land, I will wast my people and destroy them for they haue had no luste to turne from thei^r owne wayes. I will make thei^r wydomes moode in number then the sands of the sea. Vpon the mothers of thei^r chyldren, I shall bryng a destroyer in the noone day. Sodeynly and butwates shall I send a seare vpon thei^r cities. She that hath borne seven chyldren, shall haue none, her bett shall be ful of sorrow.

The sunne shall faile her in the cleare day, when ye shall be confounded and sayntre for very beaurnes. As for those that remaine, I will deliuer them vnto the swerde of thei^r enemies, sayeth the Lord. O mother, alas that euer thou diddest beare me, an enemy and hated of the whole lab: I haue I neuer lent ne receiued vpon vsury, yet all men speake euyl vpon me.

And the Lord answered me: Lead not I the the vnto good? Come not I to the when thou arte in trouble, and helpe the when thyne enemy oppresseth the? Wotth one y^r but an other, or one merat that cometh from the North another? As for your cryches and recourse, I will geue them out in to a pray, not for any mouny, but because of al your synnes that ye haue done in al your coastes. And I will bryng you wth your enemies into a land that ye knowe not:
for the fure that is kindled in my indignation, shall burne you vp.

O Lord (sayd I then) thou knowest all thynges, therefore remember me, and vset me, deliuer me from my persecuters. Recceiue not my cause in thy longe wrath, yet thou knowest that for thy sake I suffer rebuke.
When I had found thy wordes, I was rev^lgedely: they haue made my bett ioyful and glad. For I call vpon thy name, O lord god of hosts. I dwell not among the scor-ners, neyther is my deliue therein: but I dwell only in the feare of thy hand, for thou haste spiled me wth bytternes. Shall my beaurnes endure for ever? Are my plages the so greate, that they maye neuer be healed?
Wilt thou be as a water that falleth, and can not continue?

Vpon these wordes, thus sayd the Lord vnto me: Yf thou wylte turne agayne, I shall set the in my security: and if thou wilt take out the thyng that is precious from the vyle, thou shalt be euen as myne owne mouth. They shall conuerse vnto thee, but turne not thou vnto the: & so shall I make the a strong wal of Steele agaynst this people. They shall syght agaynst thee, but they shall not preuaile: For I myselfe will be

The propheticall temple of the Jewes.
He sheweth, that worshyping of Idols and the contempt of Gods law, is the cause of theyr miserie. He propheseth the captivity of Babylon, and theyr deliuerance from thence agayne. The tollage of the Gentyles.

Mercouer thus sayd the Lord vnto me: Thou shalt take the no wyfe, ne beget chyldren in this place. For of the chyldren that at borne in this place of theyr mothers that haue borne them, and of theyr fathers that haue begotten them in this lande, thus sayeth the Lord: They shal dye an horrible death, no manne shal mourne for them, ne burye them: but they shal lye as dounge vpon the carthe. They shal perishe thow the sword and hunger, and theyr bodies shalbe meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the earth. A-gayne thus sayeth the Lord: I wyl vnto them that come togither for to mourne and wepe, for I haue take my peace from this people (saith the Lord) yea my fauour and my mercy. And in this lande shal they dye olde and ponge, and shal not be buried: no man shal bewaile, no mā shal clipp or haue hym selfe for them.

There shal not one byspte another, to mourne with them for theyr dead, or to co-fort them. One shal not offere an other the cuppe of consolacyon, to forget theyr beauynes for father and mother. Thou shalt not go into theyr feast house to sitte downe, much lesse to eate or drynke with the. For thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: (a) Behold, I wyl take away oute of this place, the voyce of myrth and glad-nesse, the voyce of the bydegrome and of the byde: yea and that in your dayes, that ye maye see it.

Now when thou shewest this people al these wordes, and they say vnto the: What fore hath the Lord deuyed all this greate plage for vs? Or what is the effect & sinne that we haue done agaynst the Lord our God? Then make thou them this answer:
Because your fathers haue forsaken me (saith the Lord) and haue cleaued vnto strange Goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshyped: but me haue they forsaken, and haue not kept my lawe. And ye with your shameful blasphemies haue exceeded the wyckednes of your fathers. For euerye one of you foloweth the frowarde and euyl ymaginacion of his heart, and is not obedient vnto me.

Therefore wyl I caste you oute of this land, into a lande that ye and your fathers know not: and ther shal ye serue strange you no fauour. Beholde therefore (saith the Lord) the dayes are come, that it shal

Beholde (saith the Lord) I wyl sende oute manye (b) synners to take them: and after that wyl I sende oute manye hun-taines and hylls, and oute of the Lawes of stones. For myne eyes beholde all theyr wayes, and they can not be hydde fro my face, neyther can theyr wycked deedes be kept close oute of my sight. But syt wyl I sarpently rewarde theyr shame-full blasphemies and synes, wherewith they haue despyled my lande: Namelye with theyr synnyng Idols and abhomy-nacions, wherewith they haue despyled my lande: Namelye with theyr synnyng Idols and abominacions, wherewith they haue fylled myne herptage. O Lord my strenght, my power, and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentyls shal come vnto the,

from the endes of the worlde, and say: Cle-uere oute fathers haue cleaued vnto Ihesu, theyr Idols are but vayne and vniusetable. Howe can a manne make those his Gods, which are not able to be gods? And therefore I wyl once teach them saith the Lord, I wyl shewe them my hande and

The Prophecy

commpted: the Senatours that were the wyldest: and the prophetes whych wanted not the word of God. Come (sayd they) let vs cut out bys tong, and let vs not regard bys wordes. Consider me, O Lorde, and heare the voyce of myne enemies. Do they not recompence euyl for good, when they dig a pyt for my soule? Remember, howe that I stood before the, to speake for the, and to turne away thy wrath from them.

Plal. cxl. a Plal. lxxv. b

Therefore let theyr chyldren dye of hunger, & let the be oppressed with the sword. Let theyr wyues be robbed of theyr chyldren, and become wyddowes: lette theyr husbandes be slayne, lette their younge men be kyled with the sword in the field. Let theyr noyse be heard out of theyr houses, when the murderet cometh sodely vpon them: For they haue digged a pyt to take me, and laid snares for my feete. Yet Lorde, thou knowest al theyr counsell, that they haue deuyed to slay me. And therefore forgue them not theyr wickednes, and let not theyr synne be put out of thy sight, but let them be iudged before thee as the gylty. Thus shalte thou doo vnto them in the tyme of thy indignacion.

Jerem. xl. d

The.xix.Chapter.

The prophete sheweth the destruction of Ierusalem, for contempt and despyng of the word of God.

Moreouer, thus sayd the Lorde vnto Jeremy: So thy way, and bye thee an earthen pytcher, and bring forth the Senatours, and chiefe priests into the valley of the chyldre of Hennon, which lieth before the porte that is made of bryk, and shewe them ther the wordes that I shal tel the, and saye thus vnto the: Heare the word of the Lorde, ye kynnges of Iuda, & ye rulers of Ierusalem: Thus saith the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. Behold I wyl bringe such a plage vpon this place, that shal beares of al that beare it, shal glowe. And that because they haue forsaken me, and vnbalowed this place, and haue offered in it vnto straunge gods: to whom neyther they, theyr fathers, ne the kynnges of Iuda haue knownen. They haue filled this place also with the bloud of innocētes, for they haue set vp an altier vnto Baal, to burne theyr chyldren for a burnt offering vnto Baal, which I neither commaunded, ne charged the, necher thought once theyr vpon.

Jer. xl. e
Jerem. xl. e

Beholde therefore, the tyme cometh (sayth the Lorde) that this place shal no more be called Tophet, ne the valley of the chyldren of Hennon, but the valley of slaughter. For in this place wyl I slay the Senatours of Iuda and Ierusalem, and kyll them downe with the swerde in the syght of theyr enemyes, and of them that seke theyr spurs. And theyr dead carcasses wyl I geue to be meat for the soules of the wyld, & beasts of the field. And I wyl make this citie so desolate, and despised, & whoso goeth therby, shal be abashed and tēst vpon her on her, because of al her plagues.

Chap. xxi. d * I will fede them also with the flesh De. xxviii d of theyr sonnes and theyr daughters. Yea every one shal care up an other in the beset-tyng and stragghnes, wherwith theyre enemies (that seeke theyr lyues) shal keepe them in. And the pitcher shal thou breake in the syght of the men, that shal be with the, and say vnto them: Thus saith the Lord of hostes: euen so will I destroy this people and ctype as a Potter breaketh a vessel, that can not be made hole agayne.

111. cc. xlii D In Topheth shal they be buried, for they shal haue none other place. This will I do vnto this place also saith the Lord, and to them that dwel therein: Yea I will do to this city, as vnto Topheth. (For the houses of Jerusalem and the houses of the kinges of Iuda are defiled, like as Topheth) because of al the houses, in whose parlers they byd sacrifice vnto all the host of heauen, and poured out drynke offerings vnto straunge gods. And so Jeremie came from Topheth wher the lord had sent him to prophesye, and stode in the court of the house of the Lord and spake to al the people: Thus saith the Lord of hostes the god of Israel: Behold I wyl byng vpon this city and vpon euery towne about it: al the plagues that I haue deuyled agaynst them: for they haue bene obstinate, and wold not obey my wordes.

The.xx.Chapter.

D Jeremie to smitten and cast into prison, for preaching of the word of God. He prophesyeth the captiuitie of Babylon. He complayneth that he is a mocking stock for the word of God. He is compelled by the spirit to preach the word, will he, wyl he not.

Lord, heard Jeremie preache so sted-fastly: he smote Jeremie, and put hym in the stocks, that are by the hyghgate of Ben Iamin, in the house of the Lord. The next day folowynge, Ishaiah brought Jeremie out of the stocks agayne. And sayde Jeremie vnto hym: The Lord shal cal thee no more Ishaiah (that is excellent and increasynge) but Magor (that is fearful and afraid) euery wher. For thus saith the Lord, behold, I will make the afraid, the thy selfe, and al that saunte thee: whiche shal perishe with the sword of theyr enemies, euen before thy face.

13 And I wyl geue hole Iuda vnder the power of the kyng of Babylon, whiche shal cary some vnto Babylon prisoners, and slay some with the sword. Moreover, all the substance of this land, al their precious and gorgeous workes, al costlynes, and al the treasure of the kynges of Iuda wyl I geue into the bandes of theyr enemies whiche shal spoyle them, and cary them vnto Babylon. But as for thee (O Ishaiah) thou shalt be caryed vnto Babylon with al thyne household, and to Babylon shalt thou come wher thou shalt dye and be buried: thou and al thy saunters, to whom thou hast preached tres. O Lord, thou makest me weake, but thou restrykest me, and makest me strong agayne: Al the day long am I despyled and laughed to scoone of e-uery man: because I haue not preached lying agaynst malicious tyranny, & shewed them of destruction. For the which cause they call the word of the Lord in my teeth, and take me euer to the word.

Wherefore, I thought from hence forth not to speak of hym, ne to preach any more in his name. But the word of the Lord was a very burning fyre in my heart and in my bones, which when I would haue stopped I myght not. For why I heard so many derisyonis and blasphemies, yea euen of myne owne companions, and of such as were conuersant with me: which wente about to make me a feyed, sayinge: vpon hym, let vs go vpon hym, to seare hym, and make hym hold his tong: that he may o-uercome hym and be auenged of hym. But the Lord stode by me lyke a myghty gyaunt: therfore my persecuters fel, & coulde do nothing. They shal be soze confounded, for they haue done vnwisly, they shal haue an euerslastynge shame. And now, O Lord of hostes, thou righteous searcher (whiche knowest the reynes and the very heartes) let me see them punished, for vnto thee I com-myt my cause.

Singe vnto the Lord and praisse him, for he hath deliuered the soule of the oppressed, from the hand of the violence. (b) Cursed be the day, wherin I was borne: unhappy be the day wherin my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man that brought me further the pynnes, to make hym gladder, sayinge: thou hast gott a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cities which the Lord turned vpside downe (when he hadde heard long the wycked rumoure of them) because he heare me not, as soone as I came out of my mothers wombe, and because my mother was not my graue berseife, that the byrd myght not haue come oute, but remayned still in her. Wherefore came I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue experyence of labour and sorowe, and to sear my lyfe with shame?

patience in holy men, but as the confessor of the fraptyr of man, complaynyng thus vnto hym that onely can helpe and comfort them.

The. xxi. Chapter.

The prophesyeth that zedekiah shalbe taken and the cytye burned.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie what tyme as kyng zedekiah sente vnto hym. Wherbut the sonne of Belchiah, and Sophoniah the son of Maasiah priest, saying: Alike counsel at the Lorde (we pray the) of out behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon beliegeth vs, if the Lorde (peradueture) wyl deale with vs, accordinge to his maruelous power, and take hym from vs.

Then spake Jeremie: Behold zedekiah thys answer. Thus sayth the Lorde, & Lorde God of Israel: behold, I wyl turne backe the weapens that ye haue in your hands, wherewith ye fyght agaynst the kynge of Babylon and the Chaldees, which besiege you round about the wals, and I will bring them together in the myddest of thys city, and I my selfe will fight against you, with an out stretched hand, and with a mighty arme in greate dyspleasure and terribile wraith, and wyl smyte them, that dwel in thys cytye: yea both me and cattel shal dye of the pestilence.

B And after thys (sayth the Lorde) I shall deliuer zedekiah & king of Iuda and his seruauntes, his people (and such as are escaped in the city from the pestilence sword, and hunger) into the power of Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon: yea into the han-des of theyr enemyes; into the handes of those that folow vpon theyr lyues, wherby shal smyte them with the sword: they shal not pity them, they shal not spare the, they shal haue no mercy vpon them.

A And vnto thys people thou shalt saye: Dent. xxx. c. Thus sayth the Lorde: Behold, I lay be-
Je. xlviii. fore you the map of Ierusalem and beate. Who Jer. xlviii. a so abyedeth in thys cytye, shal perishe: either with the sword, with hunger, or with pestilence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees part that besiege it, he shall saue his lyfe, and shal (a) wyne his soule for a pray. For I haue set my face against thys cytye (sayth the Lorde) to plague it, and to do it no good. It must be giuen into the hande of the kynge of Babylon, and be brent with fyre.

And vnto the house of the king of Iuda, say thus: Heare the word of the Lorde (O thou house of David) for thus sayth & Lorde: Agynst rightousnes, and that soone, be-liuer the oppressed from vpolent power: or euer my terribile wraith breake out lyke a fyre, and burne so, that no man may quench it, because of the wyckednes of your rmagynacions. Behold, (sayth the Lorde) I will come vpon you, that dwel in the halles, rockes, and felde, and saye: Luffe, who wyl make vs afeared? who wyl come into our houses? For I wyl vset you (sayth the Lorde) because of the wyckednes of your inuencions, and wyl kyndle suche a fyre in your wood, as wyl consume al that is aboute you.

The Notes of the. xxi. Chapter.

(a) What wyl his soule for a pray, that is, shall escape daunger: It is all one with that whiche goeth before, he shall saue his lyfe: his soule, that is, his lyfe shalbe vnto hym as a pray, because he shoulde vterly haue lost it, if he hadde brdden in Ierusalem, and by synge vnto the Chaldees, he shoulde win it: such as a man wins with a pray in battayle.

The. xxii. Chapter

The rebuyeth the king of Iuda to iudgement and rightousnes. Why Ierusalem is brought into captiuitie. The deathe of Belum the sonne of Josiah is prophesied.

Thus saied the Lorde also: So down in to the house of the king of Iuda, and speake ther these wordes, and saye: Heare the word of the Lorde, thou king of Iuda that sytteth in the kyngly seat of Da-uid: thou and thy seruauntes and thy people, and go in and oute at his gate. Thus the Lorde commaundeth kepe equitye and rightousnes destruct the oppressed fro the power of the vpolent: do not greue nor op-presse the straunger, the fatherles, ne & widow, & shed no innocent blud in this place.

And if ye kepe these thyngs saythfully, then shal euer come in at the doore of thys house kynges to syt vpon Dauids seate:
they shalbe caried in Charets and ride vpon horses, both they and theyr seruauntes, and theyr people. But if ye wyl not be obedient vnto these commaundementes, I will swear by myne owne selfe (sayth & Lorde) this house shalbe waste. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vpon the kyngs house of Iu-da: Thou art the heade, as Balaad is in Libanus: What wylt thou lape of it, if I make the not so waste (and the cities also) that no man shal dwell therein? I wyl prepare a destruction with his meaphs for the,
to be we downe thy specyall Cedee trees, and cast them in the fyre.

And al the people that go by thys cite, shal speake one to an other: wherfore hath the Lorde done thus vnto thys noble cytye? D Then shall it be answered: Because they haue broken the couenaunte of the Lorde theyr God, and haue worshipped and ser-ued strange Gods. Gournot ouer the dead, and be not too for them, but be soye for hym that departeth away: for he commeth not agayne and seeth his natyue country no more. For thus sayeth the Lorde as touchyng (a) Belum the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda, whiche raygned after his father, and is caried out of this place:
He shall neuer come hyther agayne, for he shall dye in the place, wherunto he is led captiue, and shal see thys lande no more.
Who wylt hym that buydeth his house with vnyghteousnes, and his parlours with the good that he hath gotten by vyolence: whiche neuer recompenseth his neighbour's labour: nor payeth him his wage.

byre. He thinketh in hym self: A wyll build me a wyde house and gozgrous parlours:
He causeth wyndowes to be heiren therin, and the selynges and forces maketh be of Cedre, and painteth the with Senober.
Thinkest thou to saygne now that proudest me to warch wyth thy Cedre trees?

Dyd not thy father eate and drinke, and prosper wel, as long as he delt wth the que-ety and rightuousnes? Yea when he helped the oppressed and poore to theyr ryght, the prospered he wel. From whence came this, but only because he had me before his eyes sayeth the Lord. Nevertheless, as for thyne eyes and thyne heart, they looke vpon couetousnes, to shed innocent bloude, to doe brynge and violence. And therefore thus sayeth the Lord agaynst Jehoiakim, the son of Josiab kynge of Iuda: They shall not mouene for hym (as they vse to dooe) alas brother, alas spiter: neither shall they say vnto hym: Alas for, alas for that Noble prince. But as an Ake shall be he burnt, corrupte, and be caste wthoute the gates of Ierusalem.

E Tyrrme vp the hill of Tybanus (O thou daughter Sion) lyfte vp thy voyce vpon Bala, crye from all partes: for al thy lo-ners are destroyed. I gaue the warnynge, wheple thou wast per in prosperite. But thou saydest: I wyll not heare. And thys manner haue thou bled from thy yombe, that thou wouldest neuer heare my voyce.
Al thy heardmen shal be dyscuen wyth the wynde, and thy dearelyngs shal be carped away into captiuitie: Then shalte thou be broughte to shame and confusion, because of all thy wyckednes: thou that dwellest vpon Tybanus, and makest thy nest in the cedre trees, O how great shall thy mourning be, when thy sorowes come vpon the,
as a woman traueling wyth chylde?

As cruell as I lyue (saith the Lord) Though * Conaniah the sonne of Iehoashin King of Iuda were the spjnet of my right hand, yet wyl I plucke him of: And I wyl geue the into þ power of them that seke to slay the. and into the power of the that thou fearedst: into the power of Sady chodonozor the kynge of Babylon, and into the power of the Caldees. Agayneouer, I will send the, and thy mother that bare the into a straunge lande, where ye were not borne, and ther shall ye dye. But as for the lande, that ye wyl despze to retorne vnto, ye shal neuer come at it againe. This man B Conanpab shalbe lyke an ymage robbed and torne in peeces, which pleaseth no ma, for al hys apparel. Wherefore both he and hys seede shalbe sent away, and cast oure into a land, that they know not.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Jer. xlii. a My heart breaketh in my body, because of the false prophets, as my bones shake, I am become like a drunken man (that by the reason of wyne can take no rest) for by the fear of the Lord, and of his holy word: Because the land is full of adulterers, where thow wilt be destroyed & mournest, and the pleasant pastures of the desert are dried up. Yea the way that men take, is wicked, and their governance is no thinge lyke the holpe worde of the Lord. For the prophets and the priests themselves, are polluted by hypocres, and their wickednesse have I founde in my house, sayth the Lord. Wherefore, theyr way shall be slippery in the darcknes, wherein they may sticke and fall. For I will bringe a plague upon them, even the yere of their visitacion, sayth the Lord: I have sene folly among the prophets of Samaria, that they preached for Baal, and dysceyued my people of Israel.

I have sene also amonge the prophetes of Ierusalem, that folowe aduocerye, and presumptuous lyes. They take the most shamefull men by the hand, flatteringe them, so that they canne not retorne from theyr wickednes. Al these wyth theyr citizens ar vnto me as Sodom, and as the inhabitants of Gomor.

Jer. xlii. b Therefore thus sayth the Lord of Hostes concerning the prophetes: Behold, I will fede them with wormwood, and make the drynke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Ierusalem is the sykenes of poverty come vnto all the land.

Jer. xlii. b And therefore the Lord of Hostes speaketh vnto this warning: Heare not the wordes of the prophetes, that preach vnto you, and dysceue you: for they speake the meaning of theyr owne hearte, and not oute of the mouth of the Lord. They say vnto them, that despyse me: The Lord hath spoken so: Thus ye shall prosper right well. And vnto all them that walke after the luste of theyr owne hearte, they saye: Thus, there shall no misfortune happen you. For who hath beene in the counsell of the Lord, that he hath heard and vnderstand, what he is about to doo: Who hath marked his deuys, and beache it: Behold, the storme weather of the Lord (that is, his indignacion) shall goe forth, and shall fall downe vpon the head of the vngodly. And the wrath of the Lord shall not turne agayne, till he persourme and fulfill the thought of his heart. And in the latter daies ye shall know his meaning. I haue not sente the prophets (sayth the Lord) and yet they canne, Jer. xlii. b I haue not spoken to the, & yet they preached. But if they hadde continued in my counsell, and heard my workes: they had turned my people from theyr euyl wayes and wicked ymaginacions. Am I then God that seeth but the thinge whiche is nigh at hand, and not that is far of, sayth the Lord: Maye anye man dysceyue selfe so, that I shall not see hym: sayth the Lord. Do not I fulfill heauen and earth: sayth the Lord. I haue heard well enough, what the prophetes saye, that preachelpe in my name, sayinge: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. Somelonge will they continue in the prophetes heere, to tell lies, and to preach the crafty subtilty of theyr owne hearte: Whose purpose is (wyth the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forget my name, as theyr forefathers did, when Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame, let hym tel it: & he that vnderstandeth my word, let him shewe it saythfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheate to do together: sayth the Lord. Is not my word like a fyre, sayth the Lord, and like an hammer, that breaketh the stone: Therefore thus sayth the Lord, beholde, I will vpon the prophetes, that (b) steale my worde pryncely from euery man. Behold, here am I (sayth the Lord) against the prophetes, that take vpon theyr tongs to speake: The Lord hath sayde. Beholde, here am I (sayth the Lord) against those prophetes, that dare prophesie lyes, and dysceue my people wyth theyr vanities, and miracles, whome I neuer sente, nor commaunded them. They shall doo this people greete harme, sayth the Lord.

Althys people, eithere anye prophet or priest aske, and say: what is the (c) burthen of the Lord: Thou shalt say vnto the: What burthen: Therefore will I call you from me (sayth the Lord) because ye put selues as a burthen. And the prophet, priest or people shal seeth this tearme (the burthen of the Lord) hym wil I visit and his house also.

But thus shall ye say, euery one to another: What answer hath the Lord giuen: or what is the Lords commaundement: And as for the burthen of the Lord, ye shal speak no more of it: for euery mans owne worde is his burthen, because ye haue altered the worde of the Iuyng God the Lord of Hostes oure God.

Thus shall euery man say to the prophetes: what answer hath the Lord giuen the: or what sayth the Lord: And not oues to name the burthen of the Lord. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: For so muche as ye haue vsed this tearme (the burthen of the Lord) whereas I not mytstandpng set vnto you, and forbad you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Behold therefore I will repute you as a burthen, and wil cast you out of my presence: yea and the city also, that I gaue you and your fathers: and will bringe you to an everlasting confusyon, & into such a shame as shal neuer be forgotten.

The visyon of the two panyers of fygge.
The fyfte visyon fynysheth that part of the people wold be broughte agayne from capti-uety. The second, that zedekiah and the reast of the people wold be destroyed.

iii. re. xlii.

The Lord shewed me a vision: Behold ther stood two maundes of fygge before the temple of the Lorde, after that Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon had led away captiue Iechoniah the sonne of Ioaquim kyng of Iuda, the myghty m^{an} also of Iuda, with the workemasters, and coupling men of Ierusalem vnto Babylon. In the one maunde were very good fygge, even lyke as those that be fyssh ripe.
In the other maunde were very naughtie fygge, which myght not be eaten, they were so euyl. The Lord sayd vnto me: What seest thou Jeremij? I sayd: fygge, wherof some be very good, and some so euyl, that no man may eat them.

When came the worde of the Lord vnto me, after this maner: Thus sayth the Lord the God of Israel: lyke as thou knowest the good fygge, so shal I know the men led away, whom I haue sent out of this place into the land of the Caldees for their profite: and I myl set myn eres vpon the for the best. for I will build the vp, and not breake them down, I myl bring them a-guine into this land: I myl plant the, and not roote them out. And I myl geue them an heert, to know how that I am the Lord.

Jer. xli. b Thei shal be my people, and I will be there God, for they shall retorne vnto me with theyr whole hearte.

Jer. xli. b And lyke as thou knowest the naughtie fygge, whiche may not be eaten, they are so euyl: Even so myl I sayth the Lord let Sedechias the kyng of Iuda, yea and all disprinces, and the resydue of Ierusalem that remaine ouer in this land, and them also that dwell in Egypt, to be vered and plaged in al kyngdomes and landes. And myl make them to be a reproofe, a common byword, a laughing stocke, and shame, in al the places wher I shal scatter them. I myl send the sword, hunger and pestilence among them, vntyl I haue cleane consumed them out of the land that I gaue vnto them and theyr fathers.

phet made vnto al the people of Iuda, and to al the inhabytours of Ierusalem this maner. In the. xlii. yere of Josias the sonne of Ammon kyng of Iuda, vnto this present day (that is euen. xlii. yere) the worde of the Lord hath bene committed vnto me. And so I haue spoken to you, I haue tpsen vp early, I haue giuen you warning in season, but ye wold not heare me. Though I haue sent his seruantes; all the prophes-tes vnto you in season. Yet wold ye not obey, ye wold not encline your eares to heare.

He said: turne again every man to his curlew, and from your wycked image: nations, and so shal ye dwell for euer in the land that the Lord promised you and your forefathers: a go no vnto strange gods, serue them not, nor thyr them not, and anger me not with the workes of your handes: then wil I not I punish you. Nevertheless, ye wold not heare me (sayth the Lord) but haue despyed me with the workes of your handes, to your owne great harme.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lord of hostes: Because ye haue not hearkened vnto my word: lo, I myl send out and cal for all the people that dwell in the North. sayth the lande shal become a wyldernes, and they shal serue the fard people, and the king of Babylon the score yeres and ten. When the thie score and ten yeres are expyred, I myl visit also the wyckednes of the kyng of Babylon and his people, sayth the Lord:

yea and the land of the Caldees, and myl make it a perpetual wyldernes, and myl fulfyll al my wordes vpon that land, which I haue deuyled agaynst it: yea, all that is wrytten in this booke, whiche Jeremij hath prophesied of al people: so that they also shal be subdued vnto dyuers nations and great kynges, for I will acquite them according to theyr dedes, and workes of theyr own handes.

For thus hath the Lord God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take this wine cuppe of indignaciō from my hand, that thou maiest cause al the people to whom I sende the,
for to drinke of it: that wher they haue dyb-ken therof, they may be madde, and out of theyr wits, when the sword shal come vnto I myl sende amonge them. When toke I the cup from the Lordes hande, and made al the people drinke therof, vnto whome the Lord had sent me.

Yea, and Pharaon kyng of Egypte, his seruantes, his prynces, and his people altogether one wyth an other, and all kynges of the land of Bus. al kyngs of the Idiliannes land, Ascalon, Azab, Accaron, and the reste of Asdod, the Edomites, the Moabites, and the Ammonites, al þ kynges of Tyus and Sydon: the kynges of the Fles, beyonde the sea: Dedan, Thema, Buz, and the haueu Ismaelites: all the kynges of Arabye, and (genze all þe) all the kynges that dwell in the wyldernesse: all the kynges of Samri, all the kynges of Elam, all the kynges of Medes, all kynges toward the Northe, sacre o: nte, euery one wyth his neyghbours. Yea, al the kyngdoms that are vpon the whole earth. The kyng of Sejach, sayed he, shall dysynke wyth them also.

And saye thou vnto them: Thus is the commaundement of the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Dysynke and be dryncken, spewe and sal that ye neuer tye, and that choiote the sword, whych I wyl sende among you. But if they wyl not receiue the cuppe of thy hande, and dysynke it, then tel them: Thus doth the Lord of hostes threaten you: dysynke it ye shal, and that shortly. For lo, I begyn to plage the ctye that my name is geuen vnto: dysynke ye then, that I wyl leaue you unpunished: Ye shall not go quyre. For wyth, I call for a sword vppon al the inhabytauntes of the earth, sayeth the Lord of hostes.

Ye shall soze tell them all these wordes, and say vnto them: The Lord shall crye about, and lette his voyce be heard from his holy dwelling place. Wyth a greare noise shal he crye from his court regall. He shal geue a great voice (like the grape gatherers) and the sounde thereof shal be heard vnto the endes of the world. For the Lord hath a iudgement to geue vpon al people, and wyl holde his court of iustyce wyth all deshe, and puny the vngodlye, sayeth the Lord.

For thus saith the Lord of hostes: Be bold, a myserable plage shal go from one people to an other, and a great stormy water shal aryse from al the endes of þ earth. And the same day shal the Lord hym selfe sleie them, from one end of the earth to an other. Ther shal no lamentacion be made for any of them, none gathered vp, none buried: but shal lye as downe vpon the grounde. The xxvi. Chapter.

Jeremy monish the people to amendement he is taken of the Prophetes and p:ictres, and brought to iudgement he being accused before the Prynces, and w:reth, that he hadde preached only the wordes of God. The rulers and þ people delpue Jeremy, agaynst the wylls of the Prynces and Prophetes, after the example of Hezekiah, whych had delpued Micah, that hadde preached the same thyngs that Jeremy hadde preached. Ariah the Prophet is kyled of Jehoahim, contrary to the wyl of God.

In the beginning of the raigne of Joahim the sonne of Josias kyng of Iuda: came this word from the Lord, saying: Thus sayth the Lord, Stand in the court of the Lords house, and speake vnto al the which (out of the cytyes of Iuda) come to do worship in the Lords house, al the wordes that I commaunde the to saye. Looke thou kepe not one worde backe, (if peradventure) they wylarken and turne euery man from his wycked way: that I may al so (a) repent of the plage, whych I haue determined to bringe vpon them, because of theyr wycked inuencions.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus saith the Lord: if ye wyl not obey me, to walke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruantes the Prophetes whch I sent vnto you, cplyng vp timely, and still sending: Yf ye wil not folow them (I say) then wyl I do to this house, as I byd vnto Silo, and wyl make this city to be ab: hoired of all the people of the earth. And the pryctes, the Prophetes, and al the people heard Jeremy preach these wordes in the house of the Lord.

Now when he had spoken out al þ wordes that the Lord commaunded hym to preach vnto al the people, then the pryctes, the Prophetes, and al the people laid hold vpon him, and said: thou shalt dye. Howe darest thou be so bold, as to say in þ name of the Lord: it shal happen to this house as it did to Silo: and this ctye shal be so waste, that no man shal dwell therein?

And when all the people had gathered about Jeremy in the house of the Lord, the prynces of Iuda herd of this rumour and they came forth out of the kynges palace into the house of the Lord and sat the downe before the newe dore of the Lord. Then spake the pryctes and the Prophetes vnto the rulers, and to al the people, these wordes.

wordes: This man is worthe to dye, for he hath preached a gayne this cite, as ye your selues haue heard wth your eares.

Then sayed Jeremie vnto the eulars, and to al the people: The Lord hath sente me to preache agaynst this house, and agaynst this cite, all the wordes that ye haue herd. Therefore amend your wayes, and your aduysmentes, and be obedyente vnto the voyce of the Lord your God: so shal the Lord repent of the plage, that he had deuyed agaynst you. Now as for me: I am in your handes, doo wth me as ye thinke expedient and good.

But this shal ye knowe: if ye put me to death, ye shal make your selues, this cite, and al the inhabitours thereof, guilty of innocent blood. For this is of a truthe: that the Lord hath sent me vnto you, to speake al these wordes in your eares.

Then said the rulers and the people vnto the priestes and prophetes: This man may not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lord our God. The elders also of the land Aodab, and sayd thus vnto al the people: We chere the Morastit, whiche was a prophet vnder Ezechias kyng of Iuda, spake to al the people of Iuda: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: You shal be plowed like a felde, Ierusalem shal be an heape of stones, and the hil of the Lords house shal be touned to an hye wood.

And Ezechias the kyng of Iuda and his people of Iuda put hym to death for this: No verely, but rather feared the Lord, and made the prayer vnto hym. For whiche cause also the Lord repented of the plage that he had deuyed agaynst them. Should we then do such a shameful tede agaynst our soules? Ther was a prophet also, that preached bypse in the name of the Lord called Uriah the sonne of Semerah of Gethacharim: this man preached also agaynst this cite and agaynst this lande, accordinge to all as Jeremie sayeth. Now whan Ioaquin the kyng wth al the estates and priuces had heard his wordes, the kyng went about to slew him. When Uriah perceived that, he was afraide, and fled, and departed into Egypt.

Then Ioaquin the kyng sent seruantes into the lande of Egypt: Namely Elnathan the sonne of Achabor, and certayn men wth hym into Egypt, whiche fetched Uriah out of Egypt, and brought hym vnto the kyng Ioaquin that slewe hym wth the swerde, and cast his dead body into the common peoples graue. But Ahikam the sonne of Saphan helped Jeremie that he came not into the handes of the people to be slayne.

The xxvii. Chapter.

Jeremie, at the commaundement of the Lord, sendeth bondes to the kyng of Iuda, and to the other kynges that were nye, whereby they are moued to become subiectes vnto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the people and the kynges and rulers, that they beleue not fals prophetes.

In the begynning of the raygne of Ioaquin the sonne of Iosiah kyng of Iuda, came this worde vnto Jeremie from the Lord, whiche spake thus vnto me: Make the bondes and cheynes, and put them about thy necke, and send them to the kyng of Edom, the kyng of Moab, the kyng of Ammon, to the kyng of Tyrus, and to the kyng of Sidon, and that by the messengers whiche shal come to Ierusalem vnto Sedechias the kyng of Iuda, and byd them say vnto the messengers: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel, speake thus vnto your masters, I am he that made the earth, the men, and the cattel that are vpon the ground, wth my great power and stretched out arme, and haue given it vnto whome it pleased me.

And now wyl I deliuer al these landes into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon my seruant. The beastes also of the felde shal I geue hym to do hym service. And al people shal serue him, and his sonne, and his childe chylde vntil the tyme of the same lande be come also, yea manye people, and great kynges shal serue hym.

Moreover, that people and kyngdome whiche wyl not serue Nabuchodonosor, that wyl not put thei neckes vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babylon, the same people wyl I visite wth the swerd wth hunger, wth pestilence, vntil I haue consumed them in his handes, saith the Lord. And therefore folow not your prophetes, soothsayers, expounders of dreames, charmers and wyches, whiche say vnto you, ye shal not serue the kyng of Babylon.

For they preache poultres, to bring you farre from your lande, and that I myghte cast you out, and destroy you. But the people that putte thei necke vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babylon, and serue hym, those wyl I let remaine tyl in thei own land (saith the Lord) and they shal occupy it, and dwell therein.

All these thynges tolde I Sedechias kyng of Iuda, and sayde: Hurte your necke vnder the kyng of Babylon, and serue him and his people, that ye may liue. Why wylte thou and thy people peryshe wth the swerde, wth hunger, wth pestilence, lyke as the Lord hath deuyed for al people that wyl not serue the kyng of Babylon? Therefore geue no care vnto those prophetes that tel you: Ye shal not serue the kyng of Babylon, for they preache poultres. neither haue I sent them sayth the Lord: howe be it they are bold, falsly to prophete in my name, that I myghte the sooner dryue you out, and that ye might peryshe.

I speake to the puelles also, and to all þe people: Thus sayth the Lord: Heare not þe wordes of those prophets that preach vnto you, and say: Behold the vessels of the Lordes house shal shortly be brought hither agayne from Babylon: For they prophesye lyes vnto you. Heare them not but letue the kynge of Babylon, that he may lyeue. Wherfore wyl ye make thys cry to be detyored? But if they be a true prophetes in very dede, and if the word of the Lord be comfirmed vnto the, the let the praye the Lord of hostes, that the remnaunte of the ornaments which are in the house of the Lord, and remayne yet in the house of the kynge of Iuda, and at Ierusalem be not carryed to Babylon also.

For thus hath the Lord of hostes spoken concerning the pylers, the lauer, the seat, and the residue of the ornaments that yet remayne in thys cry, whych Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon tooke not, wher he carryed awaye Jeichonias the sonne of Iosiahm kynge of Iuda, wyth al the power of Iuda, and Ierusalem, from Ierusalem vnto Babylon captiue.

Yea thus hath the Lord of hostes, the God of Irael spoken, as touching the residue of the ornaments of the Lords house, of the king of Iuda his house, and of Ierusalem. They shal be carryed vnto Babilon, and ther they shal remayne vntyl I vplife them sayth the Lord. Then wyl I bringe them hither agayne. And thys was done in the same yere: euen in the begynning of the raygne of Sebechias king of Iuda.

The false prophesy of Hananiah the prophet. Jeremy sheweth that the prophesy of Hananiah is false, by the example of þe other prophetes. He begynne in the word of the Lord reprobeth Hananiah, prophesyinge hys death.

But in the fourth yere of the raygne of Sebechias king of Iuda, in the firste moneth: It happened þe Hananiah þe sonne of Ahar þe prophet of Gaba, spake to me in the house of the Lord, in the presence of the priestes and of all the people & sayd: Thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Irael: I haue broken the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and a lre two yere wyl I bringe agayne into thys place, all the ornaments of the Lords house, that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, carryed away from thys place vnto Babylon.

thys place, sayth the Lord, for I breake the yoke of the kynge of Babylon.

Then the prophet Jeremy gaue answere vnto the prophet Hananiah, before þe priestes, and before al the people that wer present in the house of þe Lord. And þe prophet Jeremy sayd: Amen. The Lord doo that, and graunt the thyng whiche thou haste prophesied: that ye may bringe agayne al the ornaments of the Lords house, and restore al the ornaments of the Lords house, and restore al the prysoners from Babylon into the place. Nevertheless haften thou also what I wyl say, that thou and al the people may hear: The prophetes that wer before vs in tymes past, whych prophesied of war or trouble, or pestilence, eyther of peace vpon many nations and great king doms, wer proued by thys, (if God had set them in dede) wher the thyng came to passe whych that prophet told before.

And Hananiah the prophete took the chaine from the prophet Jeremys necke and brake it, and wyth that said Hananiah that al the people myght heare. Thus hath the Lord spoken: Euen so wil I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, from the necke of all nations, yea and that wyth in this two yere. And so the prophet Jeremy went hys way.

Now after that Hananiah the prophete had taken the chaine from the prophet Jeremys necke, and broken it, The word of the Lord came vnto the prophet Jeremy, saying: Go and tel Hananiah these wordes. Thus sayeth the Lord: Thou hast broken the chayne of woodde, but in steede of woodde thou shalt make cheynes of yron. For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the god of Irael: I wyl put a yoke of yron vpon the necke of al thys people, that they may letue Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, yea and so shal they do. And I wil geue hym the heales in the feldes. Then sayde the prophet Jeremy vnto that prophet Hananiah: Deare me (I praye thee) Hananiah: The Lord hath not sente the, but thou bringest hys people into false beleefe. And therfore thus sayeth the Lord: Behold, I wyl send the out of the land and wrythin a yere thou shalt dye because thou hast false spoken agaynst the Lord. So Hananiah the prophet dyed the same yere in the seven moneth.

The Prophecy

for the good that I will do for this people, sayeth the Lord. For he hath preached falsely of the Lord.

The Notes of the xxix. Chapter.

(a) Such prophets as preached unto them the things which they were desirous of, by the great peace which was even after they came to Babylon. In the time of their captivity, as though they had been sent of the Lord, and yet were they in deed false prophets. But Ezechiel the true prophet of the Lord, which preached the contrary, they did persecute. By the false prophets they say: God hath sent us prophets: and they doctrine by the way and folowe. But the true prophete by the waye and laughe to scorn: and wolde nether beleue his doctrine, nor geue care vnto it.

The xxx. Chapter.

The retourne of the people from Babilon, God by his challenge sheweth that the people is sinful. The destruction of the enemies of Israel.

These are the wordes that the Lord shewed vnto Ieremie, saying: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel: Wyl ye diligently all the wordes that I haue spoken vnto the, in a booke. For loe, I tyme commed (sayeth the Lord) I will bring agayne the prisoners of my people of Israel and Iuda, sayeth the Lord: For I will restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to their fathers, and they shall haue it in possession.

Agayne, these wordes spake the Lord concerning Israel and Iuda: thus sayeth the Lord. We heare a terrible crye, feare and disquietnes. For what els doth this signifie, that I see? Namely that al strong men smyte euery man bys hande vpon his lopnes, as a woman in the payne of her trauaile. Who euer saue a man trauaile wchylde? Enquire the father, and se. Yea, all their faces are maruelous pale.

For thus saith the Lord: behold, I will sette by Iacobs tentes agayne; and dwelende bys dwelling place. The cty shall be builded in her olde estate, and the houses shall haue their ryght foundation. And oute of them shall go thankesgeuinge and the voice of ioy.

The xxxi. Chapter.

The propheth that the people of Israel shall be restored agayne vnto theyr prosperite. To be turned from synne is the gyfte of God. The birth of Christe is prophesied. All the wicked shall dye in theyr wickednes. The newe Testamente and couenaunte is prophesied. The Christen are taught and instructed of the Lord. Our synnes shall be remitted, that they shall not ones be thought on. God promyseth that he will caste of the Jewes. The byldinge agayne of Ierusalem.

I speake my mercie before the. I will repaye the agayne (O thou daughter of Israell) that thou mayest be fast and sure.
Thou shalt take thy tabrettes agayne, & goe forth with the that leade the daunce.

Thou shalt plante vines agayne upon the hylls of Samaria, & the grape gatherers shalt plante and synge.

Cap. li. a.

And when it is tyme the watchmen on the mount Ephraim shall crye: Arise, let us go vnto Sion to oure Lord God, for thus sayeth the Lord: I reioyce with gladnesse, because of Jacob, cry vnto the head of the Gentyles: speake oute, synge, and say: The Lord shall deliuer his people, the remnaite of Israell, and make the hole. Beholde I will bringe them agayne from out of the Assyriab, and gather the from the endes of the world, with the blind and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be greete with childe, & such as be also deliuered: and the companye of them that come agayne, shall be greete.

They departed from hence in beueltie, but with ioye will I bringe them byther agayne. I will lede them by the ryuers of water in a straight way, where they shall not stumble: for I will be Israels father, and Ephraim shall be my first borne.

Gentyles, preache in þ Isles that Ie sake shall gather hym to gether agayne, and shall keepe hym as a shepheard dothe his flocke.

For the Lord shall redeme Jacob, and ryd him from the hand of the vpoler. And they shall come, and reioyce vpon the hyll of Sion, and shall haue plentuousnes of goodes, whiche the Lord shall geue the:
Wheat, wheat, wine, oyle, rousige shepe and calves. And theyr conscience shall be as a wel watered garden, for they shall no more be hungry.

Then shall the make reioyce in þ dance, yea bothe yonge and old folkes. For I will turne theyr sorowe into gladnes, and will comfort them, and make them ioyful, euen from their vertes, I will poure plenteousnes vpon the vertes of the priestes, and my people shall be satisfied with good thinges,

Jer. lli. c.
Ezech. iii. c.

Thus sayeth the Lord: * The voyce of weeping, weeping and lamentacion came into beauen: euen of Rachell mourninge for her chyldren, and wolde not be comforted because they were awaye.

But now sayeth the Lord: leave of from weeping & crying, withholde thine eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded saith the Lord. And they shall come agayne out of the land of theyr enne-mies: Yea euen thy posterite shall haue consolacion in thys (saith the Lord) that thy chyldren shall come agayne into their stone lande.

Agayne I heard Ephraim, that was led awaye captiue, complayne on thys manner: O Lord, thou hast correct me, and thy chastenyng haue I receiued, as an vnamed calfe.

Conuerter thou me, and I shall be con-uerter, for thou arte my Lord God. Yea as soone as thou turnest me, I shall re-soure my selfe, and when I vnderstand, I shall (a) smite vpon my thigh. For verily I haue committed shameful thynges.
O lette my yowthe beate thys reproche and confusyon.

Vpon thys complayne, I thoughte thus by my selfe, is not Ephraim my deare sonne? As he not the childe, with whom I hadde al myrthe and pastyme? For sence the tyme that I spake conuined with hym, I haue hym euer in remembrance: therefore my vter beere byuerth me vnto hym, gladly and loupngly will I haue mercie vpon hym, saith the Lord. Set þ watchmen, prouide teachers for the, set thine deceit vpon the ryght waye, that thou shalt best walke, & turne agayne (O thou daugter of Israell) turne agayne to these cry-es of thine. Some longe wilt thou go astraye, O thou synners daughter?
For the Lord will worke a newe thinge vpon earthe. (b) A woman shall compas a man.

For thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell: It will come thereto, that when I haue brought Iuda out of captiuities, these wordes shall be heard in the lande, and in byscopies: The Lord, whiche is the saye bydegrome of ryghteousnes, make the fruteful, O thou holp vil:
And they shall dwel Iuda, and all her cy-ties, the shepherdes and husbende men:
For I shall feede the hungry soule, and refreche all sapne vertes. When I hearde thys, I came agayne to my selfe, and mussed, lyke as I had bene waked oute of a sweete slepe.

Beholde (saith the Lord) the dayes come, that I will sowe the house of Israell & the house of Iuda, with men, and with cattel. Yea it shall come thereto, þ lyke as I haue gone about in tymes past thers haue eaten a sowte grape, and the chyldrens teeth are set on edge, for euery one shall die for his owne misdeed: so that who so eateth a soure grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

And from thence forth shall no man teach his neyghbour or his brother, and saie, knowe the Lord: But they shall all knowe me, from the lowest unto the highest, sayeth the Lord. For I will forgive theyr iniquities, and will neuer remember theyr sinnes any more.

Thus sayeth the Lord wherbye he gaue the sunne to be a light for the daye, and the moone and sterres to shyne in the nyght: wherbye he moueth the sea, so that the floudes thereof were scarce: his name is the Lord of Hostes. Like as thy ordinance shall neuer be take out of my sight, sayeth the Lord: So shall the seede of Israel neuer cease, but alway be a people before me.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord: lyke as the heauen aboue cannot be measured, and as the foundations of the earth beneath may not be sought out: So will I also not cast out the hole seede of Israel, for that they haue committed, sayeth the Lord. Behold the dayes come sayeth the Lord, that the Cytie of the Lord shall be enlarged fro the towne of Manasse, unto the gate of the corner wal.

And when it is nowe buylded and set vp of thyrs sathron, it shall neuer be broken, nor cast downe any more.

The Notes of the xxxi. Chapter.

- (a) To smite upon the thigh is a token of grief. He meaneth that when the Lord giveth him vnderstanding, he shall come to repentance, and forgiue his euyl conuersation.
- (b) Thus do they commonly expound of the redemption of Israel, by the similitude of a woman, seducing her husband. As though the Prophete had sayd: The people of Israel after they haue of long tyme forsake thy spouse, God, shall yet at the last returne & embrace him with the armes of faith, charity and obedience. ac. Some expounds of the virgin Marye. And some of the church the spouse of Christ.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Jeremy is cast into prison, because he prophesied that the cytie shoulde be taken of the kynge of Babylon. By the fable that Jeremie bought at the commaundement of the Lord, signified, that the people shoulde come agayne to their own possession. The people of God are his seruantes, and he is their Lord. To feare God, is Goddes gift: to thynke that sinnes may be elyged.

These wordes spake the Lord vnto Jeremy, in the tenth yere of Sedechias kynge of Iuda, wherbye was the tenth yere of Nabuchodonosor, wher tyme as the kynge of Babylons Hoste layed siege vnto Ierusalem. But Jeremy the Prophet laye bounde in the court of prison, which was in the kynge of Iudas house: wher Sedechias the kynge of Iuda caused him to be layed, because he hadde prophesied of this maner: Thus sayeth the Lord: Behold, I will deliuer this cyty into the handes of the kynge of Babylon wherbye shall take it. As for Sedechias the kynge of Iuda, he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees but surely he shall come into the handes of the kynge of Babylon: wherbye shall speke with hym mouth to mouth and one of the shall take an othe in the face.

Jer. xxiii. 1. a
xxv. 1. a. and xxvi. 1. a.

And Sedechias shall be caried vnto Babylon, and ther shall he be vntill the tyme that I visit hym, sayeth the Lord. But if thou takest in hande to fighte against the Chaldees, thou shalt not prosper.

And Jeremy sayd: Thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Behold Hananeell the sonne of Selum thyne vncles sonne, shall come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme thy land, that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: for by reaso of kinred it is thy part to redeme it, and to bye it oute.

Jer. 32. 8. a
Jer. 32. 10. a
Jer. 32. 11. a.

And so Hananeell myne vncles sonne came to me in the court of the prison (according to the worde of the Lord) and sayed vnto me: Byme land (I pray the) that lyeth in Anathoth in the countrey of Ben Iamin: for by herptage thou hast righte to loose it oute for thy selfe, therefore redeme it. Then I perceiued, that this was the commaundement of the Lord, and so I losed the land from Hananeell of Anathoth myne vncles sonne, and weyed hym ther the mony euen seuen sicles, and ten siluer pens.

I caused hym also to make me a tynge and to seale it, and called recorde therby, and weyed hym ther the mony vpon the waighes.

So I toke the euidence with the copp (when it was ordeilye sealed and red ouer) & I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah the sonne of Maasab, in the sight of Hananeell my cosen, and in the presence of the wytnesses, that he named in the euidence & before al the Iemes that wer therby, in the court of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before them, saying: the Lord of Hostes the God of Israel commaundet the, to take this sealed euidence with the coppe, and to lay it in an ethen vessel, that it may long continue.

For the Lord of Hostes the God of Israel hath determined, that houses, feldees and vineyardes shall be possessed agayne in thy lande.

Nowe when I hadde deliuered the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, clab,

erab, I besoughte the Lorde, sayinge: O Lorde God, It is thou that haste made heauen and earth wth thy great power and hyge arme, and there is nothyng to hard for the. Thou shewest mercey vpon thousandes, thou recouerest the wyckednes of the fathers, into the bosome of the chyldren that come after them.

Thou arte the grete and myghty god, whose name is the Lorde of Hostes: great in counsell, and infinite in thoughte.

Thyne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mennes chyldren, to rewarde euery one after hys way, & accordyng to the frutes of hys inuencions.

Thou haste done grete tokens & wonders in the lande of Egypt (as wth thyss hape) vpon the people of Israell and vpon those men: to make thy name great as it is come to passe this day.

Thou hast brought thy people of Israell out of the lande of Egypt wth tokens, wth wonders, wth a myghty hand, wth a stretched oute arme, & wth grete receybles: and hast giuen them this lande, like as thou hadst promised vnto theyr fathers, Namely þ thou woldest giue them a lande, that floweth wth mylke and hony.

Howe when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe: but all that thou commaundedst the to doo, that haue they not done, & therfore come all these plagues vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulwokes made nowe agaynst the cytye, to take it: and it shall be won of the Chaldees that besiege it, wth sword, wth hunger and death, and loke what thou haste spoken, þ same shall come vpon them.

For loo, all thynges are presente vnto þ: Yet sayest thou vnto me (O Lorde God) and commaundest me, þ I shall lose a piece of lande vnto my selfe, and take wytnesses thereto: and yet in the meane season the cytye is deliuered into the power of the Caldees.

Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, I am the Lorde God of all fleshe: is ther any thyng that to hard for me? Therfore thus sayde the Lorde: beholde, I shall deliuer this cytye in to the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, they shall take it. For the Caldees shall come and wyne this cytye, and set fire vpon it, and burne it: wth the gorgeous houses, in whose parlours they haue made sacrifice vnto Baall, and poured dymke offeringes vnto straunge goddes to prouoke me vnto wrath.

For seynge the chyldren of Israell, and the chyldren of Iuda, haue wrought wyckednes before me euer from their yowth, what haue they elles done, but prouoked me wth the workes of theyr owne handes?

sayeth the Lorde.

O what hath this cytye ben els but a prouokynge of my wrath, euer sence the daye that I buylded it vnto this houre? Wherin I cast it oute of my sight, because of the grete blasphemys of þ chyldren of Israell & Iuda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me: yea they, theyr prophets, hole Iuda, and all the crytzens of Ierusalem.

When I spake by earlye, and taughte them, & instructed them, they turned theyr backs to me, and not theyr faces: They wolde not heare, to be reformed and corrected. They haue sette theyr goddes in þ house that is halowed vnto my name, to desyle it. They haue buylded hyge places for Baall in the valley of the chyldren of Ierusalem, to bowe theyr soules & dough-tees vnto Moloch, whiche I neuer comaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thoughte, to make Iuda sin wth such abhominacion.

Moreouer thus hath the Lorde God of Israell spoken, concernynge this cytye, whiche (as ye poure selues confesse) shall be deliuered into the hande of the kynge of Babylon, when it is wonne wth the swerde, wth hunger, and wth pestilence. Beholde, I will gather them to gether from all landes, wherein I haue scattered them in my wrath, in my fearfull and great displeasure: and wil bring the agayne vnto this place, wher they shall dwell safely. And they shall be my people, and I will be theyr God.

And I will giue them one herte and one waye, that they may feare me al the dayes of theyr lyfe, that they and theyr chyldren after them maye prosper. And I will sette vp an euerlastynge couenant wth them, Namely: that I will neuer cease to doo them good, and that I will put my feare in theyr hertes, so that they shall not run away from me.

Yea I will haue a luste and pleasure to doo them good, and faithfully to plant them in this lande wth my whole herte, and wth al my soule.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: lyke as I haue brought all this grete plage vpon this people: so will I also brynge vpon them all the good, that I haue promysed them. And men shall haue theyr possessions in this lande, wherof ye scape nowe, that it shall neyther be inhabited of people ne of cattell, but be deliuered into the handes of the Caldees: Yea lades shall be boughte for monye, and euidences made therevpon and sealed before wytnesses in þ countrey of Ben Hamin, and round about Ierusalem: in the cytyes of Iuda, in the cytyes that are vpon the mountaynes, & in them that lye beneth, yea and in the cytyes that are in the deserte. For I will brynge theyr prisoners byther agayne, sayeth the Lorde.

The prophete is monished of the Lord, to praye for the deliuerance of þe people, which the Lord promisseth. God forgiveeth synnes, and doeth graciously to the people, for his owne renowe. Of the byrth of Chynde. The kyngdome of Chynde in the church shall neuer be ended.

Q Discover the word of the Lord came unto Hieremie on this manner, whē he was yet bound in the court of p pylson: Thus saith the Lord, which fulfillerh the thinge that he speaketh, the Lorde whiche persourmeth the thinge he taketh in hande: euen he, whose name is the Lord: thou hast * cryed vnto me, and I haue hearde the, I haue shewed greare and bygge thinges, which were unknow-en vnto you.

Thus (I saye) spake the Lord God of Israel, concerninge the houses of this cite, and the houses of the kynges of Iuda, that they shall be broken thorow the ordynance and weapons, when the Chaldees come to besiege them: and they shall be fylled wth the dead carcasses of men, whome I wpll slaye in my wrath and displeasure: when I tourne my face frome this cite because of all her wyckednesse. Beholde, (sayeth the Lord) I wpll heale theyr woundes and make theim hole, I wil open the treasure of peace and truth.

And I wyl retorne the captiuitie of Iu-da and Iſtaell: and wyl ſet them by a-gayne as they were afore. From all myſdedes (wherin they haue offended againſt me) I wyl clenſe them: And al they blaſ-phemes whiche they haue done agaynſt me, when they regarded me not, I wyl forgyue them.

B And thus shall get me a name, a prayse and honoure, amonge all people of the earth, whiche shall heare all the good, & I will shewe vnto them: yea they shall be afraid and astonished at all the good deedes and benefytes, that I will do for them.

Wherouer thus sayth the Lorde: in this place (whereof ye say that it shal be a wilderness, wheriu neyther people ne cattell shal dwell: in like maner in the ctytes of Iuda and wythoute Iherusalem whiche also shal be so wyde that neyther people ne cattel shal dwell there) shal the voyce of gladnes be herd agayne, the voyce of the hydegrome and of the hyde, the voyce of them that shal spunge: Prayse the Lorde of Hostes, for he is louing and his mercye endureth for euer, And the voyce of them that shal offer by gifts in the house of the Lord. For I wyll restore the captiuitie of this land, as it was afore, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: At shall come per cherto, that in thys land, whiche is nowd from men and catel, and in all the cities of the land, ther shall be set vp shepe herdes cotages: in the cities vpon the most rapnes, and in the cyties that lye vpon the playne, and in the descrete.

The prophecy

In the lande of Ben Iamin, in the fieldes of Ierusalem, & in the cityes of Iuda shall the shepe be nũbred againe, vnder the hand of hym that collecth them, sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, the tyme cometh saith the Lorde, þ I wyl perfourme þ good thyng, wherof I haue promysed vnto the house of Iſrael, and to the house of Iuda. In those dayes, and at the same tyme, I wyl byng forth vnto Dauid the byaunche of ryghteousnes, and he shall do equytie and ryghteousnes in the lande. In those dayes shall Iuda be helpe, and Ierusalem shall dwel safe, & he that shall cal her, is euen God our ryghteous maker. For thus the Lorde promyseth: Dauid shall neuer want one to syt vpon the stole of the house of Iſrael: neyther shall the prestes and Leuites wante one to offer alway befoze me burnt offerings, to kyndle the meat offerings, and to prepare the sacrifices.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto D
 Jeeremy after this maner: Thus saith the Gen. viii. 2 Lorde: As for the couenaunt wherch I haue Ier. xxi. 2 made wpth day and nyght be broken, that there shoulde not be day and nyght in due season: When may my couenaunte also be broken wherche I made wpth Dauid my seruaunte, and so he not to haue a sonne to reigne in vps throne. So Wal also the priestes and Leuites neuer sayle, but serue me.
 For lyke as the sterres of heauen may not Gene. xv. 5. be numbred, neyther the sande of the sea and. xxi. 2 mesured: so wyl I multiplye the seds of Dauid my seruaunt, and of the Leuytes my mynisters.

Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came to Ieremye, sayinge: Considerest thou not what this people speaketh. Two kinges (saye they) had the Lorde chosen, and those same two haue he caste awaye. For so farre is my people come, that they haue no hope to come together anye more, and to be one people agayne. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: If I haue made no covenante wyth daue and nyght, and gyue no statute vnto heauen and earth, then wyll I also caste awaye the sede of Dauid my seruance: so that I wil take no more oute of dys sede, to rule the posteritie of Abraham, Isaac and Iacob. But yet I wyll turne agayne theyr captiuitie, and be mercyfull vnto them.

Exerciii. Chapter.

¶ He threteneth þe the cite, and kynge Bedechias also, that be giuen into the handes of the kynge of Babilon, he rebuketh the þe brought such of their bretheren into captiuitie, that were pardoned to go at therr libertie.

These are the wordes whych the Lord spake vnto Ieremy, what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babil-lon, & al hys hostes (oute of all the king-domes that were vnder hys power) and al hys people, soughte agaynst Ierusalem, and all the cyties therof. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell: Wo, and speake to Sedechias

Sedechias the king of Iuda, and tel him: The Lord sendeth the this word: Behold, I will deliuer this cite into the hand of the kynge of Babilon, he shall burne it, & thou shalt not escape his hands, but shalt be led away prisoner, & deliuered into his power: Thou shalt see the kynge of Babilon in the face, and he shall speake wth thee, mouthe to mouth, then shalt thou go to Babilon. Yet heare þ word of the Lord, O Sedechias thou kynge of Iuda: Thus saith the Lord vnto the: Thou shalt not be slain wth the sword, but shalt dye in peace: Like as thy forefathers the kynge, thy progenyours were brenne, so shalt þ be brennt also, & in the moynynge they shall saie: Oh Lord. For thus haue I determy-ned, saith the Lord.

When spake Ieremye the prophete all these wordes vnto Sedechias kynge of Iuda in Ierusalem, what tyme as þ king of Babilons hoste besieged Ierusalem, & the remnant of the cyties: Namely, Achis and Azecah, whiche yet remayned the strong defended cyties of Iuda.

These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Ieremye the prophete, when Sedechias was agreed wth all the people at Ierusalem, that there should be proclaimed a libertie: so that euery man shoulde sette his seruante and handemayde goo free, Debire and Debure, and no Iewe to holde his brother as a bondma. Now as they had consented, eue so they were obedient, and let the go free. But after ward they repented, and toke agayne the seruantes and handemaydes, in whom they had let go free, and so made them bonde agayne.

For the whiche cause the worde of the Lord came vnto Ieremye from the Lord hym selfe, sayinge: Thus saith the Lord God of Israel: * I made a couenaunte wth your fathers, when I brought the out of Egypt (þ they shoulde no more be bond men) sayinge: When scrues peres are out, euery man shall let his boughte seruante an Hebire go free, if he haue serued hym sixe peres. But your fathers obeyed me not, and bekened not vnto me. As for you, ye wer now turned, & did right before me, in þ ye proclaimed euery mā to let his neighbour goo free, & in þ ye made a couenaunt before me in the temple that beareth my name: But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne and blasphemed my name, In this, that euery man hath required his seruante and handemayden agayne, in whom ye had let goe quyte and free, and compelled them to serue you agayne, and to be your bond men. And therfore thus saith the Lord: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclaim freedom vnto his brother and neighbour: wherefore I will call you vnto a fredome, saith the Lord: euen vnto the sword, to the pestilence, & to hunger, and will make you to be plagued in all the kyngdomes of the earth. Ye those men that haue broke my couenaunte and not kept the wordes of the appoyntment, which they made before me: whiche they hewed the calfe in twa, and whiche they wete thorow the two halles therof: The Princes of Iuda, the Princes of Ierusalem, the gelded men, the Dykes and all the people of the lande, whiche mente thorow the two sides of the calfe, Those men will I gyue into the power of their enemyes, and into the handes of them that folowe vpon their spurs.

And their dead bodies shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and bestes of the fildes. As for Sedechias the kynge of Iuda and his Princes, I will deliuer the into the power of their enemyes, and of the that desyre to slaye them, and into the hande of the kynge of Babilons hoste, whiche nowe is departed from you: But thorow my commaundement (saith the Lord) they shall come agayne before this cite, they shall fight agaynst it, wyne it, and burne it. Moreover I will lay the cyties of Iuda so waste, that no man shall dwell therein.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

The propoundeth the obedyence of the Rechabites, and thereby confoundeth the pride of the Jewes. Also commaundement of Ionadab, the father of the Rechabites. He threteneth punishment vnto the rebellious Jewes. He promyseth prosperite vnto the Rechabites, for their obedyence vnto their father.

The wordes whiche the Lord spake vnto Ieremye, in the tynge of Ahasin the sonne of Josiah king of Iuda, are these: Goo vnto the house of the Rechabites, and call them oute, and bringe them to the house of the Lord in some commodious place, and gyue the wyne to drynke. Then toke I Ionadab the sonne of Ieremye, the sonne of Sabarimab, and his brethren, and all his sonnes, and the hole housholde of the Rechabites: and broughte the to the house of the Lord, in to the closet of the chyldren of Baan the sonne of Jegedapah the mā of God: whiche was by the closet of the Princes, that is aboute the closet of Maasiah the sonne of Selum, whiche is the chiefe of the treasure. And before the sonnes of the kyned of the Rechabites, I sette portes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto them: Drynke wyne. But they sayed: we drynke no wyne, for Ionadab the sonne of Rechab our father commaunded vs, sayinge: ye & your sonnes shall neuer drynke wine, buyde no houses, sowe no seede, plant no vines, pea ye shall haue no vineyardes, but for all your tyme ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye maye lue long in the land wherewith ye be strangers.

Thus haue we obeyed the commaundement of Ionadab the sonne of Rechab our father: in all that he hath charged vs.

vs, and so we drinke no wyne all our lyfe longe: we nor our wyues, our sonnes, and our daughters. Neyther buyde we any house to dwel therein, we haue also amongs vs neyther vineyardes, ne corne lande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obey, & do accordynge vnto all that Jonadab our father commaunded vs.

E But now when Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon came vnto the land, we sayed: come, let vs go to Ierusalem, that we may escape the hote of the Chaldees and the Assirians: and so we dwell now at Ierusalem. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremie, saying: thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Goo and tell hole Juda and all the inhabitants of Ierusalem: Wyl ye not be resourmed to obey my wordes? saith the Lorde. The wordes whiche Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shoulde drinke no wyne, are false and surely kepte: for vnto this day they drinke no wyne, but obeye theyr fathers commaundemente. But as for me I haue stande by cacko, I haue spoken vnto you, and geue you earnest warnyng, and yet haue ye not bene obedyente vnto me.

Yea I haue sente my seruauntes all the prophetes vnto you, I rolc vp early, and sente you worde, sayinge: O tourne you, euerye man from his wycked way: amende your lyues, and goo not after straunge gods, to worshyp them: that ye maye continue in this land, whiche I haue gyuen vnto you & your fathers, but ye wolde neyther heare me, ne folowe me.

D The childre of Jonadab Rechabs sonne, haue stedfastly kepte their fathers commaundement that he gaue them, but this people is not obedyent vnto me. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Scholde, I wyl bringe vpon Juda, and vpon euerye one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuysed agaynst them. For I haue spoken vnto them, but they wolde not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuertheless they wolde geue me no answer. Jeremie also spake vnto the householde of the Rechabites: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes, the God of Israel: For so muche as ye haue obeyed the commaundemente of Jonadab your father, and kepte all his precepces, & done accordyng vnto all that he hath bydden you: Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes, the God of Israel, Jonadab the sonne of Rechab hath not sayle, but haue one oute of his stocke, to stand alway before me.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Baruch wryteth as Jeremie sayeth the booke of the curses agaynst Juda and Irael. He is sente wth the booke vnto the people, & readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers, and readeth it before them also. The rulers shewe vnto the kynge the wordes of the booke. Jehudy taketh the booke, and readeth a lytle of it, and after casteth it in the fyre. There is an other wrytten at the commaundemente of the Lorde.

In the full peate of Ioaquin the sonne of Iosaph kynge of Juda, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Take a booke and wryte therein all the wordes that I haue spoken to the, to Israel, to Juda, and to all the people from the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the daye of Iosiah) vnto this daye. That wyl the house of Juda beate of the plague whiche I haue deuysed for them, they may peradventure turne euerye manne fro his wycked waye, that I maye forgue theyr offences and synnes. Then dnd Jeremie call Baruche the sonne of Neriah, and Baruche wrote in the booke at the mouthe of Jeremie, all the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had spoken vnto hym. And Jeremie commaunded Baruche, sayinge: I am in prison, so that I may not come into the house of the Lorde, therfore go thou: brother, and reade the booke, that thou hast wrytten at my mouth. Namely, the wordes of the Lorde, and reade the in the Lordes house vpon the fastynge daye: that the people, hole Juda, and all they that come oute of the cypres maye heare. peradventure they wil pray mekely before the face of the Lorde, and turne euerye one from his wycked way. For great is the wrath and dyspleasure, that the Lorde hath taken agaynst this people.

So Baruche the sonne of Neriah dnd accordyng vnto all that Jeremie the prophete commaunded hym, readeinge the wordes of the Lorde out of the booke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fyfte yere of Ioaquin the sonne of Iosiah kynge of Juda, in the nyenth month whiche it was commaunded that all the people of Ierusalem shoulde faste before the Lorde, and they also that were come from the cypres of Juda vnto Ierusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremie oute of the booke wrytten in the house of the Lorde, out of the treasure of Samaria the summe of Sapha the scribe, whiche is besyde the hygher losse of the doore of the Lordes house: that all the people myght heare. Nowe when Gycheah the son of Samaryah the son of Saphan had heard all the wordes of the Lorde oute of the booke, he wente downe to the kynges palace into the scribes chabre, for there all the princes were set: Elisama the scribe, Dalayah the sonne of Semey, Elnathan the sonne of Achaboy, Samaria the son of Sapha, Sedechyas the son of Hananiah, wth all the princes. And Gycheah told the all the wordes that he heard Baruch reade out of the booke before the people.

Then all the princes sente Iehudo the sonne of Bathaiab, the sonne of Selemlah Sedechias the son of Josiah, whiche was made kyng thowm Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon, reigned in the lande of Iuda, in the tyme of Cononiah the son of Hoakym. But neither he, nor his seruantes, ne the people in the land wold obey the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he spake by þe prophet Jeremy. Neuertheles Sedechias the kyng sent Ichual the son of Selemiah, and Sophontah the son of Maasiab priest, to the prophet Jeremy, saying: We praye thou vnto the Lorde our God for vs. Nowe Jeremy walked fre amonge the people at that tyme, & was not put in prison as yet. Whataos host also was come oute of Egypte, whiche when the Caldees that besieged Ierusalem perceyued, they departed from thence.

Sananias, which fel spk hym, & toke him sayinge: thy mynd is set on to the Caldees.

E Then sayde Jeremey: It is not so, I go not to the Caldees. Reuerchelesse Jeremey wold not beleue hym, but broughte Jeremey bound before the princes. Wherefore the princes were angry wth Jeremey, causing hym to be beaten, & to be layd in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe, for he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremey put in the dungeon and prison, and so lay there a longe tyme. Then Sedechias the kynge sent for hym, and called him, and asked hym quietly in his own house, sayinge: I praye the for thy busynesse (that now is in hande) cometh of the Lord? Jeremey answered: yea that it doth, and thou (sayd he) shalt be deliuered into the hande of the kynge of Babylons power.

Moreouer Jeremey said vnto kynge Sedechias: what haue I offended agaynst the, agaynst thy seruantes, or agaynst thy people, that ye haue caused me to be put in prison? What are your prophetes which haue prophesied vnto you, & said that the kynge of Babylon shoulde not come agaynst you and this land?

And therfore heare now, O my Lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accept before the, & send me no more into the house of Jonathan the scribe, that I dye not there.

Then Sedechias the kynge commaunded to put Jeremey in the fore entry of the prison, and darly to be gyven hym a cake of bread, and els no dyght meate, but all the (b) breade in the cypre was eaten vp. Thus Jeremey remayned in the fore entry of the prison.

By the motion of the rulers Jeremey is put into a dungeon. At the request of Abedmelech the Chamberlayne, the kynge commaundeth Jeremey to be broughte forth of the dungeon. Jeremey sheweth the kynge howe he myght escape death.

Saphatiah the sonne of Marhan, Boshiah the sonne of Shashur, the son of Selemlah, and Shashur the sonne of Melchiah perceyued the wordes that Jeremey had spokē vnto al the people: namelye on this maner: Thus sayth the Lord: Who so remayneth in this ctye, shall perishe, either wth the sword, wth hunger, or wth pestilence: But who so shall go vnto the Caldees, shall escape & mynynge his soule for a praye, and shall loue. For thus sayth the Lord, This ctye (no doubt) must be deliuered into the power of the kynge of Babylon, and he also shall wynn it. The sayd the princes vnto the kynge: Syr, we beseech you lette this man be put to death. For thus he discourageth the handes of the souldyers that be in this ctye, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh such wordes vnto them.

This man verily labourerth not for the peace of the people, but myscheyfe. Sedechias the kynge answered and sayd: lo, he is in your handes, for the kynge may benye you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremey and cast hym into the dongen of Melchias the sonne of Hamelach, that dwelleth in the fore entry of the prison. And they let downe Jeremey wth cordes into a dungeon, where ther was no water, but myre: So Jeremey stode fast in the myre.

Nowe when Abedmelech the Chamarayn beyng a Chamberlayne in the kynges court, vnderstode that they had caste Jeremey into the dungeon: he wente out of the kynges house, and spake to the kynge, (whyche then sat vnder the port of Beniamin) these wordes: O my Lorde the kynge, what as these men meble wth Jeremey the prophet, they do hym wronge: Name lye in that they haue put hym in prison, ther to dye of hunger, for ther is no more bread in the ctye.

Then the kynge commaunded Abedmelech the Chamarayn, and sayd: Take from hence .xxx. men whom thou wilt, & drawe vp Jeremey the prophet out of the dungeon before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men wth hym, and went to the house of Amalech, and there vnder an almyrpe he gat old ragges, and woine cloutes, and let them downe by a corde into the dungeon to Jeremey.

And Abedmelech the Chamarayn sayd vnto the prophet Jeremey: O put these ragges & cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwixt them and the cordes: and Jeremey did so. So they drew vp Jeremey wth cordes, and toke hym out of the dongen, & he remained in the fore entry of the prison. Then Sedechias the kynge sent & caused Jeremey the prophet to be called vnto hym out of the chyd entry that was by the house of the Lorde. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremey: I will aske the some what, but hyde no thyng from me. The Jeremey answered Sedechias: Yf I be plaine vnto the, thou wylt cause me suffer death: if I geue the counsel, thou wylt not folow me. So the kynge swore an othe secretly vnto Jeremey, sayinge: As truly as the Lorde lyueth, I made vs these soules, I will not see the, ne geue the into the handes of the that seeke after thy lyfe. Then sayd Jeremey vnto Sedechias: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Yf case be that thou wilt go furth vnto the king of Babylons princes, thou shalt save thy life, and the city shall not be burnt: for both thou and thy household shall escape with your lives. But if ye will not go forth to the king of Babylons princes, the king shall say to the king of the Chaldees, wherewithal shall I set fire upon it, & thou shalt not be able to escape thence. And Sedechias sayde unto Jeremey: I am afraid for the Chaldees that are fled unto the Caldees lest I come in their hands, and so they to have me in derision. But Jeremey answered: No, they shall not betray thee: I have heard the voice of the Lord (I beseech thee) which I speake unto thee: so shalt thou be well, & save thy life. But if thou wilt not go forth, the Lord hath tolde me thy plaine: Beholde, all the women that are left in the king of Judas house, shall go out to the king of Babylons princes. For they shalke, that thou art deceived: and that the men in whose house thou dydest put thy trust, have mastered thee, & set thy feet fast in the mire, & gone theyre way from thee. Therefore all thy wives with theyre children shall be unto the Chaldees, and thou shalt not escape theyre handes, but shalt be the king of Babylons prisoner, & thy city shall be burnt.

When sayd Sedechias unto Jeremey: Loke that no body knowe of these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But if the princes perceiue that I haue talked with thee, and come vnto the saying: O speake, what sayd the kyng to thee? hyde it not from vs: & we will not put thee to death: Tell vs (we praye thee) what sayd the kyng to thee? He thou giue them thy answer: I haue humbly besought the kyng, that he will let me lye no more in Jonathas house, that I dye not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jeremey, & asked him. And he tolde them after the manner as the kyng had hym. The they held their peace, for they perceiued nothing. So Jeremey abode still in the fore entree of the prison, vntill the day that Ierusalem was wonne.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Abu hadonofor besieged Ierusalem, Sedechias flyeth. He is take of the Chaldees. His sonnes are slain. His eyes are shutte out. Jeremey is prouided for. Abedmelech is deliuered from captiuitie, because of the confidence that he hath in God.

Jer. lli. a.

¶ One when the city of Ierusalem was taken (for in the ninth yere of Sedechias kyng of Iuda, in the tenth moneth, came Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon and all his host, and beseged Ierusalem, and in the eleuenth yere of Sedechias, in the fourth moneth in the nyntieth daye of the moneth he brake into the city.) The all the princes of the kyng of Babylon came in, and sat them downe vnder the port: Netegell, Sarezar, Samegarnabo, Sarfachym, Rabfarys, Netchel, Sarezar, Rabmag, with all the other princes of the kyng of Babylon. And when Sedechias the kyng of Iuda, with his souldiers sawe them, they fled, and departed out of the city by nyght thowme the kynges garde, and thowme the porte that is betwene the two walles, and so they went toward the wylderneffe.

But the Chaldees hoste folowed faste & asiet them, and toke Sedechias in the fildes of Iericho, and broughte hym prisoner to Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon vnto Reblath that lyeth in the lande of Bemeb, wher he gaue iudgement vpon hym. So the kyng of Babylon caused the chyldren of Sedechias, and all the nobles of Iuda to be slayn before his face at Reblath. And made Sedechias eyes to be put out & bounde hym with chaynes, and sente hym to Babylon.

Moreover the Chaldees burnt by the kyngs palace, with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Ierusalem. As for the remnant of the people that were in the city, and such as were come to help them (whatsoever was left of the common sort) Nabuzardan the chiefe captaine carped them to Babylon. But Nabuzardan the chiefe captaine let the Iasak people, (and those that had nothing) dwell still in the land of Iuda, and gaue them vineyardes and corne felde, at the same tyme. Nabuchodonosor also the kyng of Babylon, gaue Nabuzardan the chiefe captaine a charge concerning Jeremey, sayinge: Take and cherishe hym, and make muche of hym: for thou do hym no harme, but entreat hym after his own desire. So Nabuzardan the chiefe captaine, rapue, Nabufathan the chiefe chamberlaine, Netgalsarzer the treasurer, and all the kyng of Babylons lordes, sente for Jeremey, and caused hym to be set out of the fore entree of the prison, and committed hym vnto Godoliah the sonne of Abpkam, the sonne of Saphan: that he shoulde carpe hym home, and so he dwelt amonge the people.

¶ Nowe whyle Jeremey laye yet bounde in the fore entree of the prison, the worde of the Lord came vnto hym, sayinge: Go and tell Abedmelech the Chaldean: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plague that I haue deuised for this city, will I bringe vpon them, that thou shalt see it, but I will deliuer thee (sayeth the Lord) and thou shalt not come in the handes of those men whom thou fearest. For doubtlesse I will saue thee so that thou shalt not see the sword, but thy life shall be saued, and that because thou hast put thy trust in me, sayeth the Lord.

¶ Jeremie hath licence to go whither he will. He dwelleth with the people that remaineth at Jerusalem, over whom Godoliah ruleth. Johanan propheseth death vnto Godoliah.

Jer. xlii. a.
Ezek. xlii. b.

Thus is the maner how the Lord entreated Jeremie, when Nabuzardan the chiefe captayne had let hym go fre fro Babilon, whither he had led hym bounde among all the prysoners, that were caried from Jerusalem and Juda vnto Babilon. The chiefe Capitaine called for Jeremie, & sayde vnto hym. The Lord thy God spake myghtily before of the mystery vpon this place. Now the Lord hath sent it, & performed it as he had promised, for ye haue spurned against the Lord, and haue not ben obedient vnto his voice, therefore commeth this plague vpon you. Behold, I loose þe bondes from thy handes this day: if thou wilt go with me vnto Babilon, vpon this for I will be to the, and prouide for the: But if þe wilt not go with me to Babilon, then remaine here. Behold, all the lande is at thy will, loke wher thou thinkest conueniente and good for the to abyde, there dwell. If thou canst not be content to dwell alone, the remaine with Godoliah the sonne of Abicam the sonne of Saphan: whome the kynge of Babilon hath made gouernoure ouer the cityes of Juda, and dwell with hym among the people, or remayne where soeuer it please the. So the chiefe Capitaine gaue hym his expenses with a reward, and let him go. Then went Jeremie vnto Godoliah the sonne of Abicam to Gazphah, and dwelt thert with hym among þe people that were left in the land.

And Godoliah the sonne of Abicam, the sonne of Saphan swore vnto them and their felowes on this manner: Be not afraid to serue the Chaldees, dwell in the land, and doo the kynge of Babilon seruice, so shall ye prosper. Behold, I dwell at Gazphah to be an officer in the Chaldees behalfe, and to satisfie suche as come to vs. Therefore gather you wyne, come and oyle, and kepe them in your ware houses, and dwell in your cyties that ye haue in keepynge.

and in all the countreys, when they herd that the kynge of Babilon hadde made Godoliah the sonne of Abicam, the sonne of Saphan, gouernoure vpon them that were left in Juda: All the Jewes (I say) returned out of all places wher they were fled vnto: and came into the lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Gazphah, and gathered wyne and other frutes, and that verie muche. Moreover Johanan the son of Careah and all the capitaynes of the hostes, that were scattered on euery side in the land, came to Godoliah in Gazphah, and sayde vnto hym: knowest thou not that Baalam kynge of the Ammonites hath sente Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah to sle the? But Godoliah the sonne of Abicam beleued the not. The sayd Johanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Gazphah, these wordes secretly: let me go I praye the, & I will see Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, so that no bodye shal knowe it. Wherefore will he sle the, that all the Jewes whych reioyce vnto the myght be scattered, and the remnant in Juda preyshe? Then sayd Godoliah the sonne of Abicam to Johanan the sonne of Careah: Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lyes, that men saye of Ismaell.

The .xli. Chapter.

¶ Ismaell kylleth Godoliah secretly, and many other with hym. Johanan followeth after Ismaell.

But in the seventh moneth it happeneth that Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynge's bloud) came with them that was greatest about the kynge, and ten men that were sworn with hym vnto Godoliah the sonne of Abicam to Gazphah, & eat ther togyther. And Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah, with those .x. men þe were sworn to hym, stode vp and smote Godoliah the sonne of Abicam, the sonne of Saphan with the sword, and slew hym, whome the kynge of Babilon had made gouernoure of the land. Ismaell also slew all the Jewes þe were with Godoliah at Gazphah, and all the Caldees that he found there wayfynge vpon hym.

The next day after that he had slayne Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknewen) there came certeine men from Sichem, from Sylo, and Samaria, to the number of fourscore, whych had shaven their beardes, rent their clothes, and were all beaup, bringynge meat offeringes, and incense in their handes, to offer it in the house of the Lord. And Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah wente forth of Gazphah wepyng to meete them. Now when he met them, he sayd: Wo yow way to Godoliah the sonne of Abicam. And when they came in the myddell of the cite, Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah (with them þe were sworn vnto hym) slew them euen at the myddell of the cite.

E Among these four score men that were ten that said unto Ismael: O hea vs not for we haue yet a great treasure in þe of wheat, barley, oyle and honny. So he spared them, and lette them not with they brethren. Now the pit wherin Ismael hid all the dead bodies of the men (whom he knew because of Godoliah) had kyng Aia caused to be made, for feare of Baasa the kyng of Israell, and the same pyt dyd Is-all the people that were yet left at Ma-

Captayne had made Godoliah the sonne of Abiech gouernour, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah caried them away prysoners towards the Ammonites. But when Jo-had bene captaynes ouer the kynges host with hym, heard of al the wickednes that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had done, they took thei companions and wente out for to fight with Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and found him by the waters of Rabim Gaboon. Now when al the people whom Ismael led captiue saw Johaal þe people that Ismael had caried away from Mazaphah wer brought agayne.

D And when they returned, they came to Johanan the sonne of Kareah. But Isma-el the sonne of Nathaniah fled from Joha-nan with eight of his swayne companions, & went to the Ammonites. Then Johana the sonne of Kareah, and al the captaynes of the host that were with hym, took the remnant of the people, to whom Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah hadde led awaye (when he had slayne Godoliah the sonne of Abiech) whom they hadde also rescued from him: syghing men, women and children, and gelded men, whom they brought agayne from Gaboon, and wente from thence, and came the doirne at Beth Lemaam, to which theyr helyde Bethleem, that they myght go into Egypt for feare of the Caldees: of whom they were afrayed, because that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godoliah Abiechs sonne whom the kyng of Babylon had made go-uernour in the land.

The Captaynes toke counsell of Jeremij what they ought to do. Jeremij monethed the rest of the people not to go into Egypt.

So al the rulers, and Johanan the sonne of Kareah, Jezoniah the sonne of Osi-ab came with all the people from the least unto the most, and sayd vnto Jeremij the prophet: hear our petition, that thou maiest pray for vs vnto the Lord thy God, and for the rest wherof ther be very fewe left of many, as thou seest vs: that þe Lord thy God may shew vs a way to go in, and tell vs what we should do. Then Jeremij the prophet said vnto them: I haue heard you. Behold, I wyl pray vnto God your Lorde, as ye haue requyred me: and looke what answer the Lord giueth you, I shal certifye you thereof, and keepe nothinge backe from you. And they sayde vnto Je-remij: The Lord of truth and faithfulness be our record that we wyl doo al that the Lord thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euill. We wyl hearken vnto the voyce of our Lord God, to whome we send the, that we may prosper, when we haue folowed þe voyce of the Lord our god.

Jer. xlii. a.

And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremij. Then called he Jo-hanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the Capitaynes of the people that were with him, and al the people from the least to the most, and said vnto them. Thus sayth the Lord god of Israell, vnto whom ye sent me to say for you prayers before hym. I ye wyl dwell in this land, I shal buyld you vp and not breake you down, I shal plant you, and not roote you out, for I am pacifyed as concerninge the trouble that I haue done to you. Feare not the kynges of Babylon, of whom ye stande in awe: O be not afrayed of hym sayeth the Lord, for I wyl be with you to helpe you, and deliuer you from his hand. I wyl pardon you, I wyl haue mercy vpon you, and bring you agayne into your owne land.

Nevertheless, if ye purpose not to dwell in this land, nor to folow the voyce of the Lord your God, but wyl say thus: we wyl not dwell here, but go into Egypt, where we shal neither see war, heare the noyse of battel, ne suffer hunger, ther wyl we dwell.
Wherefore heare now the word of the Lord, O ye remnant of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lord of hosts the God of Israell: If ye be holly purposed to go into Egypt and to be ther as straungers, the sword that ye fear shal ouertake you in Egypt, and the hunger wherof ye be here afrayed, shal hang vpon you into Egypt, and there ye shal dye. For al they that of set purpose vnder-take to go into Egypt, there to ease themselues of theyr mysery, shal perishe with the sword, with hunger, and pestilence:
not one of them shal remaine, there shal none escape the plage, that I wyl bring vpon them.

For thus saith the Lord of hosts the god of Israell, I like as my wrath and indignation is come vpon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so shal my displeasure go forth vpon you also, if ye go into Egypt: For there ye shal be reuelled, abhorred, brought to shame and confusio, and as for this place ye shal neuer see it more. The Lord for-downdeth you, O ye remnant of Juda, that ye shal not go into Egypt.

And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this day, els shal ye begyle your selues. For ye sent me vnto the Lord your God, and sayed: O praye thou the Lord for vs.

our god for vs: and loke what answer the Lord our God geueth the, that bring vs againe, and we shal doo thereafter. Nowe haue I shewed and declared vnto you the voyce of the Lord your God, for the which cause he hath set me to you. If ye wyl not folow it, be sure that ye shal perishe wth the sword, wth hunger, and pestilence, euē in the same place, wher your lust was to go and dwell.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Johanan carpieth the remnant of the people into Egypt contrary to the mynde of Jeremie. Jeremie prophesieth the destruction of Egypt.

NOWE when Jeremie had ended all the wordes of the Lord God vnto the people (for their sakes to whom god had sent him) Azarab the sonne of Oshai, and Johanan the sonne of Kareah, wth all the proude persons, sayed vnto Jeremie: Thou liest, the Lord our God hath not sente the to speake vnto vs, that wee should not go into Egypt, and dwell ther. But Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he myght bring vs into captivity of the Caldees, that they myght slea and carie vs away prisoners vnto Babylon.

13 So Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the Captaynes of the host, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lord. Namely to dwell in the lande of Iuda. But Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the Captaynes of the host, caried away all the remnant in Iuda, that were come togerther agayne from the Barchan, (among whom they had ben scattered) to dwell in the land of Iuda: men, women, children, the wyues daughters: all those that Nabuzardan the chiefe Captayne hadde lefte wth Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam. They caried away also the prophet Jeremie, Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and so came into Egypt: for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

14 And in Taphnis the word of the Lord happened vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Take great stones in thine hand, and hide them in the bricke wal, vnder the doore of Ithabars house in Taphnis, that all the men of Iuda may see, and saye vnto the: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Behold, I wyl send and call for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruant, and for all his souldiers vpon the stones that I haue hidde, and he shal slea and breke ouer them.

15 And when he cometh he shal smyte the land of Egypt wth slaughter, wth prisonment, and wth the sword. He shal sette vpon the temples of the Egipcians gods, and burne them by, and take them selues prisoners. Moreover he shal aray himself wth the land of Egypt, like as a shepheard putteth on his robe, and shal departe bys way from thence in peace. The pylers also of the temple of the sunne that is in Egypt, shal be breake in pieces, and burne the temples of the Egipcians gods.

The. xliii. Chapter.

He reproveth the people for theyr idolitp: they that let light by the threathinge of the Lord are chastened. The destruction of Egypt and the Jewes therein, is prophesied.

THIS is the word that was shewed to Jeremie concerninge al the Jewes, which dwelt in Egypt, at Migdal, at Taphnis, at Memphis, and in the land of Satures. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: ye haue sene al the miserie that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem, and vpon al the cities of Iuda, so that theyr day theyr day is desolate, and no man dwelling therein: and that because of the great blasphemies wherby they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger: In that they wente backe to do sacrifice and worshippe vnto strange gods: whom neither they nor ye, nor your fathers haue knowen. Nowe be it sent vnto them my seruantes all the prophets: I rose vpearely, and sent vnto them, and gaue them warnyng: I doo no suche abhominable thynges, and thynges that I hate. But they woulde not folowe, ne hearken, to turne from theyr wickednesse, and to doo no more sacrifice vnto strange gods.

Wherefore myne indignacion & wrath was kindled, and burnt vpon cities of Iuda, the felowes wth the streets of Ierusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to pass this day. Nowe therefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: Howe happeneth it that ye do so great euill vnto your owne soules, thus to destroy the men and women, children and babes of Iuda? so that none of you is lefte, because ye prouoke me to wrath wth the workes of your own handes: when ye offer vnto strange gods in the land of Egypt, wher as ye begunne to dwell: That ye myght utterly perishe, and that ye myght be reupled, and shamefully intreated of al nations. Why haue ye nowe forgotten the wickednes of your fore fathers, the wickednes of the kinges of Iuda, and theyr wyues, the wickednes that ye your selues and your wyues haue done in the land of Iuda, in the city, and in the land of Ierusalem?

Yet are ye not sorry this day, ye fear not neyther walke ye in my law, and in my commaundementes that I haue geuen vnto you and your fore fathers.

Wherefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the god of Israel: I am deadlyly aduised and determined to punishe you, and to rote out al Iuda. As for the remnant of Iuda that purposely went into Egypt, there to ease them of theyr misery, I wyl take the, and they shal al be destroyed. In the lande of Egypt shal they perishe by the consurmed wth the swerde and wth hunger. For from the least vnto the most they shal perishe

Jer. xli. perish with the sword, and with hunger. Moreover they shall be reupled, abhorred, shamed and confounded. For I will visit them that dwell in Egypt, as I have visited Jerusalem: with the sword, with hunger, and with pestilence: so that none of the remnant of Juda, which are gone to dwell in Egypt shall be left to come againe into the land of Juda, although they thinke to come thither againe, and to dwell there. For none shall come againe, but such as are fledde away.

Jer. xlii. D And al the men which knew that they wyles had offered unto strange gods, and a great sorte of wyles that stode ther, yea and al the people that dwelt ther in Egypt in the city of Patmos, answered Jeremij and sayd: as for the wordes that thou hast spoken unto vs in the name of the Lord, we will in no wise heare them: but whatsoeuer goeth out of our own mouth, that will we do. We will do sacrifice, and offer oblations unto the Quene of heauen, lyke as we and our forefathers, our kynges and our heades haue done in the cities of Iuda, and in the stetes and fieldes of Jerusalem. For then had we plenteousnes of vittalles, then were we in prosperitee, and no misfortune came vpon vs.

Jer. xlii. E But since we left to offer and to do sacrifice unto the Quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenes of all thyng, and perished with the sword and hunger. All of all when wee women had sacrifice and offered unto the Quene of heauen, did we make bet cakes, and poure vnto her drinke offerings, to doo her scrupce, withoute our husbandes wylles?

Jer. xliii. Then said Jeremij vnto al the people, to the men, to the women, and al the folke which had giuen hym that answer: Jer. xliii. Ypd not the Lord remember the sacrifices that ye, your forefathers, your kynges and rulers (with al the people) haue offered in the cities of Iuda, in the stetes and land of Jerusalem, and hath he not considered this in his mynde? In so much that the Lord myght no longer suffer the wickednes of your inuencions, and the abominable thinges which ye doo? Is not your land desolate and voyde, yea and abhorred, so that no man dwelleth therein any more, as it is come to passe this daye?

Jer. xliii. Ypd not all this happen vnto you because ye made such sacrifice, and sinned against the Lord? ye haue not followed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordynances and statutes.

Jer. xliii. Yea this is the cause that al misfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye: moreover, Jeremij spake vnto al the people, and to al the women: Heare the word of the Lord al Iuda, ye that be in the land of Egypt: thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Ye, & your wyles haue spoken with your owne mouth the thyng that ye haue fulfilled in dede.

Jer. xliii. Yea thus haue ye said: We will not do sacrifice, and your cett, ink offering to the Quene of heauen. Jer. xliii. Yea ye set up your own good meanings, & haue ly haue ye fulfilled your own intent. And therefore heare the word of the Lord al Iuda, ye that dwell in the land of Egypt.

Jer. xliii. Behold, I haue sworn by my greete name saith the Lord, that my name shall not be rehearsed thow any mans mouth of Iuda, in al the land of Egypt, to saye the Lord God lyerth, for I will walke to plague them, and not for theyr wealthe. And al the men of Iuda that be in the land of Egypt, shall perishe with the sword, and with hunger, until they be utterly destroyed.

Jer. xliii. Neuertheless those that fled away for the sword, shall come againe into the land of Iuda, but they shall be very few of them. And al the remnant of Iuda, that are gone into Egypt, that to dwell, shall know whose wordes shall be found true: theyrs or mine. Take this for a token that I will visit you in this place, saith the Lord, and that ye may know how that I (without doubt) will personme my purpose vpon you to punish you. Jer. xliii. Behold saith the Lord, I will deliuer Ishmael Nophca kyng of Egypt into the handes of his enemies, that seek after his lyfe: euen as I gaue Sedechias the kyng of Iuda into the handes of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, which sought after his lyfe.

The. xlv. Chapter.

Baruch is rejoyced of Jeremij.

Jer. xlv. These are the wordes that Jeremij the prophet spake vnto Baruch the son of Neriah, after he had written these sermons into a booke at the mouth of Jeremij in the fourth yere of Iosiah the son of Josiah kyng of Iuda.

Jer. xlv. Thus saith the Lord God of Israel vnto the, o Baruch: In so much as I thought thus, when thou wast weeping. Jer. xlv. Woe is me, the Lord hath geuen me paine for my trouble: I haue wept myself with sighing, and I shall sende no rest: therefore tel hym, o Jeremij, that the Lord saye thus: Behold, the thyng that I haue builded, will I breake downe againe, and roote out the thyng that I haue plantid, yea this hole land. And seek thou yet promotion? Loke not for it, and desyre it not. For I will bring a miserable plage vpon al the sayth the Lord. But thy lyfe will I giue the for a praye whersoever thou goest.

Jer. xlv. Here foloweth the wordes of the Lord to the prophet Jeremij, which he spake vnto the Gentils. These wordes folowing reached he to the Egipcians concerning Pharaoh Necho kyng of Egypt, when he was in Charbainis beside the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon drem hym, in the fourth yere of Josiah the sonne of Josiah king of Juda.

Ye make readye buckler and shilde, ye goe forth to fyghte: Ye harness your horses and set your selues vpon them: Ye sette your salets fast on, ye bringe forth speares, ye scoute your swordes and put on your breast plates.

But alas, how happeneth it. I see you so afrayed: why shynke ye backe: wherfore at your worthies shapne: yea they run so fast away, that none of them looketh be-hinde him. Fearfulness is fallen vpon eu-ery one of them saith the Lord. The lightest of foote shal flee awape, and the worthies shall not escape.

B Toward the North by the water of Euphrates, they shal stumbe & fall. But what is he thys that swelleth up as it were a floude, roaring and raging lyke the streames of water? It is Egypt that ryleth up lyke the floude, and casteth out the waters wth so great noyse.

For they say: We wil go vp and wyl couer the earth: we wyl destroye the cityes, wth them that dwell therein. Set you to boysebacke, roule forth the charetes, come forth ye worthies, ye Morians, ye Libians wth your buklers, ye Libeans with your bowes: So shal thys day be vnto the Lord God of hostes, a daye of vengeance, that he may auenge hym of hys enemies. The sword shal deuour, it shalbe satisfied and

E bathed in their blud: (a) For the Lord god of hostes shal haue a daye of offeringe toward his North, by the water of Euphrates.
Go vp (O Galaad) and bringe teptacle vnto the daughter of Egypte: But in vapour shalt thou go to surgerie, for thy wounde shal not be stopped: The heathen shal hear of thy shame, and the land shalbe ful of thy confusion: for one strong man shal stumbe vpon an other, how then shoulde they not fall both together. These are the wordes

D that the Lord spake to the Prophet Jeremy, concerning the host of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, whych was sente to destroye the land of Egypt: Preach out vnto the land of Egypt, & cause it to be proclaimed at Magdol, Memphis and Taph-nis, and say: Stand up, make the reb, for the sword shal consume the round about.
How happeneth it that thy myghty worthies are fallen: why shode they not stand?
Even because the Lord thurst them down.
The daughter was great, for one fell euer vpon an other. One cried vpon another:
Up, let vs go agayne to our owne people, and to our owne naturall countrey, from the sword of our enemye. Lye even there:

E O Pharaon kyng of Egypte the tyme wyl bringe sedition. As truly as I lyue (saith the kyng, whose name is the Lord of hostes) it shal come as the mount of Thabor, and as Libanus, if it stode in the sea. O thou daughter of Egypt make readye thy geare to flyt. For Memphis shalbe holde and desolate, so that no man shal dwell therein. (b)

The land of Egypt is lyke a goodly fayre calfe, but one shal come out of the North to pyck her forward. (c) Her waged soule diets that be wth her, are like fat calves.

They also shal flye away together, and not abyde: for the daye of their daughter and the tyme of their vpspyracon shal come vpon them.

The crye of their enemyes shal make a noyse, as the blast of a trompet. For they shall enter in wth their boote, and come wth axes, as it were hewers downe of wood. And they shal cut downe her wood, saith the Lord, wthout any dyscrecyon.
For they shal be mo in number then the Greshoppers, so that no manne shal be able to tell them. The daughter of Egypt shal be confounded, when she shal be delyuered into the handes of the people of the North.

Moreouer thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyl vylce that restless people of Alexandria, Pharaon and Egypt, yea both their gods and their kings: euen Pharaon, and al them that put their trust in hym. Yea I wyl deliuer the into the hands of those that seke after their lives. Namely into the power of Nabu-chodonosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of hys seruantes. And after al these thynges it shalbe inhabited as afore tyme, saith the Lord.

B But be not thou afrayed (O my seruaut Jacob) feare not thou, O Israel. For loo, I wyl helpe the from far, and thy sede scd the land of thy captivity: Jacob also shal come agayne, and be in rest: he shalbe rich, and no man shal do him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaut) saith the Lord, for I am wth the: and wyl destroye al nations, amonges whome I haue scattered the. Reuerence I wyl not consume the, but chasten the and correct the: yea & that wth dyscrecyon: neither wyl I spare the as one that were faultles.

The Notes of the .xlii. Chapter.

(a) The Chaldees kyled the Egyptians, at the floude of Euphrates, whiche was toward the North: wher as yet their hoste was wonderous great, and their horses and charetes many.
But the greater their host was, the more cruell was their slaughter, so vnto the Lord punyde their wickednes, geuinge them into the handes of the Chaldees: and therefore called the Pro-phete the daye of their slaughter the daye of the Lords vengeance, and them a daye of offering of the Lord.

(b) As though he sayd: Hither to (O Egypt) hast thou bene as a goodly fayre calfe, for thine aboundaunce of riches. Therefore as bullockes and oien are stonge wth hynnates, and pyck-ed forward wth goddes: or as some call them wth gaddes, so shall the Babylonians, synge and pycke the, and dyue thee to flyghte and ouerthrowe thee. By hym that shoulde come out of the North is vnderstande the kyng of Babylon and hys host.

of y^e coasts that bordered theron, should be fearful and weak, and more deperre and ma-

The. xlviii. Chapter.

The word of the Lorde agaynst the Philistines.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophete a-gaynst the Philistines, befor that Ishmael smote the cty of Azab. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, ther shall water g-auncle out of the North, and shal growe to a greete floude, runnyng ouer, and coue-ryng the lande, the ctyes, and them that dwell therein.

And the men shal crye, and all they that dwell in the lande shal mourne at y^e noyse and stamping of theyr strong barbed hoses, at the shakynge of theyr charretts, and at the rombling of the wheles. The satyers shal not looke to theyr children, so feable a toer shal theyr bads be. At the same time when he shal be ther, to destroy the whole lad of the Philistines, he shal make waste both Tyus, Serdon and al other that are sworne vnto them.

For the Lorde wil destroy al Palestina, and the other Isles, that be heuyded from the countrey. Baldness is come vpon Azab, A scalon wth her other valleyes shal keepe her peace.

How long wilt thou sit, O thou sword of the Lorde? Turne againe into thy sheath, rest and leaue of. But home can it cease, when the Lorde hym selfe hath geuen hym a charge agaynst Ascalon, and caried it up agaynst the ctyes of the sea coast.

The. xlviii. Chapter.

The word of the Lorde agaynst the Moabites.

Thus saith the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel agaynst Moab: wo be to the cty of Abo. for it shal be lai-ed waste, brought to confusion, and taken.
Yea the strong cty of Mariathaim shal be brought to shame and ashaied: Moab shal no more be had in honoure: Wicked counsell shal be taken vpon Serdon. Come (shal they say) let vs route them oute, that they may be no more amyg the number of the Gentyls, yea that they maye no more be thought vpon: Thus the swerde shal persecute the. A voyce shal crye from Do-conaim: With great weeping and desolation is Moab made desolate.

And this crye shal be herd in all her cy-ties. At the goynge up into Lutha ther shal arise a lamentation: and downe towarde Doronaim, ther shal be herd a euell and a deadly crye: Ser you away, saue poure ly-ues, and be lyke vnto the deach in the wild-deserte. For because thou hast trusted in thy strong holdes and treasure, thou shalt be taken. * Chamea wyl byspye us and prynces shal goe away into captiuitie.

The breyter shal come vpon al the cy-ties, none shal escape. The valleyes shal be destroyed, and the hilles shal be laid waste lyke as the Lorde hath decreed.

* Make a rebreue to Moab, that she get her away speedely: for her ctyes shal be made so desolate, that no man shal dwell therin. (c) Cursed be he that both y^e worke of the Lorde neglygeth, and cursed be he that keepeth backe his swerde from shedding of blood.

Moab hath bene ryche and care-les from her yowth up, she hath synned and take her ease wth her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessel into another (that is) she neuer wete away into cap-tiuitie, therfore her case remayneth, & her sauour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme cometh sayth the lord, that I shal sende her trusters to truste her up, to viue and season her vessels: yea her tankers carrell and shalke to and fro.
And Moab shal be ashaied of Chamos, lyke as Israel is ashaied of Bethel, wherin they put her trust.

Wherfore do ye think thus: we are mighty, and strong men of war: Moab shal be destroyed, and her ctyes brente vpp: her chosen young men shal be slaine, sayeth the kyng. whose name is the Lorde of hostes.
The destruction of Moab cometh on a pace, and her fall is at hand.

Al her neyghbours shal mouene for her,
and al they that know her name, shal say: O how happeneth it that the strong staffe and the goodly rodde is thus broken? And thou daughter Dibon, come downe from thy glory and sit in pouerthe. For he that destroyed Moab, shal come vnto the also,
and breake downe thy strong holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get thee to a strete and looke about the: aske them that are fled and escaped, and saye: what thyng is happened? O Moab is confuded and ouercome.

Mourne and cry, tel it oute at Aclon, y^e Moab is destroyed. And misery shal come vpon the same land: y^e Lamich, y^e Beldi, and Jahazab: vpon Gephath and Dibon, vpon Abo and the house of Deblathaim, vpon Mariathaim and Bethgamul, vpon Bethmaon and Carsoth, vpon Bozrah and al the ctyes in the land of Moab, wherher they lye far or nere.

The horn of Moab shal be smited down, and her arme broke, sayth the Lorde. Make her drunken, for she magnified her selfe, as boue the Lorde, that men maye clay their hades at her vomit, and that she also may be laughed to scorn. O Israel, shalt thou not laughe hym to scorn, when he is taken among rebukes? Yea because of the nescies that thou hast spoken agaynst Ipm, thou shall be dyuen away. Ye Moabites shall leave the cities & dwell in rockes of stone, and become lyke doves, that make theyr nestes in holes.

E As for Moabs pynde, we haue heard of it, he is very hye mynde, I knowe her stoutnes, her boastyng, her arrogancye, and the pynde of her stomacke, sayth the Lord. For her furtaunes may neyther upholde her wryth strengthe ne dede. Therefore shall there mourninge be made for Moab, and euery man shall crye for Moabs sake: a lamentation shall be made to the menne that stand vpon the wal: So wil I mourne for the also, O Hazer, and for the, O thou vine yerde of Sabamah. The wyne & ianches shall come ouer the sea, and the bryanches of Hazer but vnto the sea: the destroyer shall breake into thy vauens and grape garthcyng: Assyrie and chere shall be taken away from the tymbre spelde, and from the whole lande of Moab. There shall be no swete wyne in the presse, the reader shall haue no stomacke to crye, yea there shall be none to cry vnto hym: whiche afore tyme were hearde from Hesbon to Eleale and Abaz, whiche lyfted vp theyr voyce from zoar vnto Hozonaim, that Bullocke of thie peare old. The waters also of Aem-
E tim shall be dyed vp.

E Moreover I will make Moab cease (sayth the Lord) from the off. cing & censur that she hath made vnto her gods in hygh places. Wherefore my heart mourneth for Moab, like a croude playng an deup song: and for the mē's sake of the bypke wal my hearte mourneth also, euen as a pyper that ppyeth a doleful song: for they shall be very fewe, and destroyed. Al heades shall be shauen, and al berdes clipped of: al hands bound, and al fornes gyrded aboute wryth sackcloth. Vpon all the house toppes, and flettes of Moab, there shall be mourning: For I wyl breake Moab lyke an vnprofitable vessel sayth the Lord. O how fearful is he? O how mourneth he? O how doth Moab hang down her heade, and is ashamed? Thus shall Moab be a laughtynge stocke, and had in derision of al them, that be tolde about her. For thus sayth the Lord: Behold, the enemy shall come flying as an eagle, and spread his wynges vpon Moab. He shall clyme ouer the wals, and wpy the strong holdes. Then the myghty mē's bettes in Moab shall be lyke the harte of a woman trauelyng wryth chylde.

E And Moab shall be made so desolate that she shall no more be a people, because she hath sette vpon her selfe agaynst the Lord. Fear, it, and snare shall come vpon the (O Moab) sayth the Lord. Who so escapeth the feare, shall fall in the pytte: and who so getteth out of the pytt, shall be taken in the snare. For I wyl byng a yere of vyltacion vpon Moab, sayth the Lord. They that are able to spe, shall stande vnder the shadow of Hesbon. For they shall go a pye out of Hesbon, and a flame from Sid, and shall burne vpon that proud people of Moab, both before and behynde.

Wo be vnto the (O Moab,) for thou people of Edamos shalt perishe: Yea thy sonnes and doughters shall be led away captiue. Yet at the last wyl I byng Moab oute of captiuitie agayne, sayth the Lord. Thus far of the plage of Moab.

The Notes of the. lviij. Chapter.

(a) The Hebrewes expound thus of the. lviij. chaps, that they shoulde haue to destroy the whole kyngdome of the Moabites: as though the text shoulde meane thus muche: Cursed be he that negligently perfourmeth the vengeance of the Lord, that spareth thise most wy. hed Moabites, and that withholdeth hys sword from the vyng of theyr bloods.

The. xliij. Chapter.

The wynde of the Lord agaynst the Ammonites, agaynst, Idumea, Damascus, Cedar and Elam.

A S concerning the Ammonites, thus sayth the Lord: Hath I haue no chyl-
A dien or is he without an heyr? Wyl he hath your kyng then taken Gad: wyl hee soe doth hys people dwell in hys cities? Behold therefore, the tyme cometh (sayth the Lord) that I wyl byng a noyse of warre into Rabath of the Ammonites. Ra-
A bel shall be desolate, and her cryes byene vnto the Isrealites shall be howles ouer those that had them in poss. Much afore, sayth the Lord. Hesbon shall mourne, for it shall be rooted out of the ground sayth the Lord. The cities of Rabab shall crye oute, and gird them selues wryth sackcloth: they shall mourne, and run about the wals: for theyr kyng shall be led away prisoner: yea hys priestes and prynces wryth hym.

Wherefore trustest thou in the water streames that flowe to and fro, O thou leaue doughter: and thyngest thou art so safe (by reason of thy treasure) that no mā shall come to the.

Behold, I wyl byng a feare vpon the, sayth the Lord God of hosts, from al those that be about the: so that ye shall be scattered euery man from an other, and no man shall gather them together agayne that be fled. But after that, I wyl byng the Ammonites also oute of captiuitie agayne.

Vpon the Edomites hath the Lord of Hostes spoken on this maner: Is there no more wysedome in Edoman? Is there no more good counsell among hys people? Is theyr wysedome then turned cleane to nought? Gette you hence, tourne poure backs, creepe downe into the deepe, O ye crytzens of Dedan. For I wyl byng destruction vpon Elam yea and the bare of hys vyltacion. If the grape gatherers came vpon the, shoulde they not leaue some grapes? If the upghit robbers came vpon the, shoulde they not take so muche as they thought wyte ynough.

Damascus, Hama and Arpad shall come confusion, for they shall heare euery thing: they shall be tolled to and fro, lyke the sea theyr yong men that sal in the stretes, and al her men of trece shall be taken away in that tyme, saith the Lord of hostes. I will kindle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, whiche shall consume the palace of Benhadad.

As for Cedar, and the kingdome of Ba-

Babylon smote downe, the Lord hath spoken thus vpon them: Arise and get you vp vnto Cedar, and destroye people toward the East. Theyr tentes and theyr flockes shall they take awaye, yea theyr hangings and theyr vessel. Theyr Camels also shall they carie awaye with them. They shall come aboute them on euery syde with a fearefull crye.

Also, get you soone awaye crept into ca-ues, that ye maye dwell there, ye inhabitantes of Hazor: saith the Lord: for Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon hath holden a counsell concernynge you, and concluded bys deuysie agaynst you. Ar-

Moreover, these that be shaven wilt I scatter toward al the wyndes, and bringe them to destruction: yea and that thow theyr owne samiters, saith the Lord. Bazor also shall be a dwellinge for dragons, and an euerylastyng wilderness: so that no body shall dwell ther, and no man shall haue ther his habytacion.

These are the words, that the Lord spake to the prophet Jeremy concerning Elam, in the beginning of the raigne of Sedechi hostes: Behold, I will (b) breake the bowe of Elam, and take awaye theyr strenght, & vpon Elam, I will bringe the. iiii. wyndes from the four quarters of heauē, and will scatter them agaynst the same four wynd-des. And ther shall be no people, but some of Elam shall spe vnto them.

For I will cause Elam to be a frayd of theyr enemyes, and of the that seke their lyues: and will bringe vpon them the indignacion of my wrath, saith the Lord. And I will persecute them with the sword so longe tyl I haue broughte

The .I. Chapter.
The prophecy of the destruction of Babylon, and the deliverance of Israel, which was in captivite.

The words of the Lord spake unto the Prophet Jeremy, concerning Babylon, and land of the Caldees: preach among the Gentils, let your voice be heard: make a token, cry out, keep no silence, but say: Babylon shall be won, Bel shall be confounded, and Merodach shall be overcome. Yes their gods shall be brought to shame, and their images shall stand in feare. For out of the North they shall come a people against her, which shall make her land so waste that nobody shall dwell therein, neither man nor beast, for they shall flye and departe from thence.

(a) In those dayes and at that time saith the Lord, the children of Israel shall come, they & the children of Juda, weeping and making haile, and shall see the Lord their God. They shall aske the way to Sion, thither shall they turne their faces, and come and haue upon the, in a couenaunt that neuer shall be broken.

My people hath bene a loste flocke, my shepherdes haue deceyued them, & haue made them go astray upon the hylls. They haue gone from the mountaine to the hyll, and forgotten their fold. All they that came vnto the, haue deuoured them: & their enemies sayed: We haue made no faulte against them for they haue displeased the Lord, yea even the Lord whiche is the beuty of their cyghtuousnes, and that befedded their fathers. Yet shall ye fly from Babylon and departe out of the lande of the Caldees, and ye shall be as the cammes that goo before the flocke. For loo, I will make up an host of people from the Northland, and bring them vpon Babilon: these shall lay siege to it, and win it. Their arrows shall not misse, lyke as a cunning archer shooteth not wrong. And the Caldees shall be spoiled, and all they that spoile them, shall be satisfied sayeth the Lord. because ye were so cheafull and glad to tread downe myne heritage, and fulfilled your pleasures, as the calves in the graffe: and triumphed ouer them lyke the buls, when ye had gotten the victory. Your mothers shall be sore confounded, and they that bare you, shall come to shame. She shall be the least set by among the nations, void, wast and dried vp. No man shall be able to dwell ther, for the feare of the Lord, but he shall be whole desolate. All they that go by Babylon, shall stand still, and be abashed, and shall wonder at their plagues.

So forth in your aray against Babylon round about, al ye that can handle bowes and shot at her, spare no arrows, for she hath synned against the Lord. Crye out: vpon her, vpon her, against her rounde about: she shall yelde her selfe, her foundacions shall fall, and her walls shall come down for it shall be the vengeance of the Lord. Yes vengeance shall be taken of her, and as she hath done, so shall she be dealt with: they shall scoote out the sower from Babylon, and hym that handled the syckle in earnest. For feare of the sword of the enemy, euery man shall get hym to his owne people, and euery man shall sic to his owne land. Israel is a scattered flocke, the lions haue disperced them. Syria the kynge of the Assyrians deuoured them, Iasse of all the Babuchodonozor king of Babylon hath brused all their bones.

Therefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Behold I will visite the king of Babilon and his kingdom, as I haue visyted the king of the Assyrians, & will bring Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he may fede vpon Chammell and Basan, and be satisfied vpon the moose of Ephraim and Galaad. In those dayes and at the same tyme (sayeth the Lord) if the offence of Israel be sought for, there shall none be founde. If men enquire for the synne of Juda, it shall be none: for I will be mercifull vnto them, whom I suffer to remayne ouer.

Go downe (O thou auenger) into the enemies land, and vset the that dwell therein: downe with them, and smyte them vpon the backes saith the Lord: do according to all that I haue commaunded the. There is gone about the land a crye of slaughter and great murder, namely on this manner: Some happeneth it that the hammer of the whole world is thus broken & brused in sonder: how chaunceth it, that Babylon is become a wyldernes amonge the heathen on this manner? I myself haue layed wayte for the, and thou art take: vnwares art thou trapped and snared: for why, thou hast prouoked the Lord vnto anger. The Lord hath opened his house of ordynance, and brought forth the weapons of his wrath. For the thyng that is done in the lande of the Caldees, it is the Lord of hostes worke.

These thynges shall come vpon her at the laste, they shall breake into her pryue chambers, they shall leaue her as bare as stones, that be layed together vpon heapes. They shall so destoye her, that nothinge shall be left.

They shall slaye all their myghtye soules dyers, and put them to dearthe. Who be vnto them, for the day and tyme of their visitacion is at hand. Oe thyng I heare already a cry, of them that be fled and escaped out of the land of Babylon, whiche shewe in upon the vengeance of his temple: yea a voyce of them that cry agaynst Babylon: Cal upon al the archers against Babylon, pitey your tentes round about her, that none escape. Accompence her, as she hath defetued: and accordynge as she hath done, so deale wth her agayne: for she hath set up her scilic agaynst the Lord, agaynst the holpe one of Israel. Therefore shall her pong men fall downe in the streets, and al her men of war shall be rooted oute in that day saith the Lord. Behold I speake vnto the (O thou proude sayr the Lorde God of hosts: for thy day shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitacion. And the proude shall foble and fall, & no man shall help hym vp, I wyl burne up bys city wth fyre, and it shall consume al that is round about hym.

Thus saith the Lord of hosts: The children of Israel and Juda suffer violence together. All they that haue them in captiuitie, kepe them fast, and wyl not let the go: but they: aunger & redemer is myghty, whose name is the Lord of hostes. he shall maptrape they: cause, he shall make the land shake, and iudge them that dwel therein one with an other. The sword shall com vpon the Caldces, saith the Lord, vpon them that dwel in Babylon. vpon they: princes, and vpon they: wyse menne: the sword vpon they: Southsayers: as for those, they shall become fooles. The sword vpon they: worthies so that they shall fall stand in feare: The sword vpon they: horsemen and charrets and vpon al the chymen people that dwel vnder them: so that they shall al become like womē: the sword vpon they: treasure, for that it shall be stolen away. The sword vpon they: waters so that they shall be dryed vp: For the land worshippeth Images and belyleth in straunge wonderfull thynges. Therefore shall wyld beastes, Ayes, and Ectyres dwell therein: for they shall neuer man dwell there, neyther shall any man haue bys habitation there for euermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodom and Gomorre with the cypres that laye there aboute, saith the Lord: So shall no manne dwell there also: neyther shall any manne haue ther bys habitation. Beholde, there shall come a people from the Northe, wth a grete bond of mē, & many kynge shall stand vpon the endes of the earth: they bear bowes and bucklets, cruel are they and vnmerryful.

They: voyce toyleth lyke the raging sea, they: crye vpon hoyses, and come weapened to fyght agaynst thee, O Babylon. As soone as the kynge of Babylon heareth tel of them, bys handes shall waxe feble. Sorow, and heynes shall come vpon hym as a woman traualing wth chylde. Behold lyke as the Iren cometh vp from the pleasaunte medowes of Iordan vnto the greene pastures of Urban, so wyl I dryue them forth, and make them tunne agaynst her. But whome shall I abuse out and ordayne to such a thyng? For who is lyke me, or who wyl stryue wth me: or what they beate mape & agaynst me: Therefore beate the counsel that the Lorde hath geuen vpon Babylon, and the deuice that he hath taken vpon the lande of the Caldces. The least among the people shall teate them in pieces, and looke what please saunt thyng they haue: they shall laye it waste. The noyse at the wyning of Babylon shall moue the earth, and the cry shall be heard among the Gentyls.

How Babylon should be euertrowen. Jeremij geueth bys booke to Bariab.

Thus hath the Lord sayed: beholde I wyl raise up a perillous tynd agaynst Babylon and her citizens that beate euyl wyl agaynst me. I wyl send also into Babylon, famneto, to (a) famne her oute and to destroy her lande: for in the daye of her trouble they shall be about her on euery syde: Moreover the Lord hath sayd vnto the bowemen, and to them that clyme ouer the wals in dycast places: Ye shall not spare her younge men: kyll downe all her host. Thus the sayre shall fall downe in the lande of the Caldces, and the wounded in the streets. As for Israel and Juda, they shall not be forsaken of they: God, of the Lord of hostes, of the holy one of Israel: no though they haue spyled all they: lande ful of spynne. Flye away from Babylon, & uery man saue bys wyfe. Let no man holde bys tounge to her wickednes, for the tyme of the Lordes vengeance is come, yea he shall rewarde her agayne. Babylon hath bene in the Lordes hande a golden cuppe, that maketh all landes dronken: Other wyne haue all people dronken, therefore are they out of they: wytres. But sod: in lyte is Babylon fallen & destroyed. Mourn for her, drynge plasters for her woundes, if she may peraduenture be lealed again. We woulde haue made Babylon indole (say they) but she is not recouered. Therefore wyl we kette her alone, and go euery manne into bys owne countrey. For her iudgemente is come into beauch, and is gene vp to the clouds. And therefore come on, we wyl shewe syon the woork of the Lorde our God.

Make sharpe the arrowes, and fyl f quet: B uers: for the Lord shall raise up the spurre of the kynge of the Medes, wherby hath already a desyre to destroy Babylon. This shall be the vengeance of the Lord, and the vengeance of bys temple.

By the reason of wysdom al men are become fooles. Confounded be al the casters of ymages: For the chynge that they make, is but dyscrete, and hath no breathe: Wapne is it, and worthy to be laughed at: and in the tyme of vsytacion, it shall perishe.

Reuert belesse the porcyon of Jacob is none suche: but he that made all, whose name is the Lord of hostes, is the robbe of his inheritance. Thou wote the I haue scattered the shepherds, and his flocke, the husband man, and his cattell, the wyntes and the rulers. The Prophecy

Babylon so waste, that no man shall dwell any more therein. The worthies of Babil shall leaue the battayle, and keepe them selues in strong holds, their strength hath fayled them, they shall be like women. Their dwelling places shall be brynte vp, theyr bars shall be broken. One pursuauur shall mete an other, yea one post shall come by a nother to byng the kyng of Babylon tydings that his city is taken on euery side, the fordes occupied, the reues bryt vp, and the souldiers sore a fraied.

For thus sayth the Lord of Hostes the God of Israell: the daughter of Babylon hath bene in her tyme lyke as a chieshyng floore, but shortly shall her haruest come. Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessel, he hath walmed me wylke a draggon, and fylled his belly wyth my delicates: he hath cast me oute, he hath taken my substance awaye, and the thyng that was left me, hath he caried vnto Babylon sayeth the daughter that dwelleth in Syon: yea and my blonde also vnto the Caldees, sayth Jerusalem. Therefore thus sayth the Lord: Behold I will defend thy cause, & avenge the: I will drynke vp her sea, and dry vp her water sprynges.

Babil shall become an heape of stones, a dwelling place for dragons, a fearfulnes and wondryng, because no man dwelleth ther. They shall rose together lyke lions, and as the yong Lyons when they be angry, so shall they bondethem selues. In theyr beate I shall set drynke before them, and they shall be drunken for ioy: they shall they slepe an euerlastyng sleepe, and neuer wake, sayth the Lord. I shall carie them downe to be slayne lyke sheepe, lyke weathers and goates.

How was Sefach won? How was the glory of the whole land taken? How happeneth it that Babilon is so wondred at amonge the Heathen? The sea is ryfen ouer Babylon, and hath couered her with his greates waues. Her cytyes are layed waste, the land lyeth vnbuyded and void: it is a lande where no man dwelleth, and where no man traualyth thorow. More ouer I wyl vsyt Bel at Babilon: and the thyng that he hath swallowed vp, I shall pluck out of his mouth. The gents also shall run no more vnto Hym: yea and the wals of Babylon shall fall.

My people, come out of Babil, that euerye man maye saue his lyfe, from the feareful wyrd of the Lord. Be not faine berred, and fear not at euery rumour that shall be heard in the land: for euerye yere byngeth new tydings, yea a straunge wickednes and lordshyppe. And loo, the tyme cometh that I wyl vsyt the Images of Babylon, and the whole lande shall be confounded, yea and her dayne shall lye in the myddest of her. when the destruction shall come vpon her from the North, saith the Lord.

Jeremy. i. c. Like as Babylon hath beaten downe and slayne many of Israel, so shall they fall manye and be slayne in al her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the sword, haste you, stand not still, remember the Lord a farre off: and thynke vpon Jerusalem, for mee were ashamed to heare the blasphemers: out faces were couered with shame, because the strange alleaunters came in to the Sanctuary of the Lord. Wherefore beholde (saith the Lord) the tyme cometh that I will vpspyre the Images of Babylon, and thowme the whole lande they shall moue and fall. Though Babylon climed vp into heauen and kepte her power on hye, yet shall I send her destructions saith the Lord.

A piteous crye shall be heard from Babylon, and greate myserye from the lande of the Caldees: when the Lord destructione shall come vpon her, and when he shall drye out the hye flowes, and make and proude boastynge, wherewith they haue bene as furpous as the waues of greate water floudes, and made greate crakes with theyr wordes. For the destructions shall come vpon her, (even vpon Babylon) wherewith shall take her wordes, and breake theyr covenants: for God is dysposed to avenge hym selfe vpon them, and sufficiently to recompence them. Yea (saith the Lord) I will make theyr princes, their wise men, theyr chiefe rulers, and al their wordes, drunken: so that they shall sleepe an euerslapyng sleepe, and neuer wake: Thus saith the kyng whose name is the Lord of hostes.

B Moreover, thus saith the Lord of hostes: The thycke wall of Babylon shall be broken, and her proude gates shall be brente vp. And the thing that the Gentyles and the people haue wrought with great trauaile and labour, shall come to nought, and be consumed in the fyre.

Thys is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiab the sonne of Ieriah, the son of Maasab, when he went toward Babylon with Sedechias the kyng of Iuda, in the fourth yere of his reigne. Now this Saraiab was a peaceable prince. Jeremy wrote in a booke al the myserye that should come vpon Babylon, yea and al these sermons that he wryten agaynst Babylon, and gaue Saraiab thys charge: When thou comest vnto Babylon, se that thou rede al these wordes and say: O Lord thou art determined to roote out this place, so that neyther people nor cattel shall dwel there any more, but to lie waste for ever: and when thou hast red out the booke, hynde a stone to it, & cast it in the myddell of Euphrates, and say: Even thus shall Babylon synke, & be thurst downe with the burthen of trouble that I will bring vpon her: so that she shall neuer come vp agayne. Thus are the preachynge of Jeremy.

he had deuised long ago: he hath destroyed and not spared. He hath caused thyne aduersarye to triumphe ouer the, and set vp the hoine of thyne enemye.

zade.

Let thyne herte cry vnto the Lorde, O thou ctye of the daughter of Syon, let thy teares run downe lyke a riuier, day and nyght: rest not, & let not the apple of thyne eye leaue of.

Uoph.

Stand vp and make thy prayer in the first watche of the nyght, poure out thyne herte lyke water before the Lorde, lift vp thyne handes for the spues of thy pynge chylde that dye of hangre in the stretes.

Res.

Beholde, O Lorde, & conspyde, whyr hast thou gathered me vp so cleue? Shall the women then eate theyr owne frute, euen chylde of a span longe? Shal the prynces and prophetes be gaue thus in the San-ctuarye of the Lorde?

Am.

Yonge and olde lye behynde the stretes vpon the grounde, my maydens & yonge men are slayne with the swerde, whome thou in the daye of thy wrathful indignacion hast put to deathe: yea, euen thou hast put to deathe, and not spared them.

Uau.

Myne neighbours that are round about me, hast thou called, as it were a feast day, so that in the daye of the Lordes wrath none escaped neyther was any lette behynde.
Those that I had brought vp and nourished, hath myne enemy destroyed.

The Notes of the.ii. Chapter.

(a) As carpenters spyed out their lines to build walles, houses and other thynges: so had God spredde oute hye lyne to destroye Ierusalem and Iewrye: and to bringe them to perfect subiec-tion. For that signifieth the spyedynge oute of the lyne as it is sayd. ii. Reg. viii. 8. It is a dissimilitude borrowed of carpenters.

(b) Wher the iudges of Ierusalem were wont to sit honorablye and gorgeously vpon goodly seates, and geue sentence in the gates, now lye they vpon the grounde slayne and in the gates is nothyng but silence, and bylmes.

The.iii. Chapter.

Aleph.

I Am the man, that (thorow the rod of hye wrath) haue experience of misery.
He dyed me forth, and led me: yea into

into darcknesse, but not into syghte.

Agaynst the only be turner bys hand, and layeth it eue vpon me.

Verb.

My fleshe and my skyn hath he made olde, and my bones hath he broked.

Sal for sor- rowfulnes He hath buylded rounde about me, and closed me in wyth * gal and trauaile.

He hath set me in darcknesse, as they that be dead for euer.

Simel.

He hath so bedged me in, & I canot get out, and hath laied heavy lynches vpon me.

Though I cry & cal piteously, yet hear-eth he not my prayer.

He hath stopped by my wayes w foursquared stones, & made my pathes croked.

Dalet.

He layeth wayt for me lyke a Beare, & as a Lyon in a hole.

He hath marred my wayes, and broke me in pieces, he hath layed me waste alto-gyther.

He hath bent bys bowe, and made me as it were a marcke to shoute at.

He.

The arrowes of bys quiter hath he shot euen vnto my repues.

I am laughed to scorne of all my people, they make songes byd me, all the daye longe.

He hath filled me wyth bytternes and gyuen me wormwood to drynke.

Can.

He hath smitten my teth in pieces, and rolled me in the daffe.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget al good thynges,

I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, ther is no hope for me in the Lorde.

Gain.

O remembre yet my mysery & my trouble, the wormwood and the gall.

Yea thou shalt remembre the, for my soule melteth awaye in me.

Whyle I confide these thynges in my herte I get a hope agayne.

Verb.

Remember, that the mercyes of the Lorde are not cleane gone, and that bys lounge kyndnes ceaseth not.

Bys faythfulnes is greute, and renueth it selfe as the morninge.

The Lorde is my port, saith my soule, therfore wyl I hope in hym.

Eeth.

O howe good is the Lorde vnto them & put theyr trust in hym, & to the soule that seeketh after hym?

O howe good is it w splanesse to wayt, and ray for the belch of the Lorde?

O howe good is it for man, to take the yocke vpon hym from his yowth by.

Job.

He sitteth alone, he holdeth hym still, & dwelleth quietly by hym selfe.

He layeth bys face vpon the earth, if percase ther happen to be any hope.

He offereth bys cheke to & smyter, he wyl

Laph.

For the Lorde wyl not forsake for euer.

But though he do cast of, yet accordyng to the multytude of bys mercies, he receyueth to grace agayne.

For he doeth not plage, and cast out the thyldren of men from bys herte.

Lamed.

To tread all the pypsoners of the earth
vnder bys fete.

To moue the iudgemente of man before the moste hyghesse.

To condemne a man in bys cause: The Lorde hath no pleasure in suche thynges.

Aln.

Al our enemyes gape vpon vs.

Fear and snare is come vpon vs, yea despyte and destruction.

Hole riuers of water gush out of myne eyes, for the greute hurte of my people.

She.

Myne eyes runne, and cannot cease, for ther is no resse.

O Lorde when wylt thou loke downe from heauen, and consyder?

Myne eye breaketh my herte, because of al the daughters of my crye.

Zade.

Myne enemyes hunted me out sharply, lyke a byrd, yea and that wythout a cause.

They haue put downe my lyte into a pyt, and layed a stone vpon me.

They poured water vpon my heade, then thought I: now am I vndon.

G Thou (O Lorde) haste mainteyned the cause of my soule & hast redeemed my lyfe.

O Lorde, thou haste sene my blasphemies, take thou my cause vpon the.

Thou hast well considered howe they go about to do me harme, & that all theyr counsels are agaynst me.

Stu.

Thou haste hearde theyr dyspytefull wordes (O Lorde) yea and all theyr inuynations agaynst me.

The lppes of myne enemies, & their deuices that they take agaynst me, all the daye longe.

Thou seest also theyre siterunge down & theyr clynging by, they make theyr songes of norbyng but of me.

Thau.

Rebward them (O Lorde) accordyng to the workes of theyr handes.

Spue them the thing that theyr owne herte is astraped of: euen thy curse.

Persecute them (O Lorde) wth thine indignation, and rote them out from vnder the heauen.

The Notes of the.iii. Chapter.

(a) By this it is manifest that all aduersitye (which is cal. evil) is sente of God: althoughe he suffer no such euil as we cal it but by which he knoweth to be necessarye and needfull, and wherout he sucketh some good thinge. That can be only so, which onely is thowowly wple & perfect good. As the saying is therein. Amos. iii. b. Cometh ther any plage in cyte. &c.

amonge the beastes: and the fire gaue a glosse, and oute of the fyre there wente lyghtenynge. When the beastes wente forwarde and backward, one wold haue thoughte it hadde lyghtened. I sawe whē I hadde well considered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth, wylthoute faces also lyke the beastes.

The fashyon and worke of the wheles was lyke the sea. The foure wheles wer topned and made (to lōke vpon) as it had bene one whele in an other. When one wente forwarde, they wente all fourē, and turned them not aboute in theyr goynge.
They were large, greete and horrible to loke vpon. Theyr bodys were ful of eyes tōwnde aboute them all fourē. When the beastes wente, the wheles wōte also wylth them: And when the beastes lyst them sel-ues vp from the earth, the wheles wer līft vp also. Wherther soeuer (b) spryde wōt, thither wente they also, & the wheles were lyfte vp, and folowed the: for the spryde of lyfe was in the wheles.

When the beastes wente forth, stode styll, or lyfte them selues vp fro the earth, then the wheles also wente, stode styll, and were lyfte vp, for the brette of lyfe was in the wheles.

Above ouer þe heades of the beastes ther was a spymament, wherby was fashyoned as it had ben of the most pure Chrystal & þe was spred oute aboute vnder the heades:
vnder the same spymament were theyr win-ges laped abrode, one towarde an other, and two wynges couered the body of euery type beaste. And when they wente forth, I hearde the noyse of theyre wynges, lyke the noyse of greete waters, as it had ben the voyce of the great God, & a rushynge together as it were of an host of men.
And when they stode styll, they let down theyre wynges.

Nowe when they stode styll, and had letten downe theyre wynges, it thounded in the spymamente that was aboute theyr heades. Above the spymament that was ouer theyre heades, there was the fashyon of a seate, as it hadde bene made of Saphyr. Vpon the seate ther sat one lyke a mā.
I behelde hym, and he was lyke a cleare lyghte, as it had ben all of fyre wylthyn fro hys loynes vpwarde.

And beneeth when I loked vpon hym vnder the loynes, me thoughte he was lyke a shynynge fyre, that gredely syghre on euery syde. Yea the hye and glossere that lyghtened rounde aboute, was lyke a capnebowe, wherby in a rapyne dawe appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherin the glorie of the Lord appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vnder my face, and harkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

 bress and .xc. dayes must thou beate the wyckednes of the house of Israel. When thou hast fulfilled these dayes, lye down a gaine, & lye vpon thy right side .xl. dayes, and beate the synnes of the house of Juda.

An. xlii. e A day for a yere, a day (I say) for a yere, I will I euer lye upon the. Therefore set thou thy face agaynst that besieged Jerusalem, and discover thyne arme, that thou mayest prophesye agaynst it.

Beholde, I will lye charynes vpon the, that thou shalt not turne the from one side to another, till thou hast ended the dayes of thy siege.

Wherefore take vnto the wheate, barley, beanes, growell seede, Milium & fitches:
 and put these together in a vessel, & make the loaves of bread thereof accordynge to the nūbre of the dayes that thou must lye vpon thy side: that thou mayest haue bread to eat, for thre hundred, and .xc. dayes.
 And the meate that thou eatest, shall haue a certayne wayght apoynted: namelpe twenty sicles euery daye. This apoynted meate shalt thou eate dayly from the begynnynge to the ende.

Thou shalt drinke also a certayne measure of water, namelpe, the fyrte parte of an Hin shalt thou drinke daylye from the begynnynge vnto the ende. Wch eates shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou syt steeke them ouer with mans donge, that they maye se it. And word that sayed the Lorde: Euen thus shall the chyldren of Israel eate thre despyled breade in the capde of the Gentyles, among whome
 I will scatter them.

Then sayd I: O Lord God, Beholde, my soule was per neuer flapped: for fro my yowthe vnto this houre, I dyd never eate of a dead cathe, or of that whiche was layne of wyld beasts, neyther came there euer any vnclensse in my mouth. Wherunto he answered me, & said Wel then, I wil graunte the to take cowes dong, for the dong of mā, and to steeke the bread ouer withal before them.

And he sayed vnto me: Beholde thou sonne of man, I will mynthe al the portion of bread in Jerusalem, so þ they shall kepe their breade, and eate it with scarce-nesse. But as for water, they shall haue a better litle measure thereof to drinke.
 And whē they haue no more bread ne water, one shall be destroyed wth another, & sampe a waye for their wyckednesse.

The Notes of the. iiii. Chapter.

(a) This is a prophesye done by an outwarde signe, as in Jeremy. iiii. a. Whē the people are unworthy of the word of God, then are the prophetes commaunded to do such visible signes, as here to paynte out Jerusalem and the besieging thereof in a tyle stone.

The yddole of the herres, by which is signified the destruction of the people. The cause of the anger of God toward the people. The Lorde discovereth the yddole of the herres.

Thou sonne of man, take the then a sharp kisse, namelpe a rasour. Take that and shawe the herre of thy head and berd: Then take the scales and mathe, & deuyde the herre a sūder. And burne the thirde part thereof in the fyre in þ myddest of the cytie, & cut the other thirde parte in peces wth a knyfe. As for the thirde parte that remaineth, cast it in the wynde, and then shewe the bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a litle of the same and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curres of it, and cast it in the myddeste of the fyre, and burne it in the fyre. Dure of the same fyre shall there go a flame vpon the hole house of Israel.

Moreover, thus sayed the Lorde God: Thus same is Jerusalem, I set her in the myddest of the Heathen and nations that are rounde about her: but she hath despyled my iudgements more then the Gentyles themselves, and broken my commaundements more then the nations that I tolde about her: For they haue cast out my ordinaunces, & not walked in my lawes.
 Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so muche as ye wth your wyckednesse have exceded the Heathen that dwel round aboute you: (For ye haue not walked in my lawes, neyther haue ye kept myne ordinances.) Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God.

I will also come vpon the, for in the myddest of the, will I syt in iudgemente, in the sight of the Heathen, and will handle the of suche a faction as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer will doo from that tyme forth, and that because of all thyne abhominacions. For in the, fathers shall be sayne to eate theyr owne sonnes, and the sonnes theyr owne fathers. Such a courtte will I kepe in the, & all the whole remnant wil I scatter into all the wynds.

Wherefore as trulpe as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) seyng thou hast despyled my Sanctuarpe wth al maner abhomi-nations, and wth all thy shamefull offences, for thys cause will I also destroy the. Myne eye shall not ouersee the, neyther will I spare the.

One thirde parte wthin the, shall dye of the pestilence and of hunger: Another thirde parte shall be slayne downe round about the, wth the sword: The other thirde parte that remaineth wil I scatter abrode toward the al the wynds, and drawe out the sword after them. Thus I will performe my indignacy, and set my wrath agaynst them, & ease my self. So that when I haue fulfilled myne anger agaynst them, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche wth a seruente gelousye haue spoken it.

Then I the Lord have spoken it, and it shall come to pass, when I shall smite among them the pernicious parties of hunger, which shall be but death: Yea, therefore shall I smite them because I will destroy you, I will increase hunger, and multiply all the provision of bread among you.

Plagues and miserie will I send you, yea and will be beasts also to destroy you. Pestilence and bloody plague shall come upon you, and the sword will I bring over you. Then I the Lord have said it.

The. vi. Chapter.

He sheweth that the people shall be plagued for the synne of Idolatry. He prophesieth the repentance of the remnant of the people, and their deliverance. The destruction of the forwarde is prophesied.

Eze. xxi. e

And the worde of the Lord came unto me, saying: Thou sonne of man turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayest prophesy unto them, and say: Heare the worde of the Lord God, o ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lord God spoken to the mountaynes, hilles, valleys and dales.

Beholde, I will bring a sword over you, and destroy your high places: I will cast downe your altars, & brake downe your temples. Your high men will I lay before your gods, and the dead car-kasses of the children of Israel will I cast before their images: your bones will I destroy rounde about your altars, and dwelling places.

B The cytys shall be desolate, the hill chapels layed waste: your altars destroyed, and broken: your goddes cast downe and taken away, your temples layed euen with the ground, your workes clene rooted out.

Baruc. iii. e

Your high men shall lie among you, that ye may learne to knowe howe that I am the Lord. Those that amonges you have escaped the sword, will I leave amonge the Gentyles: for I will scatter you among the nations. And they that escape I will send you that they may knowe me among the Heathen, where they shall be in captivity.

As for that booyse and unfaithfull heart of theirs, wherewith they run away from me, I will break it: yea, and put out those eyes of theirs, that commit fornication with their idols.

Then shall they be ashamed, and displeased with their selues. for the wickednes and abominations which they have done, and shall learne to knowe howe that it is not in hayne that I the Lord spake to bring such misery upon them.

The Lord sayed moreover unto me:
Gather thyne handes together, & stamp with thy feet, and say: Wo worth all the abominations and wickednesses of the house of Israel, for because of them they shall perishe with the sword, with hunger, and with pestilence. Whoso is farre of, shall dye of the pestilence: he that is neere at hand, shall perishe with the sword, & the other that be besieged, shall dye of hunger.

Thus will I satisfy my wrathfull displeasure upon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe that I am the Lord, when your high men lie among your gods, and about your altars upon all your hilles, and toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge all thycke oaks: even in the places where they dyd sacrifice to all their idols. I will stretch my hande out upon them, and will make the lande waste: so that it shall lie desolate and voyde, from the wilderness of Beblathard forth, thor-owhe all their habitacions, to learne them for to knowe that I am the Lord.

The. vii. Chapter.

The ende of all the lande of Israel shall be as a desolate. The cause of the destruction thereof.
The prophete is commaunded to shew the summe of the synnes that are at hande.

The worde of the Lord came unto me in this maner: Thus I call a thousonne of man. Thus sayeth the Lord God unto the lande of Israel: The end commeth, yea verily the end cometh upon all the four corners of the earth. But now shall the end come upon thee: for I will send my wrath upon thee, & will punish thee according to thy wayes, and reward thee according to thy abominations. Myne eye shall not overse thee, neyther will I spare thee, but reward thee according to thy wayes, & declare thy abominations. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, I one miserie and plague shall come after an other: the ende is here. The ende (I saye) that waiteth for thee, is come already, the houre is come agaynst thee, that dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedition is hard by, and no glad tidings be on the mountains. Therefore will I shortly pouze out my sore displeasure upon thee, and fulfill my wrath upon thee. I will judge thee after thy wayes, and recompence thee after thy abominations.

Myne eye shall not overse thee, neyther will I spare thee: but reward thee after thy wayes, and shew thy abominations to learne you for to knowe howe that I am the Lord that smyeth. Behold, the daye is here, the daye is come, the houre is run oute, the * robbe dooeth, wilfulnesse waiteth grene, malicious violence is grow-en up, & the vngodly waxen to a floure.

The. viii. Chapter.

An appareance of the sun litude of Ezechiel is brought vnto Iherusalem in the spere. The Lord sheweth the Prophecie the Idolatries of the house of Israel, and chesely of the pyetes.

It happened that in the sixt yere, the first day of þe first moneth, I sate in my house and the Lordes of the counsell of Iuda were with me, and the hand of the Lord God fel euen there vpon me. And as I looked vp, I sawe as it were a lykenes of spere from his lopnes downwarde, & fro his lopnes upward it shyned maruelous clere. This similitude stretched out an hand, toke me by the herry lockes of my head, & the spirit lyfte me vp betwixt heauen and earth: and God brought me in a vision to Iherusalem, into the cite of the (a) inner port that lyeth toward þe north: there stode an image, with which he that hath all thynges in his power, was very wythe. And behold, the gloire of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen as I had sene it afore in the fylde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, lyft vp thyne eyes, & loke toward the north. Then lyft I vp myne eyes toward the north, & beholde beynde the port northwarde, ther was an altare made vnto the image of prouocation in þe very entreng in. And he sayd further: more vnto me: Thou sonne of man, see thou what these do?

Seest thou the great abhominacions þe house of Israel comyt in this place, whiche ought not to be done in my Sanctuaries? But turne the aboute, and thou shalt see yet greater abhominacions. And with þe brought he me to the courte gates and when I looked, beholde, there was an hole in the wal. The said he vnto me: thou sonne of man, byg thowme the wall: And when I had bygged thowme the wall, beholde there was a doore. And he sayd vnto me: Go thy way in, and looke what wycked abhominacions they do there. So I went in and sawe, and beholde, ther wet all maner Images of wyrmes & beastes, all Idoles and abhominacions of the house of Israel painted euery one round aboute the wall. There stode also before the Images the score & ten Lordes of the counsel of the house of Israel: and in the myddes of the stode Jaazanyah þe sonne of Sapha: And euery one of the had a censoure in his hand, & out of the incense ther wet a smoke, as it had ben a cloud. The sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, hast thou sene what þe senators of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chabre? For they say, cuse þe Lord seeth vs not, þe Lord regat-

hath not the word. And he said unto me, Turne the yet againe, and thou shalt see great abominations that they do. And tophedat he brought me to the dore of the porte of the Lordes house towards the North. And behold they saw women mounting for (a) Shamus. Then sayd he unto me: hast thou sene this thou son of man? Turne the aboute, & thou shalt see yet greater abominations.

And so he brought me into the inward courte of the Lordes house: and beholde at the porte of the Lordes house, betwixt the fortytye and the aulter, there were frue, & twenty men that tourned therr backs upon the temple of the Lord, and they faced toward the East, & they worshipped the sunne.

And he sayd unto me: hast thou sene this thou sonne of man? & I answered the house of Israel that it is but a temple, to do these abominations here? & should they fill the land full of wickednesse, and undertake to prouoke me unto anger? Yea, and purpose to set up therr noses against me? Therefore wyl I also do some thinge in my wrathful displeasure, so that mine eye shall not see them, neither wyl I spare them. Yea, and though they cry in mine eares with loud voyce, yet wyl I not heare them.

The Notes of the viii. Chapter.

(a) The hyt Hion was walled round aboute, & that wall wherthe compassed it was called the outwarde wall: About the temple was there another wall, that was called the inward wall, whiche although it were outward from the temple, yet was it inward from the wall wherthe compassed it. The space betwene the inward wall & the temple, was called the inner court. Therein were many portes, and in the north porte therof was a cherubim set, for that place was holy, and therein dyd they use to worship God: but in the fithynes of his hateful ymage of Baal whych the Prophet here calleth a ymage of prouocation, because it prouoked the Lord to vengeance, had they despyled it, as superstitious doerh commonly despyle euen the most holiest thinges, and such as appeare in most holy st. (b) That is, after Horner byerome, Idonides Amalrus, whych was a man of great loner, and whych is faied to haue risen from death to lyfe, whiche talle the women of Jewry dyd celebrate and holde solempne both with mythe and carres. Some saye that it was an ymage, whych was made to wepe by craft. Before this ymage dyd women also bewep the therr separation from therr louers, and reioyced when they obtained them againe.

The ix. Chapter.

The destruction of Idolaters, and the destruction of the eyghteous. They that shall be saved are marked. They that are vnmarched, are damned. A complaint of the Prophet for the destruction of the people.

He cryed also with a loud voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come here ye rulers of the city, euerie man with his weaponed hand to the slaughter. And came ther six men out of the flete of the upper: one toward the North, and euerie man a weapon in his hand to the slaughter. Ther was one amongest the that had on hym a lynnen tarmen, and a byrters pynckorne by his syde.

These went in and stode beside the byrters aulter, for the glory of the Lord was gone awaye from the cherub, and was come downe to the cheyng of the house, and he called the man that had the lynnen tarmen upon hym, and the byrters pynckorne by his syde, and the Lord sayd vnto him: So thy way thou shalt the ctye of Jerusalem, and set his marke, I haue, upon the foreheades of them that mouene and are some for all the abominacions that be done therein. And to the other he sayd that I might heare: So ye after therr thowghthe ctye, save ouerle none, spare none, hyll and dill, nor borne olde men and yonge maydens, children and wyues.

But as for those that haue this marke, I haue, upon them, so that ye touche them not, and begeth at my Sanctuare. Then they began at the elders whiche were in the temple, for ye had sayd vnto them when I came downe, the temple and fel led the court with the fire, then go youre waye furthe. So they wente out, and I wente downe thowgh the ctye. Somewhaten they had done the slaughter, and I yet escaped, I fel downe upon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Lord wyte thou, then destroye all the residue of Israel in thy fure displeasure, that thou haste poured upon Jerusalem? Then sayd he vnto me: the wickednes of the house of Israel and Juda is verie greete, so that the land is full of bloude, and the ctye full of vnfaithfulness. For they saye: Euen the Lord regardeth not the cacthy, he seeth he not.

Therefore wyl I upon them, myne eye shall not see them, neither wyl I spare them, but wyl recompence their wickednesse upon therr heades. And beholde, the man that had the lynnen tarmen upon hym, and the byrters pynckorne by his syde, tolde all the matier howe it happened, and sayd: Lord, as thou haste commaunded me, so haue I done.

The x. Chapter.

Of the man that toke hore burninge coles out of the mydle of the wheles and of the Cherubyn, in token of the burning of Jerusalem. A cherubim of the vision of the wheles, or the beades, and of the Cherubyns.

And as I looked, beholde in the firmament that was above the Cherubyns ther appered the spynnyng of a hole of Saphire upon them. Then sayd he that sat therein to hym that had the lynnen tarmen upon hym: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubyns, and take thynne haude full of hore coles oute frome betwene the wheles, and cast them toward the city.

wente in, and the cloude spyled the inner:

remoued from the Cherubyns, & came vpon the threshold of the house, so that the temple was full of cloude, and the court was full of the shyne of the Lordes gloire.
Yea and the sound of the Cherubins win-ges was herde into the loie court, like as it had ben the voyce of the almyghty God when he speaketh.

Now when he had byddē the man that was clothed in linen, to go and take the hot coles from the myddell of the wheles whiche were vnder the Cherubyns, he went and stode besyde the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached for the hys hande from vnder the Cherubins, vnto the spere he was bidden & Cherubins, & toke thereof, and gaue it vnto hym that had on the lynnen cayment, in his hand: whych toke it, & went ouer.

And vnder the wynges of the Cheru-bynys ther appered the likenesse of a mans hande: I sawe also foure wheles besyde the cherubyns, so that by euery Cherub ther stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the facis of the precious stone of Iherusalem: vnto the syght they were facioned & lyke as if one whele had ben

C

When they wente forth, they went all foure together, not tournynge aboute in theyr goynge: But wher the first wente thither went they after also, so that they toured not about in theyr goynge. Theyr hole bodies, theyr backes, theyr handes

all ful of eyes round about them all foure.
And I herde him call the wheles Galgal (he

of a Cherub, the second of a man, the thyrde of a lion, the fourth of an Eagle, and they

when the Cherubyns wente, the wheles wente with them, and when the Cheru-bynys shoke theyr wynges to lyfte the felues vp wache, the wheles remayned not behind, but were with them also. Shortly whē they stode, these stode also: And when they were lyfted vp, the wheles were lyft vp also with them, for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

D

Then the gloire of the Lorde was lyft up from the thre hold of the temple, & remayned vpon the Cherubyns: And the Cherubyns lacked with theyr wynges, and lyfte the felues vp from the earth: so that I saw when they wente, and the wheles went with them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde.
So the gloire of the Lorde was vpon the.

thien, thy kynsfolke, and the whole house of Juda, which dwell at Jerusalem save: they be gone far from the lord, but, the land is given us in possession. Therefore tel them, thus sayeth the lord God: I will send you far of among the Gentyles, and scatter you among the nations, and I will bring you but a little in places where ye shall come.

Tel them also, thus saith the lord God: I will gather you againe out of the nations, and bringe you from the countreys where ye be scattered, and will give you the land of Israel againe: and whether shall ye come. And as for all impediments, and all your abominations, I will take the away.

D And I will give you one hearte, and I will plant a new spirit within your bowels. That your heart will I take out of your body, and give you a new heart: that ye may walke in my commandments, and kepe myne ordynances and doo them, that ye may be my people, & I your God. But looke whose hearts are disposed to follow their abomination, and wicked things, those mens bodies will I bringe upon their own heads saith the lord God.

After this by the Cherubims lyke up theyr wynges, and the wheles went with them, and the glory of the lord was upon them. So the glory of the lord wente up from the myddell of the cytpe, and roode upon the mount of the cytpe, toward the east. But the wynde took me up, and in a vision (which came by the spirit of God) it brought me againe into Caldea among the prisoners. Then the vision that I had seen, vanished away from me. So I spake unto the prisoners all the wordes of the lord which he had shewed me.

The xii. Chapter.

The parable of the vessels of the captivity. The expolition of the parable, by which is signified of hunger Gedechias is signified. In other parable whereby the distress of hunger and thirst is signified.

In the wordes of the lord came unto me saying: Thou sonne of man, thou dwellest in the myddell of a scoward household which haue eyes to see, and yet see not: eares haue they to heare, and yet heare they not: for they are a stubborne household. Therefore (O thou sonne of man) make thy gers ready to flye, and go forth by saye day lyght that they maye see: Yea, even in theyr sight shalt thou go from thy place to another place: if peradventure they will consider that they be an vnable dyent household.

Thy gear that thou hast made ready to flye withal, shalt thou beate out by saye day light, that they see: & thou thy self shalt go forth also at even in theyr sight, as a man doth when he flyeth. Dye thou the wal, that they maye see, and beate thou it the same thing that thou tokest up in theyr sight. As for thy selfe, thou shalt go forth in the darcke. Dye thy face that thou see not the earth, for I have made the a shewe token unto the house of Israel. Now as the lord commaunded me, so I dyd: the gear that I had made ready, brought I out by daye. At even I brake downe an hole thorow the wal with my hand: and when it was darcke I tooke the gear upon my shoulders and bare the out in theyr sight.

And in the morning came the worde of the lord unto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, I have said that scoward household shal be and say: what dost thou ther? The tel them, thus sayth the lord God: This punishment toucheth the chiefe rulers at Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel that dwell among them. Tel them I am your shewe token: lyke as I have done, so shal it happen unto you. Flytte shall ye also, and go into captivity. The chiefe that is amonge you, shal load vpon shoulders in the darcke, and get hym away. He shal breake downe the wal to eate stuffe ther thorow. He shal couer vpon face that he see not the ground with vpon eyes.

Applyne will I spreade out vpon hym, and catch hym in my net and carry hym to Babilon, in the land of the Caldees, whither he shal not see, and yet shal he dye there: as for all his helpers, and all vpon vpon that be about hym. I will scatter them toward all the wyndes, and bringe out a sword after them. So when I have scattered them among the heathen, & strowed them in the lands, they shal know that I am the lord.

But I will leaue a lytle number of them from the sword, hunger, and pestilence, to tel al theyr abominations among the heathen, wher they come, that they maye know how that I am the lord.

Moreover the word of the lord came unto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, with a scardal remembrance shalt thou eate thy bread, with carefulnes and sorow shalt thou drynke thy water. And unto the people of the land, speake thou on this maner. Thus sayth the lord God to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to the lande of Israel. Ye shal eat your bread with sorow, & drynke your water with heupnes: Yea, the lande with the fulnes therof shal be laid waste, for the wyckednes of them that dwell ther in. And the cities that now be wel occupied, shal be voide, and the land desolate, that ye may know how that I am the lord.

Yet came the word of the lord unto me againe, saying: Thou sonne of man, what maner of bemoord is that wherby ye vse in the land of Israel, saying: We, sernge that the dates are so lacke in coming, al the visions are of none effect. Tel the therfore thus sayth the lord God: I will make that by worde to cease, so that it shal no more be commonly used in Israel.

But say this vnto them: The dates are at hand, that euery thing which hath ben prophesied, shal be fulfilled. Ther shal no byson be in vayne, neither any prophete sayle among the chyldren of Israel: for it is I the Lord that speake it, and what soeuer I the Lord speake, shalbe performed and not be slacke in commyng.

Yea euen in your dayes (O ye from ward of household) wil I deuise something, & bring it to passe sayeth the Lord God. And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Behold thou sonne of mā, the house of Israel sayth in this maner. Thus as for þe byson that he hath sene, it wyl be manys a day or it come to passe: It is far of yet, the thyng that he prophetieth. Therefore saye vnto them: Thus sayth the Lord God. All my wordes shal no more be slacke: looke what I speake, that same shal come to passe, sayth the Lord.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lord agaynst false Prophetes, which teache the people counsels of theyr owne hertes.

The word of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Speake, Prophecy agaynst those Prophetes that preach in Israel: and saye thou vnto them that prophete out of theyr owne hertes: Heare the word of the Lord: Thus sayth the Lord god: Wo be vnto those falsch Prophets that solow theyr own spirit, and speake where they se nothyng, O Israel, (a) thep prophets are like the foxes vpon the drye field: For they stande not in the gappes, neyther make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men myghte shpde the peryll in the daye of the Lord. Vayne thynges they see: and tell lyes to mayntayne theyr preachynges wrythall. The Lord (say they) hath spoken it, when in very dede the Lord hath not sent them. Vayne byspons haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecies, when ye saye: the Lord hath spoken it, wher as I neuer sayd it.

Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: Wylt cause your wordes be vayne, and ye seeke out lyes: Behold, I wyl vpon you, sayeth the Lord. Agayne vnto you the Prophets that looke out vayne thynges, and preach lyes: they shal not be in þe counsel of my people, nor wrytten in the booke of the house of Israel, neither shal they come in the lande of Israel: that ye maye know how that I am the Lord God. And that for this cause, they haue dysceyued my people, and told them of peace, wher no peace was. One setteth vp a wall, and theyr hande it wryth loose clay. Therefore tel the which hande it wryth vntempered mortar, that it shal fall. For ther shal come a great howre of rayne, great stones shal fall vpon it, and a sore storme of winde shal breake it, so that the wall come downe.

Shal it not then be said vnto you: wher is now the mortar, that ye dawbed it wrythall? Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: I wyl breake oute my wrathful dyspleasure wryth a stormy wynde, so that in my anger, ther shal come a myghtye howre of rayne, and hapstones in my wrath to destore wrythall.

As for þe wall that ye haue dawbed wryth vntempered mortar, I wyl breake it downe, make it euen wryth the ground, so that the foundation therof shal remoue, and it shal fall, yea and ye your selues shal perishe in the myddest thereof, to learne you for to know that I am the Lord.

Thus wyl I performe my wrath vpon this wall, and vpon the that haue dawbed it wryth vntempered mortar, and then I say vnto you: The wall is gone, and thep dawbers are away. These are þe Prophetes of Israel, wryth the prophecye vnto the city of Ierusalem, and looke out visyons of peace for them, wher as no peace is, sayth the Lord God.

Wherefore (O thou sonne of mā) set thy face agaynst the boughtens of thy people, wryth prophecy out of theyr own hertes, and speake thou, prophecy agaynst them, and say: Thus sayeth the Lord God. Wo be vnto you that some pyllowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the heades, both of yong and old, to catch soules wrythall. For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in your captiuitie, ye promysed them lye, and dyshonoure me to my people, for an hand ful of barley, and for a pice of bread, when ye kil the soules of the that dye not, and promysed lye to them that lyue not: thus ye dyssemble wryth my people that beleuech your lyes.

Wherefore thus sayth the Lord god: Behold, I wyl also vpon the pyllowes wher wryth ye catch the soules in stringe, them wyl I take from your armes, and let the soules go, that ye catch in stringe.

Your bolsters also wyl I teare in pteces, and helpe out my people oute of your hande, so that they shal come no more in your bands, to be spoiled, and ye shal know that I am the Lord.

Seyng that wryth your lyes ye dyscomfort the hearte of the ryghteous whom I haue not dyscomforted. Agayne, for so much as ye contrage the hande of the wrythted, so that he maye not turne from his wrythted way, and lye. Therefore shal ye lye oute no more vayne, nor prophete your owne gessynges, for I wyl helpe out my people out of your hand, that ye maye know how that I am the Lord.

Prophecie. A comfort of them that fled into Babylon.

Ezech. xii. a. Then resorted vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, and sat down by me: Then came the word of the Lord vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, these men beate they: I dole in they: hearts, and go purposefully vpon the stonelyng blocke of they: owne wyckednes: how dare they then aske counsell at me? Therfore speake vnto them and say: thus sayeth the Lord God: Euerie man of the house of Israel that beareth hys I dole in hys herte, purposing to stumple in hys owne wyckednes, and cometh to a prophet to enquire any thyng at me by hym: vnto that man wyl I the Lord my selfe geue answer, accordyng to the multitude of hys I doles: that the house of Israel may be snared in their owne hearts, because they be cleane gone from me, for they: I doles sakes.

Wherfore, tel the house of Israel: thus sayth the Lord god: We conuerced, forsake your I doles, and turne your faces from all your abominations. For euerie man (whether he be of the house of Israel or a stranger, that sojourneth in Israel) which departeth from me, and carrieth I dolles in hys herte purposing to go styll stumbling in his owne wyckednes, and cometh to a prophet, to aske counsell at me: I do so to hym: vnto that man wyl I the Lord geue answer by myne owne selfe. I wyl set my face agaynst that man, and wyl make hym to be an example for other, pena and a comyn byword: and wyl roote him out of my people, that he may know that I am the lord.

And if that prophet be deceyued when he telleth hym a worde: then I the Lord my selfe haue deceyued that prophete, and wyl stretch forth myne hand vpon him, to roote hym out of my people of Israel: and they both shalbe punished for they: wyckednes. Accordyng to the synne of hym that askerth, shall the synne of the prophete be: that the house of Israel be led no more from me: nor in error. And be no more despised in they: wyckednes: but that they may be my people, and I they: God sayth the Lord God. And the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying. Jer. xlii. d.

As the vnprofitable woodde of the vine tree is cast into the fyre, so (sayth he) that Ierusalem shalbe byent.

The word of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what cometh of the vine among al other trees: and of the vine stocke among al other tymber of the groue? Women take of it, to make any worke therof: or make ther a nayle be made of it, to hange any thyng vpon: Beholde, it is cast in the fyre to be byente, the fyre consumeth bothe the endes of it, the myddell is byent to ashes: Is it mete then for any worke? No.

Seynge then that it was mete for no worke being whole, much lesse may there any thyng be made of it, whil the fyre hath consumed and byent it. And therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Like as I caste the vine into the fyre for to be byent, as other trees of the wood: Euen so wyl I do with them that dwell in Ierusalem, and set my face agaynst them, they shal go oute from the fyre, and yet the fyre shal consume the. When shal ye knowe that I am the Lord, when I set my face agaynst the, and make the land waste: because they haue so sore offended, sayth the Lord God.

The .xvi. Chapter.

The prophete intendyng to speake of the abominacions of Ierusalem: both by. i. the benedictes of God toward it. Ierusalem is reproued of unkindnes, for her fornicacion with ydolles. He iustifieth the wyckednes of other people in comparacion of the synnes of Ierusalem. The cause of the abominacions into which the Goddynes fell. Every is promysed to the repta

repentaunte.

A Sayne, the worde of the Lord spake vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, heve the cyrpe of Ierusalem theyr abhominacions, and saye: thus sayeth the Lord God vnto Ierusalem: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the land of Canaan, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Canite. In the daye of thy birthe when thou wast borne, the (a) string of thy navel was not cutte of, thou wast not bathed in water to make the cleane, thou wast neyther rubbed with salt, nor swadled in cloutes. No man regarded the so much, as to do any of these thynges for thee, or to shewe the such sauour, but thou wast utterly cast out vpon the feld, yea dyspyled wast thou in the day of thy byrth.

Then came I by the, and saw the trode downe in thine owne bloud, and said vnto the, thou shalt be purged from thine owne bloud from thine own bloud (I say) shalt thou be clensed. So I planted the, as the blossome of the field, thou art growen vp, and waken great, thou hast gotten a marvellous pleasaunt beutye, thy breastes are come vp, thy bette is goodly growen, wher as thou wast naked and bare afoze.

Now when I went by the, and looked vpon the, beholde thy tyme was come, yea such the tyme to vowe the. When spied I my clothes ouer the, to couer thy dishonesty, yea I made an oth vnto the, I married my self wth the (saith the Lord God) and so thou becamest myne own. When washed I thee wth water, and purged the bloud from the. I anointed the wth oyle, I gaue the change of rayment, I made the shoes of Exus leather: I girded the aboute wth whyte sylke, I clothed thee wth ketchers, I decked the wth costly apparel, I put rynges vpon thy fingers: a chayne aboute thy necke, spanges vpon thy foreheade, earetynges vpon thine eares, and set a beautifull crowne vpon thine heade. Thus wast thou deckt wth syluer and golde, and thy rayment was of fyne whyte sylke, of needlewoorde, and of dyuerse coloures.

Thou dyddest eat nothyng but stinuels, bonye, and oyle: marvellous goodlye wast thou and beautifull, yea even a very Quene wast thou. In so much that thy (b) beauty was spoken of among the heathen, for thou wast excellent in my beuty, whych I put vpon the, sayeth the Lord God.

But thou hast put confidence in thine own beauty, and played the harlot, when thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou hast committed whoredome, wth all that was by the, and hast fulfilled theyr desires: yea thou hast taken thy garments of dyuerse coloures, and deckt thine altars therewith, wherupon thou myghtest fulfyl thy whoredome, of suche a fashion, as neuer was done nor shalbe. The goodly ornaments and Jewelles, whych I gaue thee of myne owne gold and syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mens ymages thereof, and committed to whoredome thyself.

Thy garments of diuerse coloures hast thou taken and dect them therewith, mine oyle and sacense hast thou set before them.

My meate whych I gaue thee, as stinuels, oyle, and bouy (to feede the thyself) that hast thou set before them, for a sweete sauour. And thus came also to passe sayeth the Lord God: Thou hast taken thine owne sonnes and donghters, whome thou hadst begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered vp vnto them, to be theyr meate. Is this but a smal whoredome of thine (thinkest thou) that thou hast my chyldren, & geuest them ouer, to be byene vnto them? And yet in al thy abominacions & whoredome, thou hast not remembred the daies of thy youth, how naked & bare thou wast at that tyme, and troden downe in thine own bloud. After al these thy wyckednesses (two thou vnto the sayeth the Lord) thou hast buylded thy stowes and bydel houses in euery place: yea at the heade of euery strete hast thou buylded thee an altar. Thou hast made thy beuty to be abhoyred, thou hast layd out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multiplied thine whoredome. Thou hast committed fornicacion wth the Egypciens thy neyghbours, which had much flesh, and thus hast thou bled thine whoredome, to anger me.

Behold, I wyl stretch out my hand ouer thee, and wyl mynish thy stowe of foode, and destruyt the ouer into the myls of the whyllynes thine enemyes, whych are ashamed of thy abhominable way. Thou hast played the whore also wth the Assyrians, whych myght not satisfye thee: Yea thou hast played & harlot, and not had enough. Thus hast thou syl committed thy fornicacion from the land of Canaan vnto the Caldees, & yet thy lust not satisfied. Howe should I circumcise thine bette (sayeth the Lord God) seying thou doest al these thynges, thou precious whore: buyldynge thy stowes at the head of euery strete, and thy bydel houses in al places?

Thou hast not bene as another whore, that maketh boast of her wyning, but as a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, and taketh order in stede of her housband. Gifts are geuen to al other whores, but thou giuest rewardes vnto all thy louers, and offerest them gyfts, to come vnto the oute of al places, and to commit fornicacion wth thee: It is come to passe wth thee in thy whoredoms contrarie to the vse of other women: yea ther hath no such fornicacion bene committed after the, seying that thou proferest gyfts vnto other, & no reward is giuen the: this is a contrary thyng.

Therefore heare the worde of the Lord, O thou harlot, thus sayeth the Lord God. For so much as thou hast spent thy mony, and dyscouered thy shame, thowise thy whore to heredom with al thy louers, and with al the idols of thy abominacions in the blood of thy chyldren, whom thou hast geuen them: Behold th. th. I wyl gather together al thy louers, vnto whome thou hast made thy selfe common: yea, and all them whom thou sauest, and euerpe one that thou hatest: and wyl dyscouer thy shame before them, that they al may se thy synnes. Moreover, I wil iudge the as a breaker of thy wedlocke, and a murderer, and recompence the thine owne blood in warre and gelousy. I wyl geue the ouer into theyr power, þ. I shall breake downe thy steeles. and destroy thy brodel houses: they shall strip the out of thy clothes, al thy fayre and beutiful Jewels that they take from the, and so let the sit naked and bare: yea they shall byrge the common people vpon the, which shall stone the, and lay the downe with theyr weardes. They shall burne vp houses, & punysh the in the sight of manie women. Thus wyl I make thy whoredome to cease, so that thou shalt geue out no more rewardes.

Shoulde I make my wrath to be still, take my gelousye from thee, be contente, and no more to be displeased, seynge thou remembrest not the daies of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in al these thynges: Beholde therfore, I wyl byrge thynne owne wapes vpon thynne head, sayeth the Lord God: how be it I neuer drye vnto thee accordyng to thy wyckednesse and all thy abominacions. Beholde, all they that vse common prouerbes, shall vse this prouerbe also agaynst the: such a mother, such a daughter.

Thou art euē thy motheres own daughter, that hath cast of her husband and her chyldren. Yea thou art the sister of thy sisters, which forsooke theyr husbandes and theyr chyldren. Your mother is a Libite, and your father an Amorite. Thine eldest sister is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell vpon thy left hand.

But thy yongest sister that dwelleth on thy ryght hand, is Sodoma and her daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wates, nor don after theyr abominacions, but in al thy wapes thou hast bene more corrupt then they. As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lord god: Sodoma thy sister with her daughters, haue not done so euill, as thou and thy daughters. Behold the syns of thy sister Sodoma were these: wynde, fulnes of meate, aboundaunce and ydleness: these thynges had she and her daughters. Besides that, they reached not their hand to the poore and needye, but were proude, and byd abhominable thynges before me: therfore I rooke awaye, when I had sene it. Reprehendest thou Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, yea thou hast exceeded them in wyckednes: In so much that in comparyson of al the abominacions which þ. I haue done, thou hast made thy selfe ters good women.

As for theyr captiuitie, namely the captiuitie of Sodoma and her daughters: the captiuitie of Samaria and her daughters I wyl byrge them agayne, so wyl I also byrge agayne thy captiuitie amonge them: that thou mayest take thynne owne confusion vpon thee; and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, and to comforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and her daughters; Samaria and her daughters, with thy selfe and thy daughters; shall be brought agayne to your owne estate.

When thou wast in thy pryde, and before thy wyckednes came to the lyghte, thou wouldest not heare speake of thy sister Sodoma, vntill the time that the Sennas with al theyr towne, and the Philistines with al that lye round about them, brought the to shame and confusion, that thou myghtest beare thynne owne synnes and abominacion, sayeth the Lord.

For thus sayeth the Lord God: I shoulde (by ryght) deale with thee, as thou hast done. Thou hast despised the oth, and broken the couenaunt. Neuertheless, I wyl remember the couenaunt that I made with thee in thy youth, in so muche that I shall make an euerlastyng couenaunt: so that thou also remember thy wapes, and be ashamed of them: then shalt thou recetur of me thy elder and younger sisters to whom I wyl make thy daughters, and that befynde thy couenaunt. And so I wyl renew my couenaunt with thee, that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lord: that thou mayest synke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thynne owne confusion no more: whil I haue forgouen the al that thou hast done, sayeth the Lord God.

And in lyke case after the destruction of Ierusalem and in theyr imprisonment at Babylon. At both these tymes were they motherles and helpeles, concernyng theyr owne strengthes: but were cared for of God, and receyued by his merce. The prophet borroweth this fashyon of speakeyng of the manner of mothers, after the byrthe of theyr chyldren, which speake of thei. Haniel and washe them with salte, and then was ble them, &c. Much helpe hadde Israel none in theyr aduersities in Egypt and Babylon: but lay ouerwhelmed in theyr synnes and myseryes, and were regarded as bastards and vnmotherly intreated of al men. There was no man but onely God that rooke thought for them or holpe them: and that byd he only of his merce, without any of theyr deservynges.

(b) By thys beautye are signified the gyftes and graces that shal be geuen to his people, which neuer theles was an idolater and worshipped other gods, or worshipped God after an other manner and was then he had committed them, which thing is signified by thys figuratioun, as in Esa. lvi. b. & after in the. xlii. g.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The parable of the wood. Eagles signified that redoubted, which contrary to his other had forsaken the friendship of Nabuchodonosor, returned him selfe to the king of Egypt, and the fore persued. In explication of the parable. A prophete of Egypt.

The word of the Lord came unto me, saying: Thou soune of man, put forth a parke speaking and a parable vnto the house of Israel, and say: Thus sayeth the Lord God, There came a greate Eagle with greate wynges, vca wyth myghty long wynges, and ful of feathers of diverse coloures, vpon the mount of Libanus and took a bryanch from a Cedar tree, and brake of the top of hys terryng, and carryed it vnto the lande of Canaan, and set it in a step of man, vnto the. He took also a bryanch of the lande, and planted it in a fruitful ground, he brought it vnto great waters, and set it as a willow tre therby.

By thys Eagle, vnder stande the kynge of Babylon.

It did not grow, and was a greene vyne thicke, but low by the ground: thus there came of it a vine, and it brought forth blossoms, and spread out bryanches.

But there was an other Eagle, a greate one, which had greate wynges and many feathers, and behold, the rootes of thys vyne had an vnyng after hym, and spread out hys bryanches toward hym, so that hys frutes. Therefore it was planted vpon a good ground beside greate waters, so that (by reason) it shoulde haue broughte oute bryanches and frutes, and haue bene a good ly vyne. Speake thou therefore: thus sayeth the Lord God. Shal this vine prosper, shal not hys rootes be pluckt out, hys frutes be broken of, hys greene bryanches wyther and fade away? can myrthout cyther stand agayne or manye people, shal it be plucked vp by the rootes. Behold, it was planted: shal it prosper therfore? shal it not be dried vp and wythered, yea, even in the thootyng out of hys blossoms, as soone as the east wynde bloweth?

Moreover, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Speake to that toward household: know ye not, what these things do signyfy? Tel them: beholde, the king of Babylon came to Ierusalem, and toke the kynge & his princes, and led thē to Babilō.

He took of the kynge's seide, and made a couenaunt with hym, and toke an othe of hym: The wynges of the land toke he wyth hym also, that the land might be holden in subiection, and not rebel, but keepe the couenaunt, and fulfill it. But he fel from hym, and sent hys Embassadors into Egypt that he myght haue horses and much people. Shoulde that prosper? Shoulde

he be kept safe, that both such thynges? Shoulde he escape that breaketh hys couenaunt? As true as I lyue, sayth the Lord God, I shal dye at Babilō in the place, wher the kynge dwelleth, that made hym kynge: whose othe he hath broken, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Therefore shal I shew to hys grete heuyl and multitude of people many sayne by myn the. He shal be cast vpon pyches, and set vpon bulmarkes to destroy much people. For sayng he hath despised the oth, and broke the couenaunt (wher as he pergaue hys hand therupon) and hath done all these thynges, he shal not escape.

Therefore thus saith the Lord God: As true as I lyue, I wil bring mine oth, that he hath despised, and my couenaunt that he hath broken, vpon hys owne heade, I wil make my net about hym, & catch hym in my patne. To Babilō wil I carry hym, there wil I punyssh hym, because of the grete offence that he made me.

Ezech. xii. b. and. xxxii. a.

As for those that shal come from him out of the host, they shal be slayne wyth the sword. The residue shal be scattered toward all the wyndes: and ye shal know, that I the Lord haue spoken it.

Thus sayth the Lord God: I wil also take of a bryanche from an hye Cedar tree, and wil set it, and take the vppermost twig that yet is but tender, and plant it vpon an hye hyll: I wil plant it: that it maye bring forth wynges, and geue scutle and be a grete Cedar tree: so that all maner of soules maye byde in it, & make theire nestes vnder the shadowe of hys bryanches. And all the trees of the field shal knowe that I the Lord haue brought down the hye tree, and set the lowe tre by: that I haue dyed vpon the grene tre, and made the dry tre to flourish: Euen I the Lord that speake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The. xvii. Chapter.

(a) By thys bryanche vnto stand our lady, and by the hye Cedar tree the tribe of Iuda of which she came: the vppermost twig is vnderstanded Christ, & by the hil of S. b. is figured the church.

The. xviii. Chapter.

He sheweth that euery man shal beare hys owne synne. To him that remembereth is the promise. Death is prophesied to the ryghteous, which turneth backe from the right way.

The word of the Lord came vnto me out of the mannet: what meane ye by this common prouerbe, that ye vse in the lande of Israel, saying: The farbers haue eaten soure grapes, and the chyldren that are set on edge? As true as I lyue, sayth the Lord God, ye shal vse thys byword no more in Israel.

Esa. lviii. b. Mat. xxv. c.

Behold, all soules are myne. Like as the farber is myne, so is the soune myne also. The sonne that synneth, shal dye. If a man be good, and do the thyng that is equall and ryght, he eateth not vpon the byls: he lyfeth not hys eyes vpon the Idoles of Israel: he despyeth not hys neyghbours

Wise, he medleth wth no men^{ti}ous w^ork, he geueth no body, he geueth bys better bys pledge agayne, he taketh none other mans good by v^olence: he parteth bys meate wth the honger, he clotheth the naked, he lendeth nothing vpon vsury, he taketh not byng ouer, he w^orketh a w^ork bys hand from doyn^g w^orong, he handleth saythfully betwixt man and man, he walketh in my commaundem^{en}tes, and kepeth my lawes, and persounereth them saythfully. This is a ryghteous man, he shall surely lyue sayth the Lord God.

E If he now get a sonne, that is a mutheter, a shedder of blood, if he do one of these thynges (though he do not all) he eateth vpon the bys, he defyleth bys neighbours w^ork, he geueth the poore and needye, he robbereth and spoyleth; he geueth not the better bys pledge agayne; he lyfeth vpon bys eyes vnto ydoles, and medleth wth the abhominable thyng, he lendeth vpon vsury, and taketh more ouer. Shall this man lyue? He shall not lyue. Seing he hath done al these abominacions, he shall dye:
bys blood shall be vpon hym.

Now if this man get a sonne also, that feareth all bys fatheres synnes, w^herhe he hath done, and feareth, neyther doth suche lyke, I amely he eateth not vpon the mountaines, he lyfeth not bys eyes vpon the ydoles of Israell, he defyleth not bys neighbours w^ork, he vereth no man, he kepeth no mans pledge, he neyther spoyleth no; robbereth any man, he dealeth bys meate wth the honger, he clotheth the naked, he oppresseth not the poore, he receyueth no vsury, no; any thyng ouer, he kepeth my lawes and walketh in my commaundem^{en}tes, This man shall not dye in bys fatheres synne, but shall lyue w^orthout fayle. As for his father, because he oppressed and spoiled bys brother, and byd w^orked among bys people: so, he is deade in his owne synne. And yet say ye. Wherefore thou shouldest not this sonne deare bys fatheres synne? Therefore, because the sonne hath done equity and right, hath kepte all my commaundem^{en}tes, and done them: therefore shall he lyue in deede. The same soule that synneth, shall die. The sonne shall not deare the fatheres offence, neyther shall the father deare the sonnes offence. The ryghteousnes of the ryghteous shall be vpon him, and the wickednes of the wicked shall be vpon hym selfe also. But if the vngod-ly w^oll turne away from all bys synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundem^{en}tes, and do the thyng that is equal and righte: doubtles he shall lyue, and not dye. As for all his synnes that he d^oed before (a) they shall not be thought vpon: but in his ryghteousnes that he hath done he shall lyue. For haue I any pleasure in the deathe of a synner, sayeth the Lord God, but rather that he conuert, and lyue?
Againe, if the righteous turne away from bys ryghteousnes, and do iniquity, accor-dyng to all the abominacions that the wicked man doth, shall he lyue? Al the ryghtiousnes that he hath done, shall not be thought vpon, but in the fault that he hath done, he shall dye.

And yet ye say: Truly, the way of the Lord is not indifferent. Heare therfore ye house of Israell: is not my way ryght? Or at not poure waies rather wicked? When a ryghtious man toucheth away from his ryghtiousnes, and medleth wth vngodlynes, he must dye therein: yea for the vnrightousnes that he hath done, must he dye. A-gayne, when the wicked man turneth away from bys wickednes & he hath done, and doth the thyng which is equal & right he shall saue his soule aliv^e. For in so much as he remembereth hym selfe, and turneth hym from al the vngodlynes that he hath bled, he shall lyue and not dye.

And yet saith the house of Israell, Truly the way of the Lord is not equal. Are my wayes vnrigh^t, O ye house of Israell? Are not poure wayes rather vnequal? As for me, I w^oll iudge every man, accor^ding to bys wayes, O ye house of Israell, sayeth the Lord God.

Wherfore be conuerted, and turne your eleane from al poure wickednesse, so shall ther no syn do you harme. Cast awaye fe^r you al your vngodlynes, that ye haue don, make you new hearts and a newe spirite.
Wherefore w^oll ye dye, O ye house of Israel: seing I haue no pleasure in the deathe of hym that breth, sayeth the Lord God.
Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

The Notes of the xviii. Chapter.

(a) What not be thought vpon. The sophis-ters haue a proper solution for this scite and such lyke wherby testify that God so forgetteth, that he w^oll not after cal againe his forgettens and punishment. True it is (say they) God forgetteth the synne, but not the punishment due vnto the synne. Heuen peaces punishment as they praye, must we abyde in purgatory for eue-ry synne, when it is forgotten. Yf this be not so moche w^ork w^ork God and bys holy wo^ord, I wote not wheris mocheage, Yf God can, & do. as they aspyne geue me punishment due vnto my syn, so that he neyther geue me so muche no; to lyke payne therfore, and yet not once thynke on my synne, surely he hath a wonderful remembraunce.
And that he w^oll not thynke on it, the text doth here openly aspyne. By this sophistyr myghte the kyng geue a man bys pardon for the fi, and after hang hym vpon. For he myghte say: I forgaue you your theft, but not your badg^e which is due vnto your theft. Such pardon wold they be loth to haue that first p^{ro}magnd it. Yf the king which is but a man be moze saythful, the to deale so w^ork bys prisoners whom he forges with: how wold God then wherby is our hea-uenly father, and which is euen gooder to selfe, haue such a litle, fained, and imperfect forguenes, that shuld after punish. But herect w^oll I now speake no moze, leaue ye shoulde happye smell that this solutyon were p^{ro}magnd to p^{ro}phemes p^{ro}phes, thowme shall p^{ro}phes, byrge Groaters, Trentalles, p^{ro}phes, mogeth myndes, &c.

The. xix. Chapter.

The. xix. Chapter.

The captivity of Jehoahaz & of Jehoash is signified by the Lyons whelpes, and by the lion. He setteth out the prosperity of the city of Jerusalem that is past, and the misery thereof that is present.

A Bile mount thou for the princes of Israel, and saye: Wherefore laye thy mother that Lyones among the Lyons, and noy when her yong among the lions whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a Lyon: it learned to spyle, and to deuoure folke. The heathen hearde of hym, and tooke hym in theyr nets, and broughte hym in chaynes vnto the land of Egypt.

B Now when the dam sawe that all her hope and comfort was away, she tooke another of her whelpes, and made a Lyon of hym: whych went among the Lyons, and became a leaue Lyon: learned to spyle and to deuoure folke: he destroyed their palaces, and made theyr ciities waste. In so much that the whole land and euery thing therein, were utterly desolate thowt the very voyce of hys roaring.

Then came the Heathen together ouer euery syde out of all countreys against him, layed theyr nets for hym, and tooke hym in theyr pytte. So they bounde hym with chaynes, and broughte hym to the kyng of Babylon: whych put hym in prison, that hys voyce should no more be heard vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a vyne in thy blood, planted by the water syde: her frutes and braches are growen out of many waters, her stalkes were so strong that men myghte haue made staves therof for officers, she grew so high in her stalkes.

C So when men sawe that she excedded the height and multitude of her braches, she was rooted oute in dyspleasure, and cast downe to the ground.

D The East wynde dried by her frute, her strong stalkes were broken of, withered and bent in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wyldernes, in a dry and thurly ground. And ther is a fyre gone out of her stalkes, which hath bent by her braches and her frute: so that she hath no more strong stalkes, to be staves for officers. Whys is a perillous and miserable thyng.

The. xx. Chapter.

The Lord denieth that he wyl answer them when they praye, for the offence of unauarice whych he here objecteth. He promyseth that his people shall returne from captivity. By the wood that should be bent, is signified the burning of Jerusalem.

A In the. xlii. yere the. x. day of the. iij. moneth, it happened that certayne of the elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsel at the Lorde, and sette them downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of man speake vnto the elders of Israel, and say vnto them. Thus sayth the Lorde God: As ye come to aske any thing at me? As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord) I wyl geue you no answer. Whyce thou not reprove them? (I sonne of man) wilt thou not reprove them? Shew them the abhominacions of theyr forefathers, and tel the. Thus sayth the Lord God: In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyft vp myne hand vpon the seede of the house of Jacob, and shewed my self vnto them in the land of Egypt: yea when I lyft vp myne hand ouer them, and sayed I am the Lord your God; euen in the day that I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, to bring them out of the land of Egypt, into a lande that I had promised for them, which I sowed with mylke and honny, and is a pleasaunt land among all other: Then sayd I vnto them: Cast away euery man the abhominacions that he hath before hym, and defile not your selues with the ydols of Egypt, for I am I Lord your god.

But they rebelled against me, and wold not follow me: to cast away euery man the abhominacions of his ries, and to forsake the ydols of Egypt. Then I made me to pour my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfy my wrath vpon them: yea euen in the myddell of the land of Egypt. But I wold not do it, for my names sake, that it should not be vnhalowed before the Heathen, amonges whom I shewed my self vnto the. That I would bring them out of the lande of Egypt. Now when I had carred them out of the land of Egypt, and brought the into the wyldernes, I gaue them my commandementes, and shewed the my lawes, whych who so keepeth, shall lue in them. I gaue the also my holy daies to be a token betwixt me and the, and therby to knowe that I am the Lord whych haloweth the. And yet the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wyldernes, they wold not walk in my commandementes, they haue caste away my lawes (whych who so keepeth should lue in them) and my sabboth daies haue they greatly vnhalowed.

Then I made me to pour out my indignacion vpon them, and to consume them in the wyldernes. Yet I wold not do it, for my names sake, lest it should be dishonored before the Heathen, from the which I had carred them away. But I swore vnto them in the wyldernes, that I woulde not bring them into the lande, whych I gaue them, a land that I sowed with mylke and honny, and is a pleasure of all landes: that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commandementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabothes, for theyr heart was gone after theyr ydols.

Neuertheless myne eye spared them, so that I wold not utterly slay them, and consume them in the wyldernes. Moreouer I sayd vnto theyr sonnes in the wyldernes: walke not in the statutes of your fore

Not wthstanding theyr sonnes rebel-neither halowed they my Saboth daies.

When I made me agayne to poure out my also in the wilderness, that I wold scatter among the nations: because they had not kept my laws, but cast asyde my command-

lyft vp theyr eyes to theyr fathers pdols.

wed them in theyr owne gyftes (when I appointed for my selfe al th^eir fitt bozne) to make them desolate: that they myghte know, how that I am the Lorde.

Therefore (O thou sonne of man) tel the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God.
Besyde al thys, your forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatly offended against me: for after I had broughte th^e into the land, that I promised to giue th^e when they saw euery dyke hyl, and all the thynke trees: they made there theyr offeryngs, and prouoked me wth theyr oblations, making swete saours ther, & poured out theyr drink offerynges. When I asked them: what haue ye to do wth hall, that ye go thither? And therefore it is called the hye place vnto this day.

Wherefore speake vnto the house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde God: ye are eu^{er} as vncleane as your forefathers: and com-myt whoredom also wth theyr abhomy-nacions. In al your Idols, wherunto ye bryng your oblations, & to whose honour ye burne your chyldren: ye defile your sel-ues, eu^{er} to this day: how dare ye the come, and aske question at me O ye house hold of Israel: As truly as I lue, I sayth the Lorde God, ye get no answer of me: as for the thing that ye go about, it shal not come to passe, w^het as ye say: we will be as the heathen, and do as the other people in y^e land, wood, and stowe wth me wth hyl.

As truly as I lue, I sayth the Lorde God:
I my selfe w^{ill} rule you wth a myghtye hand, wth a stretched out arme, & wth indignacion poured out ouer you and wil bring you oute of the nations and landes, wherewith ye are scattered, and gather you together wth a myghtye hande, wth a stretched out arme, and wth indignacion poured out vpon you, & wil bring you into the wilderness of y^e people, and ther I w^{ill} reason wth you face to face. Like as I punished your forefathers in y^e wilderness, so w^{ill} I punish you also sayth the Lorde God.

I wil bring you vnder my iurisdiction, & vnder the bond of y^e couenaunte. The for-sakers also & the trasgressours wil I take from among you, and bryng them oute of the land of your habitation: as for the lad of Israel, he shal not come in it, that they may know how that I am the Lorde.

So now then (sayth the Lorde God) ye house of Israel, cast away and destroy eu^{er} y^e m^ans pdols, the wh^{ch} ye heare me, and no more blasphem me my holre name wth your offerynges, and pdols. But vpon my holp hyl, euen the hie dyl of Israel shal all the house of Israel, and al that is in y^e land, worship me: and in the same place w^{ill} I saue them, and ther wil I require your heave offerynges, and the fulfillyngs of your oblations, wth al your holy thynges.

Esaie xl. c.
and .xxx. d.

I w^{ill} accept your swete saueur, when I bring you from the nations, and gather you together out of the landes, wher in ye be scattered: that I maye be halowed in you before the heathen, and that ye maye know that I am the Lorde, wherby I haue brought you into the lande of Israel: yea into the same lande that I swore to geue vnto your forefathers. Ther shal ye cal to remembraunce your owne wayes, and al your imaginacions wher in ye haue bene despyled: and ye shal be dyspleased wth your owne felues, for al your wyckednesse wherby ye haue done.

And ye shal knowe howe that I am the Lorde, when I intreat you after my name:
not after your wycked wayes, nor accord-yng to your corrupt wykes, O ye house of Israel, sayth the Lorde.

Moreover, the word of the Lorde came vnto me, sayyng: O thou sonne of man, set thy face toward the South, and speake to the South wynde, and say to the wood toward the South. Heare the word of the Lorde, thus sayth the Lorde God. Behold, I w^{ill} kindle a fyre in the, that shal consume the (a) grene trees wth the dype. No man shalbe able to quench y^e flame, but al that looketh from the South to the North shalbe bytten: and al flesh shal fe that I the Lorde haue kindled it so that no m^an may quench it. Then sayd I, O Lorde, they w^{ill} saye of me, These they are but fables that be tolled.

The. xxi. Chap.

to prophesie the destruction of the chylidren of Ammon After the slaughter of other, at the last the Lord theareth bech unto Nabuchodonozor hym selfe

The word of the Lord came to me saying: Thou sonne of man set thy face toward Jerusalem, speake agaynst the Sanctuary, and prophesy agaynst the land of Israel, saye to the land of Israel: Thus sayth the Lord God. Behold I wyl vpon the, and wyl draw my swerde out of the sheath, and roote out of the both thy righteouse, and the wycked. Sepnge thou that I wyl roote out of the both thyghtous and wycked, therefore shal my swerd go oute of bys sheath agaynst al flesh, from the North to the South: that al flesh may knowe howe that I the Lord haue drawen my swerd out of the sheath, and it shal not be put in againe.

Outne therefore (O thou sonne of man) that thy loines crack with al, pea mouthe bytterly for them: And if they say, wherefore mourest thou? Then tel them: for the thyngs that cometh, at the wyche all hertes shal melt, al handes shal be litten downe, al stomackes shal faint, al knees shal ware feable. Behold, it cometh, and shalbe fulfilled, sayth the Lord God.

Again, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, prophesye and speake: Thus sayeth the Lord God: speake, the swerd is sharpened and well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it maye be dryght, (a) O the destroying staffe of my sonne shal bring downe al wood. He hath put bys swerd to the dryghting, that good hold maye be taken of it. Thy swerd is sharpened and dryght that it maye be geuen into the hande of the manslayer.

Thy (O thou sonne of man) and house, for thy swerde shal smyte my people, and al the culers in Israel, wyche wyth my people shalbe slayne downe to the ground thowth this swerd. Smite thou vpon thy thigh, for wherfore shoulde not the plage and staffe of iudgement come? I prophesye thou sonne of man and smyte thine hands together: make the swerd two edged, pea make it thre edged, that manslayers swerd, that swerd of the great slaughter, wyche shal smyte them, euen in theyr priuy chambers to make them abashed and faine at the hertes, and in al gates to make some of them fall. O dryght and sharpe it is, howe wel dyght, and mete for the slaughter. Bet thee to some place alone, eyther vpon the right hand or vpon the left, whither soeuer thy face turneth. I wyl smyte my handes together also, and satisfy my wrathful indignacion. Euen I the Lord haue sayd it.

The word of the Lord came yet vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, make the two streetes, that the swerde of the kynge of Babylon maye come. Worthe these streetes shal gooe oute of one lande. He shal set hym up a place, at the head of the streetes shal be chose hym out a corner. Make the a streete that the two maye come toh at Babylon of the inhabitants, and to the strong city of Jerusalem.

For the king of Babylon shal cast the turning of the way, at the head of the streetes, to aske counsel at the southsayers, castinge the lots with his atomes to aske counsel at the ydols, & to loken in the spuer.

But the southsaying shal porne to the ryghte side vpon Jerusalem, that pe maye set men of war to smyte it, wyth a greete noise to cry out alarum, to see battell camys agaynst the gates, to graue by ditches, and to make bulwarkes.

Nevertheless, as for southsayinge they shal hold it but for vanite, euen as though a tell were tolde them: pea, and they them selues remember theyr wickednes, so that by ryght they muste be taken and monne. Therefore sayeth the Lord God: For so muche as pe poure selues shewe poure offence, and haue opened poure wyckednes, so that in al poure moorkes men maye see your sinnes: pea in so muche (I say) that pe poure selues haue made mencion therof, pe shalbe taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wycked guide of Israel whose day is come, euen the tyme that wyckednes shal haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lord God, take awaye the mytre, and put of the crowne, and so is it at a myte: the humble is exalted, & the proud brought low. Punyshe punyshe, pea punyshe them wil I, and destroye them: and that shal not be fulfilled vntill he come, to whome the iudgemente belongeth, and to whome I haue gyuen it.

And thou (O sonne of man) prophesye and speake: Thus sayth the Lord God to the chylidren of Ammon, and to theyr blasphemers: I saye to the: The swerd is drawen forth already to the slaughter, and scoured that it glistereth (because thou hast loked the out vanities, & prophesied lies) that it maye come vpon thy neck, like as vpon the other bugodlye, wyche be slayne: whose daye came, when theyr wyckednes was ful.

Though it wer put by agayne into the sheath, yet wyl I punyshe the in the lande wher thou wast nourtshed and borne, and pour my indignacion vpon thee, and wyl blowe vpon the in the fyze of my wrath, and deliuer the vnto cruel people, wyche are deliuered to destroye. Thou shalt fede the fyze, and thy blood shalbe shed in the land, that thou maiest be put out of remembrysance. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it.

The Notes of the. xxi. Chapter.

(a) Some read: Shal we reioyce our selues? He despiseth the staffe of my sonne, and al woodde. The Caldees readeth the trybe of my sonne: that is to saye, the trybe of Juda. O shal the staffe of my sonne despise al woodde? That is, shal the trybe of Juda despise al the other.

The. xxii. Chapter.

The

The word of the Lord against Jerusalem for man slaughter, and denying due honour to they fathers and mothers, and other wicked doings. Of the wicked doctrine of the false prophets and priests, and of they insatiable covetousness. The tyranny of rulers. The unkindness of the people.

Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me and sayed: thou sonne of manne wilt thou not reprove theys bloud theys cry? Shewe them theys abominacions and tel them: Thus sayeth the Lord God. O thou cryste that shearest bloud in the myddest of the, that thy time may come also, and make the ydolles to despyle the wyrtball. Thou hast made thy selfe gyfte in the bloude that thou hast shed; and despyled the in the ydols whiche thou hast made.

Thou hast caused thy dates to draw nie, and made the tyme of thy peaces to come. Therefore wilt I make the to be confounded among the Heathen, and to be despyled in al the landes, whether they be nie or far from the: they shal laugh the to scorne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, and art ful of myschiese. Beholde, the rulers of Israel have brought euery mā bys power, to shed bloude in the. In the haue they despyled father and mother, in the haue they oppressed the straunger, in the haue they viced the myddow and the fetherles. Thou hast despyled my sanctuary and unhallowed my Saboth. Murderers are ther in the, that shed bloud and eat vp the vylls, and in the they vse unhappyness. In the haue they discovered they fathers shame, in the haue they viced women in theyr sickenes. Euery man hath deale shamefully with his neighbours wyfe, and abominably defiled bys daughter in law. In the hath euery man forced bys owne syster, euen bys fathers doughter: peas giftes haue bene receiued in the to shed bloud. Thou hast taken vsury and eucrease, thou hast oppressed thy neighbours by extorsion and forgotten me, sayth the Lord God.

Behold, I haue smitten my bands vpon thy countenances that thou hast vsed, and vpon the bloude whych hath bene shed in the. As thy bett able to endure it, or maye thy hands defend them selues in the tyme that I shall bring vpon the: Euen I the Lord that speake it, wilt bring it to passe. I wil scatter thy selfe amonge the Heathen and strow the about in the landes: and wil cause thy fylchpulle to cease out of thee: yea and I wil haue the in possession in the syghte of the Heathen, that thou mayest know that I am the Lord.

And the word of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, the house of Israel is turned to brasse. All they that should be brasse, tyrr, yron, and leade, are in the fyre become bras. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: For so much as ye al are turned into brasse, beholde, I wilt bringe you together vnto Jerusalem lyke as syluer, brasse, yron, tin, and leade are put together in the furnace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melt them: Euen so wilt I gather you, put you in together, and melte you in my wyath and indignacion. I wilt bringe you together, and kindle the fyre of my cruel dyspleasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin. Like as the syluer is melted in the fyre, so shal ye also be melted therein, that ye may know how that I the Lord haue poured my wyath vpon you.

And the word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge. Thou sonne of man, reher: Thou art an vnclene land, whych is not capned vpon in the dape of thy cruell wyathe: the prophets that are in the, are sworne together to deuoure soules, lyke as a roaring Lion that lyueth by his pray.

They receyue ryches and good, & make many widowes in the. Thy priests breake my law, and defile my Sanctuary. They put no difference betwene the holy and unholy, neither discern betwene the cleane and vnclene: they turne theys eyes from my faborbes, & I am unhallowed among the. Thy rulers in the are lyke rauishing wolues to shed blud, to destroy soules for theyr owne couetous lucre. As for thy prophets, theye dawe with vntempered clape, theye vanities, and prophete lyres vnto the, sayinge: the Lord God sayth so, whiche as the Lord hath not spoken. The people in the land vse wicked extorsion and robbery. They were poor and needy, and expressed the straunger against right.

And I sought in the land for a mā that would make vp the bedge, and set him self in the gap before me, in the lands behalf, that I shoulde not bitterly destroy it, but I could fynde none. Therefore wilt I poute out my cruel dyspleasure vpon them, and burne them in the fyre of my wyath: theyr own waies will I receyue vpon theyr heades, sayth the Lord God.

The. xliii. Chapter.
Of the fornicacion, meaninge the Idolatrye of Samaria and Jerusalem, vnder the names of Wholab and Wholibab. In comparyson of Samaria he sheweth that the fornicacion of Jerusalem is the filthier. The destruction of Jerusalem is propheted. The atouryng of bothe the whores is found out. Theyr destruction.

The word of the Lord came vnto me sayng: thou son of mā ther wer. ii. womē that had one mother: These (whiche ther wer young) began to play the harlots in Egypt. Ther wer their breasts brosed, & they payd of theyr maidenhead destroyed. The eldest of the was called Wholab, & her yonger syster Wholibab. These. ii. wer mine, & bare sons & daughters, their names were Samaria, & she was Wholab: & Jerusalem was Wholibab. As for Wholab, she began to goe whoring, whiche I had take her to me. She was set on fyre vpon her leuers the Sunne and Moone, which had to do with her: euen the princes and Lords that wer dect in cosynage.

The Prophecy

That is I dwel in her
as in my ho ly place.

B lisse pong men lusty ryders of horses.
Thus thowow her whoredom, she cleued vnto al the young men of Assiria: Yea she was mad vpon them, and defyled her selfe wyth al theyr ydolles. For she ceased she from the soynycap on that she used wyth the Egipcians: for in her pouth they laye wyth her, they brysed the brestes of her maidenhead, and poured theyr whoredom vpon her. Wherefore I deliuered her into the hands of her louers, euen the Assirians whom she so loued. These dyscouered her shame, tooke her sonnes and daughters, & sette her wyth the sword. An euyl name gat she of al people, and they punished her.
Her sister Sodom saw this, and destroyed her selfe with inordinate loue, more then she, and excused her sister in whooredome, she loued the Assirians (whych also lay wyth her) namely the princes & great Lords, that were clothed wyth al maner of gorgious apparel, al lusty horsmen, and faire pong persons. Then I saw that they both were defyled alike.

Ecc. xlii. e.

C But she encreased still in whoredom: for when she saw men paynted vpon the wal, the ymages of the Caldees set forth wyth fresh coloures, wyth lisse gyrdels about them, and goodly bonets vpon theyr hea-des, looking al lyke princes (after the maner of the Babylonians and Chaldees in theyr owne land, wher they be borne) immediately as soone as she saw this, she brye in loue vpon them, and sent messengers for them into the land of the Caldees.

Nowe when the Babylonians came to her they lay wyth her, and defyled her with their whoredome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated from them, her whoredome and shame was dyscouered and sene, then my hearte forsooke her, lyke as my hearte was gone from her sister also.

Pla. xlii. a Psal. li. d.
Ecc. xlii. e.

Neuertheles, she used her whoredome euer the longer the more, and remembered p dayes of her youth, wherin she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt, she brye in lust vpon them, whose flesh was like the flesh of asses, and theyr seede lyke the seede of horses. Thus thou haste renued the syl-thynges of thy youth, when thy louers bryesed thy pappes, and married thy brestes in Egypt. Therefore (o Sodom) thus sayth the Lord God, I will rayse vp thy louers (with whch thou hast satisfied thy lust) against the, and gather the together round about the: namely the Babylonians, & all p Caldees: Decob, Schoa and Coa, wyth al the Assirians, al pong and faire louers, princes and lords, knyghtes and gentlemen which be al good horsmen: these shal come vpon the with horses, charrets, and a great multitude of people, which shal be harnessed about on euer side, with breastplates, sheldes & helmes, & wil punish the before the, yea they them selues shal punish thee, according to their owne iudgement. I will put my gelousy vpon the, so that they shal deale cruelly with the. They shal cutte of thy nose and thine eares, and p remnant shal fall thowow the sword. They shal caraway thy sonnes and daughters, and the residue shal be dyent in the fyre. They shal strypp the out of thy clothes, and carpe thy costly Jewels away wyth them.

Thus wyl I make an end of thy sylthy-nes & whoredom, which thou hast brought out of the land of Egypt, that thou shalt turne thine eyes no more after them, and cast thy mynde vpon Egypt. For thus sayeth the Lord, behold, I wyl deliuer thee into the hands of them, to whom thou has-test: yea, euen into the hands of the, wyth whom thou hast fulfilled thy lust, whiche shal deale cruelly wyth the. Al thy laboure shal they take wyth them, and leue thee naked and bare: and thus the shame of thy sylthy whoredome, shal come to lycht. All these thynges shal vappẽ vnto the, because of thy whoredom, which thou hast used among the Gentyles wyth whose ydolles thou hast defiled thy selfe. Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister, therefore wyl I geue the her cup in thy hand.

Thus sayth the Lord God. Thou shalt drynke of thy sisters cup, howe deepe and far fouet it be to the botom. Thou shalt be laughed to scoone, and had as greatlye in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt be ful of dyonhennes and sorowe: for the cup of thy sister Samaria, is a cup of destruc-cion and mayng: the same shalt p drynke and sup it out, euen to the dregg: yea thou shalt eate vp the broken peces of it, and so teate thine own brestes: For euen I haue spoken it sayth the Lord God.

Her sore thus sayth the Lord God: For so much as thou hast forgotten me, and cast me asyde, so beate now thine own sylthy-nes and whoredome.

The Lord said moreouer vnto me, thou sonne of man, wylt thou not reprove Sodom, and Sodom? Shew the theyr abominations: namely that they haue broken theyr treadlocks, and stayned theyr handes wyth bloud: yea euen with theyr ydolles haue they committed adoutry, and offer-red them theyr own chyldren (to be deuou-red) whom they had borne vnto me.

Eccl. xlii. a
Ecc. xlii. e.

Yea and this haue they done vnto me, al for they haue defiled my sanctuary, in that same day, and haue unhallowed my Sabbath. For when they had slaine theyr chyldren for their ydols they came p same day in my sanctuary to defyle it. For thus haue they done in my house.

Beside al this, thou hast sent thy messengers for men out of far countreys: & when they came, thou hast barbed, trimmed and set forth thy selfe of the best facion: thou sattest vpo a goodly bed, and a table spread before the, wher vpo thou hadst set mine incense and myne ople.

Ecc. xlii. a

Then was there greete chere with her,
and

and the men that were sent from far countries over the desert, unto these they gave bracelets upon their hands, and set glorious crownes upon theyr heades: then thought I: no doubt these will use theyr harlotrye also with ponder olde whore. And they went into her, as one into a chamber harlot. Even so will they also to Dholiab and Dholibab those filthy women.

O ye all that loue vertue and rightousnes iudge them, and punyssh them: as adulterers & murderers ought to be iudged and punysshed. For they are breakers of wedlock, & the blood is in their handes. Wherefore thus saith the Lord god: Bying a great multitude of people upon them, & make them be scattered & spoyled: these shall stoneth, and gore them with theyr swordes. They shall slea theyr sonnes and daughters, & burn vp their houses with fyre. Thus will I destroye all suche fylthynges out of the lande, that all women may learne, not to doo after poure vnclennes. And so they shall laye your fylthynges upon your owne selues, & ye shall be punysshed for the synnes that ye haue committed with your ydolles, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lord.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The prouery the spying of Jerusalem by a parable of a seething pot. The parable of Ezechiel's wyfe beeyng dead whiche he after erpoundeth.

Ezec. xlii. a Ezech. xl. b
In the ninth yere, in the tenth moneth, the tenth day of the moneth, came the word of the Lord vnto me, saying: O thou sone of man write vnto the name of this day, yea, even the houre of this present daye, when the kynge of Babylon set hym self agaynst Jerusalem. Shewe that subbytill house: shoulde a parable, and speake vnto them. Thus saith the Lord God. Get the a pot, set it on, & poure water into it, put all the peces together in it, al the good peces, the loine & the shoulder, and fill it with the best dou: s. Take one of the best shepe, and an heape of bones with all, let it boyle wel, and let the bones seeth wel therein.

With that sayd the Lord God on this manner: Wo be vnto the bloudy cup of the pot, wherupon the ruyynes hangeth, and is not yet scourged awaye. Take out the peces that are in it, one after an other, there neede no fors be cast therfore, for the blood is yet in it. Upon a plaine dry stone hath he poured it, & not vpon the ground that it myght be couered with dust. And therfore haue I leet her poure her bloud vpon a plaine dry stony rocke, because it should not be hyd, & that I myght bringe my wrathful indignacion & vengeance vpon her. Wherefore thus saith the Lord god: Wo be vnto that bloud thirteyneye, for whom I will prepare a heape of woodde: heate thou the bones together, kindle thou the fyre, seeth the flesh, let all be well sodden, that the bones maye be sucked out.

Moreover let the porte emptye vpon the coales that it maye be warme, and the metall hote, that the fylche and ruyynes maye be consumed.

But it will not goo of, there is so much of it: the ruyne muste be brenne oute. Thy fylthynges is abhominable, for I woulde haue clenched the, but thou woldest not be clenched. Thou canst not be pouged from thyne vnclennesse, yea I haue poured my wrathful indignacion vpon the. Euen I the Lord haue so deuyled: Yea it is come vnto already that I will doo it. I will not go backe, I will not spare, I will not be increased: but accordyng to thynges & ymaginacions thou shalt be punished sayeth the Lord God.

And the woorde of the Lord came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, beholde: I will take awaye the pleasure of thine eyes with a plague: yet shalt thou neyther mourne nor wepe, ne water thy chekes therfore: thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone, but vse no deadly lamentacion. Holde on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes vpon thy feete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners breade. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the mourning, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the next morning I did as I was commaunded. And the people sayd vnto me: wilt thou not tel vs what that signified whiche thou dost?

I answered them, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lord God: behold I will suspende my Sanctuarye, euen the glorie of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: your sonnes and daughters whom ye haue left, shall fall thorow the sword. Like as I haue done, so shall ye do also: Ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eate no mourners breade: your bonnettes shall ye haue vpon your heades, & shoes vpon your feete.

Ye shall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in your fynes ye shall be sorrowfull, and one repent with an other. Thus Ezechiel is your shew token. For like as he hath done, so when this cometh ye shall doo also: that ye maye learne to knowe that I am the Lord God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take from them theyr power, theyr toy and honoure, the luste of theyr eyes, the burthen of theyr bodies: namely theyr sonnes and daughters. Then shall there one escape, and come vnto the: for to shewe the. In that daye shall thy mouth be opened to hym whiche is escaped, that thou mayest speake, and be no more dumme: Yea, and thou shalt be theyr shew token, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lord.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The woode of the Lord vpon the sonnes of Ammon, which reioyced at the fall of Jerusalem. Agaynst Moab and Beth. Agaynst Idumea, agaynst the Philistines.

The. xxv. Chapter.

Exe. xlii. d.
Jer. xlii. a

The word of the Lord came unto me, saying: thou sonne of mā, set thy face agaynst the Ammonites: prophesye upon thē, & say vnto the Ammonites, heare the wordes of the Lord God. Thus sayth the Lord God. For so muche as thou speakest ouer my Sanctuary, a ha, I trow it be now suspended: & ouer the lāde of Israel, I trowe it be now desolate, yea & ouer the house of Iuda, I trowe they be now ledde awaye prisoners. Beholde, I wyl deliuer the to the people of the East, that they may haue the in possession: these shal set theyr castels & houses in the. They shal eate the fruyte and dryncke by thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyl make of it a stal for camelles, and of Pimmon a shepe folde, & ye shal know that I am the Lord.

W: For thus sayeth the Lord God: In so much as thou hast clapped with thine handes & stamped with thy fete, yea reioysed in thine heart ouer the land of Israel with despyte, beholde, I wyl stretch out myne hand ouer the also, & deliuer the to the spoiler of the Heathē, & scoote the oute from among the people, & cause the to be destroyed out of all landes: yea I wyl make the be laped waste, that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lord.

Esa. xlv. xvi.
Esa. xlv. d.
Doph. ii. d.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: For so muche as Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house of Iuda, it is but like as all other Gentyles be, therefore beholde I will make & cyles of Moab weaponles. & I will take awaye them: strength their cities and chiefe coastes of their lande, which are the pleasures of the cōstrey: As namelie Bethesimoth, Baalmeon, and Cariathaim, these wyl I open vnto them of the East, that they may sal vpon the Ammonites, & I wyl geue it them in possession, so that the Ammonites shal no more be had in remembrance amonge the Heathen. Euen thus wyl I punishe Moab also, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lord.

Euen thus sayeth the Lord God, because that Edom hath auerged and esied hym self vpon the house of Iuda, therefore thus sayth the Lord, I will reach out mine hand vpon Edom, & take awaye man and beast out of it. I trowe I will make it desolate, they shal be laine with the sword. Therefore my people of Israel wyl I avenge me agayne vpon Edom: they shal handle him accordinge to my wrath & indignacion, so that they shal knowe my vengeance, sayth the Lord God.

D Thus sayeth the Lord God. For so muche as the Philistines haue done this, namelie taken vengeance with dyspreefull Romackes, and of an olde cūll wyl I set them selues to destroy. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God. Beholde, I wyl stretch out mine hande ouer the Philistines, and destroy the destroyer, & cause al the remnant of the sea coste to perishe. A great vengeance wyl I take vpon them, and punishe them cruelly, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lord, which haue auenged me of them.

The. xxvi. Chapter.

The prophete sheweth that Tyre shal be utterly shewen, because it reioysed at the destruction of Ierusalem. The wondering & astonishment of the marchauntes, for the desolation of Tyre.

It happened that in the. xi. yere the first day of the moneth, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying. Thou sonne of mā, because that Tyre hath spoken vpon Ierusalem. A ha, now I trow the portes of the people be broken, and she turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my helpe full.

Yea, therefore sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, O Tyre, I wyl bring a great multitude of people agaynst the, lyke as wher the sea is seth with his waues. These shal breake the walles of Tyre, and cast downe her towres: I wyl scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: yea as the dryng place where the fyshers hange vpon the nettes by the sea syde. Euen I haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God. The Gentyles shal spole her, her daughters vpon the selde shal perishe with the sword, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lord.

For thus sayeth the Lord God: behold, I wyl bringe byther Nabuchodonosor (which is the king of Babylon, and a king of kinges) with the host vpon Tyre, with horses, charrettes, horsemen, & with a great multitude of people. Thy daughters that are in the lāde, shal be sle with the sword: but agaynst the be shal make bulwokes, and graue by dyches aboute the, and I wyl by his sholde agaynst the. His kinges and battell rammes shal be prepare for thy walles & with his weapons breake downe thy towres. The dust of his horses shal couer the, they shal be so many: thy walles shal make at the noyse of the horsemen, charrettes, and wheles, when he cometh to thy portes, as men doo into an open cisteyne. With the hooves of his horse fete, shal he treade downe all thy strees.

He shal sle thy people with the sword, & breake downe the pylers of thy strength. They shal waste awaye thy riches, & spole thy marchaundys. Thy walles shal they breake downe, and destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy timbre and foundations, shal they cast in the water. Thus wyl I bringe the melodye of thy songes, and the voyce of thy minstrelsy to an end, so that they shal no more be heard. I wyl make a bare stone of it, yea a dryng place for nettes, & shal neuer be builded agayne. For euen I the Lord haue spoken it, sayth the Lord God. Thus hath the Lord God spoken concernynge Tyre: The fies shal be moued at the noyse of the fall, and at the crye of the flayne that shal be murdered in the. All kinges of the sea shal come downe downe frome their seates regall: they shall laye away robes, & put of their costlye clothyng: Yea with tremblyng shall they be clothed, they shall sette vpon the ground: they shall be asrayed at thy soden fall, and be abashed at the.

E They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto the: O thou noble cyte that hast bene so greatly occupied of oide, thou that hast bene the strongest vpon the sea with thine inhabitauntes, of whom al mē shode in feare: howe art thou now so vterly desctroyed. Howe at the tyme of thy fall the inhabitauntes of thy yles, yea and the ples them selues shall stande in feare at thyne ende. For thus sayth the Lord God: when I make the a desolate cyte (as other cytes be, that no mā dwelleth in) & when I byng the deepe vpon the, that great waters may couer the, Then wyll I call the downe vnto them that descende into the pyt: to a people that hath bene long dead, and set the in a lande that is benerb, lyke the olde wyldernes. With them I wyll go downe to these graues, so that no mā shall dwell moze in the. And I wyll make the to be no moze in honour in the land of the lyf upg. I wyll make an end of the, and thou shalt be gone. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou not be founde for euermoze, sayeth the Lord God.

The xxvii. Chapter.

The Prophet is moued to bewaile the desolation of Tyre, he setteth oute the prayse of Tyre for the hauntyng of marchauntes thereto.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaine vpon Tyre, and say vpon Tyre, which is a poore of the sea that occupieth with much people and many ples: Thus speaketh the Lord God. O Tyre, thou hast said: What? I am a noble cyte: Thy borders are in the myddest of the sea, and thy builders haue made the merueylous goodly, all thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of the mount of Sante. Fed Libanus haue they taken Cedre trees to make the mastes: & the okes of Basan to make the towers.

Thy borders haue they made of puerp, & costly wood out of yle of Serchim. Thy sayle was of white small nedle worke out of the lande of Egipte, to hange vpon thy mast: and thy hangynges of yelow silk puerple, oute of the ples of Elysad. They of Sidon and Arad were thy mariners, and the wplest in Tyre were thy shipmasters. The closest & wplest at Gedall were they that meubed and stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the sea wyth theyr shippmen occupied theyr marchaundes in thee. The Perces, Libians, & Libians, were in thine hoste, & helped the to fight: these hanged vpon theyr shieldes and helmettes wyth the, these set forth thy beaurie. They of Arad were wyth thyne hoste rounde about thy walles, and were thy watchmen vpon thy towres, these hanged vpon theyr shieldes rounde aboute thy walles, and made the maculous goodly. Tharhis occupied in the in all maner of wares, in spluct, yron, tinne, and lead, & made thy market great. Tavan, Tubal, & Mesech were thy marchauntes, which brought the men and ornaments of metall for occuppyng. They of the house of Togarma, brought vnto the at the tyme of thy marre, horse, horsemen and mules. They of Dedan were thy marchauntes: and manye other ples that occupied with the, brought the wetters, Elephant bones, & peccokes for a preser. The Sicians occupied with the, because of thy diuers workes, & increased thy marchaundys, with Smaragdes, wyth scarlet, wyth nedle worke, wyth wyte linnen cloth, with silke and wyth Christall.

Juda and the lande of Isreal occupied wyth the, and brought into thy markettes, wheate, balme, honp, oyle, & trespale. Damascus also vld marchaundys with the, in the best wine and white wolle: because thy occuppyng was so geate, and thy wares so manye. Dan, Tavan, and Mesecall, haue brought vnto thy markettes, yron readye made, wyth Cassia and Calamus, according to thyne occuppyng. Dedan occupied wyth the, in sayre tapestye worke & shophyngs. Arabia, & al the pyruces of Cedar haue occupied with the, in shepe, wetters & goates. The marchauntes of Seba & Kena, haue occupied also wyth thee, in costly spexes, in al precious stones, & gold, wyth they brought vnto thy markettes. Bazar, Chene, and Eden: the marchauntes of Saba, Afficia and Chelmad, were all doers wyth the, & occupied wyth the: in costly payment, of yelow silk and nedle worke (wyth precious, and therefore packe and bounde togyther wyth ropes.) Yea and in Cedre woode, at the tyme of thy markettes. The shippes of Tharhis were the chiefe of thy occuppyng.

Thus thou art full, and in worshyppe even in the myddest of the sea. Thus marchauntes were euery daye vnto the oute of many waters. But the East wynde shall ouerbeat the into the myddest of the sea: so that thy wares, thy marchaundys, thy ryches, thy mariners, thy shipmasters, thy helpers, thy occupiers (that brought the thynges necessary) the men of warre that are in the: yea and all thy commens shall perishe in the myddest of the sea, in the day of thy fall. The suburbs that shake at the loude crye of thy shippmen. Al wherry men, & al mariners vpon the sea, shall leape out of theyr bores, and set them selues vpon the lande. They shall lyfte vp il crye voyce because of the, and make a lamentable cry. They shall cast dust vpon theyr heades, and lye downe in the ashes. They shall haue them selues, & put sacke cloth vpon them for thy sake.

all people ynowgh. The kynges of the earth haue thou made ryche, thowowe the muletrude of thy wares and occuppyng.

But thou art now cast downe into the depe sea, all thy resorte of people is per-shed wyth thee. All they that dwell in the moued to bewaile the kyng of Tyre. The woorde of the Lorde agaynst Tydon. The Lorde promyseth to gather together the chyldeyn of Israell.

Ezech. xxi.
In the word of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tell the prynces of Tyre. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: because thou hast a proude heart, & hast sayd: I am a God, I haue my seate in hyng, thou hast gotten the great wealthe:

nestle and gathered treasure of syluer, and golde: Wyth thy great wysedome and occuppyng hast thou increased thy power, and because of thy great ryches, thy heart is proude. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so much as thou hast lyst vp thyne heart, as though thou were God, behold, I wyll bring enemyes vpon the, such the tyrantes of the Heathen: these shall draw out their swerdes vpon thy beauty and wysdome, and shall despoyle thy glory.
They shall cast the downe to the pyre, so that thou shalt dye in the myddell of the sea as they that be slayne. Lettise, if thou wylt saye then (before them that slaye the) I am God: wher as thou art but a man and not God, in the handes of them that slay the, Dye shalt thou, such as the

I haue set the vpon the holy mounte of God: ther hast thou bene, & walked among the sayre glysteryng stones. From the tyme of thy creation thou hast bene ryche excellent, tyll wyckednesse was founde in thee. Because of thy marchaundise, thy heart is full of wyckednesse, and thou hast offended. Therefore wil I cast the from the mount of God (where thou couering Cherub) and destroye the amonge the glysteryng

Ezech. xl.

Thou hast despoiled thy Sanctuary, & and they shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to my seruante Jacob. They shall dwell safely therein, buylde houses and plante vineyardes: yea safely shall they dwell therein, when I haue punysshed all those that despoyle them rounde aboute, and then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde theyr God.

The xxix. Chapter.

The prophecie agaynst Tydon. The pro-phete sheweth the desolation of Egypt, & the spars-

In the tenth yeare, upon the twelfth day of the tenth month, the word of the Lord came unto me saying: Thou sonne of man, set now thy face against Pharaos the king of Egypt, prophesie against him, & against the whole lande of Egypt: Speake and tell him, thus saith the Lord God: beholde, O Pharaos thou king of Egypt, I wil vpon the, thou greate (a) dragon that liest in the waters: thou that sayest: the water is myne, I haue made it my selfe. I wil put an hook in thy chawes, and hange all the fysh in thy waters vpon thy scales: after that I wil drawe the oute of thy waters: Yea and all the fysh of thy waters that hange vpon thy scales. I wil caste the oute vpon the drye lande wth the fysh of thy waters, so that thou shalt lye vpon the felde. Thou shalt not be gathered nor taken vp, but shalt be meate for the beastes of the felde, and for the foules of the ayre: that all they whiche dwel in Egypt, may knowe, that I am the Lord: because thou hast bene a staffe of reede to the house of Israel. When they took hold of the wryth theyr handes thou brakest and prickedst them on euery syde: & if they leaned vpon the, thou brakest & buttest the reynes of theyr backes. Therefore, thus saith the Lord God: beholde I wil bringe a swerde vpon the, and roote out of the both man and beast. Yea the lande of Egypt shall be desolate and waste, & they shall knowe that I am the Lord: Because he sayd: that water is myne, I my selfe haue made it: Beholde therefore, I wil vpon the, and vpon thy waters: I will make the lande of Egypt waste & desolate, fro the towne of Syenes, vnto the borders of the Morians lande, so that in xl. yeres there shall no foote of man make there, neyther foote of cattell goe there, neyther shall it be inhabited. The xxx. Chapter.

The destruction of Egypt and of hye eyres is dewypled.

The woorde of the Lord came mozeouer vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, prophesie & speake: thus saith the Lord God: Mourne, woe wotbe thys day, for the day is here, the day of the Lord is come: the darke day of the Deathe, the houre is at hande, the swerde cometh vpon Egypt. When the wounded men fall downe in Egypt, when her people are taken away, and when her foundations are destroyed, the Morians lande shall be as feared yea the Morians lande, Libia and Idia, al their common people, and Chub, al that be confederate vnto them, shall fall wth them thorow the swerde.

Thus saith the Lord: the marynerys of the lande of Egypt shall fall, the pride of her power shall come downe, & uen vnto the towne of Syenes shall they be lye downe wth the swerde, saith the Lord God: amonge other desolate countreys they shall be made desolate, and among other waste citres they shall be wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lord, when I kinde a fire in Egypt, & when al her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme, shall their messengers goo forth from me, in ships, to make the carelesse Morians asfayed, & sorow shall come vpon them in the daye of Egypt, for doubtlesse it shall come.

Thus saith the Lord God: I will make an ende of the people of Egypt that to the hand of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon. He and his people shall be wth him, yea and the cruel tyrantes of the Hea-even shall be brought to destroy the lande. They shall draw out theyr swerdes vpon Egypt, and fill the lande full of slayne men, I will drye vpon theyr founteynes of water, and sell the lande into the handes of wycked people. The lande and all that is therein, will I destroye thowme the enemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue sayd it.

B And thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will destroye the Idolles, & bringe the Images of Asoph to an end. There shall no more be a prince of Egypt, and a fearfullnesse will I sende into the Egyptians lande. As for Isathures, I will make it desolate, and kindle a fire in soan, Alexandria will I punyssh, and poure my wrathful indignation vpon Sin, which is the strenght of Egypt. Al the substaunce of Alexandria will I destroye, and kindle a fire in Egypt.

E Sin shall be in great heauynesse, Alexandria shall be rooted oute, and Asoph shall haue dayly sorowe. The best men of Heliopolis and Bubaste shall be slaine with the sword, & carryed away captiue. At Raphis the day shall be darke, when I breake there the scepter of the lande of Egypt, & whiche the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, & her boughes shall be ledde awaye into captiuitie. Thus will I punyssh Egypt, that they may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

F It happened in the .xj. yere, vpon the seuenth daye of the first moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, saying: Beholde thou sonne of man, I will breake the arme of pharaos kyng of Egypt: and loe it shall not be bounde vpon to be healed, neyther shall any playster be layde vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so strong, as to holde a swerde. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I will vpon pharaos the kyng of Egypt, & brose his stronge arme (yet is it but a broken one) and will smyte the swerde out of his hande.

As for the Egyptians, I will scatter the among the Heathen, and drawe the in the landes about. Agayne I will strengthe the arme of the kyng of Babilon, and geue him my swerde in his hand: but I will breake pharaos arme, so that he shall holde it as loze hym pitcouly like a wounded man.

B Yea I will stablyshe the kyng of Babilons arme: and the armes of pharaos shall fall downe, that it may be knowen that I am the Lorde, whiche geue the kyng of Babilon my swerde in his hand, that he may drawe it out vpon the land of Egypt: & that when I scatter the Egyptians among the Gentyles, and drawe the in the landes about, they may know, that I am the Lorde.

me, saying: Thou sonne of man, speake vnto pharaos kyng of Egypt, and to al his people: Whom art thou like in thy greatnesse? Beholde Asur was lyke a Cedre tree vpon the mount of Libanus. He saye by his branches: so thicke, that he gaue shadowes and shot out very hygh. His top reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made him great, and the depe set hym vpon an hygh. Rounde about the cotes of him ran there founteynes of water, he sent out his lyke cyuers vnto al the trees of the fildes. Therefore was he hygher then all the trees of the fildes, and thowme the multitude of waters that he sent from hym, he obtained many longe branches. All foules of the ayre made theyr nestes in his branches, vnder his boughes gedred al the beastes of the fildes, and vnder his shadowe dwelt all people. Fayre and beautiful was he in his greatnesse, and in the length of his branches, for his roote stode by the greace waters, no Cedre tree myght hyde hym.

E In the pleasaunt garden of God, there was no fayre tree lyke his branches, the playne trees were not lyke the boughes of hym. Al the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in his beaultie, so fayre and goodly had I made him with the multitude of his branches: In so muche that all the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God, had enuy at hym.

B Therefore thus sayeth the lord God: for so muche as he hath lyft vpon hym selfe so hygh, and stretched vpon toppe into the cloudes, and sayng vpon heart is proude in his hyghnesse: I will deliuer hym into the handes of the myghtyest amonges the Heathen, whiche shall roote hym out. According to his wyckednesse, will I caste hym away, the enemyes shall destroye hym, and the myghty men of the Heathen shall scatter hym, that his branches shall lyfe vpon al mountaynes and in al valleyes, his boughes shall be broken downe to the grounde thowme oute the lande. Then all the people of the lande shall goo from vnder his shadowe and forsake hym.

E When he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall lyfe vpon hym, & al wyld beastes of the fildes shall goo aboute amongs his branches: so that fro hence forth, no tree in the water shall attayne to his hyghnesse, nor deache his toppe vnto the cloudes, neyther shall any tree of the water stande so hygh, as he hath bene. For vnto heath shall they all be deliuered vnder the earth, and goo downe to the graue, lyke other men.

F Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue, I will cause a lamentacion to be made, I will couer the depe vpon hym, I will claunche his founteynes, and the greace waters shall be restrayned. I shall cause Libanus to be sorowfull for his sake, and all the trees of the fildes shall be smitten.

that are planted upon the waters; shall mourne with hym also in the lower habitations: for they shall go downe to hel with hym, vnto them that be slayne with the sword which dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the Heathen.
To whom shalt thou be likened, that art so glorious and greete, amonge the trees of Eden: yet art thou cast downe vnder the earth (amonges the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amongest the vncircumcised, with them that be slayne with the sword.
Euen thus is it with Pharao and all his people, saith the Lord God.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

1 He setteth out the office of a preacher. He strengthneth them that despayre, and holdeneth them wth the promise of mercy. As for the former ryghteousnesse helpeth not the ryghteous, if he gyue him self againe to sinne: so the sinnes done before are not imputed to the wicked that amendeth. The woordes of the Lord agaynst the rest of the people. Agaynst the mothers of the woordes of the Prophete.

2 A Sayne the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man. Speake to the chyldren of thy people, and releeue them: When I sende a sword vpon a lande if the people of the land take a man of thep^r countrey, and set hym to be thep^r watchman: the same man (when he seeth the sword come vpon the lande) shall blowe the trompet, and warne the people. If a man nowe heare the noyse of the trompet and wyl not be warned, and the swerde come and take hym awaye, his blood shall be vpon his owne head: for he herde the sounde of the trompet, & woulde not take hede, therefore his blood be vpon him. But if he wil receyue warnynge, he shall saue his lyfe. Agayne, if the watchman see the swerde come, & shewe it not wth the trompet, so p^r the people is not warned: if the swerde come the, and take any man from amonges the, the same shall be taken awaye in his owne synne, but his bloude wyl I requyre at the watchmans hande.

13 And now (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: that wher as thou hearest any thyng oute of my mouth, thou mayest warne them on my behalte. If I say vnto the wicked thou wicked, thou shalt surely dye, and thou gyuest hym not warnynge, that he may beware of the vngodly waye: when shall the wicked dye in his owne synne, but his bloude wyl I requyre of thy hande. Nevertheless if thou warne the wicked of his way, to turne from it, wher as yet he wyl not be turned from it, then shall he dye because of his synne, but thou hast deliuered thy soule.

Therefore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Yea saye thus: Oure offences and synnes lye vpon vs, & we be corrupte in them. Howe shoulde we then be restored vnto lyfe? Tell them: As trulye as I lye sayeth the Lord God, I haue no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but muche rather that the wicked turne from his waye and lye. Turne you, turne you from your vngodly wayes, O ye house of Israel. Ob, wherfore wyl ye dye. Thou sonne of man, tell the chyldren of thy people: The ryghteousnesse of the ryghteous shall not saue hym, when so euer he turneth awaye vnsaydfully: Agayne, the wickednesse of the wicked shall not hurte him, when so euer he conuerteth from his vngodlynes.

And the ryghteousnesse of the ryghteous shall not saue his lyfe, when so euer he synneth. If I saye vnto the ryghteous, that he shall surely lye, and so he trust to his owne ryghteousnesse, & doo synne: then shall his ryghteousnesse be no more thought vpon, but in the wickednes that he hath done, he shall dye.

Agayne if I say vnto the wicked: Thou shalt surely dye, and so he turne from his synnes, and doo the thyng that is lawfull and ryght: In so much that the same wicked man geueth the pledge agayne, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walketh in the commandementes of life, and doth no wronge: Then shall he surely lye, and not dye. Yea the synne that he hath done shall neuer be thought vpon.

For in so much as he doth now the thyng that is lawfull and ryght, he shall lye. And yet the chyldren of thy people saye: Thus, the waye of the Lord is not right, wher as thei^r owne waye is rather vngodly. When the righteous turneth from his ryghteousnesse, & doth the thyng that is wicked, he shall dye therefore. But if the wicked turneth from his wickednes, doing p^r the thyng that is lawfull & right, he shall lye therefore. Yet ye saye: the way of the Lord is not equall, O ye house of Israel, I wyl iudge euery one of you after his wayes.

In the twelues peare the .v. day of the .x. moneth of oure captiuitie, it happened, that one whiche was fled out of Ierusalem, came vnto me, and sayed: the cytie is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lord had bene vpon me the euening afore this man (whiche was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntil the morning that he came to me: yea, he opened my mouth, so that I was no more daffe. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me, and sayed:

sayd: Thou sonne of man, these that dwell in the wasted lande of Israel, say. Abrahā was but one man, and he had the lande in possession, now are we manye, and the lande is geuen vs to possesse also.

And therfore tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde: In the blout haue ye eaten, poute eyes ye haue lyft vp to Idols, & haue shed blood: what ye the haue y^e lande in possession?

Ye leane vpon your swearthes, ye worke abominacions, euerye ont despylchys neyghboutes wyle: and shall ye then possesse y^e lande? Say thou these wordes vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * As truly as I lyue, I lyue all ye that dwell in this wilderness, shall be slayne with the sword: what so euer is vpon the fildes, wil I geue vnto the beastes to bee deuoured: those that be in strong holdes and denues, shall dye of the pestilence. For I wyl make the lande so desolate and waste, & the pompe of her strength shall come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shall be so waste that no man shall trauaile theryn.

Then shall they leaue to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I make the lande waste and desolate, because of all theyr abominacions that they haue wroughte. And thou sonne of manne, the chyldren of thy people that talke of the, by the walles and in the doores of theyr houses, sayinge one to an other: Come let vs heare, what worde is gone forth from the Lorde: These come vnto the after the maner of a greete people: yea my people syt down before the and heare thy wordes, but they doo not heere after: for in theiromouthes they shew them selues, as though they were feruent, but thei^r deete goeth after thei^r owne concuctous lurre. And as a bassett that hath a sweete tune, and is pleasaunte to syng, so shall thou be vnto them: thy wordes shall they heare, but they wyl not do there after. When this cometh to passe (for loe, it cometh in dede) then shall they knowe that there hath ben a prophet among the.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

¶ I haue not Bishops and Curates that despoyle the flocke of Christ, and seke theyr owne. The Lorde sayeth that he wyl vylet his dysperpled flocke, and gather them together. He reponeth the malice of certayne of the flocke. He promyseth the true shepherde be Christ, and with hym pence.

¶ And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophesye agaynst the shepherdes of Israel, prophesye & speake vnto them. Thus sayeth the lord God. We be vnto the shepherdes of Israel that fede the selues. Shuld not y^e shepherdes fede the flockes? Ye haue eaten of the fatte, ye haue clothed you with the wolle: the best fed haue ye slayne, but the flocke haue ye not nourished. The weake haue ye not holden vp, the sycke haue ye not healed, the broken haue ye not bounde togyther, the outecastes haue ye not broughte agayne, the lost haue ye not sought, but chauply, & cruelly haue ye ruled them. Thus are they scattered here & there without a shepheard, yea all the beastes of the fildes deuoure them, and they go astray.

¶ Now shepe goo wandyringe vpon all mountaynes, and vpon euerye hye hill. Yea they be scattered abroad in all fildes, and there is no man that careth for them, or seeketh after them. Therfore O ye shepherdes, heare the worde of the Lorde: Thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue, for as muche as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wyld beastes of the fildes, haunge no shepheardes: And seepinge there my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues onely and not my shepe, Therefore heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye shepherdes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. Behold, I my self wyl vpon the shepherdes, and requyre my shepe from their handes, and make them cease from sedyringe of my shepe: yea the shepherdes shall fede them selues no more. For I wyl helpe my shepe out of theyr mouthes, so that they shal not deuoure them after this. For thus sayeth the Lorde God. Behold, I wyl looke to my shepe my selfe, and seke them. Lyke as a shepheard amonges the flocke, seeketh after the shepe that are scattered abroad, euen so wyl I seke after my shepe, and gather them togyther out of all places, where they haue bene scattered in the clowde & darke daye. I wyl byng them oute from all people, and gather them togyther out of all landes. I wyl byng them into thei^r owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel by the spurs, and in all the places of the countrey. I wyl fede them in ryght good pastures, and vpon the hye mountaynes of Israel shall thei^r foldes be. There shall they lye in a good felde, and in a fatte pasture shall they fede: euen vpon the mountaynes of Israel. I wyl fede my shepe my selfe, and byng them to thei^r rest, sayeth the Lorde God. Suche as be lost, wyl I seke, suche as goo astray, wyl I byng agayne, suche as be wounded, wyl I bynde vp, suche as be weake, wyl I make stronge, suche as be fat and wel lykynge, those wyl I preferre, and fede them with the thyng that is lawfull. And as for you, O my shepe, sayeth the Lorde God: I wil put a difference amonge the shepe, amonges the wythers and the goates. Was it not ynoughe for you to eate of y^e good pasture, but ye must treade downe the residue of your pasture with your fete also? Was it not ynoughe for you to drynke cleere water, but ye must trouble y^e residue of your pasture also with your fete. Thus my shepe must be sayne to eate the thyng that ye haue troden downe with your fete, and to drynke it, that ye with your fete haue despyled. Therefore, thus saith the Lord God unto them. Beholde, I will sever the fat shepe from the leane, for so muche as ye haue shotte the weake shepe wth the spydes and shoulers, and run upon them wth your hooves so longe tyll ye haue utterly scattered them abroad. I will helpe my shepe, so that they shall no more be spoyled: yea I will discern one shepe from an other, I will raise up vnto them one only shepewherde: and my seruant (a) David, he shall feed them, & he shall be their shepewherd. I & the Lord will be their God, and my seruant David shall be their prince: And I the Lord haue spoken it.

Moreover, I will make a covenante of peace wth them, and byue all euill beasts out of the lande, so that they may dwell safely in the wyldernes, & slepe in the woodes. Good fortune and prosperitee shall I giue the, & vnto al that be rounde aboute my hyll. A prosperous shewe and rayne shall I sende them in due season, that the trees in the woode maye bynge forth their frutes, and the ground bet increase. They shall be safe in their lande, and shall knowe that I am the Lord, whiche haue broken their yoke, & deliuered them out of the handes of those þe helde the in subiectiō.

They shall no more be spoyled of the Heathen, nor deuoured wth the beasts of the lande, but safelye shall they dwell, and no man shall feare them. I will set up an excellent plant for them, so that they shall suffer no more hunger in the land, neyther beare the reproche of the Heathen any more. Thus shall they vnderstande that I the Lord the Lord am wth them, and that they (eue the house of Israel) are my people, saith the Lord God: Ye men are my flocke, ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am your God, saith the Lord God.

The xxxv. Chapter.

The destruction that shall come on the hyll Seir that is on the Ioumeans, because they troubled the people of the Lord.

Moreover, the woorde of the Lord came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward the mount Seir, & prophesy vpon it, & saye vnto it: Thus saith the Lord God. Beholde, I will vpon thee. I will reache oute myne hande ouer thee, & thou shalt be waste and desolate wth I make thee. I will clype wth I breake downe, & thou shalt lye vnder, that thou mayest knowe howe that I am the Lord. For so muche as thou bearest an olde enmitye agaynst the children of Israel, and wth a cruell hande hast made them as a prey, what tyme as they were troubled and punished for their synne. Therefore as truly as I lye, saith the Lord God, I will prepare the way to bloud, yea bloud shall folowe vpon thee: seying thou hast made waye for bloud, therefore shall bloud persecute thee. Thus wil I make the mount Seir desolate and waste, and byng to passe that there shall no man goe thither, ne come from thence. His mountaynes wil I fyl wth bys bayne men: thy hylls, dales, and vales, shall lye full of them that are bayne wth the swerde. I wil make thee a perpetual wyldernes, so that no man shall dwell in the cities: that ye may knowe howe that I am the Lord.

And because thou hast sayed: what, both these nations, and both these landes muste be myne, and I will haue them in possession, where as the Lord was there. Therefore, thus saith the Lord God: As truly as I lye, I will handle thee according to thy wrath & gelousy, lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly wth them: that I may be knowne among them, howe I haue punished thee. Yea, and that thou mayest be sure that I the Lord haue herde all thy dispitful wordes whiche thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israel, saying: Doe, they are made waste, and giuen vs to deuoure. Thus wth your mouthes ye haue made your booke agaynst me, yea and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, whiche I haue herde altogether. Whereunto thus saith the Lord God: When the hole worlde is in wealch, then wil I make thee waste. And lyke as thou (O mount Seir) wast glad, because the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wil I do vnto thee also, that thou, and hole Idom shall be destroyed, and knowe that I am the Lord.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

The promise of deliuerance from the Gentyles vnto Israel. The benedictions done vnto the Jewes are to be ascribed to the mercy of God, not vnto their deservynges. God reneweth our hearts þe we may walke in his commandmentes.

Thou sonne of man, prophesy vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and speake. Heare the woorde of the Lord, O ye mountaynes of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God: Because your enemy hath sayd vpon you. A ha, the hye everlasting places are now become outes. I prophesy therefore and speake, thus saith the Lord God. Seynge ye be wasted and troden downe on euery syde, and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gentyles, whiche haue broughte you into mennes mouthes, and vnto an ennyll name amonges the people. Therefore heare the woorde of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus saith the Lord God vnto þe mountaynes and hylls, vales & dales, to the wyldernes, and desolate cities, whiche are spoyled and had in derision on euery syde, amonge the residue of the Heathen: Yea, euen thus saith the Lord God: In the sye of my gelousye haue I taken a deuyt, agaynste the residue of the Gentyles, and agaynste all Edom: whiche haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possession, whiche also reioysed from their hole herte wth a despitfull stomacke to waste it and to spoyle it.

Eze. xxxv D I prophesie therfore vpon the land of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes and hilles, to valleys & dales, thus saith the Lord God: Beholde, this haue I deuised in my gelousye and terrible wrath. For so much as ye haue suffered & professed of the Heathen: therfore thus saith the Lord God: I haue sworn that the Gentyles whiche lye aboute you, shall beat your confusion them selues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shoute out your brauities, and bringe forth your fruit to my people of Israel, for it is hard by that wyl come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyl I turne me, that ye maye be tyld and solent.

E I wyl sende you muche people, whiche shall be al of the house of Israel: the cyties shall be inhabited, and the decayed places shall be repayed agayne. I wyl multiplye you wth muche people and catel, whiche shall encrease and bringe forth fruit. I wyl restore you also to your olde estate, and I wyl make you more kyndnesse then euer ye hadde before, wherby ye shall knowe that I am the Lord. Yea people wyl I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israel) whiche shall haue the in possession, and thou shalt be their inheritance, so that thou shalt no more be without the. Agayne thus saith the Lord God: for so muche as they saue vnto you: thou art an eater vp of men, and a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eat no more men, neyther destroy the people any more, saith the Lord God. And I wyl not suffer the for to beate thyne owne confusion among the Gentyles from hence forth. Thou shalt not beate the reproche of the nations, nor caste out thyne owne people any more, saith the Lord God.

D Moreover, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: O thou soune of man, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon their owne grounde, they despyled them selues wth their owne wayes and ymaginacions, so that in my sight they were was lyke the uncleannesse of a menstruous woman. Wherfore I poured my wrathful displeasure vpon them, because of the blood that they had shed in the lande, and because of their ydolles, wherewith they had despyled them selues. I scattered them also amonge the Heathen, so that they were strewed aboute in the landes. Accordyng to their wayes, & after their owne inuencions, so dyd I punyssh them.

E Nowe when they were gone vnto the Heathen, and come in amongest them, they (a) dishonoured my holre name: so that it was sayed of them: Are these the people of God, and must goo oute of them?

owne land? Then spared I my holre name whiche the house of Israel had dishonoured amonge the Gentyles, to whom they came. Therfore tell the house of Israel: Thus saith the Lord God: I doo not this for your sakes (O ye house of Israel) but for my holre names sake, which ye dishonoured amonge the Heathen, wher ye came to them. Therfore I wil haile my great name agayne, which amonge the Gentyles is full spoken of: for ye your selues haue dishonoured it amonge the. And the Gentyles shall knowe that I am the Lord, wher I am honoured in you before their eyes, saith the Lord God. As for you I wil take you from amonge the Heathen, and gather you together out of all countreys, & bring you agayne into your owne lande. Then will I poure cleare water vpon you, and ye shall be cleane: yea I will cleanse all your uncleannesse, and from al your ydols shall I cleanse you. A newe herte also wyl I geue you, and a newe spirit wyl I put into you: as for that stoupe herte, I wyl take it oute of your body, and geue you a fleshy herte. I wyl geue my spirit amonge you, and cause you to walke in my commaundementes, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfill them.

F And so ye shall dwell in the lande: that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I wyl be your God. I wil helpe you oute of all your uncleannesse. I wyl call for the corne, and wyl encrease it, and wyl let you haue no hunger. I will multiplye the fruites of the trees, and the encrease of the field for you, so that ye shall beate no more reproche of hunger amonge the Heathen. And shall ye remember your owne wycked wayes, and your imaginacions, which were not good: so that ye shall take displeasure at your owne selues by reason of your synnes & abominacions.

S But I wyl not doo this for your sakes (saith the Lord God) be ye sure of it. Therfore, O ye house of Israel be ashamed of your synnes. Moreover, thus saith the Lord God: what tyme as I shall cleanse you from all your offences, then wyl I make the cyties to be occupied agayne, & wyl repaye the places that be decayed. The desolate land shall be builded agayne, whiche afore tyme laye waste in the sight of al them, that went by: Then shall it be sayed: this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the wyche desolate and broken downe cyties are now strong and fenced agayne. When the residue of the Heathen that lye rounde about you, shall knowe that I am the Lord whiche repaye that was broken downe, and plant agayne that was made waste. Then I the Lord haue spokē it, and will doo it in dede. Thus saith the Lord God: I wil yet ones, be founde agayne of the house of Israel, and doo this for them: I shall encrease them as a flocke of men. Lyke as the holre flocke, & the flocke of Jerusalem are in the high so-

The bande of the Lorde came vpon me, and caried me out in the spirit of the Lorde, and let me downe to a playne felde, that lay full of bones, and he led me round about by them: & beholde the bones that lay vpon the felde were very many, and merueylous dyre also. Then sayed he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, shukelst thou these bones may lyue agayne? I answered: O Lorde God, thou knowest. And he sayd vnto me: Prophecie thou vpon these bones, & speake vnto them: Ye dyre bones, heare the woorde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Be-wyndes, and blowe vpon these flaine, that they may be restored to lyfe. So I prophesied, as he had commaunded me: then came the bryth into them, and they receiued lyfe and stode vp vpon theyr feete, a marueylous greate sort.

Moreouer, he sayed vnto me. Thou sonne of man, these bones are the hole house of Israel. Beholde, they say: Our bones are dried vp, our hope is gone, we are cleane cut of. Therefore prophecie thou, & speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde I wyl open your graues (O my people) & take you out of your sepulchres, and byng you into the land of Israel a-gayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I open your graues, & byng you out of them. My spirit also wyl I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I wyl set you a-gayne in your owne lande, & ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whyche haue sayed, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayng: Thou sonne of man, take a sticke & wryte vpon it: Vnto Juda and to the chyldren of Israel his companions. Then take an other sticke, and wryte vpon it: Vnto Joseph the sticke of Ephraim, and to all the householde of Israel his companions.
And the take both these together in thyne bande, so shall there be one sticke thereof.
Nowe if the chyldren of thy people say vnto the: Wylt thou now shew vs what thou meaneest by these thyngs geue them this an-swere: thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde I wyl take the sticke of Joseph, whyche is in the lande of Ephraim, and of the trybes of Israel his selowes, and wyl put them to the sticke of Juda, and make the in one stick, & they shall be one in my bande. And the two stikes wherupon thou wrytest shalte thou haue in thyne bande, that they may see, and shalt saye vnto them.

Exe. i. d

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyl take away the chyldren of Israel frō among the heathen, vnto whome they be gone, and wyl gather them together ouer euery syde, and bynge them agayne into their owne land, yea I wyl make one people of the in the land, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they all shall haue but one kynge. They shall no more be two peoples from henceforth, neyther be deuyded into two kyngdomes: they shall also desyle the selues no more wryth their abhominacions, ydoles, and all their myched dorynges. I wyl helpe them out of all their dwellynge places wher in they haue sinned, and wyl so cleanse the, that they shall be my people, and I their God.

Dauid my seruant shall be their kynge and they all shall haue one shepherde one: Ipe. They shall walke in my lawes, and my commandementes shall they obserue kepe and fulfyll. They shall dwell in the lande that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruant wher as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yea euē in the same lande shall they, their chyldren, and their chylders chyldren dwell for euer:
more: and my seruant Dauid shall be their Moreouer I wyl make a bonde of peace wryth them, which shall be vnto them an euerlastyng couenaunte. I wyl settle them also, and multiply the, my Sanctuarie wyl I set amonge them for euer: more. My dwellynge shall be wryth them: yea I wyl be their God, and they shall be my people. Thus the heathen also shall knowe that I the Lorde am the holy maker of Israel: when my sanctuarie shall be

Prophetes, The destruction of hym.

And

And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward Babel in the land of Magog, which is chief prince at Mesech and Tubal. Prophecy agaynst hym, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lord God, O Babel thou chiefe prince of Mesech and Tubal, Behold, I will vpon the, and will tourne the about, and put a byt in thy charmes, I will bring the forth and all thyne host, both horse and horse men, which be all weaponed of the best sacron, a greate people, that handle altogether speares, sheldes, and sheathes, the perses, Assyrians, and with them the Lybyans, which all beare sheldes and helmers, Bomer and al his hostes, the house of Abogorma out of the North quarters, and al his hostes, yea and much people with the.

Eze. xxxix.

Apoc. xxi. c.

Therefore prepare thee, set thy selfe in a raze with al thy people that are come vnto the by beapes, and be thou their desce. After many dayes thou shalt be vpspyed, and in the latter peaces thou shalt come into the lād that hath bene destroyed with the swerde, and nowe is replenished agayne with diuerse people vpon the most capnes of Israel, which haue longe lpen waste. Yea, they be brought out of the nations, and dwell al safe.

Thou shalt come vp lyke a raimy weather to couer the land, & as it were a darke cloude, thou with al thyne hostes, and a great multitude of people with the.

Moreover, thus saith the Lord God: At the same tyme shal many thynges come in to thy mynde, so that thou shalt imagine myschance, and saye: I will vp to ponder ylarne land, seying they spt at ease, & dwell so safely (for they dwell all withoute anye wals, they haue neyther bars nor doores) to spoyle them, to rob them, to laye hande vpon they; so well inhabited wylbernes; agaynst that people that is gathered together from among the heathen, which haue gotten cattell and good, and dwell in the myddell of the land. Then shal Saba and Dedan, and the Marchauntes of Arabia with al they; worthies say vnto the: Art thou come to rob? Hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spoyle? To take siluer and gold, to carry away cattell and good, and to haue a great praye?

Therefore, O thou son of man, thou shalt prophecy, and saye thus vnto Babel: Thus sayth the Lord God: In that day thou shalt knowe that my people of Israel dwelleth safe, and shalt come from thy place out of the North partes: thou, and much people with the, which ride vpon horses, wherof ther is a great multitude, and an innumerable sort. Yea, thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the land. Thys shal come to passe in the latter dayes, I will bring the vp into my lād, that the Heathen maye knowe me, when I gette me honour vpon the, O Babel, before they eyes.

Eze. xl. a.

Thus saith the Lord God: Thou art he of whome I haue spoken afore tyme, by my seruantes the Prophetes of Israel, which propheted in those dayes and peaces, that I would bring the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Babel cometh vp in to the land of Israel (saith the Lord God) shall my indignacion goe foorth in my wrath. For in my gelousye and hore displeasure I haue deured, that ther shalbe a greate trouble in the land of Israel at that tyme. The very fyshes in the sea, the soules of the ayre, the beastes of the feldes, and all the men that are vpon the earth, shal tremble for feare of me.

Mat. xxiii. Luke. xxi. c.

The hills also shalbe turned byside down, the stapies of stone shal fall, and al walles shal synke to the ground. I will call for a swerde vpon them in all my mountaynes, sayth the Lord God, so that euerye mans swerd shalbe vpon an other. With pestilence and bloude will I punysh them: for my rapne and havyle stones, fyre, and brim stone will I cause to rapne vpon hym, and all his heape: yea and vpon all the greate people that is with hym. Thus will I be magnified, honored, and knowne amongs the Heathen: that they maye be sure howe that I am the Lord.

The. xxxix. Chapter.

The metheth the destruction of Babel and Magog. The grace of Babel and of his hostes. The propheth that Babel and his company shalbe deuoured of bydes and beastes. Wherfore the house of Israel is wasted. The byngenge agayne from captiuitie is promysed.

Therefore, O thou sonne of man, prophecy agaynst Babel, & speake. Thus sayth the Lord God: Behold, O Babel thou chiefe prince at Mesech and Tubal: I will vpon the, and turne the about, and carry the forth, and lead the to the North partes, & bring the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe I will smyte it out of thy left hande, and cast thyne arrowes out of thy right hand. Thou with al thine heape and al the people that is with the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then will I geue the vnto the soules and wylde beastes of the fælde, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the feldes: for euen I the Lord haue spoken it, sayth the Lord God.

Into Magog, and amonge those that spt so cattles in the fies: wil I send a fyre, & they shal knowe that I am the Lord. I will make also the name of my holynes to be knowne amongs my people of Israel: and I will not let my holy name to be enuy spoken of any more: but the very heathen also shal knowe that I am the Lord, the holy one of Israel. Beholde it cometh and shalbe fulfilled in dede saith the Lord God. Thys is the day wherof I haue spoken: They that dwell in the cetyes of Israel

Of the latter dayes, & what they signifye, ye haue in.

rael, shall go forth and set fire upon the weapons, and burne them: Mylles and speares, bowes and arrows, byls & clubs: seven yeares shall they be burning thereof, so that they shall els bring no riches from the field, neither haue neede to hew downe any out of the wood: For they shall haue weapons ynough to burne. They shall rob those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoiled them, sayth the Lord God.

At the same tyme wil I giue vnto Gog a place to be buryed in, in Israel: euen the valey, wher thow men go from the East to the seaward. Those that trouble themselves shall aduoyce it: Ther shall Gog and all his people be buryed: and it shall be called the valley of the people of Gog. Seauen monethes long shall the house of Israel be burning of them, that they may cleanse the land. Yea al the people of the land shall bury them. It shall be a glorious day, when I get me that honour, sayth the Lord god. They shall ordeine men also to be dead buryers, euer going thow the land, and appoint them certayne places to bury those in whych remayne vpon the field, that the land be cleansed. From ende to ende shall they seeke, and that seuen monethes long. Now those that go thow the land wher they see a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, tyl the dead buryers haue buryed it also, in the valey of the people of Gog. And the name of the crye shall be called Hammonah: Thus shall they make the land to lene.

Apoc. xix. v.

And thou soune of man, thus sayeth the Lord God: Speake vnto al the foules, and every bryd, yea and to al the wyld beasts of the field: heape you together and come, gather you round about vpon my daughter, that I haue a wyne for you: eue a great daughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel: eat flesch, and drinke bloud. Ye shall eat the flesh of the wyrtrees, and drinke the blud of the princes of the land: of the workers, of the lamber, of the goates, and of the oxen that be al slayne at Balan. Eate the fat yow belly full, and drinke blud til ye be drunken, of the daughter whych I haue slayne vnto you. As yow at my table, wyth horsemen and strong horsemen, wyth capitaines and al men of war, sayth the Lord God.

I haue my glory also amongs the Gentyls, that al the Heathen may see my iudgement that I haue kept, and my hand whych I haue laid vpon them: that the house of Israel maye knowe how that I am the Lord to euer God, fro that day forth. And the heathen shall know, that wher as the house of Israel wer led into captiuitie: it was for their wickednes sake, because they offended me. For the whych cause I hyde my face from them, and deliuered them into the hands of their enemyes, that they myght al be slayne wyth the swerde. Accordyng to their uncleannes, and vnfayrfull dealinge, so haue I entreated them, and hyde my face from them. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: Now wil I bring agayne the captiues of Jacob, and haue mercye vpon the whole house of Israel, and be glorious for my holy names sake. At that confusion and offence that they haue done agaynst me, shall be taken away, and so safely shall they dwel in their land, that no man shall make them afraid. And when I haue brought them agayne from amonges the people, when I haue gathered them together out of their enemyes landes, and am praysed in them before many heathen: that they know that I am the Lord their God, whych suffered them to be led into captiuitie among the Heathen, but now haue brought them agayne into their owne land, and not left one of them yonder. After that wil I hide my face no more from them, but wil poure out my spirit vpon the house of Israel, sayth the Lord God.

The xl. Chapter.

The restoring of the city & of the temple that was to come, is shewed vnto the Prophet.

In the xxv. yere of our captiuitie, in the begynnyng of the yere, the tenth day of the moneth: that is the. xiiii. after that the city was smitten down, the same day came the hand of the Lord vpon me, and carryed me forth, euen into the lande of Israel brought he me in the vispons of God: and set me doune vpon a marueylous hye mountayne, wher vpon there was a burying (as it had bene of a city) toward the North. Whither he caried me: and behold ther was a manne, whose similitude was lyke brasse, whych had a threde of flaxe in his hand, and a meterod also. He stode in the doze and said vnto me: mark wel with thine eyes, harken to with thine ears, and fasten it in thine heart, what so euer I shall shew the, for to the extent that they might be shewed the, therfore art thou broughte hither, and whatsoeuer thou seest, thou shalt certify the house of Israel thereof.

Behold, ther was a wal on the outsyde round about the house: the meterod that he had in his hande was sixe cubits longe and a span. So he measured the bredth of the building, whych was a meterod, and the height also a meterod. Then came he vnto the East doze, and wnt vp the staires and measured the posts of the doze, wherof euery one was a meterod thicke. Euery chamber was a meterod long and brode, betwene the chambers was foure cubytes. The poste of the doore wythin the porche, was one meterod. He measured also the porch of the innermost doze, whiche conteyned a meterod. He measured be the entree of the doore that conteyned eyght cubytes, and his pylers two cubytes: and this entree stode inward.

The chambers of the doore Eastward, wer thye on euery side, alike brode and highe. The pylers also that stode of bothe the sydes wer of one measure. After this he meas measured the wydenes of the doze, which was ten cubytes, and the heygthe of the doze thyrtyene cubytes. The edge before the chambers was one cubit brode vpon both the sydes, and the chambers fyve cubytes wyde of ether syde. He measured the doze fro the rydge of one chamber to another; whose wydenes was .xxv. cubytes, and one doze stode agaynst another. He made pyl- lers also thye scoze cubytes hie, rounde a- bout the court doze. Before the inward parte vnto the fore entry of the innermost doze, was fifty cubits. The chambers and they pyl- lers wythin, rounde about vnto the doze, had syde wyndowes: So had the fore entres also, whose wyndowes wente round aboute wythin. And vpon the pyl- lers ther stode date trees.

Then brought he me into the fore court wher as wer chambers and paved woork made in the fore court round about. .xx. chambers vpon one paved woork. Now the paved woork was a long beside the dozes, & that was the lower paved woork. After this he measured the bredthe from the lower doze vnto the innermost court of the out syde, whych had an hundred cu- bytes vpon the East and the North parte. And the doze in the uttermost court to- ward the North, measured he after the length and bredth, bys thye chambers al- so on ether syde, wyth his pyl- lers and fore entres, whych had euē the measure of the measure of the first doze. His heygth was fyfity cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cubytes: bys wyndowes and porches wyth bys date trees, had euē lyke measure as the doze toward the East, ther were seven steppes to go vp vpon, and they porch before the. Now the doze of the innermost court stode straight ouer agaynst the doze that was toward the North East. From one doze to an other he measured an hundred cubits. After that, he brought me to the South syde, wher ther stode a doze toward the South: whose pyl- lers and porches he mea- sured, these had þ first measure, and wyth they porch, they had wyndowes round about, lyke þ first wyndowes. The heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. wyth steps to go vp vpon: bys porch stode before him, wyth bys pyl- lers and date trees on ether syde. And the doze of the innermost court stode toward the South, and he measured from one doze to an other an hundred cu- bits. So he brought me into the innermost court byow the doze of the South syde, whych he measured, and it had the mea- sure afore sayd. In lyke maner bys cham- bers, pyl- lers, and fore entres, had euē the fore sayd measure also. And he had wyth bys porches round aboute wyndowes of fyfity cubytes heygth, and fyue and therty cubytes brode. The porches rounde about wer .xxv. cubytes long, and .v. cubits hie: and bys porch reached vnto the uttermost court: vpon bys pyl- lers ther wer date trees and .viij. steps to go vp vpon.

He brought me also into þ innermost court vpon the East side, and measured the doze, accordyng to the measure afore sayd. Bys chambers, pyl- lers, and porches had euē the same measure as the first hadde: and wyth his porches he had wyndowes round about. The heygth was fyfity cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cubits: bys porches reached vnto the uttermost court: bys pyl- lers al- so had date trees on ether syde. and .viij. steppes to go vp vpon.

And he brought me to the North doze, and measured it, whych he also had the fore sayd measure. Bys chambers, pyl- lers and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute; whose heygth was .l. cubytes, and þ bredth .xxv. Bys pyl- lers stode toward the utter most court, and vpon them both wer date trees, and eight steps to go vp vpon. Ther stode a chamber also, whose intrance was at the doze pyl- lers, and ther the burnt of scrynges were washed.

In the doze porche, ther stode on ether syde two tables for the slaughteryng: to lay the brynt offerynges, frync offerynges and trespass offerynges there vpon. And on the outersyde as men goo forth to the North doze ther stode two tables. Foure tables stode on ether syde of the doze, that is, .viij. tables wher vpon they slaughtred. Four tables were of beuen stons for the burnt offerynges of a cubyte and a halfe long and brod, and one cubyt hygh: wher vpon wer laied the vessels and ornamen- tes which wer bled to the burnt and slain offerynges, when they wer slaughtred. And within there were hooks foure syngers bynde, fastened round about to hang flece vpon, and vpon the tables was laied cle of scryng flece. On the outersyde of the inner- most doze were the syngers chambers in þ inward court beside the North doze ouer agaynst the South. Ther stode one also, beside the East doze Northward.

And he sayd vnto me. This chamber on the South syde belongeth to the priestes that kepe the habitation, and this toward the North, is the priestes that warre vpon the aulter, whych be the sones of Sadach, that do seruite before the Lord in Acadē of the chyldren of Leui. So he measured the fore court, whych had in lengthe an hun- dred cubits, and as much in bredth by the four corners. Now the aulter stode before the house. And he brought me to the fore entry of the house, and measured the wals by the entry doze, whiche were .v. cubytes long on ether syde. The thynknes also of the doze on ether side, was .lii. cubytes. The length of the porche was .xx. cubytes, the bredth .ii. cubits, and vpon the steps went men vp to it, by the walles also were pyl- lers on ether syde one.

The .xli. Chapter.

The disposicion & deuise of building agaynst the temple, & of the other thinges ther to belönging.

After

After this he brought me to the temple and measured the postes, whereby were of both the sydes syre cubytes thicke, accordyng to the wydens of the tabernacle. The bredth of the doore, x. cubytes, and the walles of the doze on either syde, v. cubytes. He measured the length thereof, whereby contained. xl. cubytes, and the bredth. xx. Then went he in, and measured the doore postes, whereby were two cubytes thicke: but the doze it selfe was, vi. cubites, and the bredth of the doore was vii. cubites. He measured the length and bredth thereof, whereby were euery one, xx. cubytes before the temple.

And he sayd vnto me: this is the holp-er of all. He measured also the wal of the house whereby was syre cubytes. The chambers that stode round aboute the house, were euery one, iiii. cubits wyde, and one stode hard vpon another, wherof ther were xxx. and thye. And ther stode postes beneth by the wals round about the house, to beate them vp: but in the wall of the house, they were not fastened. The side chambers were the hygher, the wyder, and had steps therto: to them round aboute the house. Thus was it wyder aboue, þ from the lowest till myghte go to the hyghest and myd chambers. I saw also that the house was, very hygh round about. The foundation of the syde chambers was a meterod (that is, vi. cubites) brode. The thynkeness of the syde wal wythout, conteyned, v. cubites, and so vnd the outwal of the chambers in the house. Betwene the chambers, was the wydens, xx. cubits round about þ house. The chamber doores stode ouer against the outwal, the one doze was toward þ north, the other toward the south: and the thynkeness of the outwal was syre cubites round about. Now the building that was separated toward the west, was thie score and ten cubites wyde: the wal of the building was, v. cubytes thicke round about, and the length fourescore cubites and ten. So he measured the house whereby was an. l. cubytes long, and the separated building wyth the wal was an. l. cubites long also. The wydens before the house, and offe that was separated toward the east, was an hundred cubytes.

And he measured the length of the building before and behynde whereby the chambers vpon both the sides: and it contained an. l. cubites. The innermost temple, þ porch of the fore court, the syde postes, these thie had syde wyndowes, and pylles, round about ouer against the postes, so the ground vp to the wyndowes.

The wyndowes them selues were filled ouer wyth boordes: and thus was it about the doze, vnto the innermost house, and wyth out also: þea the whole wal on euery syde both within and wythout was filled ouer wyth greute boordes.

There were Cherubins and date trees made also, so that one date tree stode euery betwixt. ii. Cherubins: One Cherub had two faces, the face of a mā looking aside to ward the date tree, and a lions face on the other side. Thus was it made round about in al the house: Yea the Cherubins & date trees were made from the ground vp about the doze, and so stode they also vnd the wal of the temple.

The by postes of the temple were foure squared, & the house of the sanctuary was euery as it appeared vnto me afore in þ vision. The table was of wood, iiii. cubits hie, and, ii. cubits long: his corners, the legth and the wals were of wood.

And he sayd vnto me: This is the table that shal stand before the Lord. The temple and the holp-er of al had either of them ii. dozes, and euery doze had, ii. lytle wyndowes which were soldered in one vpon another, on euery syde. ii. And vpon the dozes of the temple ther were made Cherubins and date trees, lyke as vnd the wals: and a great thicke balke of wood was before on the outside of the porch. Vpon both the sydes of the wals of the porch, ther were made depe wyndowes and date trees, hauing balkes & beames, lyke as þ house had

The. xlii. Chapter.

Of the chambers of the temple for the pylles, and the holy thynges.

Then carped he me oute into the fore court toward the north, and brought me into the chamber that stode ouer against the backe building Northward, whiche had the legth of an. l. cubites, whose doze turned toward the North. The wide-nes conteyned, l. cubits: ouer against the xx. cubites of the innermost court, and against the paued woork that was in the fore court. Besyde al these, iii. there stode pylles one ouer against another: And before this chamber, there was a walkyng place of. x. cubits wide, and wythin was a way of one cubit wyde, and they doozes toward the North. Thus the hyghest chambers were alway nether then the lowest and mydlemost of the building: for they bare chamber vpon chamber, and stode, iii. together one vnd another, not hauing pylles like the fore court: therefore were they smaller then these beneth, and in þ myddest set aken from the ground vward.

The wal without that stode by the chambers toward the vtmost court vpon the forsyde of the chambers, was, l. cubites long: for the length of the vtmost chambers in the fore court was, l. cubites also, but þ length thereof before the temple was an. l. cubites. These chambers had vnder then an entrance of the east syde, whereby a man myghte go into them out of the fore court, thowhe the thicke wall of the fore court toward the east, tyght ouer against the separated building. Before the same building vpon this syde ther were chambers also whereby had a waye vnto them, lyke lyke as the chambers on the North syde, of the same length and wydenes.

E They intrasice, fashyon and dozes were also of the same maner. Yea even lyke as the other chamber dozes were, so were also those of the South syde. And before I way toward the syngers steps on the east syde, ther stode a doze to go in at. Then sayd he unto me: The chambers toward the North and the South which stand before the back building, those be holy habytacions, wher in the prestes that doo seruyce before the Lord, muste eat the most holy offerings: and ther must they lay the most holy offerings: meat offerings, synne offerings, trespass offerings, for it is an holy place. When the prestes come therein, they shal not go out into the fore court: but (synge they be holy) they shal leaue the clothes of theyr ministracion and put on other garments, when they haue any thyng to do wyth the people.

Now when he had measured all the innermer house, he brought me forth thorow the East porte, and measured the same round aboute. He measured the East syde wyth the meeterod, which round aboute cōteyned. v. C. meeterodes. And the north syde measured he, which cōteined round aboute even so much. The other. ii. sydes also toward the South and the West (which he measured) cōteyned either of them. v. C. meeterodes. So he measured all the four sides wher ther went a wal round aboute v. C. meeterodes lōg, and as broad also, which separated the holy from the unholy.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The sixth gloz of God gorge into the temple, from whence it had before departed. He mentyoned the Idolatrye of the chyldeyn of Israel, for whiche they were consumed and brought to nought. He is commaunded to cal the agayne to repentance.

So he brought me to the doze, that turneth toward the east. Behold, ther cam the gloz of the God of Israel fro out of the east, whose voyce was lyke a great noyse of waters, and the earth was lycht ned wyth hys gloz. Hys syght to lōke vpon was lyke the fyr that I saw, when I went in, what tyme as the city shuld haue bene destroyed: and lyke the byspon that I saw by the water of Cobac. Then set I vpon my face, but the gloz of the Lord came into the house thorow the east dooze. So a wynde toke me vp, and brought me into the innermer court: and beholde, the house was ful of the gloz of the Lord.

I herd one speaking vnto me out of the house, and ther stode one by me, that sayde vnto me: O thou sonne of man, this count is my seate, and the place of my foote steps: wher as I wyl dwel among the chyldeyn of Israel for euermore, so that the house of Israel shal nomore desyle my holy name: neyther they, nor theyr synnes, thorow theyr whoredom, thorow theyr by places and thorow the dead bodies of theyr kinges, which haue builded theyr thresholds in maner hard vpon my thresholds, & theyr postes almost at my postes: so that there is but a bare wal betwixt me and them.

Thus haue they desyled my holy name with theyr abominacions that they haue cōmited. Wherfore I haue destroyed the in my wrath. But now they shal put a wal theyr whoredome, and the dead bodies of theyr kinges out of my syght, that I maye dwel among them for euermore. Wherfore (O thou sonne of man) shew thou the house hold of Israel a temple, that they may be ashamed of theyr wickednes, and measure them selues an example therat. And wher they be ashamed of al theyr workes, then shew them the fourme and fashyon of the temple: the cōmmyng in, the goynge out, al the maner and descripcion thereof, yea al the vses and ordinaunces of it, that they may kepe and fulfyl all the fashyons and customes thereof.

Thus is the descripcion of the house: A boue vpon the mount round about all the corners, it shal be the holiest of al. Behold, that is the descripcion and fashyon of the house: Thus is the measure of the aulter (after the true cubyt: which is a span longer then an other cubyt) hys botom in the middell was a cubit longe and wyde, and the lōge that went round about it, was a span broad. This is the height of the aulter. From the ground to the lower steps, the length is two cubytes, and the bredth one cubyt, and from the lower steps to the higher are four cubits, and the bredth but one cubit. The aulter was four cubytes high, and from the aulter vponward stode four hoynes, and it was. xii. cubites long and. xii. cubites broad, vpon the. iiii. corners: the couering of the aulter was. xliii. cubites long, and broad vpon the four corners, and the ledge that went round about, had halfe a cubyt: and the bottome thereof round about one cubyt, hys steps stode toward the East.

And he sayd vnto me: O thou sonne of man, thus sayth the Lord God. These are the ordinaunces and lawes of the aulter, in the day when it is made to offer burnt offerings, and to spynkle blood there vpon. To the prestes, to the Leuytes that be of the seide of Sadoch, and treade before me, to do me seruice, sayth the Lord god: Vnto these geue thou a pong bullocke. for a synne offering: and take the blood of him & spynkle it vpon the four hoynes wythal, and the four corners of the aulter coueringe, wyth the ledge that goeth round about: heretwyth shalt thou cleanse it, and reconcile it. Thou shalt take the bullocke also of the sinne offering, and burne hym in a seuerall place wythout the Sanctuary.

The next day, take the goatbeuck with out blemyshe for a synne offering, to reconcile the aulter wythal: like as it was reconciled with the bullocke. Now when thou hast made it cleane, then offer a pong bullocke without blemish also. Offer the bullocke before the Lord, and let the priest cast salt therupon, and grue them so vnto the Lord for a burnt offering. Seven dayes shalt thou bring, euerye daye a goatebuoke. A pong bullocke a ramme of the flocke both without blemish) that they offer. Seven dayes that they reconsele and cleanse the altar, and offer vpon it. When these dayes are expyred, then vpon the viii. daye and so forth, the priestes shall offer theyr burnt offerings and health offerings vpon the altar: so wyl I be merciful vnto you sayeth the Lord God.

The xliii. Chapter.

¶ He sheweth what doze of the temple is that. He is commaunded to vphrayde the people with theyr offence. The vncircumcised in herte and in the flesh. Who are to be admittyd in the seruice of the temple, and who to be refused. He sheweth what priestes he would haue admitted the holy place, and also theyr offyce.

After this, he brought me agayne to the outward doore of the Sanctuare on the East syde, and that was that. Then said the Lord vnto me: This dooze shall be open, and not opened for any man to go thorow it, but onely for the Lord god of Israel: yea he shall go thorow it, els shall it be shut still. The prince vpon himselfe shall come thorow it, that he may eat breade before the Lord. At the porch shall he come in, and ther shall he go out again. Then brought he me to the doze, vpon the North syde of the house. And as I looked about me, behold, the glory of the Lord filled the house, and I fell downe vpon my face. So the Lord spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, fasten this to thyne belt, be hold, and take diligent hede to all that I wyl say vnto the, concerning al the ordynaunces of the Lord, and al his lawes: p'serue wel with thine belt the commynge in of the house, and the goynge forth of the Sanctuare: and tel that obdurate household of Israel: Thus said the Lord god: O house of Israel ye haue now done prough with al your abominacions, sayng that ye haue brought into my Sanctuare strangers, hauing vncircumcised herts & flesh, where thorow my Sanctuare is defyled, when ye offer me bread, fat, and bloud.

¶ Thus with al your abominacions ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the holy ordynaunces of my Sanctuare: but set keepers of my Sanctuare, euen after your owne mynde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Of all the strangers that dwel among the chyldren of Israel, no stranger (whose belt and deffe is not circumcised) shall come withyn my Sanctuare: No, nor the Leuites that be gone backe to me, and haue dysceped the people of Israel with al errors, goynge after theyr ydols: but they shall beate theyr owne wyckednesse. Shoulde they be sette

And ordeyned to minister vnder the dozes of the house of my Sanctuare? And to doo seruice in the house: to lay burnt offerings and sacrifices for the people to stand before them, and to serue them: seeing the seruice that they do them, is before theyr Idols, and cause the house of Israel to shewle thorow theyr wyckednesse? For the whych cause I haue pluckt out myne hand ouer them (sayth the Lord) so that nowe they must beate theyr own iniquyte, and not to come nye me, to serue me with their priesthoode, in my Sanctuare, and most holpest of al: that they may beate their own shame and abominacions, whiche they haue done. Shoulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to al the seruice that is done therein? But the priestes, the Leuites the sonnes of Sadoche, that kepte the holy ordynaunces of my Sanctuare, when the chyldren of Israel were gone from me, shall come to me, to do me seruice, to stand before me, and to offer me the fat and the bloud, sayth the Lord God.

¶ They shall go into my Sanctuare, and treade before my table, to do me seruice, & to waite vpon myne ordynaunces. Now when they go in at the doores of the inner mer cour, they shall put on linnen clothes, so that no wollen come vpon them: whyle they do seruice vnder the doores of the inner mer cour, and within. They shall haue saye linnen bonets vpon theyr heads, and linnen breeches vpon theyr loynes; whiche in theyr labour they shall not put aboute them: And when they go forth to the people into the outward court, they shall put of the clothes wherin they haue ministered & lay the in the habytacill of the Sanctuare, and put on other apparel, leaue theyr unhallowed to the people with theyr clothes.

¶ They shall not haue theyr beades, nor norishe the bush of theyr beate, but rounde theyr beades only. Al the priestes that go into the inmost court, shall drink no wyne. They shall mary no wydothe, neyther one that is put fro her husband: but a maide of the seide of the house of Israel, or a wydothe that hath had a priest before.

¶ They shall shew my people the differēce betweene the holy, and vnholy, betwixt the cleane and vncleane. If any dyscorde arys, they shall dysceane it, and grue sentence after my iudgements. My solenne scattes, my lawes and ordynaunces shall they kepe, and halowe Sabbathes. They shall come at no dead personne, to defyle theyr selues (excepte it be father or mother, sonne or daughter, brother or sister, that hath had yet no house) in such they may be defyled.

¶ And when he is clenfed, there shall be rebened vnto hym vii. dayes: and yf he goe into the Sanctuare agayne to do seruice, he shall bring a spynne offering sayeth the Lord God. They shall haue an herirage, yea I my selfe wyl be theyr herirage: els shall

The. xlv. Chapter.

The ſcryptures of the Saboth and of the new moones. Wherby whiche doores they ſhall go in, or come out of the Temple, &c.

Thus ſaith ſ Lord God: the doore of ſ innermet court toward the eaſt ſhall be ſhut the. vi. work dayes: but in the Saboth and in the day of the new moone

it ſhall

it shalbe open. When shal the prince come under the doze porch, and stand wylt wryth out by the doze cheke. So the pities shal offer hys burnt and bealtheofferings. And he shal worship at the doze post, and go his way sothe agayne: but the doze shal no more be shut tyl the evening.

On the same manner shal the people of the land also do thei worship before the Lorde without this doze upon the Sabbothes and newe Moones. This is nowe the burnt offering, that þ prince shal bring unto the Lorde upon the Saboth: vi. lambs without blemish, and a ram without blemish, and an Ephab for a meateoffering wryth the ram. As for the lambes, he may give as many meateofferings to them, as he wyl, and an Eyn of oyle to one Ephab. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shalbe a pong bullocke without blemish, vi. lambs and a ram also without blemish. Wryth the bullocke he shal give an Ephab, and wryth the ramme an Ephab also for a meateoffering: but to the lambes, what he may come by. And euer an Eyn of oyle to an Ephab. When the prince cometh he shal go under the doze of þ porch, and the depart sothe agayne. But when the people of the land come before the Lorde in the hygh solempne feast, as manye as come in by the North doze to do worship, shal go out agayne at the south doze. And they that come in at the South doze, shal go forth agayne at the north doze. There shal none go out at þ doze wher he came in, but shal go forth right out on the other syde, and the prince shal go in and out among them.

Upon the solempne and hygh feast dayes this shalbe the meateoffering: An Ephab to a bullock, and an Ephab to a ram, and to the Lambes as manye as he wyl, but euer an Eyn of oyle to an Ephab. Nowe when the prince bringeth a burnt offering or a bealtheoffering wryth a tree wyl unto the Lorde the East doze shalbe opened unto hym, that he maye do wryth hys burnt and bealtheofferings, as he doth upon the Sabboth, and when he goeth sothe, the doze shalbe shutt after hym agayne. He shal darly bring unto the Lorde a lambe of a yere old without blemish for a burnt offering. This shal he do euer morning. And for a meateoffering he shal give the first part of an Ephab, and the third part of an Eyn of oyle (to mingle wryth the cakes) euer morning. Yea this shal be a dayly meateoffering unto the Lorde, for an everlastyng ordynance: and thus shal the Lambe, the meateoffering and oyle be gyven euer morning, for a dayly burnt offering.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde God: If the prince give a gift unto any of hys sonnes, then shal it be hys sonnes heretage perpetuall, that he maye possesse it. But if he wyl give one of hys seruantes some of hys heretage, it shal be hys to the free yere, and then to retorne againe unto the prince: for hys heretage shal be hys sonnes onelye. The prince also shal take none of the peoples enheretage, nor put them from thei possession, but to hys owne sonnes shal he give his possid, that my people be not scattered abroad, but that euer man maye haue hys owne.

And he brought me thorow the intradce at the syde of the doze to the habitation of the Sanctuary, that belongeth to the pities, and stode toward the North, and behold ther was a place upon the West side, then sated he unto me: This is the place, wher the pities shal dryght the trespass, and synneofferings, and bake the meateofferings: that they nebe not beate them in to the outward court, and so to the veteremost court, round aboute al the four corners. Beholde, in euery corner of the fore court ther was yet a lytle court.

Yea in al the four corners of the court ther was a lytle court of. xl. cubytes long, and. xxx. cubytes broade: these four lytle courttes wer of one lyke measure, and ther went a rig wal round about them al four, under the whych there wer barthes made rounde aboute. Then sated he, unto me This is the kitchyn, wher the impurtyes of the house shal dryght the daye offeringes of the people,

The. xvii. Chapter.

The byson of the waters that come out of the temple. The coastes of the land of promyse, and the deuision therof by trybes.

After this he brought me agayne before the doze of the house: and behold ther gushyd out waters from under the postes of the house Eastwarde (for the house stode toward the East) that ran downe upon the ryght syde of the house, whychelpech to the altar Southwarde. Then carped he me out to the north doze, and brought me forth ther round about the veteremost doze that turneth eastward. Beholde, there came forth the water by on the ryght syde.

Nowe when the man that had the mete rodde in hys hande wente unto the East doze, he measured a thousande cubytes, and then he brought me thorow the water, euen to the ancles: so he measured per a. ccc. & brought me thorow the water agayne unto þ knees: yet measured he a. ccc., and brought me thorow the water unto the loines. After this he measured a. ccc. agayne, then was it such a tryet, that I myghte not wade thorow it: The water was so depe, that it was nedefull to haue swymmed, for it myghte not be waded ouer. And he sated unto me: haste thou sene this, O thou sonne of man? and wryth that he brought me to the eluer bank agayne.

Nowe when I came there, there stode many trees upon cyther syde of the tryet bancke. Then sated he unto me: This water water that floweth out toward the east and runneth downe into the playne field, commerth into the sea: and from the sea it floweth out, and maketh the waters halc.

Yea, al that lyeue and moue wherunto this spruce commerth, shall recourt. And wher this water commerth, there shall be much frysh. For all that commerth to this water, shall be lusty and whole. By this spruce shall the fryshers stand from Engaddi vnto Eneglaim, and theye shal out the nets: for theye shalbe great heapes of frysh, lyke as in the mayne sea. As for his clap of pyres, theye shal not be whole: for wher it shalbe occupied for salt.

By this spruce vpon bothe the sydes of the hoze, theye shal growe al maner of frut-ful trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shall their frut perishe: but euer be ripe at theye monethes, for the water floweth out of theye Sanctuary. His frut is good to eate, and his leafe profitable for medicine. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Let this be the border, wherunto ye shall deuyde the land vnto the xii. tribes of Israel, wyth the lyne. Is it indifferent vnto one, as vnto another: of the half the land I swoie vnto your fathers, that it should fall to you in prauence.

Gen. xxi. a. This is the border of the land vpon the North syde, from the mayne sea, as menne go to zadah: namelye Demath, Berocha, Sabarim: from the borders of Damascus and Demach vnto Hazer Et-chon, and that lyeth vpon the coastes of Daueraim. Thus the borders from the sea forth, shall be Hazer Euan, the border of Damascus the North, and the borders of Demach that is the North part. The East syde shall ye measure from Hazetan and Damascus, from Safad and the land of Israel by Jordan and so forth, from the sea coast that lyeth Eastward:

and this is the East part. The South syde is from Hamath forth to the waters of sea: and that is the South part. The west part: namelye the greete sea fro the borders therof, as a manne come vnto Demath: this is the West parte. This lande shall ye parte amonge you, accordynge to the tribes of Israel, and deurde it to be an heyrage for you, and for the strangers that dwel amonge you, and beget chyldre.

For ye shall take them amonge the chyldren of Israel, lyke as though theye were of your owne householde and countrey:
and theye shall haue heyrage wyth you amonge the chyldre of Israel. Take in what tribe the stranger dwelleth, in the same

The ende of the Prophecie of Ezechiel.

The booke of the prophet Daniel.

The first Chapter.

The Prophecie sheweth the captivite of Joakim king of Juda. At the tynys that was in captivite, The king commaunded to those whiche of them should be taught the learnynge and language of the Chaldees. They also, and the knyghtes byng, Daniel abstayneth fro the meate of the king of Babylon. The science and instruction of these chyldeyn.

At the tynys here of the captivite of Joakim king of Juda, came Nabuco-odonosor king of Babilonia unto Jerusalem, and besieged it: and the Lord delivered Joakim the king of Juda into his hand: with certain ornaments of the house of God: whiche he carried away unto the land of Sennar, to the house of his God: & there he brought them into his gods treasure. And the king spake unto Aschanaz the chiefe chamberlayne, that he should bring hym certayne of the children of Israel that were come of the kings seed, and of wisdom, prynces, goldsmiths, without any blemish, but say: and wel favoured, instruct in al wisdom, cunning and understanding, which were able to stand in the kings palace, to read, and to learne for to speake Chaldeish.

Unto these the kynge appoynted a certayne portion of his ordinarie food of the tyme, whiche he dranke hym self, so to nourish them the yere, that afterwarde they might stand before the king. Among these now were certayne of the children of Juda, namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias: Unto these the chiefe chamberlayne gave other names: & called Daniel Balthazar; Ananias Sidrach; Misael Mithras; Azarias Abednago. But Daniel was at a point with hym self, that he would not be defiled thow the kings meate, ne the wine whiche he dronk. And this he desired of the chiefe chamberlain, lest he shuld be defiled hymself. So god gave Daniel favour & grace before the chiefe chamberlayne: & he said unto him: I am afraid of my Lord the king, whiche he hath appointed you your meate & drinke, lest he sye your faces to be worse lykynge then the other chyldeyn of your age, and so he shall make me lose my head to the king.

Then Daniel answered agelatter, whiche the chiefe chamberlayne had set over Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias, and sayed: O prynces but ten dayes with thy servants, and let us have potage to eat, and water to drinke, then loke upon our faces, and they shall see that we are of the kings meate. And as thou seest, so deale with thy servants. So he consented to them in this matter, and prynced the ten dayes. And after the ten dayes their faces were better lykynge, and fatter then al the yonge chyldeyn.

The ende of the Prophecie of Ezechiel.

The booke of the prophet Daniel.

The first Chapter.

The Prophecie sheweth the captivite of Joakim king of Juda. At the tynys that was in captivite, The king commaunded to those whiche of them should be taught the learnynge and language of the Chaldees. They also, and the knyghtes byng, Daniel abstayneth fro the meate of the king of Babylon. The science and instruction of these chyldeyn.

At the thirtieth yere of the reigne of Joakim king of Juda, came Nabucodonosor king of Babylon unto Jerusalem, and besieged it: and the Lord delivered Joakim the king of Juda into his hand: with certain ornaments of the house of God: whiche he carried away unto the land of Sennar, to the house of his God: & there he brought them into his gods treasure. And the king spake unto Asphanaz the chiefe chamberlayne, that he should bring hym certayne of the children of Israel that were come of the kings seide, and of wisdom, young men without any blemish, but say: and wel favoured, instruct in al wisdom, cunning and understanding, which were able to stand in the kings palace, to read, and to learne for to speake Chaldeish.

Unto these the kynge appoynted a certayne portion of his own meate, and of the wine, whiche he dranke hym self, so to nourish them the yere, that afterwarde they might stand before the king. Among these now were certayne of the children of Juda, namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias: Unto these the chiefe chamberlayne gave other names: & called Daniel Balthazar; Ananias Sidrach; Misael; and Azarias Abednago. But Daniel was at a point with hym self, that he would not be defyled thow the kings meate, ne the wine whiche he dronk. And this he desired of the chiefe chamberlain, lest he shuld be defiled hymself. So god gave Daniel fauour & grace before the chiefe chamberlayne: & he said vnto him: I am afraid of my Lord the king, whiche hath appointed you your meate & drinke, lest he sye your faces to be worse lykynge then the other young men of your age, and so he shall make me lose my head to the king.

Then Daniel answered agelatter, whiche the chiefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias, and sayed: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruantes, and let vs have potage to eat, and water to drinke, then loke vpon oure faces, and they that eat of the knyngs meate. And as thou seest, so deale with thy seruantes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued the ten dayes. And after the ten dayes their faces were better lykynge, and fatter then all the yonge

D Springolds which eat of the kings meate. Thus Belshazzar took away theyr meate and wyne, and gaue them potage, therfore God gaue not these four Springolds cunning and learning in al scripture & wysdome, but vnto Daniel specially he gaue vnderstandyng of al wysdoms and dreames. Now whē the tyme was expyred that the kynge hadde appoynted to dyngge in these younge Springoldes vnto hym: the chiefe chamberlaine brought them before Nabuchodonosor, and the king commaunched with them. But amonges them all wer founde none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, & Azarias. Therfore stood they before the king, whiche in al wisdom and matters of vnderstandyng that he enquired of them, found them. x. tymes better then all the soothsayers and charmers that were in al his realme. And Daniel abode still vnto the xij. yere of kynge Cyrus.

The.ii. Chapter.

The dreame of Nabuchodonosor: He calyth vnto hym soothsayers, and requyeth of them both the dreame and the interpretation thereof. They answer that they can not shew it. The kynge commaunched al the wyse men of Babylon to be slayne, Daniel requyeth tyme to solve the question. The Lorde openeth the myste: ry to Daniel. and. v. a.

In the second yere of the raigne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame wher thowme his spirite was peryed, and his slepe brake from him. The king commaunched to call together all the soothsayers, charmers, witches & Caldees, for to shew the kynge his dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the kynge said vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled therewith, that I haue cleane forgotten what I dreamed. Upon this the Caldees answered the kynge in the Syrians spech: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for ever. Shew thy seruantes the dreame, and we shall shewe what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Caldees their answer, & said: It is gone from me: I feare wil not make me vnderstand the dreame, with the interpretation thereof, ye shal dye, and your houses shalbe pyssed. But if ye tel me the dreame and the meaning thereof ye shal haue of me gyftes, rewardes, and great honour, only shewe me the dreame and the signification of it.

They answered againe and sayed: The king must shew his seruantes the dreame, and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the king answered, sayinge: I perswade of a truch, that ye do but prolong the tyme: for so much as ye se that the thing is gone from me. Therfore if ye wil not tel me the dreame, ye shal al haue one iudgemēt. But ye tairn and distoule with vain words, whiche ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therfore tel me the dreame, and so shal I know if ye shew me what it meaneth. Upon this the Caldees gaue answer before the kynge, and said: there is no man vpon earth that can tel the thyng whiche the king speaketh of: Yea, ther is neyther king, prince nor Lord that euer asked such things at a soothsayer, charmer or Caldee, for it is a hard matter, that the king requyeth, neither is ther anye, that can certify the kynge thereof, excepte the gods: whose dwelling is not among the creatures.

For the which cause the king was wroth with great indignacion, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon, and the proclamation went forth, that the wyse men shoulde be slayne. They soughte also to slep Daniel with his companions. Then Daniel enquired Artoch the kynge's steward of the iudgemente and sentence, that was gone forth already to kill suche as were wyse at Babylon.

He answered and saied vnto Artoche being then the kings deputy: Why hath the king proclaimed so cruel a sentence? So Artoch told Daniel the matter. Upon this went Daniel vp, and desired the king that he might haue leasure to shewe the kynge the interpretation, and then came he home againe, and shewed the thing vnto Ananias, Misael, and Azarias his companions, that they shoulde beseeche the God of heauen for grace in this secret, that Daniel & his fellows, with other such as were wyse in Babylon, perished not. Then was the mistere shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by night. And Daniel praised the God of heauen. Daniel also cried loud, and sayed: O that the name of God myghte be praised for euer, for wysdome and strength at his owne, he chaungeth the times and ages: he putted down kings, he setted vp kings: he gyueth wysdome vnto, the wise, and vnderstanding to those that vnderstande: he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thing that lyeth in darkness, for the light dwelleth with hym. I thank thee, and praye thee (O thou God of my fathers) that thou hast lent me wisdom & strength, and hast shewed me the thing that me desired of thee, for thou hast opened the kynge's matter vnto me.

Upon this went Daniel in vnto Artoche, whom the kynge had ordeyned to destroye the wyse at Babylon: he wente vnto hym and sayed: destroye not suche as are wyse in Babylon, but bringe me into the kynge, and I shal shew the kynge the interpretation. Then Artoch brought Daniel in to the kynge in all the haste, and sayed vnto hym. I haue founde a man amonges the prisoners of Iuda, that shal shewe the kynge, the interpretation. Then answered the kynge and sayed vnto Daniel, whose name was Belshazzar: Telle thou he that canste shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, and the interpretation thereof.

Interpretation thereof? Daniel answered the king to his face, and said: As for this secret, for the which the king maketh inquiry, it is neither by wyle, the soother, the charmer, nor the deuyll conuiter, that can decypher the king of it: O helpe God in heauen can open secretes, and be it is that sheweth the king Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes.

Dan. xli. e

Thy dreame, and that which thou hast sene in thyne head, vpon thy bed, is this: O kinge thou dydest caste in thy mynde what should come hereafter. So be that is by opener of misteries, telleth thee what is for to come. As for me, this secret is not shewed me for any wysdome that I haue more then any other lurning: but only that I myght shew the kyng the interpretation, and that he might know the thoughtis of his owne heart. Thou king sayest, and behold, ther stood before the a great image whose spure was maruclous great, and his visage grim. The ymage head was of fyne golde, his breste and arme of syluer, his bodie and lynes were of copper, his legs were of yron, his sette were part of yron, and parte of earthe.

Dan. xli. e
Luce. xx. d.

Thou sayest, til the time (that without any handes) there was betwen of a stone, which smote the ymage vpon the sette, that were bothe of yron, and earthe, and brake them to powder: then was the yron, the earthe, the copper, the syluer and gold broken altogether in pteces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that by wynde bloweth away from the sommer doores, that they can no more be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage became a great mountayne, which fulfyllerth the whole earth: this is the dreame. And now wyl we shew before the kyng, what it meaneth.

Dan. v. d.

O king, thou art a kyng of kynges: For the God of heauen hath given the a kyngdome, strength, and magnetye: and hath deliuered the al thynges that are amongs the chyldren of men: the beastes of the field, and the foules vnder the heauen, and gyue the dominion ouer the al. Thou art that golden head. After the, there shal arysse an other kyngdome, whal be les then thyne. The thyrd kyngdome shal be like copper, and haue dominactio in al lands. The fourth kyngdome shal be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron brooseth and breaketh al thyngs: Yes euen as yron beaterth euerye thyng downe, so shal it beate downe and destroy.

Wher as thou sawest the sette and toes part of earthe and parte of yron, that is a deuised kyngdome, which neuerthelesse shal haue some of yron ground myxt with it, for so much as thou hast sene the yron myxt with claye.

The toes of the sette that were part of yron and parte of claye, signifeth that it shal be a kyngdome partely stronge, and partely weak. And wher as thou sawest that Ieon myxt with claye, they shal mingle them selues with the seede of simple people, and yet not contynue one with another, lyke as yron wyl not be soulered with a potsherde.

The Prophecy

Esap. li. b.

In the dayes of these kynges, shal the God of heauen set vp an euertlasting kyngdome which shal not perishe, and his kyngdome shal not be gyuen ouer to another people: yea the same shal breake and destroye all these kyngdomes, but it shal endure for euer.

Hebr. xli. e

And wher as thou sawest that without any handes ther was cutte out of the mount a stone, which brake the yron, the copper, the earthe, the syluer and golde in pteces: by that hath the great God shewed the kyng what wyl come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretation thereof is sure. Then the kyng Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon his face, and bowed hym selfe vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they should offer meat offerenges, and sweete odoures vnto hym. The kyng answered Daniel, and said: yea of a truthe your God is a God aboue all gods, a Lord aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes, seruing thou canst byscouer this mystery. So the kyng made Daniel a great man, and gaue him many and grete gyftes.

He made hym ruler of al the countreyes of Babilon, and Lord of al the nobles that were at Babilon. Now Daniel increased the kyng for Sidrach, Mysach, and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer al the officers in the lande of Babilon. But Daniel hym selfe remayned still in the court by the kyng.

The.iii.Chapter.
The kyng setteth vp a golden ymage, which he commaundeth to be worshipped. Sidrach, Mysach, and Abednago are accused, because they despyed the kyngs commaundement. They are brought vnto the kyng, and commaunded to worship the ymage. They refuse to doo it, and are put into a burning ouen. By helpe in God, they are deliuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God after the sight of the miracle.

Nabuchodonosor the kyng caused a golden ymage to be made, which was thre score cubytes hygh, and syre cubytes thicke. This he made to be sette vp in the felde of Dura in the land of Babilon, and sente out to gather together the Dukes, Lords, and Nobles, the iudges and officers, the debittes & shrikes with all the rulers of the lande, that they might come to the dedicactio of the ymage which Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp. So the Dukes, Lords, and nobles, the iudges and officers, beittes and shrikes, with all the rulers of the land gathered the together, and came vnto the dedycatynge of the ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp.

Nowe when they stood before the ymage which Nabuchodonosor set vp, the

After the Greke some read: in the felde that maye be inhabited: wherupon Josephus in the tenth booke of his antiquities the.iii.cha. sayeth: in a very grete felde.

bedel cryed oute with al his myght: O ye people, kintredes, and tinges, to you be it sayed: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes whiche shal be blowne, with the harpes, shawmes, psalterpes, symphonies, & all maner of musyke, ye fall downe and worshyp the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kyng hath set vp. Who so the fallerh not downe, and boweth hym selfe, shal euen the same houre be cast into an hote burnynge ouen. Therfore, when al the folke hearde the noyse of the Trompettes that were blowne, with the Harpes, Shawmes, psalterpes, Symphonies, and all kynde of melodye, then all the people, kintredes and nations fell downe, & bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp.

Nowe were there certayne men of the Caldees that went euen then & accused the Jewes, and sayed vnto the kyng Nabuchodonosor: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beynge kyng, hast gyuen a commaundement that all men, when they heare the noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalterpes, Symphonies, and al the other melodyes, shal fall downe and bowe them selues towardes the golden ymage: who so the fel not downe and worshipped not, that he shoulde be cast into an hote burnynge ouen.

Dan. ii. 9

Nowe are there certayne Jewes, whom thou hast set ouer the offces of the lande of Babylon: namely Sidrach, Misach & Abednago. These men (O kyng) regarde not thy commaundemente, yea they wyll not serue thy gods, ne bowe them selues to the golden ymage that thou hast sette vp.

The Nabuchodonosor in a cruel wyche and dyspleasure, commaunded, that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago shoulde be brought vnto hym. So these men were brought before the kyng. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayed: what? O Sidrach, Misach & Abednago, wyll not ye serue my gods? nor bowe your selues to the golden ymage that I haue set vp? well ye redye hereafter, when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the Harpes, Shawmes, psalterpes, Symphonies, and al the other melodyes, that ye fall downe & worshyp the ymage whiche I haue made. But if ye worshyp it not, ye shall be caste immediatlye into an hote burnynge ouen. Let see, what God is there, that maye deliuer you oute of my handes? Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago answered the kyng, and sayed: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why? oure God whome we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kyng) and can ryght wel deliuer vs oute of thy handes. And though he wyll not, yet shalte thou knowe (O kyng) that we wyll not serue thy goddes nor do crouche to the ymage, whych thou hast set vp. Then was Nabu-chodonosor full of indignacion, so that the countenance of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded that the ouen shoulde be made seuen times hotter than it was wont to be and spake vnto the strongest workmen that were in the hote, for to bind Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, and to cast them into the hote burnynge ouen. So these men were bounde in thei cotes, hose, shoes, with their other garmets, and cast into the hote burnynge ouen: for the kynges commaundement was so strait and the ouen was exceedynge hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, the flame of the fyre destroyed them: And these thre men: Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, fel downe in the hote burnynge ouen, beynge fast bounde.

An. xvi. 9

Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng maruelled, and stode vp in al hast, he spake vnto his counsell and sayde: whyd ye not caste these thre men bounde into the fyre. They answered, and sayed vnto the kyng: Yea, O kyng. He answered and sayed: Loo for all that, yet doo I see foure men goynge loose in the myddell of the fyre, and nathynge corrupt, and the fourth is like an angell to looke vpon.

Esa. xliii. 9

Vpon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mowthe of the hote burnynge ouen: he spake also, and sayed: O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, ye seruautes of the hie God, goo forth, and come hither. And so Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago went oute of the fyre. When the dukes, lordes, and nobles, and the kynges counsell came together to see those men, vpon whom the fyre had no maner of power in thei bodies, In so muche that the beye herre of thei head was not burnt, and thei clothes vunchanged: Yea there was no smell of fyre felt vpon them.

D Actes. ix. 4
Dan. x. 6

Then spake Nabuchodonosor, & sayd: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago, which hath sent his angell, & defended his seruautes, that put their trust in hym, that haue altered the kynges commaundemente, and leoparded thei bodies thereupon, rather then they would serue or worshyp any other God, except thei own God only. Therfore I wyll & commaunde, that al people, kintredes, and tinges, which spake any blasphemy agaynst the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall dye, and thei houses shall be pyld, because there is no God that maye saue us thys. So the kyng promoted Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, in the lande of Babylon.

The.iii. Chapter.

The.iii. Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor kyng unto all people, kyngeddes & tinges that dwell vpon the whole earth peace be multiplied amonges you: I thought it good to shewe the tokens & marueylous workes, that the hye God hath wrought vpon me. O how great are hys tokes, and how myghty are his wonders? His kyngdome is an everlastyng kyngdome, & hys power lasteth for ever and ever. I Nabuchodonosor being at rest in myne house, & floureshyng in my palace, sawe a dreame, which made me asayde, & the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, wth the visions of my head troubled me. Then sent I out a comynsion, that al they whych were of wysdome at Bablon should be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacion of the dreame. So there came & soursapers, charmers, Caldees and counters of deuils, to whiche I told the dreame, but what it betokened they coude not shew me: till at the last there came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar) accordyng to the name of my God, whych hath the spirite of the holye goddes in hym: to whome I tolde the dreame, sayinge: O Balthasar, thou wynter of soursapers. For so muche as I know that thou hast the spirite of the holye god, and no secete is hid from the, tel me therfore what & visio of my dreame (that I haue sene) may signifie.

I sawe a visio in my head vpon my bed; and beholde there stood a tree vpon the grounde whych was verie hygh, greete, and myghty: the heigth reached vnto the heauen, and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earth, hys leues were saye, he had verie muche fruite, so that every man had enough to eat therein.

The beastes of the fild had shadowes vnder it, & the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes thereof. Shortly all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my head a visio vpon my bed, & beholde, a watcher came down from heauen, and cryed myghtily, sayinge. Hewe downe the tree, breake of his boughes, shake of hys leues, and scatter hys fruite abrode, that all the beastes may get them a waye from vnder hym, & the foules from hys boughes. Neuerthelesse, leaue the grounde of his roote vpl in the earth, and bynde him vpon the playne field, wth chynes of Iron and Steele. With the dewe of heauen shal he be wet, and he shal haue his parre in the herbes of the ground wth other wyld beastes. What mans bette of hys shal be taken from hym, and a beastes bette shal be gyven hym, till seven yeres be come and gone vpon hym.

This errande of the watcher, is a com-mandement grounded and fought out in the counsell of hym that is mooste holy: to learne meune for to vnderstande that the highest hath power ouer hys kyngdome of men, & gyuerth them to whom it lykerh hym, and byngeth the verpe out castes of men ouer them. This is the dreame that I kyng Nabuchodonosor haue sene: therfore, O Balthasar, tell thou me what it signifie: for so muche as all the wyse men of my kyngdome are not hable to shew me what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirite of the holye goddes is in the.

Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) belde hys peace by the space of an houre, and hys thoughtes scouled hym. So the kyng spake, and sayed: O Balthasar, let neyther the dreame ne & interpretacion thereof feare the. Balthasar answered, sayinge: O my Loide thys dreame happen to thine enuemies, and the interpretacion to thine aduersaries. As for the tree that thou sawest, which was so great, and myghty whose heigth reached vnto the heauen, & his bredth into al the world, whose leues were saye, and the fruite muche, vnder the whiche the beastes of the fild had their habitation, & vpon whose boughes the foules of the ayre dyd fyre. Euen thou (O kyng) art the tree, greete and stronge. Thy greatnesse encreaseth, and reacheth vnto the heauen, so doth thy power to & endes of the earth. But wheras the kyng sawe a watcher euen an holye angel, that came down from heauen, and sayd: hewe downe the tree, and destroy it: yet leaue the grounde of the roote in the earth, & bynde hym vpon the playne field, wth chynes of Iron and Steele. He shal be wet with the dewe of heauen, and his parre shal be with beastes of the fild, till seven yeres be come and gone vpon hym: This (O kyng) is the interpretacion, yea it is the verpe deuyce of hym that is byest of al, and it toucheth my Loide the kyng.

Thou shalt be cast out from men, and thy dwellynge shal be with the beastes of the fild, wth grasse shal thou be fed lyke an ore. Thou must be wet with the dewe of heauen: Yea, seven yeres shal come and go vpon the erl thou knowe the byest hath power vpon the kyngdome of men, and gyuerth them to whom he lyth. Moreover, wheras it was sayed that the roote of the tree should be left vpl in the ground, it betokeneth that thy kyngdom shal remayne hole vnto thee, after thou hast learned to knowe, that the power cometh fro heauen. Wherefore, O kyng be content wth my counsell, that thou mayest loose thy synnes wth righteousnesse, and thine offences wth merce to poore people, for suche thynges shal prolonge thy peace. Al these thynges touch the kyng Nabuchodonosor. So after & twelue monethes, the kyng walked vpon & dwelt in the palace of the kyngdome of Bablon, and sayed: This is the great cytie of Bablon, whych I myself (wth my power & strength) haue made a kynges court, for the honour of my maiesty. Whyle these wordes were yet in the kynges mouthe, there fell a voyce from heauen, sayinge: O kyng Nabuchodonosor

Luke. 11.
Job. 11. 1.

Abuchodonozor to the be it spoken: Thy kyngdom shal depart from the, thou shalt be cast out of mennes company: thy dwel-lyng shal be wyth the bestes of the field, so that thou shalt eat grasse lyke an oxe, & 7 seuen yeares be come & gone ouer thee, euen vntyll thou knowest that the best hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and that he maye geue them vnto whome it pleaseth hym. The very same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Abuchodonozor, so that he was cast out of mens company, and eat grasse lyke an oxe.

His body was wet with the dewe of heauen, & his heres were lyke a great Eagles feathers, & his nayles lyke byrdes clawes.

When this tyme was past, I. Abuchodonozor lyst vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandynge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thanks vnto the highest. I magnified and praysed hym that lyueth for euer moze, whose power endureth alwaye, and his kyngdome from one generacion to an other in comparison of whome al they that dwell vpon the earth, are to be reputed as nothyng.

Dan. iii. 28

He handleth accordynge to his wyll amonge the powers of heauen, and among the inhabitantes of the earth, and there is none that may resist his hande, or saye: what doest thou. At the same tyme was myne vnderstandynge geuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honoure of my kyngdome, to my dignitie, and to myne owne shape agayne. My great estates & prynces sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worship. Then dyd I Abuchodonozor loue, magnify and prayse the kyng of heauen, for all his workes are true, and his wayes ryght. As for those that goe proude lyke, he is able to bring them downe.

Job. xii. 9

Job. xii. 9

The .v. Chapter.

Balthazar kyng of Babylon abusynge the vessels of the temple, seeth a hand wytyng in the wall. The soothsayers called of the kyng, can not expounde the wytyng. Daniel is called which readeth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthazar becometh layne, Darius succeedeth in his crowne.

2. pa. xxxv. c

Kyng Balthazar made a great banquet to his thousand lordes: with al these thousand he made great chere, & was drunken wyth wyne, he commaunded to bring him the golde and syluer vessels, whiche his father Abuchodonozor had taken out of the temple at Ierusalem: that the kyng and his lordes wyth his quene & concubines myght drynke therin. So they brought the golden vessel that was taken out of the temple of the lordes house at Ierusalem. Then the kyng and his lordes wyth his quene & concubines dronke of them. They dronke wyne, and praysed they: I vases of golde, syluer, copper, Iron, wood and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mannes hand wytyng ryght ouer agaynst the candel-lycke vpon the playn wall in the kynges palace: and the kyng saw the palme of the hand that wrote. Then chaiged the kyng his countenance, and his thoughtes troubled hym, so that the ioyntes of his bodye shoke, and his knees smote one agaynst the other. Wherefore the kyng cryed mightilye, that they should bring hym the charmers, Caldes and enchanters of deuils. The kyng spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, and sayed: Who so can rede this wytyng, and shewe me the playne meanynge therof: shal be clothed wyth purple, haue a chayne of golde aboute his necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kyngdome.

Dan. ii. 2

Upon this, came al the kynges wyse men, but they coude neyther reade the wytyng, ne shewe the kyng what it signified. Then was the kyng sore astraped, in so much that his coloure chaunged, and his lordes were sore bered. So by reason of this matter, that happened to the kyng and his lordes, the quene went by her self into the bankette house, and spake vnto the kyng, sayinge: O kyng God saue thy lyfe for euer: Let not thy thoughtes trouble the, and lette not thy countenance be chaunged. For wher there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the spirite of the holye goddes with in hym, as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge and wysedome lyke the goddes. Yea the kyng Abuchodonozor thy father made this man chiefe of the soothsayers, charmers Caldes & deuill counsaillers, because that suche an aboundant spirite, knoweth ledge & wysedome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes & to declare hard doubtes) was founde in hym: yea, euen in Daniel, whome the kyng named Balthazar. Let this same Daniel be sent for, and he shall tel, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kyng. So the kyng spake vnto Daniel, and sayed: Telle thou that Daniel, one of the prisoners of Iuda, whome my father the kyng brought out of Iure: I haue heard speake, thou hast the science of the holpe goddes, experience and vnderstandynge, and that there hath bene great wysedome founde in the. Now haue there bene brought me wyse and cunnyng charmers to reade this wytyng, and to shewe me the meanynge therof: But they coude not tell me, what this matter signified. Wherefore I saye, that thou couldest expounde the thynges, and declare hard doubtes. Well than if thou canst reade this wytyng, and shewe me the meanynge thereof thou shalt be clothed wyth purple haue chayne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kyngdome.

Daniel answered, and sayd before the kyng: As for thy rewardes, kepe them thy selfe, or geue thy ryghte gyftes to al

there yet not the lesse I will reade the wrytynge vnto the kynge and shewe hym the interpretation thereof. O kynge, God the hyghest gaue vnto Nabuchodonozor thy father, the dygnytie of a kynge, wryth worshyppe and honoure: so that al people, kynredes and tonges stode in awe & feare of hym, by reason of the hygh estate that he had set hym. For wher, he shewe to some he wold: he smote, to whom it pleased hym.

Dan. iii. d Agayne: whom he wold, he sette vp: and whom he lyst, he put downe. But because his herte was so proud, and his stomacke set so fast vnto wylfulnesse: he was deposed from his kingly throne, and his maiesty was taken from hym. He was hurte oute from amonges men, his herte was lyke a beastes herte, and his dwelling was with the wyld asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an oxe, and his bodie was wet with the dewe of the heauen: tyl he knew that the hyghest had power vpon the king-domes of men, and setteyth ouer the whom he lyst. And thou hys sonne (O Balshazar) for all this, hast not submitted thine hert, though thou knewest al these thynges: but hast magnified thy selfe about the Lorde of heauen, so that the vessels of hys house were brought before the: that thou, & thy Lordes, wryth thy quene and concubines, myghte drinke wine therein. And hast praysed the Idols of silver and golde, copper & pyron, of wood and stone. As for the God in whose hande conspacth thy bryd and all thy wayes, thou hast not loued hym.

B Therefore is the palme of this hand sent hyther from hym, to token vnto thy wry-tyng. And this is the scripture, that is wrytten vp: Mene, Tharel, Shares. Now the interpretation of the thyng is: Mene, God hath numbred thy kingdome, and brought it to an ende: Tharel, thou arte weyed in the balance and arte founde to lyght: Shares, thy kingdome is delte in partes, and giuen to the Medes & Perses.

Then commaunded Balshazar, to cloth Daniel wryth purple, to hange a chayne of golde aboute hys necke, and to make a proclamacion concernynge hym, that he shoulde be the ruler of the thyrde part of his kingdome. The verye same nyghte was Balshazar the kynge of the Caldees slayne Darius out of Media tooke the kingdome, being. xlii. yere of age.

The vii. Chapter.

Daniel to make ruler ouer the lordes. The iacton of an acte, agaynst Daniel. The nacion of the acte, wherof Daniel is accused the kynge as a transgression. He is in a den of lyons by the commaundement of the kynge. He is deliuered by faith in God.
His accusers are put in to the lyons to be slayne. Darius by the proclamation of the magistres the God of Daniel.

Then Darius to set ouer, hys kingdom. C. x. lordes wherof shoulde be hys kingdome aboute. About there be set the lordes (of whom Daniel was one) that the lordes myghte gouerne accomptes vnto them, and the kynge to be vndisturbed. But Daniel exceeded all these lordes and lordes, for the spirite of God was plenteous in hym: so that the king was mynded to set him ouer the hole realme. Wherefore the lordes & lordes sought, to wyche out in Daniel some quarel agaynst the kingdome, yet coude they fynde none occasyon ne faulte vpon hym.

For wher he was so faythfull, that there was no blame ne dishonesty founde in hym.

Then sayed these men: we will get no quarrell agaynst this Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe of hys God. Vpon this wente the lordes and lordes togyther vnto the king, and sayed thus vnto hym: kynge Darius God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greates of the realme: as the lordes, Dukes, Sherautes, and Iudeges, are determined to put out a commandement of the kynge, and to make a sure stature, namely that whoso belitteth any pes-ticion, eyther of any God or man (wryth this. xxx. dayes) excepte it be onely of the, O kynge: the same person may be cast into the lyons den. Wherefore, O kynge con-firme this statute, and make a wrytynge that the thyng wherby the Medes and Perses haue ordeined be not altered ne broken. So Darius made the wrytynge, & confirmed it. Nowe when Daniel vnder-stode that the wrytynge was made, he went into his house: and the windowes of hys hall, towarde Jerusalem, stode open. There kneled he downe vnto his knees, the thre times a daye, theret he made hys peticion, and prayed vnto God, lyke as his maner was to doo afore tyme.

Then these men made searche, & founde Daniel makinge hys peticion, and prayinge vnto hys God: So they came to the king, and spake before hym concernynge hys commaundement, sayinge: O kynge hast thou not subscribed the statute, that wryth in thyspe dayes whoso requyryth hys peticion of anye God or man but only of thy selfe, O kynge: he shalbe cast into the den of the lyons? The kynge answered, and sayed: yea it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that may not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayed vnto the kynge: Daniel one of the pryfeners of Iude O kynge, regardeth neyther the, ne thy statute that thou hast made, but mak-eth hys peticion the thre times a daye.

When the kynge heard these wordes, he was sore grieved, and woulde haue excused Daniel, to deliuer hym, and put of the matter, vnto the Sunne went downe, to the intent that he myghte saue hym.

These men perceyvinge the kinges mynde, sayed vnto hym: knowe this (O kynge) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is that the commaundement and statute

statute wherby the kyng maketh, may not be altered. Then the kyng had them bring Daniel, and they cast hym into the lions denne. The kyng also spake vnto Daniel, & sayd: by God, whom thou alway seruest, euen he shall defende thee. And there was brought a stone, & lared vpon the hole of the den, this þ kyng sealed with his owne ring, and with the signet of his prynces: that the kynges commaundement concerning Daniel, should not be broken.

So the kyng went into his palace, and kept him sobere all night, so that there was no table spread before hym, ne yet he coude be take any slepe. But betymes in the morning at the breake of the day, the kyng arose, & went in all hast vnto the den of the Lyons. Now as he came nigh vnto þ den, he cryed with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunte of the lyving God, is not thy God (whom thou alway seruest) able to deliuer thee from the Lyons? Daniel sayd vnto the kyng: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. My God hath sent his angel, which hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they myght not hurte me. For wher myne vngilynes is founde oute before hym. And as for the, O kyng, I neuer offended thee.

Then was the kyng exceedinge glad and commaunded to take Daniel oute of the den. So Daniel was brought out of the den, & no maner of hurt was found vpon hym. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men whiche had accused Daniel, the kyng commaunded to bring them, and to cast them in the Lyons den, them, their chyldren and their wyues. So the Lyons had the mastery of them, & brake all their bones a sonder, or euer they came at the grounde.

After this, wrote kyng Darius vnto all people kinredes, and runges, that dwelt in all landes: peace be multiplyed wth you: My commaundement is, in all myr dominion and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels God.

For he is the lyving God, whiche abydeth euer: his kyngdome shall not faile, and his power is euerslastinge. It is he that deliuereth, & sauerh: he doeth wonders and merueylous workes, in heauen and in earth: he hath preserved Daniel from the power of the Lyons. This Darius well prospered in the reygne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

The vii. Chapter.

A vision of foure beastes shewed vnto Daniel. The vision is interpreted of foure kyngdomes of the world. Of the power & increase of Babilon. Of þ euerslasting kyngdome of Christ.

In the first reare of Balthazar kyng of Babilon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a vision was in his head vpon his bed. Whiche dreame he wrote, and the sum of the matter is this: Daniel spake and said: I sawe in my vision by nyght, and beholde the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the sea, and foure greete beastes came vp from the sea one vnto the other.

The fyrste was as a lyon, and yet had he Eagles wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were plucked from hym, and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon his fere as a man, and that there was gyven hym a mans herte.

Beholde, the seconde beaste was lyke a beare, & stode vpon the one syde. Amonge his teeth in his mouth he had thre grete long teeth, and it was sayd vnto hym: Arise, eate vp muche fleshe. Then I looked: and beholde, there was an other lyke to a Leopard: this had wynges as a foule, euen foure vpon the backe. This beaste had thre beades, and there was power gyven hym. After this I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde the fourth beaste was grym, & horrible, and merueylous stronge. It had grete Iron teeth, it deuoured, destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fere. It was fatte vnto the other beastes that were before it: for it had ten hornes, wherof I tooke good hede.

And beholde, there came by among them, & an other lyke horne, before whome there were thre of the first hornes plucked away. Beholde this borne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speakinge presumptuous thynges. I looked tyll the seares were prepared, & tyll the old aged sat hym downe. His cloyng was as whyle as snowe, and the beates of his head lyke the pure woll. His stone was lyke the fyre flame, & his whelke as the burninge fyre. There dyde forth a spyre stream, and went oute from hym. A thousande tymes a thousande secured hym. A. thousande tymes a. thousande hym. The iudgement was sette, and the dokes opened. Then I toke hede thereunto, because of þ voyce of þ proude wordes, whiche that borne spake. I behelde tyll the beaste was slaine, & his body destroyed, and gyven ouer to be burnt in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but theyr lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vision by nyght, & beholde there came one in the cloudes of heauen like the sonne of a man, which went vnto the olde aged, before whome they brought hym: Then gaue he him power and dignitie regal, that all people, trybes and runges should secue hym. His power is an euerslasting power, whiche shall neuer be put doyme: and his kyngdome endureth vncorrupt. My herte was vered, & I Daniel had a troubled spirite wthyn me, and the visions of my head made me a frayd: tyll I gat me vnto one of them that stode by, to knowe the treuth, concerning al these thynges. So he told me, & made me vnderstande the interpretation of these thynges.

The. viii. Chapter.

These four greates beasts, are four kynges which shal arysse out of the earth. These shal take in the kyngdome of the sayntes of the most hygh, and possesse it tyll moze and moze for a long season. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the truth, concernynge the fourthe beast, which was so farr vnlke the other beasts, and so horrible: whose teeth were of yron, and his nayles of brasse: whiche deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his feete. I desired also to knowe the truth, as touchynge the tenne hornes that he had vpon his head, & this other whiche came vp afterwarde before whose face there fell downe thre: whiche horne had eyes and a mowthe that spake presumptuous thynges, and looked wyth a gremmer vpsage then his felowes. I beheld, and the same horne made battaile agaynst the sayntes, yea and gat the victory of them vntill the tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgement was gynn to the chiefest sayntes, and tyll the tyme that the sayntes had the kyngdome in possession. He gaue me this answer: That fourth beast shal be the fourth kyngdome vpon earth: it shal be moze then all other kyngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade downe, and destroy all other landes.

The ten hornes, are ten kynges, that shal arysse out of the kyngdome, after whome there shal stande vp an other, which shal be greater then the first. He shal subdue thre kynges, and shal speake wordes agaynst the hygh of all: he shal destroy the sayntes of the most hygh, and thynke that he may chaunge tymes and lawes. They shal be giuen vnder his power vntill a tyme two tymes, and halfe a tyme.

But the iudgement shal be kept, so that his power shal be taken from hym, for he shal be destroyed, and perishe at the last. As for the kyngdome, power, and al might that is vnder the heauen: it shal be gynn to the holpe people of the most hygh, whose kyngdome is euerlastynge, yea all powers shal serue and obey hym. Thus farre extende the wordes. Neuerthelesse, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenance chaunged, but the wordes I kept tyll in my bette.

The. viii. Chapter.

A vision of a strife betwene a raim and an he goate. The vnderstandynge of the vision, is of the battell betwene the kyng of Babilonia, and the kyng of the Grecians. Of the Hamille kyng Antiochus.

In the thyrtyd yere of the rayne of kyng Balthazar, there appeared a vision vnto me Daniel after that I had sene the first, I sawe in a vision (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chiefe cite, whiche lyeth in the lande of Elam) and in the vision I thought I was by the ryuer Tigris. Then I looked vp, and sawe: and beholde, there stode before the ryuer, a raim, whiche had hoynes: and these hoynes were hygh, but one was higher then an other, and the hygher came vp last.

The Prophecy

I sawe that this raim pushed with his hoynes, agaynst the West, agaynst the North, and agaynst the South: so that no beastes myght stande before hym, nor defende them from his power: but he did as hym liked, and waxed greatly. I tooke hede vnto this, and then came there an he goate from the West out the hole earth, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a marueylous goodlye horne betwixt his eyes, and came vnto the raim that had the two hoynes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne scarcely vpon him with his might. I sawe hym drawe hygh vnto the raim, being very scarce vpon hym: yea he gaue hym such a stroke, that he brake his two hoynes: Neether had the raim so muche strength as to stande before hym: but he cast hym downe, trode hym vnder his fete: and no man was able to helpe the raim out of his power.

The goate waxed exceeding greate, and when he was at the strongest, his greate horne was broken also. Then grew there other four such lyke in the stede, toward the.iii. wyndes of the heauen. Yea out of one of the lest of these hoynes, there came vpper an other horne, which waxed marueylous greater toward the south, toward the East, and toward the saye pleasaunte lande. It grew vp to the hole of heauen, whereof it dyd cast some downe to the ground, and of the starrs also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yea it grew vp vnto the pynce of the host, from whom the dayly offering was taken, and the place of his Sanctuarye casten downe. And a certayne season was gynn vnto it, agaynst the dayly offering (because of wyckednesse) that it myghte cast downe the verrie to the ground, & so to prosper in all thynges that it went about.

Vpon this I herde one of the sayntes speaking, whiche saynte sayed vnto one that asked this question: Howe long shal this vision of the dayly sacrifice and of the manyng abominacion endure: that the Sanctuarye and the power shal so be troden vnder fete? And he answered hym: Vnto the euening and the moynynge, even two thousand & thre hundred dayes: then shal the sanctuaty be defensed agayne.

Now when I Daniel had sene this vision, and sought for the vnderstandynge of it, beholde, there stode before me a thyng lyke vnto a man. And I heard a mannes voyce in the ryuer of Tigris, whiche cryed, and sayd: O Gabriel, make this man vnderstand the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his comynge, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne of man. of me, make well, for in the last time shall this vision be fulfilled. Nowe as he was speaking vnto me, I waied saynt, so that I suncke downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me, and set me vpon my feet, saying: Behold, I will shew thee, what shall happen in the last tyme: for in that tyme appointed it shall be fulfilled.

The ramme wherby thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kynge of the Medes and Perses: but the goat is the kynge of Greke lande: the greare horn that stood betwixt his eyes, that is the principall kynge. But where as it brake, and foure othertise vp in the skie, it signifieth, that oute of this people shall stande vpon foure kyngdomes, but not so myghty as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynesse is a growynge) there shall arise a kynge of an vnshamefull face, wherby shall be tople in darkes speakynges.

He shall be myghty and stronge, but not in his owne strenght. He shall destroye about measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prosper: he shall have the stronge & holy people. And thowm his craftines, falsed shall prosper in his hand, his heere shall be proude, and many one shall be put to death in his welchines. He shall stande vpon agaynst the prince of princes, but he shall be destroyed without hande. And this vision that is shewed vnto thee, is as sure as the evening and the morning. Therefore write thou vpon this sight, for it shall be long or it come to passe.

Upon this was I Daniel very sapnte, so that I lepe sycke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I went about, the kynges busynesse, and manuepled at the vylspoyt, neuertheles no man knewe of it.

The ix. Chapter.

Daniel despyeth to haue that perfourmed of God which he had promysed concerning the returne of the people from their banishment in Babylon I true confession, Daniels prayer is heard: Gabriel the Angell expoundeth vnto him the vision of the thre crowes and ten weekes. The annoynting of Christ. The buyldynge agayne of Ierusalem vnder Rehemes. The death of Christ. The collinge oute of the wycked Jewes.

In the fyrste yere of Darius the sonne of Astuetus, wherby was of the seede of the Medes, and was made kynge ouer the realme of the Caldees: yea euen in the fyrst yere of his reigne, I Daniel despyed to knowe the peaclye nombre oute of the booke, wherof the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophete, that Ierusalem should be waste thre crowes and ten yeres: and I turned me vnto God the Lorde for to pray and make myne intercession, with fasting, sackcloth and ashes. I prayed before the Lorde my God, & knowledged, sayinge: O Lord, thou great & fearful God, thou that keepst couenante and merce with them, wherby thou louest them, and doest thy commaundementes: We haue sinned, we haue offended, we haue bene disobedient and gone backe: yea we haue departed frome all thy preceptes and iudgements.

We would neuer folowe thy seruantes the prophetes, that spake in thy name to our kynges and princes, to our forefathers, and to all the people of the lande. O Lorde, thyngreousnes belongeth vnto thee, vnto vs partapner the wronge but open shame: as it is come to passe this daye vnto euery man of Iuda, and to them that dwell at Ierusalem: Yea vnto all Israel, whether they be farre or nigh: thowme out all landes: wherein thou hast strowed them, because of the offences that they had done agaynst thee.

Yea O Lorde, vnto vs, to our kynges & princes, to our forefathers: euen to vs all that haue offended thee, belongeth open shame. But vnto thee, O Lorde our God, pertapnerd mercy and forgiveness. As for vs, we are gone backe from him, and haue not obeyed the voice of the Lord our God, to walke in thy lawes, which he layed before vs by thy seruantes the prophetes: yea all Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy law, so that they haue not darkened vnto thy voyce.

Wherefore the curse and othe, that is written in the law of Moses the seruant of God (agaynst whom we haue offended) is pouted vpon vs. And he hath perfourmed his wordes, whiche he spake agaynst vs: and agaynst our iudges that iudged vs, to bring vpon vs suche a great plague, as neuer was vnder heauen, yke as it is now come to passe in Ierusalem. Yea all this plague, as it is written in the lawe of Moses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not our prayer before the Lorde our God, that we myght turne agayne from our wickednesse, and to be learned in thy verities. Therefore hath the Lorde made haste, to bringe this plague vpon vs: for the Lorde our God is thyngreous in all his workes wherby he doeth: for wherby, we woulde not hearken vnto his voyce. And now, O Lorde our God, thou that with a myghty hande hast brought thy people oute of Egypt, to geue thee a name, wherby thou remainest this daye: we haue sinned O Lorde, and done wickedlye agaynst all thy thyngreousnesse: yet let thy wrathfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseeche thee) from thy citty Ierusalem thy holy hill. And wherby: for our synnes sake, and for the wickednesse of our forefathers is Ierusalem and thy people abhorred of all them that are about vs. Now therefore, O our God, here the prayer of thy seruant, and his intercession. O let not thy face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that it be waste.

O my God, encline thine eare, and hearken (at the least for thine owne sake) open thine eyes: beholde howe we be desolated, yea and the citty also, wherby is called after thy name: for we doo not cast our prayers before the in our owne righteousness, no, but onely in thy great mercies, O Lord, heare: O forgive us: O Lord consider, tary not ouer long: but for thyne owne sake do it, O my God: for thy cite & thy people is called after the name.

F As I was yet speakinge at my prayers, knowledgyng myne owne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makinge so myne intercession before the Lord my God, for the holy wylls sake of my God: pea, whyle I was yet speakinge in my prayer, beholde, the man Gabryell (whom I had sene afore in the vpsion) came flying to me, and touched me about the offerpunge tyme in the euenpynge. He informed me, and spake vnto me: O Danyel sared be, I am nowe come to make the vnderstand it: For as soone as thou beganest to make thy prayer, it was so deuised, and therfore am I come to shew the. And why? for thou art a man greatly beloued.

A weke is taken here for vii. yeres as in Gen. xii. where fore the lxx. weekes are foure. c. and xx. yeres.

Wherfore, ponder the matter wel, that thou mayst learne, to vnderstande the vpsion * this score and ten weekes are determined ouer thy people, and ouer the holpe citie: that the wyckednesse may be consumed, that the syn maye haue an ende, that the offence may be reconciled, & to bringe in euerlastynge ryghteousnesse, to fulfill the vpsions and the prophetes, and to appoint the most holy one. Vnderstand this then, and marke it wel, that from the time it shalbe concluded, to go and repayre Ierusalem againe, vnto Christ (or the anointed) prince: there shall be seuen weekes. Then shall the stretes and walles be builte agayne. lxx. weekes, but with hard troublous tyme. After these lxx. weekes, shall Christe be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in hym. Then shall there come a people with the prince, and destroy the cite and the Sanctuary: and bys ende shal come as þ water flood. But the desolacion shal continue tyl the ende of the battayle.

He shal make a strong bonde with manye, for the space of a weke: and when the weke is halfe gone, he shal put downe the slayne and meate offerpunge. The .x. Chapter.

There appeareth vnto Danyel a man clothed in lynnen, whiche sheweth hym wherfore he is sent.

In the thyrde yere of kynge Atrus of Babilonia, there was shewed vnto Danyel (otherwise called Balthazar) a matter, pea a true matter, but it is yet a long tyme vnto it. He vnderstoode the matter wel and percepued what the vpsion was. At the same tyme, I Danyel mourned for the space of thre weekes, so that I had no lust to eate breade: as for flesch and wyne, there came none withyn my mouth. So, I dyd not ons anoynt my selfe, till the whole thre weekes were out.

Upou the .xiii. daye of the first moneth, I was by the greete flood, called Tigris: I lyft vp myne eyes, and looked: and behold, a man clothed in lynne, whose loines were girded up with fine golde of Acaby, bys bodie was lyke the Chrysolite stone, bys face (to looke vpon) was lyke lychtynge, bys eyes as the flame of fyre, bys acmes and fete were lyke saye glistering metall, but the voyce of bys woordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude.

Dan. vii. b
Apoc. i. c.

I Daniel alone sawe thys bysion, the men that were with me, sawe it not, but a great fearfulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye and hyd them selues. I was left there my self alone, and sawe this great bysion, so longe tyl there remayned no moze strenght wythin me: pea I lost my colour cleane, I wasted awhay, & my strenght was gone. Yet herde I the voyce of bys woordes, and as sone as I herd it, sayntnes came vpon me, and I fel downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whiche set me vpon my knes, and vpon the palmes of my handes, saying vnto me: O Daniel, thou welbeloued man: take good hede of the woordes, that I shall say vnto the, and stande ryght vp, for vnto the am I nowe sent.

And when he had sayd these woordes, I stood vp tremblynge. Then sayd he vnto me, feare not Daniel: for why sence the fyrste daye that thou set thyne herte to vnderstande, and dyddest haften thy selfe before thy God: thy woordes haue bene herd. And I had come vnto thee, when thou beganest to speake hadde not the prince ouer the kyngdome of the perses withstande me. xxi. dayes. But lo Michael one of the chiefest princes, came to helpe me, him haue I left by the king of persia, and am come to shew the what shal happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes. For it wyl be long yet or the vpsion be fulfilled.

Dan. v. d.

Now when he had spoken these woordes vnto me, I caste downe my head to the ground and helde my tounge. Behold there touched my lippes one verpe lyke vnto a manne. Then opened I my mouth, and sayd vnto hym, that stood before me: O my Lord, my lippes are lewised in the vpsion, and there is no moze strenght with in me: Howe maye my Lordes seruante then talke with my Lord? seynge there is no strenght in me, so that I cannot take my breath: Upon thys there touched me agayne, one muche lyke a manne, and comforted me, sayinge: O thou man so wel beloued, feare not: be contente, take a good herte vnto the, and be strong.

Dan. ix. b.

So when he had spoken vnto me, I recovered, and sayd: Speake on my Lord, for thou hast refreshed me. Then sayd he: knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto thee: nowe wyl I go agayne to fight with the the prince of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, for, the prince of Greke lande shall come. Neuerthelesse, I wil shewe the the thyng, that is fast noted in the scripture of trued. And as for all powder matters, there is none that helpeth me in them, but Michael your prince.

The .xl. Chapter.

In a prophete of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Syria. Of the kyngdome of Egypt, and of the bondes therof, and of the battell wyth the kyngdom of Syria. Of the Jewes that dye vnto the kyng of Egypt, whom Antiochus the kyng of Syria persecuteth, whiche figureth vnto vs Antichriste. The pryde of Antiochus.

And in the laste peare of Darius of Medea, I gode by hym, to comforte hym, and to strengthe hym, and nowe wil I shewe thee the trued. Beholde, there shall stande up yet three kynges in Persia, but the fourth shall be farre wyche then they all. And when he is in the chiefest power of his reche, he shall prouoke euery man agaynst the realme of Greke land. Then shall there arise yet a myghty kyng that shall rule with greate dominion, and doo what him lyst. And as soone as his kyngdome cometh up, it shall be destroyed, and deuoyded towarde the. iiii. wyndes of the heauen. They that come after him, shall not haue suche power and dominion as he: but his kyngdome shall be scattered, yea euen amonges other then those. And the kyng of the south shall be myghtier, then his other princes. Agaynst him there shall one make him selfe stronge, & shall rule his dominion with great power. But after certayne yeres they shall be toynded together, and the kynges daughter of the south shall come to the kyng of the north, for to make frendshipp, but she shall not obteyne the power of that ayme, neither shall she be able to endure thowme his myght: but she, & such as brought her (yea and he that begat her, and comforted her for his tyme) shall be deuoyced up. Out of the braunches of her roote, there shall one stande up in his tede, which with power of armes shall geue thowme the kynges lande of the north, and handle hym accordyng to his strengthe.

As for their folles and princes, with their costly Jewels of golde and syluer, he shall carpe them amaye captiues into Egypte, and he shall preuaile agaynst the kyng of the north certayne yeres. And when he is come into the kynges realme of the south he shall be fayne to turne agayne into his owne lande. Whiche his sonnes shall be displeased, and shall gather together a myghty greate hoste of people: and one of them shall come, and go thowme lyke a water flood, then shall he returne, and go forth with despyte and boasting vnto his owne lande.

Then the kyng of the south shall be angry, and shall come forth to fight agaynst the kyng of the north, he shall dyngge a greate myltitude of people together, and a great heape shall be gauen into his hand, these shall be carry away with great pryde, for so muche as he hath cast downe so many thousandes, neuerthelesse he shall not preuaile. For the kyng of the north, shall gather (of the newe & greater heape of people then afore, and come forth, after a certayne tyme & yeres) with a myghty host and exceeding great good.

At the same tyme there shall many stand by agaynst the kyng of the south, so that the wycked chyldren of the people also shall take them selues (to fulfill the vrsion) and then fall. So the kyng of the north shall come to lay seige, & to take the strong fenced ctytes: And the power of them of the south shall not be able to abyde hym, and the best men of the people shall not be so stronge as to resist hym. Shortly, when he cometh, he shall handle hym as he lyst, and no man shall be so hardy as to stande agaynst hym. He shall stande in the pleasant countrey, whiche thowme hym shall be destroyed. He shall set his face wyth all his power to obteyne his kyngdome, & to be lyke it. Yea that shall be doo, and greeue hym vnto the daughters amonges women, to destroy hym. But he shall sayle, neyther shall he obteyne his purpose.

After this shall he set his face vnto the ples, and take manie of them. A prince shall stoppe hym, to do hym a shame besyde the confusid that els shall come vnto him. Thus shall he turne agayne to his owne lande, stumbe and fall, & be no more sound: so be that came vpon him, and did hym violence, shall stande in his place, and haue a pleasant kyngdome: and after fewe dayes he shall be destroyed, and that neyther in wyche, nor in battayle. In his tede there shall arise a vyle person, not holden worthy of a kynges dignite: this shall come in craftely, & obteyne the kyngdome with fawse wordes: he shall fight agaynst the armes of the myghty (and destroy them) yea, and agaynst the prince of the couenaunte.

So after that he hath taken truce with hym, he shall handle disceytfully: that he maye get up, and overcome hym with a small doctre, and so with craftynesse to get hym to the fatted place of the lande, and to deale otherwys then epyther his fathers or groundfathers dyd. For he shall destroy the thyng that they robbed and spoyled, yea and all their substance, ymagynge thoughtes agaynst the stronge holde, and that for a tyme. His power and herte shall be styred up with a greate armie agaynst the kynges of the South, where thowme the kyng of the South shall be moued then vnto battayle with a great and myghty hoste also. Neuerthelesse he shall not be able to stande, for they shall conspyre agaynst hym. Yea, they that eate of hys meate shall hure hym, so that hys hoste shall fall, and many be slayne downe.

Mac. ii. 1

These twoo knynges shall be mynded to doo myschete, and talke of discepte at one table, but they shall not prosper: for why? the ende shall not come yet, vnto the tyme appoynted. Then shall he go home agayne into hys owne lande wth greate good, and set hys heare agaynst the holy covenante, he shall be busy agaynst it, and then retorne home. At the tyme appoynted he shall come agayne, & goo toward the south. So shall it happen otherwyse then at the first: yet ones agayne. And why? the shipps of Tybire shall come vpon hym, that he maye be synpten and turne agayne, that he may take indignacion agaynst the covenant of holynes, to meddle agaynst it. Yea he shall tourne hym, and draine suche vnto hym as leaue the holpe covenante.

En. xii. 11.

He shall set myghtye men to vnbalowe the Sanctuarie of strenght, to put downe the dayly offeryng, and to set by the abhorminable desolacion, and suche as breake the covenante shall be flatter wth saye wordes. But the people that wyl knowe they: God, shall haue the ouer hande and prosper. These also that haue vnderstandyng among the people, shall enfourme the multitude: & for a long season they shall be persecuted wth sword, wth fyre, wth captiuitie, and wth the taking awaye of theyr goodes. Howe when they fall, they shall be set up wth a lytle helpe, bye manye that cleaue vnto them saynedly.

Ye some of those which haue vnderstandyng shall be persecuted also, that they may be tryed, purified, and clenfed, tyl the tyme be out, for there is yet an other tyme appoynted. The kyng shall do what hym lyst, he shall exalt and magnifye hym selfe aboue all, that is God. Yea he shall sweake marueylous thynges agaynst the God of al Goddes, wherin he shall prosper so long tyl the wyrd be fulfilled, for the conclusion is deuised already. He shall not regarde the God of hys fathers, but hys lust shall be vpon women: Yea, he shall not care for any God, for he shall magnifie hym selfe aboue all. In hys place shall be woorthyppe the myghtye ydols: and the God whome hys fathers knewe not, shall be honoure wth golde & syluer, wth precious stones, and pleasaunt Jewels.

Apoc. xv. 2.

Thys shall he do, sekynge helpe and succoure at the myghtye ydols and straunge Goddes. Suche as wyl receyue hym, and take hym for God, he shall giue the greate woorthyppe and power: yea and make them Lordes of the multitude, and gyue them the lande wth rewards.

In the latter tyme shall the kyng of the south styue wth hym, and the kyng of the North in lyke maner shall come agaynst hym wth charrettes, horsemenne, and wth a greate nauye of shyppes. He wyl come into the landes, destroy and goo thowme: he shall enter also into the sayre pleasaunt lande. Many cyties and countreyes shall decaye, excepte Edom, Moab, and the best of the chyldren of Ammon, whiche shall escape from hys hande. He shall stretch forth hys handes vpon the countreyes, and the lande of Egypte shall not escape hym. For thowme hys goynge in, he shall haue domynion ouer the treasures of syluer & golde, and ouer all the precious Jewels of Egypte, Lybia, and Ethiopia.

Apoc. xii. 1.

Heuerthelesse the ydynges oute of the East and the North shall trouble hym, for the whiche cause he shall goo forth to destroye and curse a greate multitude. The tentes of hys palace shall be pyched betwixt the two seas, vpon the hyl of the noble sanctuary, for he shall come to the ende of it, and then shall no man helpe hym.

The time wil come also that the great prince Michael, whiche standeth on the people syde, shall aryse up, for there shall come a tyme of trouble, such as neuer was sence there begyn to be any people, vnto the same tyme. Then shall the people be deliuered, yea all those that be founde written in the booke. Many of those that slepe in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to the euellasyng syde, some to perpetual shame and reprobacion, the wyse (suche as haue taught other) shall glorie as the shynnyng of beauchen, and those that haue instructed the multitude vnto godlynes, shall be as the steres, world without ende.

The booke of the prophete Oseas.

The first Chapter.

The tyme wherein Oseas propheted Oseas by taking an harlot to his wyfe, signifieth the idolatry of the people. The destruction of the synage of Iheru, and of the Israelites is propheted.

Oys is the worde of the Lord, that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Beery in þ dayes of Oseas, For arhan, & chas & zechias kyng of Iuda: and in the tyme of Jeroboam the son of Joas kyng of Israel.

First when the Lord spake vnto Oseas, he sayd vnto hym: Go thy waye, take an harlotte to thy wyfe, and get chyldren, by her: for the land Iacob committed great whoredome agaynst the Lord. So he went, and toke Gomrah the daughter of Debaiun: which conceived and brought forth a sonne. And the Lord sayd vnto hym: call his name Israel, for I wyl shew the auenge the bloud of Israel vpon the house of Iehu, and wyl bringe the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then wyl I breake the bowe of Israel in the valley of Israel.

She conceived yett agayne, and bare a daughter. And he sayd vnto hym: Call her name Loruhamah (that is, not receyving mercy) for I wyl haue no pitie vpon the house of Israel, but forget them, and put them clene out of remembrance. Nevertheless, I wyl haue mercy vpon the house of Iuda, and wyl saue them, euen thowme the Lord thei God. But I wyl not helpe thei thowme anye bowe, sword, barcl, bowles or horsemen.

Some when he had weaned Loruhamah, she conceived agayne, and bare a sonne. The sayd he: call his name Ioa. For wher ye are not my people, therefore wyl not I be pouer. And though the nombre of the chyldren of Israel be as the sande of the sea, whiche can neyther be measured nor tolde: yett in the place, where it is sayd vnto them, ye be not my people: eue there shal it be thus reported of them: they be the chyldren of the synage God. Then shal the chyldren of Iuda, and the chyldren of Israel be gathered together agayne, and chose them selues one head, and then departe out of the land: for great shalbe the day of Israel.

The.ii. Chapter.

The people is called vnto repentance.

The poore brethren, that they are my people: and pouer synners, that they haue abteyned mercede. For she sayd, I wyl goo after my louers, that geue me my water and my breade, my wol and flaxe, my oyle, and my drinke. But I wil bedge her with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shal not fynde her footekeppes: and though she runne after her louers, yett shal she not get them. She shal seeke them, but not fynde the. The.iii. Chapter.

Of the loue of God towards the people.

Exo. xxi. b A Then sayd the Lorde to me: So yet thy maye, and was an aduoutous wo- man whome thy neyghbour loueth, as the Lorde doth the chyldren of Israel: how be it they haue respect to strange Gods, and loue the myne cannes. So I gat her for. xv. silver linges, and for an Homer & an halfe of barley, & saped vnto her: thou shalt hyde wth me a longe season, but see that thou playest not the harlot, and loke thou meddle wth none other man, and then wyll I kepe my selfe for the.

II. pa. xxi. a Dani. iii. b Thus the chyldren of Israel shall s^e a greate whyle without king and prync, without off. ryng and aulter, wthoute prest and reuelacion. But afterwarde shall the chyldren of Israel conuerte, and seke the Lorde theyr God, and praye theyr kyng: and in the latter dayes they shall worshippe the Lorde, & his lounge kyndnes.

The.iii. Chapter.

A complaunte agaynst the people, and the prestes of Israel.

A Hare the moorde of the Lorde, O chyldren of Israel: for the Lorde must punishe them that dwell in the lande. And why? There is no saythfulnes, there is no mercy, there is no knowledge of God in the lande, but swearing, lyeing, manslaughter, theft, and aduoutrye, haue gotten the ouer hande, and one bloudgy- tynges foloweth an other. Therefore shall the land be in a miserable case, and al they that dwell therein, shall mourne. The bea- stes in the field, the foules in the ayre, and the fyshes in the sea shall dye. Yet is there none that wil chaunge nor reprove an other.

The prestes whiche shoulde reforme v- ther men, are become like the people.

Therefore stumblst thou in the daye tyme, and the prophete wth thee in the nyght. I wyll bring thy mother to sylence, and why? my people perishe, because they haue no knowledge. Seepnge then that thou hast refused vnderstandyng, there- fore wyll I refuse the also: so that I shall no more be my prest. And for so muche as thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wyll also forget thy chyldren. The more they increased in the multitude, the more they synned agaynst me, therefore wyll I chaunge theyr honoure into shame. They eate vp the spynes of my people, and cou- rage them in theyr wyckednes. Thus the prest is become lyke the people. Where- fore I wyll punishe them for theyr wyck- ed wayes, and rewarde them accordyng to theyr owne ymaginacions. They shall eate, and not haue ynough: They haue vs- sed & whoredome, therefore shall they not prosper: and why? they haue forsaken the Lorde, and not regarded hym.

Whoredome, wyne, and bronkenesse take the bert away. My people aske coun- sell at theyr stockes, theyr staffe must rell them. For an whorpe the mynde backe dy- ceined them, so that they commit fornicac- tion agaynst theyr God. They make sacri- fices vpon the bre mountaynes, and burne theyr incense vpon the hylles, yea amoges the okes, groues, and bushes, for there are good shadowes. Therefore your daughters are become harlottes, and your spouses haue broken theyr wedlocke; I wyll not punysh your daughters for theyr despyde, and your wyues that became whores: se- yng the fathers them selues haue medled wth harlottes, & offered wth vncleynesse: but the people that wyll not vnderstande must be punyshed.

Though thou (a) Israel art dysposed to play the harlot, yet shouldest not thou haue offended, O Iuda: thou shouldest not haue runne to Balgala, nor haue gone vnto Bethauen, nor haue sworne, the Lorde lyueth. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lorde therefore shall make her fede, as the lambe that goeth a- strap. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of ydolls, wel, let hym go. Theyr bronkenesse haue put theym backe, and broughte them to whoredome. Theyr eu- ells loue rewarde, bringe (saue they) to theyr owne shame. A wynde shall take hold of theyr fathers, and they shall be confound- ed in theyr offerynges.

The v. Chapter.

Agayn the priests and rulers of Israel. The help of man can do nothing against God.

O ye priests: heare thys, take hede, O thou house of Israel: grue eare, O thou kynglye house: for thys punishment wyl come vpon you that are become a snare vnto Mizpah, and a spiede net vnto the mount of Sabor. They kyll sacrefices by deapes, to begyle the people therewith: therfore wil I punyssh them al. I know Ephraim thei prougb, and Israel is not bypde fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot, & Israel is despyled. They are not mynded to turne vnto the Lord, for they haue an whorish heart, so that they can not know the Lord.

But the pride of Israel wyl be rebuffed hym in hys sacrefices both Israel and Ephraim shall fall for theri wyckednesse, and Juda with them also. They shall come with theyr sheepe and bullockes to seeke the Lord, but they shal not finde him, for he is gone from them. As for the Lord they haue refused hym and broughte vp bastards children: a moneth therfore shall deuouout them, with theyr posses. Blow to the shawmes at Gabaa, and to the trumpet in Ramah, cry out at Berthsan vpon the backside of Ben Iamin. In the time of the plage, shal Ephraim be lashed wast, therfore byd I sayethfully warne the rybes of Israel. Yet are the prynces of Juda become lyke them that remoue the landmarks: therfore wyl I pour out my wrath vpon them lyke water.

Ephraim is oppressed, and can haue no ryght of the law: for wher they folowe the doctrynes of men. Therefore wyl I be to Ephraim as a mothe; and to the house of Juda as a caterpillar.

When Ephraim sawe hys syknes, and Juda his disease: Ephraim went vnto Asur, and sent vnto kyng Iacob, yet coulde not he help you, nor ease you of your pain. I am vnto Ephraim as a lion, and as a liond whelpe to the house of Juda. Euen I wyl spoyle them and go my waye. I wyl take them with me and no man shal rescue them. I wyl goo, and retourne to my place, tyl they waxe fayre, and seeke me.

The vi. Chapter.

Asperio causeth a man to retorne to god, The wyckednes of the priestes.

In their aduersitye they shal seeke me, and saye: come lette vs turne agayne to the Lord: for he hath smitten vs, and he shal heale vs. He hath wounded vs, and he shal bynde vs by again: after (a). ii. daies shal he quicken vs, in the thrid day he shall rayse vs up, so that we shall lue in hys spgite. O Ephraim, what shal I doo vnto thee? Juda, whome shall I entreate the serenge pour loue is like a morning cloud, and like a dewe that goeth early away. Therefore haue I cut down the prophets and let the be staine for my words sake, so that punishment shal come to lgbt.

For I haue pleasure in lounge kyndnesse, and not in offering: pea in the knowe ledge of God more then in burnt sacrifice. But euen lyke as Adam byd, so haue they broken my couenaunt & set me at naught. Galaad is a city of wicked doers, of malicious people and bloudshedders. The multitude of the priestes is lyke an heape of the theues, murderers, and bloud thirsty: for they haue wrought abhominacis. Forcible thynges haue I seene in the house of Israel, ther playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israel is despyled: but Juda shal haue an harvest for hym selfe; when I retorne the captiuitie of my people.

Of the vyces and wantonnes of the people.

V When I undertake to make Israel whole, then the vngreatousnes of Ephraim, and the wyckednes of Samaria cometh to lgbt, then go they about with lies. At home they be chesues, without they sal to robbing. They consider not in theyr heartes that I remembre al theri wyckednes. They go about with theyr owne inuencion but I se them wel prougb. They make the king and prynces to haue pleasure in theyr wyckednesse and lyes. Al these burne in aduouty, as it were an ouen that the baker beaerth, whil he hath left kneading, til the dowe be leuened. Euen so goeth it thys daye with oure kynges and prynces, for they begyn to be wode drunken thowgh wyne, they vse samptaryne with such as byscue them. They wyth the imaginacion of theyr heartes are lyke an ouen, theyr sleepe is all the nyght lyke the slepe of a baker. In the morning he is as hot as the stame of fyre: they are al together as hot an ouen.

They haue deuoured theyr owne iudges, al theri kynges are fallen, yet is ther none of them that calleth vpon me. Therefore must Ephraim be myrre amonge the heathen. Ephraim is become lyke a cake, that no man turneth: Strangers haue deuoured hys strengthe, yet he regardeth it not: he waxe thil of grep heates, yet wyl he not knowe it: and the pride of Israel is cast downe before theyr face yet wyl they not turne to the Lord theyr God, nor seeke hym for al thys.

Wo be unto them for they haue forsaken me.

Eccl. 1. 10.

They muste be destroyed, for they haue set me at nought. I am he that haue redermed them, and yet they dyssemble wth me. They cal not vpon me wth theyr heartes, but lyt houlpynge vpon theyr beds. Where as they come together, it is but for meate and drynke, and me wyl they not obeye, I haue taught them & defended theyr arme, yet do they imagin myschete against me, they curse them selues, but not a ryghte, and are become as a broken botme. Theyr priuies shal be layne wth the sword, for the malice of theyr tounge, such blasphemies haue they leened in the land of Egypte.

The viii. Chapter.

The destruction of Iuda and Israel, because of theyr Idolatry.

Set the boine to thy mouth, and blowe: get the swyrtipe (as an Eagle) vnto the house of the Lord: for they haue broken my couenaunt, and transgressed my lawe. Israel can say vnto me: thou art my God, we know the, but he hath refused þ thinge that is good, therefore shal þ enemye solow vpon hym. They haue ordeined kings, but not thowow me: they haue made pyntes, and I must not know of it. Of theyr siluer and golde haue they made them ymages, to bring them selues to destruction.

Deu. xxi.

1. Be. xii. c.

Theyr calfe, O Samaria, shal be taken away, for my wrothful indignacion is gon forth against the. How longe wyl it be, or they can be clenched? For the calf came fro Israel, the workeman made it, therefore canne it be no God, but euen so a spyders web shal the calfe of Samaria be turned.

* They haue sowne wynde, therefore shal they reape a storme.

That is, they haue giuen them selues to vaine and trifling thinges: theyr fowls shal fall in to greates trouble, and stopp byr.

Theyr seede shal beate no corne, theyr shall no mele be made of theyr encrease: though they reape, yet shal straungers deuaure it vpon Israel: shal perpe the Beneyls shal encrease hym as a foule bellill. Since they went vnto the Assyrians, they are become lyke a wynde alle in the desert.

Ephraim giveth rewardes to gette louers: therefore are they scattered among the Heathen, they wyl I gather the vpon. They shal soone be weary of the burthen of kinges and pyntes. Ephraim hath many auliers to do wyckednes, therefore shal the auliers tourne to bys synne. Though I shew them my lawe neuer so muche, they count it but straunge doctryne. Where as they do sacrifice, offerynge the fleshe, and eatynge it: the Lorde wyl haue no pleasure therein: but wyl remember theyr wyckednes, and punyssh theyr synnes. Israel cur-neith agayne into Egypt, they haue forgotten hym that made them, they buyld charches, and Iuda maketh many strange pyntes: therefore wyl I send a fyre into theyr cupes, and it shal consume theyr places.

The ix. Chapter.

The hunger and captiuitie of Israel.

Do not thou triumphe, O Israel, make no boastyng more then the best of then, for thou hast committed aduonry against thy god: thy strange rewardes hast thou loued, more then al the corne flowers. Therefore shal they no more entoy the corne flowers and wynepyntes, and theyr sthere wyne shal sayle them. They wyl not dwel in the Lorde land, but Ephraim turneth agayne into Egypt and eateth vntreant thynges among the Assyrians.

Agge. ii. r.

They poure out no wyne for a dryncker: offerynge vnto the Lord, neyther glue theyr hym theyr oain offeringes, but they be vnto me as mourners meates, wherein all they that eat the, are defiled. For þ breade þ they haue sude lust vnto, shal not come into the house of the Lord. * What wyl ye doo then in the solemne dayes, and in the feast of the Lord. Lo, they shal get them away for the destruction, Egypt shal receyue them, and Noph shal burye them.

The scrype here calleth the solemne daye, and þ feaste of the Lord.

The nettles shal ouer grow theyr pleasure: saunte goodes, and buttes shal be in theyr tabernacles. Be ye sure (O Israel) þ time of visitacion is come, the dayes of rechepryng are at hand. As for the prophete, he hold hym for a fool: and hym that is rich in the spirit, for a madma, so great is pour wyckednes and inalyce. Ephraim hath made him selfe a watchman of my God, a prophet that is become a snare to do hurt in every secete, and abhominacion in the house of bys God. Theyr be gon to far, and haue destroyed them selues, lyke as theyr dyd also tyme at Saba. Therefore theyr wyckednes shal be remembred, and theyr synnes punyshed.

the igne of the Lorde because that therein þ po, wt of god shewd it selfe in that he suffered the Assyrians to take hym people ppe soners. þ lyke thynges he haue: Joseph. i. b.

I found Israel lyke grapes in the wyldernes, & saw their fathers as þ first spyg of the top of the syg tree, but they are gon to Baal peoz, and tunne awaye fro me to that hametull Idoll, and are become as abhominable as theyr louers. Ephraim dyeth lyke a byrd, so shal theyr glory also. In so much that they shal neither be get, chepye, ne beate chyld. And though they bring vpon any, yet wyl I make þ chyldes among men. Yea wo shal come to the, when I depart from them. Ephraim (as the bynke) is planted in wealchynes, lyke as Atrus but now must he bying bet owne chyldren forth to the manhear.

Jer. xxi. a. Ro. x. a. That is, cometh to naught.

O Lorde thou shalre geue them, what shalst thou geue them? Geue them an vnscuteful wombe, and dry breasts. Al theyr wyckednes is done at Galgal, there dooe I abboze them. For the vngreatounes of theyr own inuencions, I wyl drye the out of my of my house, I wyl loue them no more, for all theyr pyntes are vnprofitful. Ephraim is benen downe, their roote is dryed vp, so that they shal bring no more fruite: yea, & though they bring forth any, yet will I dep-cuen the best beloued fruite of theyr body.

My God shall caste them awaye, for they haue not bene obedient to hym, therefore shal they go astray among the heathen.

The. x. Chapter.

Agaynst Israel and hys dole.

I Israel was a goodly vyne, but he hath brought forth vnprofitable fruite: yea the more fruite he had, the more aulters he made: the more good I. dyd to theyr land, the more frendshipp shewed they vnto theyr images. Theyr hearte is deuised, therefore wyl they be destroyed. The Lord shal breake downe theyr images, he shal destroy theyr aulters. The shal they say: we haue no king: for why we haue not feared the Lord. And what shal then the kynge do to vs? Theyr common togyther, and swetaine orbes: they be confederate togyther, therefore gether theyr punishment, as the webes in the forowes of the land.

W They that dwel in Samaria haue worshipped the calfe of Berchaun: therefore shal the people moue ouer them: yea, and the pyntes also that in theyr welshynes retopled wyl they: and why? It shal passe away from the. It shal be brought to the Assyrians for a presēt vnto king Nereb. Ephraim shal receiue ful punishment: Israel shal be confounded for hys owne ymagina-cions, Samaria wyl bys kinge shal be-uyl away as the scum in the water. The hye places of Auen, wher Israel do synne, shal be cast downe: thistles and thorns shal grow vpon their aulters. Then shal they say to the mooraynes, couer vs, and to the hills, sal vpon vs.

I Israel, thou hast sinned as Gaba did afore tyme, wher they remained: shuld not the battyle then come vpon the wycked children, as wel as vpon the Gabaonites?
I wil chasten them. euen after myne own desyre, the people shal be gathered togy-ther ouer them, when I punish the for theyr great wyckednes.

Ephraim was vnto me, as a colwe that is vnto to plow, therefore I loued hym, and set vpon hys sayre necke. I dyd as Ephraim, Iuda plowed, and Iacob played the houseband man: that they might sow vnto righteousnes, and reape the frutes of weldoing: & they might plowe vp their frethe land, and seke the Lord, til he cam, and see-ned them righteously.

W But now they haue plowed the wyckednes, therefore shal they receiue synne, and eate the fruite of synne. Seynge thou puttest thy confidence in thyne owne wayes, and leapest to the multitude of thy wordes:
ther shal grow a sedition amongs thy people. Al thy strong ciyes shal be lased with siege, as Samana was destroyed wyl his samples, the wycked hym that was aucto-red of Arbel in the day of battaile, wher the mother perished wyl her children.

Euen so shal it goo wyl thou (O Berbel) because of yowre malicious wyckednesse.
Like as the morning goeth away, so shal the kynge of Israel passe.

The. xi. Chapter.

Agaynst the vnhydens of Israel.

V When Israel was yong, I loued him and called him my sonne oute of the lande of Egypte. But the more they were called the more they went back, offering vnto Idols and censyng I magis: I learned Ephraim to go, and bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, that I woulde haue healded them. I libde them wyl cordes of frendshipp, and wyl bandes of loue. I was euen be that layed the yoke vpon theyr neckes. I gaue them fodder my selfe, that they shoulde not go agayne into Egypte. And now is accuse theyr kynge: for they woulde not turne vnto me.

Everfore shal the sword begin in the ci-tyes, the sword that they haue layed by, shal be destroyed and eaten: and that because of theyr owne ymaginations. My people hath no lust to turn vnto me, their prophets lay the yoke vpon them, but they case them not of theyr butther.

What great things haue I giuen the,
O Ephraim: how farthfull ye haue I bescinded the, O Israel: haue I deale wyl the as wyl Adamas: haue I increased the lyke Seboim? No, myn here is otherwise mynded. Yea, my myrre is to see uente: therefore haue I not touned me to destroy Ephraim in my wrathful displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am esuen that holp one in þe midst of the, though I come not into the cite.

The Lord tosterh lyke a Lyon, that they may solowe hym: yea as a Lyon toasterh be, that they may be astarte lyke the chylzen of the sea: that they may be scattered awaye from Egypte, as men scatte byrdes: and scared awaye (as boues use to be, from the Assyrians lande: and that because I woulde haue them cary at home, saith the Lord. But Ephraim goeth aboue me with lies, and the house of Israel byssemblerh. Onely Iuda holdeth hym wyl God, and wyl the true holy thynges.

The. xii. Chapter.

Agaynst the vayne trust of the people.

Ephraim kepeth þe syde, and foloweth after the east wynde, he is euer increasyng lies and destruction. Theyr confederate wyl the Assyrians, theyr oyle is caried into Egypte. The Lord hath a court to hold wyl Iuda, and wyl punish the Iucob: After theyr own wayes accordyng to theyr own inuencions, shal be recompence them. He rooke hys brother by the heele, when he was yet in hys mothers wombe and in his strength he wrestled with god. He strove with the angel and gat the victory, so that he praised and desired him. He found him at Bethel, and there he talked with us. Yet the Lord god of hostes, even the Lord hym selfe remembred hym: Then turne to thy God. kepe mercy and equity, & hope still in thy God. But the merchant hath a false weight in his hand, he hath a pleasure to occupy extortion. Ephraim thynketh thus. Tush, I am ryche, I have power enough. In all my woorke I will not one faute be founde, that I haue offended. Yet am I the Lord thy God, even as when I brought the out of the land of Egypte, and set the in thy tentes, and as in the hye feast dayes. I haue spoken thowowe the prophets, and shewed dyuerse visions, and declared my selfe by the manifestation of the prophets. But at Galaad is the abomination, they are fallen to vanitie. At Balgal they haue slaine oxen: and as many heapes of stones as they had in the land forowes, so many altiers haue they made. Jacob fled into the land of Syria, and Issachar served for a wyfe, and for a wyfe he kept shepe. By a prophete the lord brought them out of Egypte, and by a prophete he preserved them. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to displeasure thowowe his abominacions, therefore shall his blood be poured upon him selfe, & the Lord his god shall reward his blasphemies.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Of the abominacions of Israel

The abominacion of Ephraim is come also into Israel. He is gone backe to Baal, therefore must he dye. And now they synne more and more: of theyr synne they make them molten Images, like the Idollies of the heathen, and yet al is nothing but the worke of the craftesman. Not withstanding they preache of the same: who so wyl knowe the causes, offereth to me. Therefore they shall be as the morning cloud, and as dewe that early passeth awaye, and like as the dulle that the wynde taketh away from the floure, and as smoke that goeth out of the chimney. I am the Lord thy God, whych brought the out of the lande of Egypte: that thou shouldst knowe no God but me onely: and that thou shouldst haue no Sautour but onely me. I toke dyssydent hede of the in the wilderness that day land. But when they were wel fed and had enough, they waxed proude and forgot me. Therefore wyl I be vnto them as a Lyon, and as a Leopard in the waye to the Assyrians. I wyl come upon them as a she Beate that is robbed of her whealpes, and I wyl breake that theyr hearte of theyr. Where wyl I deuout them as a lppipea the wyld beastes shall teare them.

Israel, thou dost but deceyve thy self. In me onely is thy heale. Where are the Kinges now, that should helpe them in all thy cityes? Yea and thy iudges, of whom thou saydest, geue me a King and Princes: well, I gaue the a King in my wrath and in my displeasure wyl I take hym from the again. The wickednes of Ephraim is belid together, and his synne lpyd byd. Therefore shall sorowes come vpon hym, as a woman that traunyleth. An vndiscreet sonne is he, for he consyderech not that he shulde not haue bene able to haue endured in the time of his birth, had not I defended hym from the graue, & deliuered hym from death.

O death, I wyl be thy death: O bell, I wyl be thy ring. Yet can I see no comforte, for when he is not the goodlyest amonge the brethren the east wynde (even the wynde of the Lord) shall come downe to the wyldecnes, and dryue bys conchyres, and drynke up bys wells: he shall spoyle the treasure of al pleasaunt vessels.

As for Samaria, they shall be made wast and wyre: they are disobedient vnto the Lord. They shall perishe with the sword, theyr chyldren shall be slaine, and theyr women great with chyld shall be tpyt by.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

The destructions of Samaria.

Israel, turne the now vnto the Lord thy God, for thou hast taken a great fall thowowe thy wickednes. Take these wordes with you, when ye turne to the Lord and say vnto him: O forgiue vs al our synnes receyue vs graciouslye, and then wyl we offer the bullockes of oure Ipps vnto the. After shall be no more oure helper, neither wyl we ryde vpon horses any more. As for the works of our hands, we wyl no more cal vpon them: for it is thou that art our God, thou thyselfe euer mercy vnto the fatherles.

O (if they wold do this) I woulde heale theyr sores: yea with al my heart woulde I loue them: so that my wrath shuld cleue be turned away from them. Yea, I woulde be vnto Israel as the dewe, and he shoulde growe as the lylle, and his roote shoulde breake oute as Libanus. His branches shoulde spred out abroad and be as sayre as the olue tree, and swete as Libanus. They that dwel vnder his shadow, shoulde come againe, and grow up as the corne, and soe as the vyne, he shoulde haue as good a name, as the vyne of Libanus.

O Ephraim: what haue I to doo with Idols any more? I wyl graciouslye heare hym, and lede him forth. I wyl be vnto the as a grene fyre tree, vpon me shalt thou frnde thy fruit. Who so is wyse, shall vnderstand this: and he that is ryghteous, wyl regarde it. For the wayes of the Lord are ryghteous, such as he shuld haue made in them: As for the wicked they wyl stumbe therein.

thing in your dayes, or in þ dayes of your fathers. Tel your chyldre of it, and let the them it vnto their chyldren, and so they receiteþ their posterity therof. Take what the caterpyller hath leste, that hath the gresshopper eatē vp, what the gresshopper leste, that hath the locust eaten vp, & what the locust hath leste, that hath the blawing consumed. Make vp ye dionkardes, and wepe: moune al ye wine suppers, because of your sore wyne, for it shal be taken away from your mouth. Yea a myghty and an innumerable people shal come vp. Into my laude: these haue teeth lyke the teethe of lions, and chafibones like the lionelles.
 They shal make my bynepard waste, they shal pyl of the barckes of my syttees, strip them bare, cast them a way, and make the braunches whyte.

Make thy moone as a virgin both that girdeth her selfe with sacke, because of her hydegrome. For the meate and drinke of fering shalbe taken away from the house of the Lord, and the priestes the Lords mi-nistres shal moune. The feld shalbe wa-red, the land shalbe in a miserable case, for the coyne shalbe destroyed, the sweet wyne shal come to confusion, and the oyle bitterly desolate. The husband men & the wine gardeners shal looke piteously and make lamentacion for the weate, wyne, and oyl, and because the hatuel upon the feld is so clene destroyed. The grapegatherers shal make greete mone, w^h the vineyard and figtrees be so bitterly wasted.

Yea all the pomegranates, palmetrees, apple trees, and the other trees of the field shal wither away. E thus the meepe chere of the children of men, shal come to confusid.

Byd you, and make poute mone, O pe priefts: moutne ye minister of þe aulter go foure way in, and sleepe in sacke clothe. O ye officers of my God: for the meate and drinke offerug shalbe taken away fro the house of your God. Declayme a fastinge, call the congregation, gather the elders and al the inhabitants of the land together into the house of the Lord your God, and cry vnto the Lord: Alas, alas, for this day.
And why? the day of the Lord is at hande, and cometh as a destroyer from the almighty. Shal not the meates be taken a-perish in the ground the garners shall be the cozne ſhall be deſtroied. What a ſighing make the cattel: the bullockes are deſtreucl ſpyng, becauſe they haue no paſture: and the ſhepe are famiſhed away.

And he, to the wylde fowle: for the fowle hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wilderness, and the same hath bycut vp all the trees of the feld. Yea the wylde beastes cry also vnto the: for the water cypers are byred vp, and the fowle hath consumed the pastures of the wilderness.

Edw. H. Chaptes.

The propheteth the coming and cruelty of their enemies. An exhortation to move them to convert.

Blowe oute the trumpet in Syon, and cry vpon my holy hyl, that al such as dwel in the land, maye tremble at it, for the daye of the Lord cometh, and is hard at hand: a darke daye, a gloomyng day, a cloudy day, yea and a stormyng daye like as the moornyng syeaderth oute vpon the hyls. Namelye, a greate and myghty people such as haue not bene sene sence the begynning, neither shalbe after them for euermore. Before hym shalbe a consuming fye, and beynde hym a burnyng flame.
The lande shalbe as a garden of pleasure before hym, but beynde hym shall it be a very wast myldecnes, and there is no man that shal escape hym. They are to loke vp on like barbed horses, and runne like wyssmen. They skip vp vpon the hyls, as it were the sound of charretts, as the flame of fye that consumerth the straw, and as a myghty people redy to the battaile.

The folke ſhalbe aſcaped of hym, al faces ſhalbe as blacke as a pot. Theſe ſhall cunlyſe glaſſes, and leape ouer the walls lyke men of war. Euerie man in hys go-ryge ſhall kepe his aſar, and not go out of his path. Euer ſhal not one diſturb another, but eche ſhal kepe hys owne waye. They broke in at the wyndowes, & not be hurt.
They ſhal come into the city, and run vpon the walls. They ſhal clyme vp vpon ſ houſes, and ſcrape in at the wyndowes lyke a thiefe. The earth ſhall quake before hym, yea the heauens ſhalbe moued. The ſunne and moone ſhalbe darkened and the ſtars ſhal withdrawe theyr ſhine. The Lord ſhal ſhew his voice before hys beaſt, for his voice is great, ſtrong, and myghty to fulfil hys commaundement. This is that great and marueylous fearful day of the Lord: And who is able to abyde it.

Now therefore saith the Lord: Turne you unto me with al your hearts, with sa-cryng, weping, and mourning, rent your heattes, and not your clothes. Turne you unto the Lord your god, for he is gracious and merciful, long suffering and of great compassion: & ready to pardon wickednes.

When (no doute) he also shal turne and forgiue: and as free his charyng, he shal let your increase remaine, for meat and drink offering unto the Lord your god: Blow out with the trumpet in Sion proclame a fast day, call the congregation, and gather the people together: wanne the congregation, and gather the elders, byrge the chyldren and suckelings together. Let the hydegrome goo forth of his chamber, and the byrde oute of her closet. Let the priestes serue the Lord betwene the porch and the altar weping and saying: be fauourable, O Lord, be fauourable, vnto thy people: let not thyne inheritaunce be brought to such confusion, least the Heathen be Lordes thereof. Wherefore shoulde they saie amonge the Heathen where is now the Lord? God? Ps. lxxix. d.

When shal the Lord be gelous ouer his lande, and spare his people: yea the Lord shal answer, and say vnto his people: Behold, I wil send you corne, wine and oyle, so that ye shal haue plenty of them, and I wil no more giue you ouer to be a reprobate amonges the heathen. Agayne, as for him of the North. I shal dyue hym far from you: and shut hym out into a dry and wast land, his face toward the eastside, and his bynder pannes toward the uttermost sea. The spynke of hym shal go by, and his filthie corruption shal fall vpon hym selfe, because he hath dealt so proudly. Feare not (O land) but be gladd and reioyce for the Lord wil do greates thynges. Be not ye as frayed neyther (O ye beastes of the feld) for the pastures shal be greene, and f trees shal beate theyr fruit: the figtrees & vineyardes shal giue theyr increase.

I We glad then (O ye chyldren of Syon) and reioyce in the Lord your God, for he hath giuen you a teacher of rightuousnes: and he shal led you down shoutes of raine, early and late in the first moneth: so that the garners shal be full of corne, and f prestes plenteous in wine and oyle. And as for the yerres that the grechopper locust, blaspheming & caterpyller (my great host, wherof I sent amonge you) haue eaten vp, I shall restore them to you agayne: so that ye shal haue enough to eate, and be satisfied: and praise the name of the Lord your god, that so marueylously hath dealt with you.

And my people shal neuer be confounded any more. Ye shal wel knowe that I am in the myddel of Israel, and that I am your God, & that ther is none other, & my people shal no more be brought to confusion.

After this, wil I poure out my spyrte vpon all flesh: and your sonnes and daughters shal prophete: your old men shal dreame & dreames, and your yong men shal see visions: yea in those daies wil I powre out my spyrte vpon seruauntes and maydes. I wil shewe wonders in heauen aboue, and tokens in the earth beneath: blud and fire, and the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shal be turned into darkness, and the more it shal be blud, before the great and notable day of the Lord come. And the tyme shal come that whosocuer calleth on the name of the Lord, shal be saved. For vpon the mount Syon and at Ierusalem, ther shal be a saluation, like as the Lord hath promysed: yea, and among the other remnant, wherof the Lord shal cal.

The iii. Chapter.

Of the iudgement of God against the enemies of his people.

For take heed in those daies and at the same tyme when I turne agayne the captiuitie of Iuda and Ierusalem: I shal gather all people together, and byrge them into f valley of Josaphat: and there wil I reason with the, because of my people and heritage of Israel: in whome they haue scattered about in the nation, & parted my land: yea they haue cast lots for my people, the yong men haue theyr lot in the diuel house, & sold the damels for wyne: that they myght haue to drinke. Thou Egiptus and Sydon and all ye borders of the wilderness: what haue ye to do with me? Wil ye despise me? wel, if ye wil nedes desire me, I shal recompence you euen vpon your heade, and that right shortly: for ye haue taken away my syluer and gold, my sapie and goodlye Jewels, and broughte them into your gods houses. The chyldren also of Iuda, and Ierusalem haue ye sold vnto the Grekes, & ye might byrge the same from the borders of theyr own countries.

Behold therefore, I wil rapse them out of the place, wher ye haue sold them, and wil rewarde you euen vpon your heade. Your sonnes and your daughters wil I sell choctow the handes of the chyldren of Iuda, and so they shal giue them forth to sell, vnto them of Saba, a people of a farre country, for the Lord hym selfe hath sayde it. Cry out these thynges among the Gentyls, proclame war make vp the glaues, let them drawe nic. let them come vp al the lusty warriors of them. Make you swordes of your plowshares, & speares of your cycles and sitches. Let the weake man say: I am strong. Muster you, and come all ye Heathen rounde aboute: gather you together, there shall the Lord laye all the Spawntes to the ground. Let the people crye and gette them to the valleye of Josaphat: for there wil I sit, and iudge all Heathen rounde aboute. Lape to your sythes, for the batell is nye, come gette you downe, the wynepress is full, yea the wynepresses run ouer, for theyr wyne is waxe great.

In the valleye appointed, there shall be manie, manie people, for the daye of the Lord is nyghe in the valleye appointed. The sunne and moone shal be darkened, and the stars shal wythdrawe their lyght. The Lord shal roare oute of Syon, and crye oute of Ierusalem, that the heauens of the shepherdes shall be in a miserable case, and þe roy of Charmel dyed by. Thus saith þe Lorde for. iiii. &. iiii. wickednes of Damascus, I will not spare her, because they haue threshed Galaad with flayles:

 But I will send a fyre into the house of Da-

Prophets among your children, and ab-

so. O ye children of Israel, sayth the Lord?
But ye gave the abstiners wine to drink yea ye commanded the prophets, saying: Prophecy not. Behold I will crash you in founder, lyke as a wayne crasheth, that is ful of sheaves, so that the sower shall not escape, neither the strong be able to do any thing, no, the Spanter shall not save his horseman shall not save his lyfe, and he that is as many of stomacke as a giant,

The.iii. Chapter.

Against the house of Israel of wickednes.

Hear, what the Lord speaketh unto you (O ye children of Israel) namely unto all the tribes, wher I brought out of Egypt and sayd you only haue I accepted from all the generacions of the earth:
therefore will I visit you in all your wickednes. Hare twayne walke together except they be agreed among them selues: Doth a lyon roare in the wood, except he haue a pray? Or cepteth a lyon whelp out of his denne, except he haue gotten some thing? Doth a byrd fall into a snare without the catch, wher no fouler is? Taketh a man his snare up from the ground, afore he catch somewhat? Or cepteth he out a lion with the trumpet in the city, and the people not a scaped? Commeth ther any plague in a city without it be the Lords doinge?
No, the word of the Lord God no maner of thing, but he telleth vs secret before he do his seruants the prophets. When a lion roareth, who will not be afraied? Seing then that the Lord God him self speaketh, who will not prophesie?

O ye receiue
prophecy.

Ereached in the palaces at Aod, and in the palaces of the land of Egypt, and say-gathie you together vnder the mountaines of Samaria, so shall ye se great murder & violent oppression amongs them: for wher they regarded not the thing that is right sayth the Lord, they gather together euill gottē goods, & lay robbers in these houses.
Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Thys land shall be troubled and besieged rounde aboute, the strength shall be plucked from the, and the palaces robbed. Thus sayeth the Lord: lyke as an heardman taketh two legges or a pyce of an eare out of the lons mouth:

Even so the children of Israel that dwell in Samaria, hauing thei couches in the corner, and they beddes at Damascus) shall be plucked away. Hare, and heare record in the house of Jacob, sayth the Lord God of hostes, that when I began to visit the wickednes of Israel, I will visit the altars at Bethel also: so that the horne of the altar shall be broken of, and hyer let vs drinke. Therefore the Lord hath sworn by his holynesse: The dayes shall come vpon you, that ye shall be lyft vp

The.v. Chapter.

Against the captiuitie of Israel.

Hear this word, O ye house of Israel at Bethel, and wher I must make this mone. for you: The virgin Israel that sat in her

neuer ryse up agayne: the halbe ead down vpon her stone ground, and no man shall helpe her up. For thus sayth the Lord god: Wher as ther dwelt a thousand in one cy-ty, ther shal be left scarce an hundred therin: and ther dwelt an hundred, there shal scarce ten be left for the house of Israel.

Neuer beleffe, thus sayth the Lord vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall live, but seke not after Bethel. Come not at Balgal, and go not to Bersaba: for Balgal shalbe laced awaye captiue and Bethel shal come to naught. Secke the Lord, that ye may lurche the house of Joseph be bynt with fyre and consumed, and lest ther be none to quench Bethel.

Ye turne the lawe to worme moode, and cast downe the brounes vnto the ground.
The Lord maketh the seven stars and the Oryons, he turneth the nyghte into daye, and of the daye he maketh darknesse. He gathereth the waters of the sea, and poureth them oute vpon the playne ground: the Lord is his name.

He capseth destruction vpon the myghty people, and bringeth downe the strong hold: but they owe hym euyl wyl that reprouerhem openly: a toholo cellerth the the plaine truth, they abhorre hym. For so much then as ye oppresse the poore, and rob hym of his best sustenance: therfore wher as ye haue builded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwell in them. As a cruelous pleasunt bynepardes shal ye pleasure, but the toppe of them shal ye not drynke, and why? as for the multitude of your wickednesse, and your house synnes, I knowe them cryght well. Enemies are ye of the cryghtuous, ye take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgemente. Therefore the wyse must now be sayne to hold his tong, so myked a tyme is it.

Seke after the chynge that is good, and not euyl, so shal ye lyue: pea the Lord God of hostes shalbe with you, accordyng to your owne desyre: Hate the euyl, and loue the good: syle vnto the agayne in the port:
and (no doubte) the Lord God of hostes: shal be merciful vnto the remnant of Joseph.

Yf no (sayeth the Lord God, the God of hostes, there shal be mourning in al Actes: pea they shal say in euery Acete, Alas, Alas. They cal the houshold man to lam-tation, and such as can mouene to mounting. In al vineyards ther shalbe beaup-nes, for I wil come amoggs you, sayeth the Lord. Wo be vnto them that desyre & dawe of the Lord: Wherfore would ye haue it?
As for that day of the Lord it shalbe dark and not cleare. Yea lyke as when a man runneth from a Lyon, and a Beate merceh wyth hym: or when he commeth into the house, and leaneth his hand vpon the wal, and a serpent byteth him: Shal not & day of the Lord be darke, and not cleare? Shall it not be cloudy, and no shyne in it?

I hate and abhorre your holpe dayes, and wher as ye cense me when ye come to gyther, I wyl not accept it. And though ye offer me biente offerynges and meate offerynges, yet haue I no pleasure therin:

As for your fat thankes offerynges, I wil not looke vpon them.

Swap wyth that noyse of thy songs, I wyl not heare thy playes of Cystricke, but se that equity flow as the water, and righ-tounes, as a myghty streame. O ye house of Israel, gaue ye me offerynges & sacrifices those. xl. yerres long in the wilde: yea yet haue ye sette up tabernacles to your idoloth, and ymages of your ydols, pea the starre of your god Kenypha, ygyres to wyche ye made to worship them. A here-fore wyl I cause you be carped awaye beyonde Damasces, sayeth the Lord, whose name is the God of hostes.

Wo be to the proude welthy in Spon, to such as chynke them so sure vpon the mount of Samaria, which hold them selues for the best of the world, and rule the house of Israel, euen as they spit. So vnto Calne, and se: and se: and se: erf you to be marth the great cste, and so go downe to Gath of the Philistines: wher they beeter at ease then the kyngdomes, or the border of theyr lande wyder they pours: Ye are taken out for the euyl dawe, euen yet that lyre in the scoole of wyful-nesse: Ye that lye vpon beddes of Auoye, and vse your mantounes vpon your couches: ye that eate the best Lambes of the flocke, and the fattest calves of the dyne: ye that syng to the Lute, and in playnge vpon the instrumentes compare your sel-ues vnto Dauid: ye that drynke wyne out of goblettes, and anoynte your selars wyth the best oyle, but no man is forp for Joseph butt. Therefore now shal ye be the first of them, that shalbe led awaye captyue, and the lustre cheare of the wyllful shal come to an ende.

The Lord God haue sworne euen by hym selfe: sayth the Lord God of hostes I hate the pryde of Jacob, and I abhorre his palaces: and I wyl gyue ouer the cytre. wyth all that is therein, so that thought there remayne renne men in one house, they shal dye. So they: nerte kyn-folkes, and the deade butchers shal take them, and carry awaye their bones and lay is there yet any mo by the? And he shal an-of righteousness into wormewood. Yea, even ye that repose in wayne thynges, ye that say: have not we obtained houses in dure of the strength? Wel take heede, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lord God of hoastes: I wyll bringe a people upon you, whiche shall trouble you, from the waye that goeth toward Hema into the brooke in the meadowe.

The viii. Chapter.

Of the captiv-ty of Israel and Jude.

The Lord God shewed me such a vysion: behold, the Roode one that made grethoppers, even whil the come was shootinge forth, after the kyng had clippe hys shepe. Now when they undertooke to eate up all the grene thynges in the lande, I sayd: O Lord God, be mercyfull to the schilde: who shoulde els deale up Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lord was gracious therein, and the Lord sayd: wel, it shal not be. Agayne the Lord shewed me this vysi- on: behold, the Lord God called the syre to punish his childe, and he deuoured the great deye: yea, it consumed a part alte- dy. Then said I: O Lord God, hold this hand: for who shoulde els deale up Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lord was mercifull therein, and the Lord God sayd: wel, it shal not be.

When I sawe he shewed me this vysi- on:
Behold, the Lord God upon a plastered wal, and a masons trowel in hys hand.
And the Lord sayd unto me: Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a masons trowel.
Then sayd the Lord: Behold, I will laye the trowel amonge my people of Israel, and wyll no more curse them: but the hye del chapels of Isaac must be layed waste, and the churches of Israel made desolate, and as for the house of Jeroboam, I wyll stand up agaynst it with the sword.

Upon this sent Amasiah the pnyeste to Beeroel, unto Jeroboam the king of Israel, sayinge: Amos maketh the house of Israel to rebel agaynst the, the lande can not amoy with hys wordes. For Amos, sayeth, Jeroboam shal dye with the sword, and Israel shal be led away captiue oute of thei owne lande.

And Amasiah sayd unto Amos: Get the hence (thou that canst se so wel) and spe in to the lab of Jude: get the ther chylpung and prophete there, and prophete no more at Bethel, for it is the kyngs chapel, and the kynges courtis.

Amos answered and sayd to Amasiah:
As for me, I am neyther prophet nor prophetes sonne, but a keeper of cattel. Some-as I was breakyng downe mulberpes, and govyng after the cattel, the Lord took me, and sayd unto me: Go thy waye and prophete vnto my people of Israel. And therefore heare thou now the wordes of the Lord: thou sayest, prophete not agaynst Israel, and speake nothpyng agaynst the house of Isaac. Wherefore thus sayth the Lord: I wyll be despyled in the cyrpe, thy sonnes and daughters shall be slayne with the sword, and thy lande shall be measured oute with the lyne.

Thou thy selfe shalt dye in an uncleane lande, and Israel shall be dyspued oute of hys owne countrey.

The viii. Chapter.

Against the rulers of Israel. The Lord swearth that he wyll fulfyll the thynges which he hath determined agaynst Israel.

The Lord God shewed me this vysi- on:
and behold, there was a maunde with sommet fruit. And he sayd: Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a maunde with sommet fruit. Then sayd the Lord vnto me: the ende cometh vpon my people of Israel, I wyll no more curse them, In that day shal the songes of the temple be turned into sorow, saith the Lord God.
Many dead bodies shal lie in euery place, and be cast forth secretly.

Hear this, O ye that oppresse the poore and descey the neddy in the land, sayinge: When wyll the newe moneth be gon, that we may sel vnto the: and the Saboth, that we may haue scarcenes of coine: to make the bushell lesse, and the sytle greater: we shall set up false wayghes, that we maye get the poore vnder vs with theyr mony, and the neddy also for woones: yea let vs sel the chaffe for coine.

The Lord darbe sworne agaynst the pyrde of Jacob: these works of theys wil I neuer forget. Shal not the lande reble and all they that dwel therein mourne for this? Shal not they be destruction come vpon them lyke a water floude, and floure ouer them, as the floude of Egypt? At the same tyme (saith the Lord God) I shal cause the Sunne to go downe at noone, and the land to be darke in the cleare daye. I ouerthye leasles wil I turne to sorow, and your songes to mourning: I wyll bringe sacke cloth vpon all your backs, and baldnes vpon e-uery head: yea such a mourning wil I send vnto you, as is made vpon an only begotten sonne, and they shal haue a miserable ende.

Behold, the tyme cometh (saith the Lord God) that I shal send an hunger into the earth, not the hunger of breade, nor the thyrst of water: but an hunger to hear the wordes of the Lord, so that they shal go from the one sea to the other, yea from the North vnto the East, runnyng aboute to seeke the wordes of the Lord, and shall not fynde it. In that tyme shall the sayre byrgons and the younge men perishe for thyrst, yea even they that sweare in the offence of Samaria, and say: as truly as the God lyueth at Dan, and as truly as the God lyueth at Bersaba. These shal fall, and neuer ryls vp agayne.

Moreover, þe house of Iacob shalbe a fire, the house of Ioseph a flame, and the house

The Prologe of the pro- phet Jonas.

W. T. vnto the Christen Reader.

As the enuious Phyllystines stopped the wells of Abrahā & filled the by w earch, to put the memorial out of minde, so the enier that they might chalenge þ ground:
eue so þ fleshly minded spornis stop vpon þ veins of life which are in the scripture, with the earth of their traditions, false similitudes, & lying al-legories, & thre of like yele, to make þ scripture theyr own possell or marchaundise: to wut vpon the kyngdome of heauen which is Gods word, neither entreng in them selues, nor suffring the that wold. The scripture hath a body with soule, & within a soule, spirite & lyfe, & hath withoute a barke, a shel, & as it were on hard bone for the fleshy minded to gnaw vpon. And when it hath perch, her nel, mar, and al sweetnes for gods elect which he hath copen to geue the his spirit, & to the prophet Jonas.

with his law & þ faith of his son in their hertes.
The scripture cōteineth. iii. things in it, first the law to cōdemne al flesh. secondarily the gospel: that is to say, promyses of mercy for al that repent & knowlege theyr syns at the preaching of the law, and consent in theyr hertes that the law is good, and submit them selues to be scho-lers to learne to kepe the law, & to learne to be-lieue the mercy þ is promised the: and thirdly the fayres and lyues of those scholars, bothe what chaunces fortuned the, and also by what meanes theyr scholemaster taught the, & made them perfect, and how he tryed the truth from the false.

Whē the hypocrites come to the law, they put glores, to, and make no more of it the of a worldly law, which is satisfied in the outward work and which a Turke may also fulfill. Whē yet Gods law neuer ceaseth to cōdemne a man vntill it be wrytten in hys hearte, and vntill he keepe it naturally without compulsion, & al other respect, saue onely of pure loue to God & hys neyghbour as he naturally eateth when he is and hongred, without compulsion and al other respect saue to make hys hunger oulre.

And when they come to the Gospel, then they myngle their leuen, and say: God now reserueth vs no more to mercy, but of mercy reserueth vs to peunice, that is to wryte, holy dedes þ make them fat bellies, and be th. It captueth bothe in soule & body. And yet they saye they: I dol the hope so merciful þ if thou make a lytle money glyster in his Balde eyes, ther is rather penance no purgatory nor any fasting at al, but to spee to heauē as swiffe as a thought, and at þ twinkling of an eye. And the law, foyres & gasses of me which ar cōtained in the Bible, they read as things no more pertaining vnto the, the a tale of Iob n mode, & as th'ngs they may not wether to the sear, saue to faine false discēt & rugling allegories, to stablish theyr kyngdō withal. And one of þ chiefest & bestliest body they haue, is to magnify the saintes aboue measure, & about the teach, & with theyr poetre to make the greater the euer god made the. And if they finde any in-fermyte of syn ascribed vnto þ saintes, they excuse it w al diligence, diminishing the glory of þ mercy of God, & robbing wretched sinners of al theyr cōfort, & thinke thereby to flatter the saintes & to obteyne theyr fauour, & to make special aduocates of the, euen as a mā wol obteyne the fauour of worldly tyrants, as they also saye the saintes moze cruel the euer was any heathē mā, and moze wicked and vengeable then the poets faine their gods, or the furies & torment the soules in hel, if theyr eynes be not fasted, and theyr ymages vnted and saluted with a pater noster, which prayer our lippes be acquainted with, our hertes vnderstanding none at al, and worrypped with a candle and the offering of our deuotion, in the place which they haue chosen to heare the supplications, and make peticions of theyr clentes therein.

But thou reader, thinke of the lawe of God how that it is altogether spirital, and so spy-ritual, that it is neuer fulfilled with dedes or woorkes, vntill they stoure out of thyn hearte with as great loue to ward thy neyghbour, for no deserving of his, ye though he be thyn enemy, as Christ loued the & died for the, for no deserving of thyn, but euen when þ wast hys.
And in the same tyme, thou wout al oure infancy and childhode in Christ, til we be growen vpon into perfect me in the ful knowledge of Christ, and ful loue of Christ, againe and of our neygh-bours for his sake, after the ensample of his loue to be remember þ the fulfilling of the lawe is a fast

fast fasten in Chyrtles bloud coupled w our plessell: & submitting our selues to lea to do better

And of the gospell or promyses whiche thou meest in the scripture, beleue fast that God wil fulfill them vnto the, and that vnto the utter-most Iose, at the repaite of thine herte, when thou turnest to him & forsakest euyl, euen of thy goodnes and fatherly mercede vnto the, and not for thy flattering him with ppointmentes of thyne owne saluing. So that a fast fastly only without respect of al wykes, is the forgere-me both of the sinne, whiche we did in tyme of ignorance with lull and consent to synne, & also of all synne whiche we doo by chaunce and of lechurie, after that we are come to knowlege and haue professed the same oute of our hertes.
And al dedes serue only for to helpe our neighbours, and to tame our fleshe, that we fall not to synne agayne, and to exercise oure soules in uerue, & not to make satisfaction to Godward for the synne that is once past.

And al other stoyes of the Bible, withoute exception, are the occasion of p lawe and of the Gospell and are true & faithfull enamples and latterer that God will euen to deale wth vs, as he dyd wth them in all infirmities, in all temptacions and in al like cases and chaunces. Wherewith he is on the one syde, how fatherly and tenderly and wth all compassion God entreateth his electe whiche submitte themsel-ues as scholars to leaue to walk in the wayes of hys lawes, and to kepe them of longe. If they forsake them selues at a tyme and wene agayne wth all mercede. If they fell and hurte themselues, he healed them agayne wth all compassion and tendernes of herte. He hath brought greue tribulacion and aduersite vpon his electe: but all of fatherly loue only, to teache them and to make them les their owne hertes, and the sinne that there lay by, that they might afterwarde feele hys mercede. For his mercede waite vpon them, to red them out agayne, allonge as they were learned & come to the knowledge of theyr owne hertes, so that he neuer cast man awaye howe depe so euer he had synned, saue them only whiche had spilt cast the poche of hys lawes from theyr neckes, wth vter despauce and malice of herte. Whiche ensamples howe comfortable are they for vs, when we be fallen into synne, and God is come vpon us wth a scourge, that we despayre not, but re-pente wth full hope of mercede after the examples of mercy that are gone before. And therefore they were wyrtten for our learning, as testififeth Paule. Roma. xv. to comfort vs, that we myghte the better put our hope & trust in God, when we see howe mercifull he hath bene in epnes past vnto oure weake brethren that are gone before, in all theyr aduersities, nece, temp-tacions, yea and horrible synnes, into whiche they now and then fell.

And on the other syde ye see howe they that hardened their hertes, and synned of malice, and refused mercede that was offered them, and had no power to repent, perished at the latter ende wth all confusion and shame merciesly.
Whiche enamples are very good and necessary, to kepe vs in awe and dread in tyme of pros-peritie, as thou mayest see by Paule. i. Corin. x. that we abyde in the feare of God, and ware not wyld and fall to vanities and to synne, and prouoke God, and byrage wraith vpon vs.

And thou shalt see in the practise, how as God is mercifull and longe sufferinge, euen so were all hys true prophetes and preachers, bearinge the infirmities of their weake brethren & theyr owne wronges and iniuries with all patience and longe sufferinge, neuer casting any of them of their backs, vntill they synned agaynst the holye god, maliciously persecutinge the open and manifest truth: contrarye to the ensample of the hope, whiche in synninge agaynst God and to quenche the cruelty of hys holye spirite, is eue these captayne and trompette blower, to let other a wyke, and seeth only hys owne freedom, liberty, priuilege, welth, prosperitie, profyt, pleasure, pastyme, honoure and gloire, wth the bondage, thraldome, captiuitie, myserie, wretchednes, and vnlubrication of hys brethren: and in hys owne case is so feruent, so styffe and cruell, that he wyl not suffer on: wordes spoken agaynst his false magpie, wply iurymens, and iuglyng ppointmentes, to be vndamaged, though al christendome should be set together by the eares, & shoulde cost (he saied) not howe many hundred thousande) theyr lyues.

Nowe ther thou mayest reade Jonas frute-fully and not as Doctes fable, but as an obligation betwene God and thy soule, as an euenest penye geuen the of God, that he wyl helpe the in the tyme of nece, if thou turne to hym as the word of God the only foode and lyfe of thy soule, this marke and note. First comt Jonas the frende of God & a man chosen of God to testyfy hys name vnto the world: but yet a pouge scholar, weake and rude after the Apostles, whyle Chyrt was yet wth them bad, ly, whiche though Chyrt taught them euer to be mild and to humble them selues, yet oft stroue among them selues who should be greatest. The lawes of rebewe woulde sette, one on the right hande of Chyrt, and the other on the left. They woulde praye that, fye myght descende frome heauen, and consume the Samaritans.

When Chyrt axed: who say men that I am, Peter answered, thou art the sonne of the ly-upage God, as though Peter had bene as per-fecte as an angell: But immediately after, when Chyrt preached vnto them of hys deathe and passion, Peter was angry and rebuked Chyrt, & thought earnestly that he had rauced & wot wylt what he sayd: as at an other tyme, when Chyrt was so feruently busied in helping the people, that he had no leyse to eate, they went oute to holde him, supposyng that he had bene besyde hymselfe. And one p cast out devyls in Chyrtes name, they forbad hym, because he waite not on them, so glayous were they yet.

And though Chyrt taught alway to forgere, yet Peter after long goyng to scote, axed whether man should forgere leuen tymes, thinkinge that, vii. tymes, had bene to muche. And at the last supper Peter woulde haue dyed w Chyrt, but yet within few houres after, he denyed hym, both cowardly & shamefully. And after p came naw, though he had so long heard that no man myght auenge him selfe, but rather turne the other cheke to, then to smyte agayne, yet when Chyrt was in talkinge, Peter axed whether it were lawfull to smyte wth the sweard, & carped none answer, but layed on rashly. So p though when we comt fyt vnto the knowlege of the truth, & the peace is made betwene God & vs, & we loue his lawes and beleue and trust in hym, as in oure father, and haue good hertes vnto hym, & be borne a newe in the spirite, yet we are chylde and pouge scholars, weake and feeble and must haue layse to growe in the spirite, in knowlege, loue, & in the dedes therof, as yong chylde may haue tyme to grow in theyr bodies.

The Prologe vpon

And God our father and scholemaster feedeth vs and teacheth vs, accordyng vnto the capacite of our stomaches and maketh vs to growe and waxe perfecte, and syneth vs, and tryeth vs as golde in the fyre of temptacions and tribulacions. As Moses witnesseth. We vni sayng: Remember al the way by which the Lorde thy God carped the this. xl. yeares in the wyldernes, to humble the and to tempt or prouoke the, that it myght be knowen what were in thyne herte. He brought the into aduersitie, & made the an hongred, & then fed the with manna, whicher thou nor yet thy father euer knewe of, so tea. he that a man lyueth not by bread onely, but by all that procedeth oute of the mouth of God. For the promyses of God are lyfe vnto al that cleaue vnto the, muche more then is bread and bodely sustenance, as the iourney of the chyldren of Israel out of Egypt into the lande promysed them, minisreth the notable ensamples, and that abundantly, as both all the rest of the Wyble also. Howe be it, it is impossible for us to beleue and to trust in the truth of Gods promyses, vntill he haue leaured us in muche tribulacion, and that God hath deliuered hym out thereof agayne.

God therefore to teache Jonas and to shewe hym hys owne herte, and to make hym perfecte and to instruct vs also by his ensample, sent hym out of the lande of Israel whicher was a Prophet to goo among the heathen people, and to the greatest and myghtiest pye of the world, then called Ninus: to preache that within xl. dayes they shoulde all peep the for their synnes, & that the cytie shoulde be ouerthrowen. Whych message the free will of Jonas had as muche power to doo, as the weakest herted woman in the world hath power, if she were commaunded, to lye into a tobbie of lyeunge snakes and adders: as happely if God had commaunded Sara to haue sacrificed her sonne Isaac, as he dyd Abraham, she woulde haue dysputed with hym for he had done it, or thoughte she were wronge ynough, yet many an holy sapnt coulde not haue found in their hertes, but woulde haue disobeyed, and haue runne awaye from the presence of the commaundement of God with Jonas, if they had bene so wrongly tempted.

For Jonas thought of this maner: lo, I am here a prophete vnto Gods people the Israelites. Whiche though they had Gods woorde testified vnto them daylye, yet dyspyle it & wote nought of God vnder the tyenes of Calues and al other all maner of facions, saue after hys owne woorde, & therfore are of al nacions the worst, and moste worthy of punishment. And yet God for loue of fewe, that are amonge them, and for hys names sake, spareth them & defendeth the. How then shoulde God take so cruel vengeance on so grete a multitude of them to whom hys name was neuer preached to, and therefore are not the tenth parte so culp as thes. If I shall therefore goo preache, so shall I say and name my selfe and God thereto, and make them the more to dyspyle God, and sette the lesse by hym, and to be the more cruell vnto hys people.

And vpon that pynagynacion, he fledde from the face or presence of God: that is, oute of the country where God was woorthyped in, and from the prosecutyng of Goddes commaundement, and thought, I wil get me an other waye amonge the heathen people, and be no more a prophete, but lye at rest and oute of all commaundement. Neuerthelesse that God of all mercye which careth for hys elect chyldren and turneth the prophete Jonas.

al vnto good to them, that smytheth the to heale them agayne, and kylleth them, to make them as lyue agayne, and playeth with the: as a teacher both sometyme with hys younge ignoraunte chylde, and tempteth them, and proueth them to make them see theyr owne hertes, prouoked for Jonas howe all thynges shoulde be.

When Jonas was entred into the ship, he layed hym downe to slepe & to take his rest: that is, his conscience was rolled by twene the commaundement of God whicher sent hym to Ninus, and hys fleschly wylledome that dissuaded and counsayled hym the contrarye; and at the last preuailed agaynst the commaundement and carped hym an other way, as a ship caught betwene twoo streames, and poeres sayne the maister of the shipp to be betwene dyuers affections, whyle to avenge her brothers deathe, she sought to slep her owne sonne. Wherupon for very payne and rebousnes he laye downe to slepe, for to put the commaundement whycher so gnewe and frent hys conscience, oute of mynde, as the nature of al wicked is, when they haue lined a good, to seke at nyghtes with reuerence, a supple pastyme, to dilue the remembraunce of synne out of their thoughtes: or as Adam dyd, to couer their nakednes with apocryphes of pope holy woordes. But God awooke hym out of hys slepe, and set hys synnes before hys face.

For when the ship had caught Jonas, then be sure that this synnes came to remembraunce agayne, and that his conscience ragged no leste then the waues of the sea. And wher he thoughte that he only was a synner and the heathen that were in the ship none in respecte of hym, and thought also, as verely as he hath fledde from God, that as verely God hath cast hym away: for the syght of the robde maketh the naturall chylde not onely to see and to knowlege hys faulter, but also to forgette all hys fathers olde mercy and kyndnesse. And then he confessed hys synnes openly and had yet rather peepth alone then the other shoulde haue peeped with him for his sake: and so of very desperacion to haue lyued any longer, had cast him in the sea betwene, excepte they woulde be lost also.

To speake of losses, how ferfourth they are lawfull is a tryght question. First to vse them for the breakyng of sterte, as when parteners, theyr goodes as equally dyuided as they canne, take eueryman hys parte by lotte to auoyde all suspicion of dyscrepacytes: and as the Apostles in the first of the Actes, when they sought another to succede Judas the traitour, and xl. persons were presented, then to bycake sterte and to satisfy all parties, dyd cast lottes whether shoulde be admitted, helppinge God to temper them & to take whome he knewe moste mete, seeing they wyl not whether to preferre, or haply coulde not agree on. Eriher is lawfull, and in al like cases. But to abuse the in vnto the tempyng of God, and to compell him therewith to vnter thynges wherof we stande in doubt, wher we haue no commaundement of hym so to doo, as these heathen here dyd, though god tourned it vnto his glory, cannot be but culp. The heathen shypmen astonished at the syght of the miracle, feared God, prayed to hym, offered sacrifices, and bowed bowes. And I doubte not, but that some of them or haply al came thereby vnto the true knowlege and true woorthyppe of God & wer won to God in these soules. And thus God whych is infinite merciful in al hys wayes, wrought their soules health, oute of the infernall of Jonas, such of hys good wyl and pur-

purpose & loue wherewith he loued them before the world was made, & not of chance, as appeareth vnto the eyes of the ignorant. And that Jonas was. iij. dayes. and. iij. nightes in the belly of this fish: we cannot therby proue vnto the Jewes & infidels of vnto any man, & Christ must therfore dye & be buried and ryls againe. But we vyle the example & lyknesse to strengthe the faith of the weake. For he that belueth the one, cannot doubt in the other: in as muche as the hande of God, was no lesse myghtie in preseruinge Jonas alive agaynst all natural possibylite, and in deliuering him safe out of his fyre, then in carying by Christ agayne oute of his sepulchre. And we may describe the power and verue of the resurrection therby, as Christ hym selfe dooweth the similitude thereo. At xii. sayinge vnto the Jewes that came about him, & deuyed a signe of a wonder from heauē, to certifie them that he was Christ: this rypyl and wedlocke breakinge naciō which bryde the wedlocke of sayth, wherewith they he married vnto god, and beleue in theyr false woordes, seke a signe, but there shall no signe be geuen them save the signe of the prophete Jonas. For as Jonas was. iij. dayes. &. iij. nightes in the belly of the whair, euen so shall the sonne of man be. iij. dayes &. iij. nightes in the hart of the earth. Which was a wach woode, as we saye, and a warpe threaping vnto the Jewes, & as muche to saye as thus, ye harde heried Jewes seke a signe, to this shall be your signe: as Jonas was caryed oute of the sepulchre of his fyre, and he sente vnto the Finians to preache that they should perishe, eue so shall Christ agayne oute of his sepulchre, & come and preache repentance vnto you. Be therfore when ye se the signe that ye repent, or els ye shall surely perishe and not escape. For though the infirmities, which ye now see in my flesh, be a let vnto your sayth, ye shall yet then be without excuse, when ye se so greete a miracle & so great power of God wch ouer vs on you. And so Christ came after the resurrection in his spere, & preached repentance vnto them, by the mouth of his Apostles & disciples, & wth myracles of the holy god. And all that repented not perished shortly after, & the rest caryed away captiue into al quarters of the world for an ensample, as ye see vnto this daye.

And in lyke maner sence the worlde beganne, wheresoeuer repentance was offered and not receyued, there God took cruel vengeance immediately: as ye se in the flood of Noe, in the overthrowing of Sodome & Gomorrah, and all the country about, & as ye se of Egypt, of the Amosites, Cananites, & after ward of the very Israelites, & then at the last of the Jewes to, & of the Assyrians and Babylonians, and so through out al the imperyes of the worlde.

Eldas preached repentance vnto the olde Brittaines that inhabited England: they repented not, & therfore God sent in theyr enemies vpon the on euery side, & destroyed the by, and gaue the land vnto other nations. And great vengeance hath bene taken in that lande for spaine sence that tyme. Whiche prescribed repentance vnto our fathers not longe sence: they repented not, for they herres were indurante, & their eyes blinded wth their owne pope holy right wyntes, wherewith they had made their soules gaye against the returninge againe of the wicked spirit that byngeth. vii. wyse then him selfe wth hym, and maketh the latter ende wyse then the begynning: for in open spaines there is hope of repentance, but in holy pprophete none at all.

But what folowed theyr sence theyr tene eyght kyng, & let by. iij. wyng kynges & some, vnder which al the noble blood was slayne by & halfe the commons thereto, what in France, & what with their owne sword, in fighting among thes selues for the crowne, and the cyties & towne decayed, and the land brought halfe into a wyldeernes in respect of that it was before.

And now Christ to preache repentance, is caryed once agayne oute of his sepulchre, in which the pope had buried him & kept him down wth byssopps and polices, & all dyspynges of pprophete, wth gyle, wyles and falsed, & wth the sword of al princes, which he had blinded wth his false marchaundys. And as I doubte not of the ensamples that are past, so am I sure that great wylth wil folow, except repentance turne it backe agayne and cease it. Wher Jonas had bene in the fishes belly a space & the cage of his conscience was somewhat quieted and swaged, & he come to hymselfe agayne, & had receyued a new hope, the quemes and pagens of desperation which went ouer his hert, halfe ouercome, he prayed, as he maketh mention in the text, sayinge Jonas prayed vnto the Lord his God out of the belly of the fish. But the wordes of that prayer are not here set. The prayer that here standeth in the text, is the prayer of the prayle and thankesgeyng which he prayed and wrote when he had escaped and past at icopacdyr. In the ende of which prayer he sayth, I wyl saye pfre wth the voyce of thankesgeyngs & proue that I haue bowed: that sayinge cometh of the lord. For verily to confesse out of the hert, that al benefites come of God, euen out of the goodnes of his merce, and not deseryng of our deserts, is the onely sacrifice that pleaseh God. And to beleue that, all the Jewes bowed in their circutis, as we in our baptisme. Which bowe Jonas now taught wth experyence, proueth to pag. For those outward sacrifices of beastes, vnto which Jonas was haply ascribed so muche before, were but capidish thynges, and not ordeyned that the woikes of them shuld purge syn, but shoulde be a seuerce vnto the people, to put them in remembrance of the inward scrupce of thanke, and of sayth, to trust and beleue in God the onely saviour. Whiche signification when it was awrye, they were abhominable and deulyr ppolatys and pntage seruices: as our ceremonies and sacramentes are become nowe to al that tene and beleue in the woike of them, and are not taught the significacions, to edyfy thei soules wth knowledge and the doctrine of God.

When Jonas was cast vpon lande agayne, his wyl was free, & had power to goo whither God sent hym, & to do what God bad, his owne ymaginations layd a part. For he had bene at a new scole, yea, and in a scole where he was purged of muche refuse and dyole of fleshye wisdom which ressted the wysdome of God, and led Jonas wyl contrare to the wyl of God. For as farre as we be blinded in Adam, we can not but syn and wil ouer owne ppropt, vices and gloys. And as farre as we be taught in the spyt, we can not but seke and wyl the pleasur and glory of God onely.

And as the. iij. dayes iourney of Finius, wherether it were so length or to goo rounde aboute it, or thowme al the Grece, & comyng vnto the discretion of other men. But I thinke that it was then the greatest cyrie of the worlde.

And that Jonas went a dayes iourney in the cyrie, I suppose he dyd it not in one daye: but when:

The Biologe vpon

twente farre & easle preaching here a sermon, & there an other, and rebuked þe synne of the people, for wiche they must peccie.

And when thou art come vnto the repentance of the sinners, there haste thou sure remede, that how so euer angry God be, yet he remembreth mercy vnto þat truly repent & beleue in mercy. Whiche ensample our saviour Christ also casteth in the teeth of the indurate Jewes, sayinge the sinners shall cyle in iudgemente with this nation, & condemne them: for they repented at the preaching of Jonas, and beholde a greater then Jonas here, meaning of himselfe. At whose preaching yet, though it were neuer so mightie to pierce the hert, and for al his miracles euer so, the hard harted Jewes could not repent when the heathen sinners repented at the bare preaching of Jonas, rebukinge their synne without any myracle at all.

Why? For the Jewes had treasured the spirital law of God with their gloses had made it altogether carthy & fleshye, and so had set a vaine & coueting on God's face, to shadowe a dark & glorious brightnes of his countenance. It was like to steale: but to robbe widows houses vnder a colour of long praying, and to polle in þe name of offeringes, & to snare þe people with intolerable constitutions against all loue, to heere their money oute of their purse, was no synne at all.

To snare father & mother was synne. But to withhold we helpe from them at theyr neede, for hindring of offering vnto þe profit of the holy church, was the seruicious as it is now to be at thy hande whole whener they wil sinne or swyne, wiche thou duppelt & makest God's foundations for holy people, wiche thou hast chosen to be thy church, for to couple thy soule with the orle of their sweete blessinges, and to are thy Jesus for to save thy soule from the purgatory of the bloud that onely purgeth synne, with theyr watching, fasting, wolward going and resting at mynnight &c. wherewith yet they purge not them selues from theyr concouises, vyde, lecherie or any vice that thou seest among the laye people.

It was grea't synne for Christe to heale the people on the sabbath daye vnto the gloire of God his father, but none at all for them to helpe theyr catel vnto theyr owne profit. It was synne to cate the vnmowen handes of on an vnmowen cable, or out of an vnmowen dyke, but to cate out of that purpyed dyke, þe which came of byrder, theft and extortion, was no synne at all.

It was exceeding meritorious to make many disciples. But to teache them to feare God in his ordinaunce, had they no care at all.

The hye pylates so defiled the right of holy church & so feared the people with the curse of God & terrible paynes of hel, that no thynge leaue the vilest herbe in his garden vntoucht. And the offeringes & thynges dedicate vnto God for the profit of his holy wter, were in suche estimation & reuerence, þe it was muche greater synne to sweare truly by the, then to forswear thy selfe by god. What vengeance the of god, and how terrible & cruell damnation thynke ye preached they to fall on the that had stolen so the holy thynges? And yet sayeth Christe that rightwysnes & fayth in happyng promysse, mercy, and indifferent iudgement were viterly troden vnder fote, and cleane dyspyled of those blessed fathers, wiche so myghtyly magnified Morons patrimonye, & had made it so profitable, & enuironed it and walled it about on the Prophet Jonas.

every syde with the feare of God, that no man durst touch it.

It was grea't holynesse to gentylise the scrupulous of the prophetes, & to condemne theyr fathers for slepyng of them, and yet were they them selues for vlynde yete of theyr owne constitution, as eedy as theyr fathers, to sic whose soules testified vnto them the same truth wiche the prophetes testified vnto theyr fathers. So that Christe compareth al the rightwysnes of those holpe patriarches vnto the outwarde bewty of a paynted sepulchre full of stench and all vnclennesse within. And synally to begyle a mans neighbours in litle bargenys, and to wrap & compass him in with caules of þe law, was then as it is now in the kingdom of the Pope. By the reason wherof they excluded the law of loue out of their hertes, and consequent lyer al true repentance: for how could they repent of that they could not se to be synne.

And on the other side they had set vp a righte wynde of holpe wykes, to cleare theyr consciences with al, as the Pope sacrificeth by vberle ycle, holy bread, holy salt, holy candel, holy vnder ceremonies and holy dunnne blessinges, & with whatsoeuer holynes thou wilt, saue with the holynes of Gods woorde, wiche onely speareth vnto the herte, and sheweth the soule þe synnes and vnclennes of synne, and leaueh her by the waie of repentance vnto the founntaynes of Christes bloud, to waich a vberle ycle rowe lath. By the reason of a rich false right wynde they were disobedient vnto the right wyndes of God, whiche is the largynesse of synne in Christes bloud, and could not beleue it. And so thow fleschly interpreting þe lawe & false ymagined rightwysnes, they hertes were hardened and made as stony as clay in a linc fornaie of fyre, þe they could ceerde neither sepe lance nor saythe nor any maner of geare at all.

But the heathen sinners, though they were blinded with lutes a good, yet were in those if, poyntes vnconuert and hardened, and therfore with the onely preaching of Jonas came vnto the knowledge of theyr synnes, & conf. id them and repented truly, and turned every man fro his euyl dedes, and declared theyr sorrow of heart and true repentance, with their dedes wiche they ded out of fayth and hope of forgiveness, chastysing theyr bodys with power & fast, and with takinge at pleasures from the flesch, trusting, as God was angry for their wykednes, euen so should he forgiue the of his mercy, if they repented & forsoke theyr myse luyng.

And in the last end of al, thou hast yet a good lyf ensample of learning, to se how eedy Jonas is thy for al his tryng in the whales belly. He was so sore dyspleased because þe sinners perished not, that he was wery of his lyf, and wyshed after death for very sorrow that he had lost the gloire of his propheting. In that his prophete came not to passe. But God rebuked hym with a lyfenes, sayng: it groweth thynge here for the sake of a vyle wyb of loyng vyne wherof thou bestowest no labour nor cost, yet that was it thynne hande wolke: þe wyche more then shoulde greue mynchere, the loss of so grea't a myltitude of innocents as are in sinners, wiche are all myne hande wykes. For Jonas, I am God ouer all, and father as well vnto the heathen, as vnto the Jewes, and mercifull to all, and warne yet I saye, nry ther that I so cruelly by any wyche, but that I wil forgiue if they repent and are merced: ther on the other syde, whatsoeuer I promise, wilt will I fulfil it, saue for they take onely, while the trust in me and submit, themselves to kepe my lawes of verie loue, as naturall chyldren. In this maner to reade the scriptures is the right vse thereof, and why, the holy gost caused it to be wyrtten. That is, that thou shouldest take oute of the lawe, that God will haue the to do, interpretinge it spirytually without gloze or coueryng the brightnes of Moses face, so that thou seest in thyne herte, howe that it is damnable sinne before God, not to loue thy neighbour that is thyne enemye, as purely as Christ loued the, and that not to loue thy neighbour in thine herte, is to haue committed already all synne agaynst hym. And therefore vntill that thou be come thou must knoweledge vnsayntlype that there is synne in the best dede thou doest. And it must earnestly greeue thyne herte, and thou must waite all thy good dedes in Christs bloud, per they canne be pure and an acceptable sacrifice vnto God, and must despise God the father for his sake, to take thy dedes a woth, and to pardon the imperfectnesse of them and to geue the power to doo them better, and with more feruente loue.

And on the other syde thou muste seeke vnto gently for the promyses of mercye whiche God hath promysed the agayne. Which two pointes, that is to wote, the lawe spirytually interpreted, howe that al is damnable synne that is not vnsayntlype oute of the grounde and botome of the herte after the ensample of Christs loue to vs, because we be al equally created and formed of our God our father, and indifferently boughte and redeemed with one bloud of oure sauoure Iesus Christ: and that the promyses be geuen vnto a repentyng soule that thyrteth and longeth after them of, the pure and fatherly mercye of God through our fayth onely without al deseruyng of our dedes or merites of our workes, but for Christs sake alone, and for the merites and deseruynges of his workes, death and passion, that he suffered altogether for vs and not for hym selfe: which ii. pointes I say if they be wyrtten in thyne herte are the keyes which so open all the scripture vnto the, that no creature can locke the out, & with which thou shalt go in and out, & fynde pasture and fode euery where. And if these lessons be not wyrtten in thyne herte, then is al the scripture shut vp, as a kernal in the shale, so that thou mayst reade it, & comyn of it, and reherse al the stoffes of it, and dispute so till thou be a profounde Sophister, and yet vnderstand not one word thereof.

And thyrdly that thou take the stories & spures which are contayned in the Byble, for sure and vndoubted ensamples that God so will deale with vs vnto the wydden ende.

Wherewith reader facewel, and be commended vnto God, & vnto the grace of his spire. And fyrste let that thou stoppe not thyne eares vnto the callinge of God, and that thou harden not thyne herte, beguyled with fleshy interpretinge of the lawe, and false pynagined and pportun rightwisnes, and so the pynnytes rise with the at the day of iudgement and condemne the.

And secondarly if thou fynde ought a myffe, when thou seest thy selfe in the glasse of Gods wordes, thynke it compendious wysdome, to amende the same betwixt, moryshed and warned by the example of other men, rather then to take vntill thou be beaten also.

And thyrdly if it shall so chaunce, that the wyldes lustes of thy fleshe shall blynde the and take the cleane awaye with theym for a tyme, yet at the latter ende, when the G. O. D. of all mercye shall haue compassed the in on euery syde with temptacions, tribulacions, aduersities and combiaunce, to bringe the home agayne into thyne owne herte, and to sette the fyrnes whiche thou wouldest so sayntly couer and put oute of mynde with dilectacion of voluptuous pastimes, before the eyes of thy conscience: then call the saythfull ensample of Jonas and all lyke stories vnto thy remembraunce, and with Jonas turne vnto thy father that smote the not to cast the awaye, but to lay a roscoppe, and a freestyng plaster vnto the pocke that lay hyd and fret inwarde, to drawe the disease oute and to make it appeare, that thou myghtest seele thy spychelle and the daunger thereof, and come and receyue the healing plaster of mercye.

And forget not that whatsoeuer ensample of mercye God hath shewed since the begynnyng of the world, the same is promysed the, if thou wylte in lyke maner turne agayne and receyue it as they dyd. And with Jonas be knowne of thy synne and confesse it, and knoweledge it vnto thy father.

And as the lawe whiche setteth thy conscience, is in thyne herte, and is none outward thinge, euen so seke with in thyne herte, the plaster of mercye, the promyses of forgiveness in oure sauoure Iesus Christ, accordyng vnto all the ensamples of mercye, that are gone before.

And with Jonas let them that wayt on vanities and seke God here and there, and in euery temple, saue in their hertes, go and seke thou the testamēt of God in thyne herte. For in thine herte is the woode of the lawe, and in thyne herte is the woode of sayth in the promyses of mercye in Iesus Christ. So that if thou confesse with a repentyng herte and knoweledge and suretye beleue that Iesus is Lord ouer all synne, thou art safe.

And finally when the rage of thy conscience is ceased, and quieted with fast saythe in the promyses of mercye, then offer with Jonas the offeringe of prayse and thanks geuyng, and paye the vowe of thy baptysme, that is, beleue stedfastly and prayse constantly, that God onely sauer of his onely mercye and goodnesse: and that it is God onely that smytheth, and God onely that healeth: ascribunge the cause of thy tribulacion vnto thyne owne synne, & the cause of thy deliuerance vnto the mercye of God.

And beware of the leuen that sayeth, we haue power in oure free wyll before the pteachinge of the Gospel, to deserue grace, to kepe the law of congruente, or, God to be vnyghtwese. And say with John in the first, that as the law was geuen by Moses, euen so grace to fulfill it, is geuen by Christ. And when they say our dedes, with grace deserue heauen, saye thou with Paule. Roma. vi. that euerylastyng lyfe is the gyfte of God thowowe Iesus Christ our Lord, and that we be made sonnes by saythe. John. i. and therefore heyes of God with Christ. Ro. viii. And say that we receyue al of god through sayth that foloweth repentaunce, and that we doo not out workes vnto God, but cyther vnto oure selues, to kepe the synne that remaineth in the fleshe, and to make perfecte, cyther vnto oure neighbours whiche doo as muche agayne for vs in other thynges. And when a manne exchebeth in gyftes of grace, let hym vnderstand that they be geuen hym, as well for his wake byethen, as for hymselfe: as though all the head be committed unto the paster, yet for his fellows with hym, which geue the thanks vnto their Lord, and receiue the paster agayne wth other kynde seruise in their offices. And when they saye that Christ hath made no satisfaction for the synne we do after our baptisme: saye thou wth the doctrine of Paule, that in our baptisme we receiue the merits of Christes death shewing repentance and faith, of which two, baptisme is the signe. And though when we synne of fea. lye after our baptisme we receiue that signe no more, yet be renewed agayne shewing the repentance and faith in Christes blood, whiche twayne, the signe of baptisme euer continued amonge vs in baptysinge oure younge chyldeyen doeth euer kepe in mynde and call vs backe agayne vnto our profession if we be gone astray, and promptly vs to conscience. For ther can actual sinne be washed away with oure wothes, but with Christes blood: myther canne they be any sacrifice or satisfaction to God worde for them, saue Christes blood. For as muche as we can do no wothes vnto God, but receiue only of his mercy wth our repentynge faith, shewing Iesus Christe our Lord and only sauiour, vnto whom vnto God our father shewing hym, and vnto his holpe spirite that onely pouergeth, sanctifyeth and washeth vs in the innocent blood of our redemption, be prayse for euer. Amen.

The booke of the prophet Jonas.

The first Chapter.

Of the flight of Jonas whē he was set to preache. A tempest ariseth, and casteth hym in the sea for his disobedience.

And the word of the Lord came vnto Jonas the sonne of Amithai, sayinge: Arise and gette thee to Ninue that great citie, and preache vnto them, howe that their wickednesse is come vnto me.

And Jonas made hym redde to the Lord. * Thar was from the presence of the Lord, and gat hym downe to Toppa, where he founde a wyrded for to go vnto Thar. So he payed his fare, and wente aborde that he myght go wth them vnto Thar, from the presence of the Lord. But the Lord hurled a great wynde into the sea, and there was a myghty tempest in the sea, so that the ship was in leoparde of goynge in peeces. Then the mariners were astart, and cryed euery man vnto his god: & the goddes that were in the ship, they cast into the sea to lychen it of the. But Jonas gat hym vnder the barches, where he larched hym downe and dormed. So the master of the ship came to hym, and sayed vnto hym: why dormest thou?

* Under the name of Thar (as some saye) is signified some sea: was larched of, & whole brags was been longe: so that the sailors there could be noth. nre, but the sea, & the wyrd, Toppa is an haven of Tewepe where was somtyme a goodly city, whiche there remaith now: but a poyle of.

Up, call vpon thy God: if God (happely) wyl thynke vpon vs, that we perperpe not. And they sayed one to an other: come, let vs call lots, that we may know for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so they cast lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas.

Then sayed they vnto hym: tell vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thine occupacion? whence comest thou? what country man arte thou, and of what nacion? He answered them: I am an Ebrue, and I feate the Lord God of beaul, whiche made both the sea and drye lande. Then were the men exceedingly astart, and sayd vnto hym: why dydest thou so? (for they knewe that he was fled from the presence of the Lord, because he had tolde them) & sayed moreouer vnto hym: What shoulde we doo vnto the that the sea may cease frome troublinge vs? (for the sea wrought and was troublous) he answered them: Take me and cast me into the sea, so that it let you be in rest: for I wot, it is for my sake, that this greate tempest is come vpon you.

Heuerthelesse: the men astart wth sayyng to brynge the ship to lande, but it woulde not be, because the sea wrought so, and was so troublous agaynste them. Wherefore they cryed vnto the Lord, and sayed: O Lord, let vs not perperpe for this mannes deathe, neether laye thou innocent blood vnto oure charge, for thou, O Lord, haste done euen as thy pleasure was.

So theyooke Jonas and cast him into the sea, and the sea like ragynge. And the men feared the Lord exceedingly, doynge sacrifices and makinge bowes vnto the Lord.

The .ii. Chapter.

Jonas is swallowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas.

But the Lord prepared a greate fythe to swallowe vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the belly of the fyth, thre dayes and thre nightes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lord his God out of the fythes belly, and sayed: In my trouble I called vnto the Lord, & he herde me: out of the belye of hell I cryed, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the myddest of the sea and the floud compassed me aboute: per all thy waues and coules of water wente ouer me, I thought that I had bene cast awaye out of thy syght: but I wyl yet agayne looke toward thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye aboute me, and the wedes were wrapt about myne head. I wente downe to the botome of dys dills and was barred in with earthe for euer. But thou, O Lord my God, hast brought vp my life agayne out of corruption. Whē my soule sayuted wthyn me, I thoughte vpon the Lord: and my prayer came in vnto the, euen into thy holy temple. Then that that it withered away. And when the sune was vp, god prepared a secrete East wynde:

and the sunne bet ouer the head of Jonas
that he fainted agayne, and wyshed vnto hys soule, that he myghte dye, & sayd: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And god sayd vnto Jonas: Art thou so angry for the wyld byne? And he sayd: yea, vey an-

The first Chapter.

Of the destruction of Samaria, because of
theyr iniquite.

Mys is the worde of the Lord that came vnto Michas the sonne of Iotham, in the dayes of Jotham, & Jeroboam king of Iuda, whiche was the first that reigned vpon Samaria and Ierusalem.

Hear ye al ye people, marke this wel, O eard, & al that therin is: For the Lord God hym selfe be witness among you, euen the lord of his holy temple. For wher: beholde, the Lorde shal go out of his palce, & come downe & treade vpon the high thinges of the eard. The mountaynes shall consume vnder hym, and the valleyes shall cleave a fonder: like as wax consumed at the fyre, & as water runne downeward. And all this shalbe for the wickednesse of Iacob, & the synnes of the house of Israel.

But what is the wickednesse of Iacob? Is not Samaria? Wher are the high places of Iuda? Is not Ierusalem? Therefore I shal make Samaria an heape of stones in the feld: to lay about the vineyard: her stoues shal I cast in the valley, and discomer her foundations. All her images shal be broken downe and all her myghtes shal be brente in the fyre: yea all her idoles wyl I destroy: for wher, they are gathered out of the byre of an whore, and into an whores byre shal they be turned agayne. The. iiii. Chapter.

Jonas is reproued of God.

Therefore Jonas was soore discontented and angry. And he preyed vnto the Lord, and sayd: O Lord was not this my sayinge? I pray the, when I was yet in my countrey: therefore I hauee rather to die vnto Thebes, for I knowe well ynoug that thou arte a merciful God full of compa syon, long sufferinge, & of grete myghte, & repentest when thou wouldest take punishment. And nowe, O Lord, take my lyfe fro me (I beseeche the) for I had cathyng be then lyue. Then sayd the Lorde: art thou so angry? And Jonas gat hym out of the cyte, and sat downe on the east syde thereof, and there made hym a booth, and sat vnder it in the shadowe til he myghte see, what shalke chaunce vnto the cyte.

And the Lorde God prepared a wyld byne whiche sprang vpon ouer Jonas, that he myghte haue shadowe about hys head to helpe hym out of his paine. And Jonas was exceeding glad of the wyld byne.

But vpon the nexte morowe agaynst the springe, of the daye, the Lorde ordeyned a worme whiche smote the wyld byne, so that it withered away. And when the sune
was vp, god prepared a secrete East wynde:
and the sunne bet ouer the head of Jonas
that he fainted agayne, and wyshed vnto hys soule, that he myghte dye, & sayd: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And god sayd vnto Jonas: Art thou so angry for the wyld byne? And he sayd: yea, vnto angry, euen vnto death. And the Lorde sayd: thou haste compassion vpon a wyld byne, whereon thou bestowest no labour, ne madest it to growe: whiche sprang vp in one nyght, and perished in other, & should not I, then haue compassion vpon Ninue that grete cyte, wherein there are about an hundred and twenty thousand persons, that knowe not theyr ryght hande frome theyr left, besydes muche cattel?

The first Chapter.

Of the destruction of Samaria, because of
theyr iniquite.

This is the word of the Lord that came vnto Michas the sonne of Iotham, in the dayes of Jotham, & Jeroboam king of Iuda, whiche was the third vpon Samaria

and Ierusalem. Heare al ye people, marke this wel, O eard, & al that therein is: For the Lord God hym selfe be witness among you, euen the lord of his holy temple. For wher beholde, the Lorde shal go out of his palace, & come downe & treade vpon the high thinges of the eard. The mountaynes shall consume vnder hym, and the valleyes shall cleane & sander: like as wax consumed at the fyre, & as y waters runne downeward.
And all this shalbe for the wickednesse of Iacob, & the synnes of the house of Israel.

But what is the wickednesse of Ia-cob? Is not Samaria? Wher are the high places of Iuda? Is not Ierusalem?
Wherfore I shal make Samaria an heape of stones in the feld: to lay about the vineyard: her stoues shall I east in the valley, and discomer her foundations. All her images shall be broken downe and all her mynges shall be brente in the fyre: yea all her idoles wyl I destroy: for they be turned agayne. Wherfore I wyl

O wnto them that imagin to bee secure, & deuyse vngreatiounes vpon their beddes: to persoutme in the cleare daye, for their power is agaynst God. When they couet lande, they take it by violence, they rob men of theyr houses.

Thus they oppresse a man for his house, and euery manne for his betstage. Therefore thus saith the Lorde: Beholde agaynst this householde haue I deuyed a plage, wherewith ye shall not plucke your neckes: Ye shall no more go so proude, for it will be a perillous tyme. In that day shall this teatime be used, & a mourning shall be made ouer you on this manner: We be vnto the desolate, the portion of my people is translated. When wyl be parte vnto vs the land, that he hath taken frome vs?

Neuertheles there shall be no manne to deuyde the by porcyon in the congregacion of the Lorde. In he, holde your tounge (saie they.) It shall not fall vpon this people, we shall not come so to confusion, saith the house of Jacob. Is the spirite of the Lorde to cleane awaye? or is he so mynded? Truth it is, my wordes are friendly vnto them that lyue ryght, but my people doth the contrary, therefore must I take parte agaynst them: for they take awaye botche coate and cloke from the simple.

But I wyl gather the in dede, O Jacob, & dyue the remnant of Israel al togyther, I shall carpe them one with another as a flock in the folde, & as the cartell in their dailles: that they maye be disquitted of other menne. Who so breaketh the gappe, he shall go before. They shall breake by the porte and go in and out at it. Their kynge shall goo before them, and the Lorde shall be vpon the hande of them.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Against the tyranny of princes, and false Prophetes.

Hear, O ye headres of the house of Jacob, and ye leaders of the house of Israel: Should not ye knowe, what is lawfull and righe? But ye hate good, and loue the euyl: ye plucke of mennes skynnes, and the fleshe frome their bones: ye eat the fleshe of my people, flape of theyr skynne: ye breake theyr bones, ye chop them in peeces as it were into a Cauldron, and as fleshe into a pottre. Some the tyme shall come: that when they call vnto the Lorde, he shall not heare them, & but byde hys face fro them, because that theye to their owne ymaginacions they haue dele so wickedly.

And as concerning the Prophetes that discerne my people, thus the Lorde saith agaynst them: When they haue any thyng to byre vpon, they preache that al shall be wel: but if a man put not some thyng into theire mouthes, they preache of warre agaynst hym.

To hyde his face is, to shewe no token of benivolence, as in. Job. xli. 11. Deu. xxi. 15

Therefore your vylion shall be turned to nyghte, and your prophecyng to darcknesse. The sunne shall go downe ouer those Prophetes, and the daye shall be darcke vnto them. Then shall the vylion seers be ashamed, and the southsayers confounded, yea they shall be lame, al the pack of them, to stoppe theyr mouthes, for they haue not gods word. As for me, I am ful of strenght and of the spirite of the Lorde: ful of iudgement and holdenesse, to shewe the house of Jacob theyr wickednes, and the house of Israel theyr synne.

O heare this ye rulers of the house of Jacob, and ye iudges of the houses of Israel. Ye that abhorre the thyng that is lawfull, and wylt aspe the thyng that is streyght: Ye that buyde by Ston with blond and Ierusalem with buyng wrong. O ye iudges, ye geue sentence for gyftes: O ye priestes, ye reache for lute. O ye prophetes, ye prophesy for money. Yet wyl they be taken as those that holde vpon God, and say: It is not the Lorde among vs: Thus there can no misfortune happen vs.

us. Therefore shall Sion (for your sakes) be plowed like a field, Jerusalem shall become an heape of stones, & the hill of the temple shall be turned to an hye wood.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Of the calling of the Gentyles, and reburrsion of the Jewes.

But in the latter dayes it wyl come to passe that the hill of the Lordes house shall be sette up hyer then anye mountayne or hilles: Yea the people shall please vnto it, and the multitude of the Gentyles shall haue them thither, saying: Come, let vs goo vp to the hill of the Lord, and to the house of the G O D of Jacob, that ye maye teache vs hye way, and that we maye walke in yrs pathes. For the lame shall come oute of Sion, & the word of G O D frome Jerusalem, and shall geue sentence among the multitude of the beasthen, & retourne þ people of far contryes so that of theyr swerdes they shall make plowshares, and fitches of theyr speares.

Our people shall not lyke up a swerde agaynst an other, yea, they shall no more learne to fyght, but euery manne shall spe under yrs vndergarde and under yrs fygtree, and no man to fear him a way for the mouth of the Lord of hostes hath spoken it. Therefore where as al the people haue walked euery manne in the name of his owne G O D, we wyl walke in the name of oure G O D for euer and euer. At the same tyme sayeth the Lord, wyl I gather vp the lame and oure castles, and such as I haue chastened, and wyl geue them vnto the same, and make of the oure castles a greate people, and the Lord hym selfe shall be theyr kyng vpon the mounte Sion, from this tyme forth for euermore. And vnto thee (O thou towne of Edom, þ strong hold of the daughter Sion) vnto the shall it come: euen the Lord hyppie and kyngdome of the daughter Jerusalem. Why then art thou now so haue? is there no kyng in thee? are thy counceilers away that thou art so payned, as a woman in her traualle? And now (O thou daughter Sion) be fayne, let it greue the as a wyfe labouring wth chylde: for now we must thou get the oute of the cypre and dwell vpon the plaine fieldes: Yea vnto Babylon shall thou goo, & there shalt thou be deliuered, and there the Lord shall lewle thee from the hande of thyne enemyes.

Some also are there manye people gathered together agaynst the, saying: what? Sion is cursed, we shall see oure luste vpon her. But they knowe not the thoughtes of the Lord, they vnderstand not his counsell, that shall gather them together as the sheaues into the bache.

Therefore get the up, O thou daughter Sion, and thirly out the corne: For I wyl make thy horn yron, & thy clauies brasse, that thou mayest grynde manye people: their goodes shalt thou appropriate vnto

The. v. Chapter.

Of the destruction of Jerusalem.

For that shalt thou be robbed thy selfe, O thou robbers daughter: they shall lay siege agaynst vs, and smyte the iudge of Israel wth a rodde vpon the cheeke. And thou Berleim Ephrata, stre-ple among the thousandes of Juda. Out of the shall come vnto me, whiche shall be the gouernoure in Israel: whose out goprige hath bene from the begynnyng, and from euertyllyng.

In the meane tyme he plagerth the for a season, vntill the tyme that he (whiche shall beare) haue boync: then shall the rema-naunce of yrs bretheren be conuerted vnto the chylde of Israel. He shall stande fast and geue foode in the strength of the Lord, and in the victorie of the name of the Lord yrs G O D, and when they be conuerted, he shall be magnified vnto the fartheeste par-tes of the worlde.

Then shall there be peate, so that the Affrican may come into our land, and creeade in oure houses. We shall drynge vnto seuen shepcherdes, and cryge vnto vnto them: these shall subdue the lande of Assur wth the swerde, and the lande of Syria: cod wth theyr naked weayds. This shall be deliuer vs from the Assyrians, when he cometh wth in oure lande, and setteth hyr foote wth in oure borders.

And the remnaunce of Jacob shall be amonges the multitude of people, as the dewe of the Lord, and as the droppe vpon the grasse, that tarseth for no man, and marreth of no bodye. Yea the residue of Jacob shall be amonges the Gentyles and the multitude of people, as the Lyon amonge the beastes, of the woode, and as the Lyons whelp among a flocke of shepe, whiche when he goeth thowne treadeth downe, & scattereth in peces, and there is no waste that canne helpe. Thyne vantage shall be lyte vpon thyne enemyes, and all thyne aduersaries shall perthe.

The tyme shall come also sayeth the Lord that I wyl take thyne hoyses frome thee, and destroye the charrettes. I wil breake downe the ctyles of thy lande, and quere thowne al thy stronge holdes. Al which craftes wyl I roote oute of thyne hande, there shall no mo saythcraftiges be wthin the. Thyne Idoles and thyne Images wil I destroy out of the, so that thou shalt no moe bowe thy selfe vnto the woorkes of thyne owne handes. Thy groues wil I plucke up by the rootes, and breake downe the cypres. Thus wyl I be auenged also, vpon al the Bearden that wyl not heare.

The Prophecy

Herken now what the Lord sayeth:
Up, reprove the mountaynes, & let the hilles heare thy voyce. O heare the punishment of the Lord, ye mount-taines, and ye myghty foundations of the earth: for the Lord will reprove his people and reasen with Israel: O my people, what have I done unto the: or where in-hane I hurt the: gve me answer. Because I brought the from the lande of Egypt, and I rescued the out of the house of bondage: Because I made Moses, Aaron and Myrra to leade the: Remember, O my people, what Balach the kynge of Moab had imagined agaynst the, and what answer that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue him from Sechim unto Galgal, that ye may knowe the lowngye kyndnesse of the Lord.

What acceptable thinge shal I offer unto the Lord: shal I bowe my knee to the high God: shal I come before him with burnt offerings, and with calves of a yeare olde: Hath the Lord a pleasure in many thou-saunde times, or in innumerable streames of oyle: Or shal I gve my spynbodie for myne offences, and the fruite of my bodie for the sinne of my soule: I wil shewe the,
O man, what is good and what the Lord requyret of the: Namely, to do right, to have pleasure in lowngye kyndnesse, to be lowly, and to walke with thy God: that thou mayst be called a cytye of the Lord, and that thy name may be righteousnesse, Heare O ye trybes, who would els gve you suche warning: Should I not be displeased, for the vntygheous good in the houses of the wycked. & because the measure is minished: Or shoulde I susteyne the false balances and the bagge of dyscreitfull weightes amonge those that be full of treches vntygheously gotten: where the crysps deale with falsed, speake lyes, and have offeysfull tungen in their mouthes:

Therefore wil I take in hand to punish the and to make the desolate because of thy synnes. Thou shalt eate, and not have ynoughe: reas thou shalt bypnye thy selfe downe. Thou shalt spee, but not escape:
and those that thou wouldest save, wil
I deliuer to the sword. Thou shalt sow, but not reape: thou shalt presse out olives, but oyle shalt thou not haue to anoynt thy selfe with all: thou shalt treade out swete must, but shalt drinke no wyne. Ye kepe the ordinances of Amos, and all the customs of the house of Achab: ye solame their pleasures therefore wil I make the wast, and cause thy inhabytters to bee abhorred.
O my people: and thus shalt thou heare thyne owne shame.

The vii. Chapter.

A complaine of the lytle number of the righteous agaynst the reuetynght we not to be with our great frendes.

Vho is me: I am become as one that goeth a gleaninge in the harvest.
There are no mo grapes remayn, yet woulde I saine with al my vyrgyne heart of the best fruite. There is not a godly man vpon earth, there is not one tygheous as mong men. Ther labour all to shed bloud, every man hateth his brother to death:
yet they say they do wel to be they do say.
As the pynce wil, so sayth the iudge: that he maye doo hym a pleasure agayne. The greate manne speaketh what his herte desyret: and the hearers slowe hym.
The best of them is but as a thistle and the most tyghtous of them is but as a brayer in the hedge. But when the daye of thy preachers cometh, that thou shalt be disspred: then shall they be wasted awaye.
Let no man beleue his frende, ne put his confydence in a pynce. Kepe the porte of thy mouth, from her that speaketh in thy be-some, for the sonne shall put his fader to dishonour, the daughter shall arise agaynst her mother, the daughter in law agaynst her mother in lawe: and a mannes foes shal be euen they of his owne household.

Reuer thelesse I wil looke vpon the Lord I wil patiently abyde God my sauour: my God shal heare me. O thou enemy of myne reioyce not at my fall, for I shal get vp agayne: and though I sit in darknesse, yet the Lord is my lyghte. I wil beate the punishment of the Lord (for wher I haue offended hym) till he lye in iudgement vpon my cause, and see that I haue right. He wil bypnye me forth to the lyght, and shal see his righteoussnesse.

Shew that is myne enemy shal looke vpon it, and be confounded, wherby now sayeth. Where is thy Lord God: Myne eyes shal beholde her, when she shall be troden downe as the clay in the steres. The time wil come that the gaps shall be made vp, and the lawe shall go abroad: and as that tyme shall they come vnto the, from Agur vnto the strong cyties. & from the stronge cyties vnto the tryet: from the one sea, to the other, from the one mountayne to the other. Notwithstanding the land must be wasted, because of them that dwel therein, and for the frutes of their owne imagynations. Therefore feede thy people with thy rod, the stocke of thyne heritage wherthe dwell desolate in the wood: that they may be fed vpon the mounte of Charnel, Basan, and Galaad as for a tyme. Mar-ueylous thynges wil I shewe them, lyke as when they came out of Egypt. Thy shall the heathen see, and be ashamed for all their power so that they shal lay their hande vpon their mouth, and stoppe their eares. They shall lycke the dust in a serpent, and as the wommen of the north, that tremble in their holes. They shal be ashy-d of the Lord our God, & they shal feare the.
Where is there suche a God as thou: that pardonest wickednes, and forgyuest the offences

fences of the remnant of thine heritage: He keepeth not bys wrath for ever. And why his desire is to have compassion: he shall turne againe, & be merciful to vs: he shall put downe our wickednesses, and cast all our sins into the bottome of the sea. Thou shalt kepe thy trust with Jacob, and shew mercie for Abraham, lyke as thou hast sworn vnto our fathers long ago.

Looke thou wel to the streets, make thy lynes stronge, scine thy selfe wth all thy myght, for the Lord shall restore agayne the glory of Jacob, lyke as the glory of Israel. The destroyers haue broken them downe, & matted the wyne branches. The sheld of his giantes glistereth, his men of war are clothed in purple. Deut. v. b. the Lord, and morisfull. The Lord takerh vengeance of his enemy, & reserueth displeasure for his aduersaries. The Lord suffereth long, he is of great power, & so innocent that he leaueth no man faultles before him. The Lord goeth forth in repect & storme wether, the cloudes are the buke of his seere. When he reioynerh the sea, he dryeth it vp, and turneth al the founteyns to dry lande, Basan is desolate. Charnel and the pleasure of Irbanus wasteth awaye. The mountaynes tremble for hym, the hilles consume. At the sight of him, the earth quaketh: yea the whole worlde and al that dwel therein. Who may endure before his wrath?  would say vnto me, and what answer I should geue hym that reproveth me. But the Lord answered me, and sayed: Wryte the vysyon plainly vpon thy tables, that who so cometh by, maye reade it: for the visyon is yet farre of for a tyme, but at the last it shal come to passe and not faile. And though he say, yet wayt thou for him, for in very dede he wyl come, and not be slack.
 Beholde, who so wyl not beleue, his soule shal not prosper: the iuste shal lyue by his saythe. Lyke as the wyne deceyued the byonchard, euen so the proud shal faile and not endure. He openeth his bellye wythe vy as þe hel, and is as unsatiabie as death.
 Al beathen gathereth he to hym and hea reth vnto him al people.

But shal not al these take by a prouerbe agaynst hym, and mocke hym wyth a by word, and say: Wo vnto him that heapech by other mens goods. How long wyl he lade him selfe wyth thiske claye? How sodenly wyl they stand vp, that shal byre, and a wake, that shal teare the in pieces? yea thou shalt be their pray. Seynge thou hast spoiled many beathen, therefore shal the remnant of the people spoile the, by cause of mens bloude, and for the wronge done in the land, in the cypre and vnto all them that dwel therein.

Wo vnto hym, that couetously gathe reth euyl gotten goodes into his house, that he may set his nest an hygh, to escape from the power of misfortune. Thou hast deuised the shame of thyne own house, for thou hast sayne to muche people, and hast wyllfully offended, so that the very stones of the wal shal crye out of it, and the cym ber that lyeth betwixte the ioyntes of the Wo vnto hym that buildeth the towne wyth bloude, and mayntayneth the cypre

What helpe then wyl the ymage dooe,
